Gentlemen of the Senate, we have here stated the reasons for this proposed legislation—that while the committee was considering this bill from January to June no lynchings occurred in the United States; that during the first week in June 1934 word was generally circulated that hope for the enactment of the measure had been abandoned, and on June 8 there was a lynching in Mississippi.

Because we may fail to appreciate what has happened throughout the Nation, it is interesting to note that statement. When word that the bill was not likely to pass was generally circulated—I do not know who circulated it, but it seems, according to the report of the Judiciary Committee, that word was generally circulated throughout the Nation in the first week of June 1934, that there would be no legislation at that session—immediately, away down in Mississippi that information was made known, and then a lynching occurred on June 8; and then the information drifted over into Alabama, and two lynchings occurred in Alabama. It seems that those individuals for 6 months had been waiting to lynch someone, waiting for the opportunity to commit murder. Finally, when the information came to them that the Judiciary Committee would not report the bill, they immediately proceeded in Mississippi to have 1 lynching, in Alabama 2, in Texas 1, in Tennessee 1, in Louisiana 1, a third in Mississippi, a third in Alabama, in Georgia 1, in Florida 1; and it is stated that by March 13, 1935, 3 lynchings occurred. So evidently from January 1 until March 13, 1935, the information must have been generally circulated throughout the country that there would be no legislation on the subject at this session, and the lynchers proceeded to kill human beings because of that fact.

The committee said:

> It is more than a coincidence that the practice of lynching is practically stopped when Federal legislation designed to curb this practice is pending in Congress.

That immediately follows the statement that between January 1 and March 13, 1935, while legislation was pending, three lynchings occurred; but the declaration of the committee is that if a bill is pending there will be no lynchings. Therefore, it follows that the sane, sensible thing for the Senate to do is to adopt the motion of the Senator from Texas and proceed to consider the bill for the payment of the adjusted-compensation certificates, and permit antilynching legislation to be pending, and thereby, according to the committee, make impossible lynchings in this country.

The Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN] gives another reason for having the bill reported at this time. He says that one reason why the bill would stop lynchings is that—

> The proposed law would bring the pressure of tax-paying public opinion, as well as the support of peace officers, to guard counties against mob violence, well illustrated in the case of South Carolina, where further lynchings have not occurred in certain counties of that State after the financial penalties were imposed.

The Senator refers to the fact that in South Carolina there is a statute authorizing the beneficiary to bring an action against the county in which a human being loses his life as a result of the action of a mob, when he is "lynched", and no other word is used, without authority of law. He can sue the county for $2,000.

Mr. President, that statute was enacted pursuant to a provision of the State constitution, for it is written in the constitution of the State of South Carolina that the beneficiary of the victim of a mob has the right of action to which I have referred. The constitution, adopted December 4, 1895, provides:

> In the case of any prisoner lawfully in the charge, custody, or control of any officer, State, county, or municipal, being seized and taken from said officer through his negligence, permission, or connivance, by a mob or other unlawful assemblage of persons, and at their hands suffering bodily violence or death, the said officer shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon true bill found shall be deposed from his office pending his trial, and upon conviction shall forfeit his office, and shall, unless pardoned by the Governor, not be eligible to hold any office of trust or profit within the State. It shall be the duty of the prosecuting attorney within whose circuit or county the offense may be committed to forthwith institute a prosecution against said officer, who shall be tried in such county, in the same circuit, other than the one in which the offense was committed, as the attorney general may elect. The fees and mileage of all material witnesses, both for the State and for the defense, shall be paid by the State treasurer in such manner as may be provided by law: Provided, In all cases of lynching when death ensues the county where such lynching takes place shall, without regard to the conduct of the officers, be liable in exemplary damages of not less than $2,000 to the legal representatives of the person lynched: Provided further, That any county against which a judgment has been obtained for damages in case of lynching shall have the right to recover the amount of said judgment from the parties engaged in said lynching in any court of competent jurisdiction.

Mr. President, the clause penalizing a county in the case of a lynching was offered in the constitutional convention by Senator Tillman, who for years served as a Member of this body. He stated at the time that it might not prove effective, that he doubted its effectiveness, but that it might serve as a scarecrow. The adoption of the provision by the constitutional convention was solely an expression of the law-abiding sentiment of the people of South Carolina against the lawlessness of a mob, the same sort of sentiment that has resulted in the gratifying decrease in the number of lynchings in that State of recent years.

But lest someone in the Senate should conclude that the Senator from Colorado was correct in believing that the enactment of the section of the bill offered by him authorizing a suit against the county would result in decreasing lynching, I wish to quote some statistics with reference to the State of South Carolina before and after the adoption of the constitutional provision.

In the Negro Year Book, published by the director of the department of research of Tuskegee Institute, it is stated that for the 11-year period from 1885 to 1895, inclusive, there were 1,897 lynchings in the United States, and 45 in the State of South Carolina. The constitution of South Carolina was adopted December 4, 1895. For the 11-year period succeeding the adoption of that constitution, with its antilynching provision, to wit, during the years from 1896 to 1906, there were 1,206 lynchings in the United States, and 43 in South Carolina. Therefore, while there was a marked decrease in the number of lynchings throughout the Nation, in South Carolina, where this antilynching provision had been written into the constitution, there was a reduction of only two in the number of lynchings in the 10 years succeeding its adoption as compared with the previous 10 years.

From that I would judge that Senator Tillman was right in believing that it would not be an effective deterrent insofar as the commission of this offense was concerned.

I think the Senator from Colorado ought to realize, it ought to appeal to a man's common sense, that when a mob of men willing to take human life, because their reason for the time is dethroned by the commission of some crime which they believe so horrible as to demand instant punishment, get hold of the criminal and take him out into the woods, they will never be deterred from committing murder by the fear that the county in which they live may at some future time be sued for $2,000 by the heirs of the man who is lynched. On the contrary, Mr. President, it is my belief that under those circumstances, when a mob seeks to take the life of the rapist or the murderer, nothing will deter them except the assurance that the man they have in custody will receive a speedy trial at the hands of the court, and when they have confidence in the honest enforcement of law by their courts. Only when such confidence exists can we hope to deter the commission of this offense.

Throughout the history of my own State I know of cases when not only sheriffs, but judges, have risked their lives in order to prevent lynchings. Never have I known of a case when the Governor of the State would not call out the militia, call upon armed forces, in order to preserve order and to prevent a lynching. It can be done in that way. It can never be done by enacting a Federal statute to usurp the powers of the State, and to endeavor to frighten State officers with punishment by the United States courts.

I would not undertake to discuss at length the question of the constitutionality of the proposed law. The Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] has gone into that question at some length, as have the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] and the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK].

Nevertheless, I cannot refrain from expressing this opinion. In order to visit punishment upon a murderer or a rapist a mob is willing to violate law, to disregard all law. If the bill under discussion is unconstitutional, as I believe it to be, I would not want the Congress of the United States to follow the spirit of the mob and to disregard the provisions of the Constitution of the United States in order to visit punishment upon lynchers.

The United States Supreme Court has so clearly construed the fourteenth amendment and has so forcefully indicated its opinion as to legislation which would seek to control and to punish the acts of an individual within a States that it seems to me there is hardly any room for doubt as to the unconstitutionality of the proposed measure.

I desire to read for only a few minutes from the Civil Rights case, reported in One Hundred and Ninth United States Reports, page 11. In speaking of the provisions of the fourteenth amendment, the Court said:

> It is a State action of a particular character that is prohibited. Individual invasion of individual rights is not the subject-matter of the amendment.

What is murder but the invasion of the rights of the individual? It is not contended that there was any action by any State denying to the individual citizens of the State the protection of the law. The argument is, not as to any law, but as to the failure or alleged failure of some State to enforce the law.

The Supreme Court said:

> To adopt appropriate legislation for correcting the effects of such prohibitive State laws and State acts, and thus to render them effectually null, void, and innocuous. This is the legislative power conferred upon Congress, and this is the whole of it. It does not invest Congress with power to legislate upon subjects which are within the domain of State legislation; but to provide modes of relief against State legislation, or State action, of the kind referred to. It does not authorize Congress to create a code of municipal law for the regulation of private rights; but to provide modes of redress against the operation of State laws, and the action of State officers, executive or judicial, when these are subversive of the fundamental rights specified in the amendment.

The Court said further in this case:

> And so in the present case, until some State law has been passed, or some State action through its officers or agents has been taken, adverse to the rights of citizens sought to be protected by the fourteenth amendment, no legislation of the United States under said amendment, nor any proceeding under such legislation can be called into activity; for the prohibitions of the amendment are against the State laws and acts done under State authority.

Nowhere is it contended that wherever a lynching has occurred it has been done under State authority.

The Court said further:

> Of course, legislation may, and should be, provided in advance to meet the exigency when it arises, but it should be adapted to the mischief and wrong which the amendment was intended to provide against; and that is, State laws, or State action, of some kind adverse to the rights of the citizen secured by the amendment. Such legislation cannot properly cover the whole domain of rights appertaining to life, liberty, and property, defining them and providing for their vindication. That would be to establish a code of municipal law regulative of all private rights between man and man in society. It would be to make Congress take the place of the State legislatures and to supersede them. It is absurd to affirm that because the rights of life, liberty, and property (which include all civil rights that men have) are by the amendment sought to be protected against invasion on the part of the State without due process of law, Congress may therefore provide due process of law for their vindication in every case, and that because the denial by a State to any persons of the equal protection of the laws is prohibited by the amendment, therefore Congress may establish laws for their equal protection.

Gentlemen of the Senate, I submit that that at best is all that could be said for the present bill—that it seeks to establish laws for the equal protection of individuals; and the Supreme Court of the United States in this case distinctly stated that because the denial by a State to any person of the equal protection of the laws is prohibited by the amendment, it cannot be contended that Congress may have established laws for their equal protection.

> In fine, the legislation which Congress is authorized to adopt in this behalf is not general legislation upon the rights of the citizen, but corrective legislation, that is, such as may be necessary and proper for counteracting such laws as the States may adopt or enforce, and which, by the amendment, they are prohibited from making or enforcing, or such acts and proceedings as the State may commit or take, and which, by such amendment, they are prohibited from committing or taking.
>
> It is not necessary for us to state, if we could, what legislation would be proper for Congress to adopt. It is sufficient for us to examine whether the law in question is of that character.
>
> An inspection of the law shows that it makes no reference whatever to any supposed or apprehended violation of the fourteenth amendment on the part of the States. It is not predicated on any such view. It proceeds ex directo to declare that certain acts committed by individuals shall be deemed offenses, and shall be prosecuted and punished by proceedings in the courts of the United States. It does not profess to be corrective of any constitutional wrong committed by the States; it does not make its operation to depend upon any such wrong committed. It applies equally to cases arising in States which have the most just laws respecting the personal rights of citizens, and whose authorities are ever ready to enforce such laws, as to those which arise in States that may have violated the prohibition of the amendment. In other words, it steps into the domain of local jurisprudence, and lays down rules for the conduct of individuals in society toward each other, and imposes sanctions for the enforcement of those rules, without referring in any manner to any supposed action of the State or its authority.

If Congress ever believed that it possessed the power to provide that the acts of an individual could be prohibited by such legislation as is now proposed, Congress never would have resorted to the procedure of submitting the eighteenth amendment to the States for ratification. Congress realized that in the absence of constitutional authority it could not make criminal such actions as were thereafter declared to be criminal by the Volstead Act. Therefore, it proceeded in a legal way, with regard for the Constitution, first to amend the Constitution and then to enact the Volstead Act.

Here, without any attempt to have passed a resolution submitting to the States an amendment to the Constitution, which would give constitutional authority for such legislation, we proceed to legislate; we offer for the consideration of the Congress a measure which would make criminal the acts of an individual purely within the domain of a State, and without any claim of violation by State law of the rights guaranteed under the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution.

The Senator from Colorado a few days ago referred to the fact that among the States of the Union which had adopted penal statutes fining the officers of a county who were negligent, who failed diligently to enforce the laws, and authorizing an action to be brought against such county, were the States of South Carolina, North Carolina, Ohio, Illinois, and two or three others I have now forgotten. I regret greatly that the Senator from Colorado could not have enumerated in that list the State of Colorado. I find that neither the State of Colorado nor the State of New York has taken any action to give to the family of one who is lynched a right of action against the county in which the lynching occurred. The States in which the authors of this measure live have failed to show the interest in the families of the deceased which has been shown by a number of States in the South. I only regret that those Members of the Senate who are so vitally interested in this question could not urge such action on the part of their own States before asking the Congress of the United States to enact this bill.

The Senator, of course, may say, insofar as the State of Colorado is concerned, that fortunately very few lynchings have taken place within the borders of that State. I assume that if one is to define "lynching" and describe it in any particular way, to say how a man must meet his death, by what means he must meet his death, in order to come within the definition of "lynching", the Senator could correctly make that statement. I recall some years ago, however, when I was serving as a Member of the House, having to go to the State of Colorado as a member of the Committee on Mines and Mining to investigate a most unfortunate situation existing there. A labor controversy had existed for some time. Armed conflicts resulted. Into the State there were imported detectives, as I recall, from the Baldwin-Phelps Detective Agency. They came into the State and were appointed special deputies at the mines, and the conclusion I reached was that they brought on most of the unfortunate difficulties which arose in the communities into which they were brought. The United Mine Workers were on strike. In defense, they armed themselves. They occupied tents. Colonies were established. They leased the land upon which their tents were located. I should hesitate now to say how many human beings lost their lives, but I think surely more than 200, from the beginning to the end of that conflict, ending, as I recall, with what was known as the "Ludlow disaster."

Listening today to the argument of the Senator from Alabama, my mind went back to the conditions then existing in the State of Colorado. Four members of the United Mine Workers of America did arm themselves. Machine guns were in the hands of their opponents. The lives of children, the lives of women, were taken during that conflict.

If two or three participated in the conflict, and as a result of it one of the deputies appointed by the operators of the coal mines should be killed, when officers were present on the scene, I am wondering who would be responsible for the conflict, under the language of the bill. It was almost impossible for us to tell in many instances; but if such a conflict should arise after the enactment of this legislation, as I construe it, the parties would have to be tried in the United States court. Certainly, if we may judge by the feeling which then existed, the operators of those mines, under the conditions existing in southern Colorado at the time, would have sought to take them into the United States courts, except in one or two counties where I believe they had sufficient control of local authorities so that they might have felt it was unnecessary to remove the cases.

I concur in the statement made by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK]. It matters not what motive was in the minds of those who drafted the bill or what purpose they sought to accomplish, under its language, whenever there is a conflict arising out of a labor controversy, those who are participating in it can be tried in the courts of the United States instead of in the State courts.

Mr. President, I desire to comment for a few moments upon some of the provisions of the bill. Paragraph (a) of section 3, provides:

SEC. 3. (a) Any officer or employee of any State or governmental subdivision thereof who is charged with the duty or who possesses the power or authority as such officer or employee to protect the life or person of any individual injured or put to death by any mob or riotous assemblage or any officer or employee of any State or governmental subdivision thereof having any such individual in his custody, who fails, neglects, or refuses to make all diligent efforts to protect such individual from being so injured or being put to death or any officer or employee of any State or governmental subdivision thereof charged with the duty of apprehending keeping in custody, or prosecuting any person participating in such mob or riotous assemblage who fails, neglects, or refuses to make all diligent efforts to perform his duty in apprehending, keeping in custody, or prosecuting to final judgment under the laws of such State all persons so participating, shall be guilty of a felony, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding 5 years, or both such fine and imprisonment.

Let us see what that section includes. It includes first of all the sheriff. It is provided in a subsequent subsection that "failure for more than 30 days after the commission of such an offense to apprehend or to indict the persons guilty thereof" or to prosecute such person, shall "constitute prima facie evidence of the failure, neglect, or refusal described in the above proviso."

There never was a man charged with the enforcement of the law who did not know that when there was a lynching and an officer attempted to ascertain who participated in the lynching, if he proceeded to the community immediately following the lynching, when everybody who participated in it was on guard, it was an absolute impossibility to secure any information as to the participants.

For a short while I served as prosecuting attorney. During the time I served there was one lynching. I went to the county in which the lynching occurred, for the purpose of securing information as to those who had participated in it. I resorted to every possible means to ascertain their identity. It soon appeared to me that if I hoped ever to secure the information I should have to wait until someone who participated was not on guard and should make some statement which would disclose the identity of the members of the mob or those who participated in the lynching.

If, perchance, after the enactment of this legislation it should be desired to discover who participated in a lynching, and the sheriff had to wait before going to the community for the reason I have stated, he would have facing him the provisions of the bill that if he failed to apprehend the guilty person within 30 days his failure would constitute prima facie evidence of guilt and make him liable to 5 years' imprisonment or to a fine, or to both imprisonment and fine.

In addition to that the section provides further that if the officer selected by the people of his State to serve as prosecuting attorney——

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. RUSSELL. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield for that purpose?

Mr. BYRNES. I do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Connally	Johnson	Pope
Ashurst	Coolidge	Keyes	Radcliffe
Austin	Copeland	King	Robinson
Bachman	Costigan	La Follette	Russell
Bailey	Couzens	Lewis	Schall
Bankhead	Cutting	Logan	Schwellenbach
Barbour	Dieterich	Lonergan	Sheppard
Barkley	Donahey	Long	Shipstead
Bilbo	Duffy	McCarran	Smith
Black	Fletcher	McGill	Steiwer
Bone	Frazier	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	George	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Brown	Gerry	Minton	Townsend
Bulkley	Gibson	Moore	Trammell
Bulow	Glass	Murphy	Truman
Burke	Gore	Murray	Tydings
Byrd	Guffey	Neely	Vandenberg
Byrnes	Hale	Norris	Van Nuys
Capper	Harrison	Nye	Wagner
Caraway	Hastings	O'Mahoney	Walsh
Carey	Hatch	Overton	Wheeler
Clark	Hayden	Pittman	White

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-eight Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, under the terms of this bill, if three persons should secure custody of an individual charged with committing some offense which they believed demanded immediate punishment and should do him injury, the matter would come within the jurisdiction of the United States court. If, however, the husband, father, or brother of one who had been injured should take the law into his own hands and either kill or do injury to the criminal, that would not be within the jurisdiction of the United States court. We have, by this bill, a one-man Constitution and a three-man Constitution. The United States court would have no jurisdiction of the case if the husband or father of the unfortunate victim of a rapist should immediately take his life. He could be tried only in the State courts, and under the language of the bill no offense would have been committed which would bring him within the jurisdiction of the United States court.

Mr. President, I wish to speak for a few minutes about the effect of this bill upon prosecuting attorneys. The language of the bill is:

A failure for more than 30 days after the commission of such an offense to apprehend or to indict the persons guilty thereof, or a failure diligently to prosecute such persons, shall be sufficient to constitute prima facie evidence of the failure, neglect, or refusal described in the above proviso.

By whom is a person indicted? Either by the district attorney in some jurisdictions or by the grand jury in other jurisdictions. Certainly under the laws of the State of South Carolina the indictment is by the grand jury. If the grand jury fails to indict someone within 30 days, it shall be construed as "a failure diligently to prosecute such person", and the United States court has jurisdiction over the grand jury in order to determine whether or not they are to be fined or imprisoned. If the prosecuting attorney fails to indict someone, then at the expiration of 30 days there is a prima facie presumption of his failure to diligently perform his duties, and upon such a showing the United States judge can take jurisdiction of the case against him for failure to diligently perform the duties of his office.

In other words, the duty is placed upon the sheriff first to get some man for this crime, and if he fails to do it he knows that he is liable to fine and imprisonment. Even after he gets him, if the grand jury, upon hearing the evidence, concludes—certainly in my State—that there is not sufficient evidence to warrant a true bill, then its members come within the provisions of this section.

Then, Mr. President and gentlemen of the Senate, just consider for a minute the position of the prosecuting attorney.

The prosecuting attorney, we have always been told, should bear in mind that it is his duty to see that no innocent man is punished in the criminal courts. He is not a partisan attorney, employed merely for the purpose of securing a conviction. It is his duty to act as the protector of the innocent man. If he attempts to do it, and reaches the conclusion that there is not sufficient evidence to warrant a true bill, or to warrant a verdict of guilty against the man, and takes that position in court, he is liable to punishment under the provisions of this bill.

Who is to pass upon that? I can picture the prosecuting attorney in a State prosecuting a case before a jury. He has been elected by the people of his county as prosecuting attorney. He is presenting the evidence in what he believes to be the best possible manner. He argues the case to the jury.

However, there may be present some representative of the Department of Justice, or the representative of some other organization, and that representative may conclude that the prosecuting attorney has not been diligent in endeavoring to secure a conviction at the hands of the jury, and he proceeds to take action against him, to bring to the attention of the judge of the United States court for that district the failure on the part of the prosecuting attorney diligently to endeavor to secure a conviction.

Let us see the position in which the court finds itself:

The district court of the United States for the district wherein the person is injured or put to death by a mob or riotous assemblage shall have jurisdiction to try and to punish, in accordance with the laws of the State where the injury is inflicted or the homicide is committed, any and all persons who shall participate therein.

What is necessary in order to confer jurisdiction upon the United States judge? First, it must appear to him—

That the officers of the State charged with the duty of apprehending, prosecuting, and punishing such offenders under the laws of the State shall have failed, neglected, or refused to apprehend, prosecute, or punish such offenders."

The question has been raised as to how it shall be made to appear to the court. Certainly there in this section there is nothing other than the statement that it must only be made to appear to the court that the prosecuting attorney in the State court has not been diligent.

Can it be made to appear by an affidavit? If an affidavit is presented, what opportunity is to be given to the prosecuting attorney to show that he was diligent? Who is to pass upon his diligence? Who can say what kind of argument the prosecuting attorney made to the grand jury, or what kind of argument he made to the petit jury? Who is going to say how well he presented his case to the jury through the witnesses? Certainly the United States judge, who was not present at the trial, cannot possibly say.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. O'MAHONEY in the chair). Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. In connection with the exact point which the Senator is now discussing, the Supreme Court of the United States has held in Collector against Day that the Federal Government can in nowise tax any agency of a State. We cannot tax the Governor's income or his salary. That was held in these words:

As the States cannot tax the powers, the operations, or the property of the United States, nor the means which they employ to carry their powers into execution, so it has been held that the United States has no power under the Constitution to tax either the instrumentalities or the property of a State.

In the face of that sort of a constitutional construction, the Federal Government cannot even tax the salary of the prosecuting officer, because he is free from Federal control in order to perform his duties as an officer of the State. Yet under this bill he could be put in the penitentiary, and there could be assessed against him heavy fines for carrying out his duties to the State, his sovereignty, the government which he serves. But the Supreme Court says that the Federal Government cannot even tax his salary, because it would be an infringement upon the sovereignty and the powers of the State which he serves.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I am glad the Senator from Texas has called attention to that decision. It is in accord with all the decisions.

In the language of the bill, it is provided that—

If such amount—

Referring to the award against a county.

If such an amount awarded be not paid upon recovery of a judgment therefor, such court shall have jurisdiction to enforce payment thereof by levy of execution upon any property of the county.

As the Senator from Texas has shown, that would be in direct violation of the Constitution. But even disregarding that, let me picture the absurdity of the provision.

In the State of Illinois unfortunately there is a labor controversy, we will assume. In the course of that controversy three of those who are on strike get into a conflict with some special deputy who is appointed, probably some one of the men imported to serve as guards. A guard is killed in the conflict, we will suppose. The three men who are on strike are taken into court and are charged with an offense against the laws of the United States, and doubtless would be convicted, or at least, from the experiences we have generally heard of, they would be in great danger of being convicted.

A suit is then brought in the United States court against the county, and a judgment is secured for the amount of money provided, not less than $2,000 and not more than $10,000. The county refuses to pay the $10,000, and what is the United States Government to do?

The United States Government goes in to mandamus. The county does not levy a tax. It does not in most States. They have tried it in the State of South Carolina, where we have a provision of the State constitution, and all they could ever do was to mandamus the county officers to put a provision in, an estimate, into a budget, which must be submitted to the general assembly, and then only by act of the general assembly could taxes be levied. In the State of Illinois, in the instance of a suit and judgment which was not paid, the United States Government could sell the county property. What property would it sell? Would it sell its courthouse? Would it go down and levy upon the courthouse? Who would buy the courthouse?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. BANKHEAD. It is a general rule of law that before real estate can be sold the personal property must be exhausted. Would they not be required first to sell all the records of the county, and all the furniture in the courthouse, or anywhere else in the county, including the almshouse, before they could proceed to levy on the real estate?

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I have thought possibly that would happen. If they did not take the courthouse, they were going to take the almshouse.

Mr. BANKHEAD. They would strip themselves of all personal property, and then resort to the almshouse and the courthouse.

Mr. BYRNES. The question of the Senator from Alabama strips the argument of all weight. I can see no possible way of enforcing this measure even if by any possibility the Congress should pass it, and the courts should hold it to be constitutional.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator ought not to overlook, in some of the counties, some school buildings, also.

Mr. BYRNES. I thought that in many of them there would be some question as to whether the United States Government could take the school houses, the property of the school districts. I know one State that seems to be discriminated in favor of—the State of Louisiana. I see the junior Senator [Mr. OVERTON] in the Chamber. He, at least, has the comfort of knowing that if I am correct in believing that there are parishes and not counties in the State of Louisiana, his State might possibly escape, as all these punishments are visited upon counties and not upon parishes.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. LOGAN. What difference does it make if the courthouse is sold in a county where there is mob rule? The people who live there have no use for a courthouse, anyway.

Mr. BYRNES. If all the courthouses in the United States where an individual has been killed by three persons should be sold, it would mean the sale of every courthouse in the United States; for there is not a county in the United States where at some time in its history some individual has not been killed by three or more persons. There would not be a courthouse left in Kentucky.

Mr. SMITH. That is true, Mr. President.

Mr. BYRNES. Yet I am enough of an admirer of the great State of Kentucky to believe that a condition does not exist there which would warrant us in saying that we should abandon all hope of Kentucky. I do not. I still believe the people of that State are a law-abiding people. The records show that there, as in every other State in the Union, lynchings have been decreasing annually, and if the State is left alone they will continue to decrease. But I hesitate to think what would occur if such a bill as this should pass, and there should come into Kentucky and into every other State, minions from Washington who would seek to pass judgment upon the efforts of a prosecuting attorney, and to say whether or not he was exercising due diligence in trying to convict a man accused of murder. I believe that in Kentucky, as in Alabama, and wherever murder has occurred, the people have stood behind the officers of the law seeking to gain a conviction, and they should continue to do it; and if they continue to do it they ought not to be handicapped by men who would come to interfere with the enforcement of the law instead of promoting the enforcement of the law.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. RUSSELL. I have listened with a great deal of interest to the observations of the Senator from South Carolina, particularly to what he said with reference to the State of Lousiana not being affected, inasmuch as that State does not have governmental subdivisions which are designated as counties. I will state to the Senator from South Carolina, who has also noted the fact, that upon reading this bill it apparently would not apply to the District of Columbia, for some reason which has not been made clear by the authors thereof.

Mr. BYRNES. No, Mr. President; so far as I read the bill, the statement of the Senator from Georgia is correct. I recall that back in 1917 or 1918 there was quite a little controversy in the District of Columbia about a number of matters, as the result of which some gentlemen who were then busy upon Capitol Hill found it quite a dangerous thing to go to their hotels. People were being killed all over the city. Quite a large number were killed. I do not know that there was any intention on the part of any persons to exempt the District of Columbia from the provisions of the law. I do not see why it should be exempted.

I desire now to call attention to another matter. I read section 4:

> The district court of the United States judicial district wherein the person is injured or put to death by a mob or riotous assemblage shall have jurisdiction to try and to punish, in accordance with the laws of the State where the injury is inflicted or the homicide is committed, any and all persons who participate therein: Provided, That it is first made to appear to such court (1) that the officers of the State charged with the duty of apprehending, prosecuting, and punishing such offenders under the laws of the State shall have failed, neglected, or refused to apprehend, prosecute, or punish such offenders; or (2) that the jurors obtainable for service in the State court having jurisdiction of the offense are so strongly opposed to such punishment that there is probability that those guilty of the offense will not be punished in such State court.

How is that provision to be enforced? Suppose in the State of Michigan some unfortunate individual should be killed by three men riding by in an automobile, having with them a machine gun which they turn on the victim, and kill him. They ride off, and the prosecuting attorney is not able within 30 days to find out who occupied the machine. That would be prima facie evidence that the prosecuting attorney had not been diligent, and the sheriff had not been diligent, and that, therefore, they could be taken into the United States court.

There is a second proviso. The officers could be brought into the United States court for the reason stated, or, if they should arrest the man who was in the automobile and who fired the gun, and they should attempt to take him into the State court, some representative of the United States Government could ask that he be taken to the United States court on the ground that the jurors of that county were so strongly opposed to punishment that there was no probability of guilt being determined.

How is that to be ascertained? It is stated in the bill that it must first appear to the judge of the United States court. Are the Federal authorities going to examine the jurors, or are they going to take an affidavit from some man who goes into the State and who takes the position that in that particular county those who probably would be called for jury service would not render a true verdict? Are they going to indict a whole county of people and say there is no sentiment there in favor of law and order?

Mr. President, when I read that provision I know that so far as that particular section is concerned it will not be a very serious factor in the enforcement of law. I do not believe the district judge of any United States court who has regard for his oath of office will accept the statement of any individual that in any county of the United States where jurors have not even been drawn they are of such character, that all those who are available for service are of such character that there is no probability that those guilty of the offense will ever be punished in a State court.

Then how are they to be punished in the United States court? Where are the jurors coming from? Presumably, county lines do not make a great change in the character of people.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. I am sorry to say that in the State of Maryland recently there was a lynching. As it was very recent, I know the Senator is familiar with the happenings over there in a general way. I desire to point out that on that particular occasion State troops were rushed to the scene, but apparently insufficient numbers of them were there, and the people broke into the jail, got hold of the culprit, and killed him. However, the Governor did not stop there. The attorney general of the State and a battalion of the National Guard went into the community in an attempt to ascertain who had been guilty of this offense. The matter wound up in a riot in that section, and for a long while it looked as if additional blood would be spilled.

I do not mean to condone the lynching at all, but what I do mean to point out is that even with the best of intentions a State executive, really on the job, and with the National Guard at his disposal, and with a desire not to have lynchings, and to punish those implicated in lynchings, quite frequently finds that in the face of a mob he is powerless to carry out the law.

Governor Ritchie, in my State, won the commendation of people of humane instincts all over the country. To some extent it affected his political career, perhaps. I do not think, however, that was the deciding event. At any rate there was the Governor who perhaps did not act quickly enough, or did not do this, that, and the other, as we look back upon it, but who had every desire to throw around the accused every safeguard possible, and further than that, to go in after the deed was done and to right the wrong so far as he could. The Senator is familiar with that happening in the last couple of years, and it shows the futility, almost, of trying to find those who really were guilty of the offense. In line with what the Senator is saying, I simply make that observation to show the difficulty even when it is intended by high authority to bring order out of chaos in a situation of that kind.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I recall the story as it appeared in the newspapers. No one commended Governor Ritchie more sincerely and more heartily than I did at that time.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. COSTIGAN. The Senator, of course, is aware that under the proposed legislation in cases where all due diligence had been exercised by local peace officers the Federal jurisdiction would not attach.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. I know that the Senator from Colorado, in introducing this bill, was actuated by instincts and attributes of humanity, and I have tried to bring myself in line with his general thoughts. One of the difficulties I have found in supporting the bill—and I wish to overcome all of them that I can—is that when the courthouse is sold, so to speak, or when the $10,000 fine is levied on the county, I do not like to levy an extra tax or assessment on law-abiding people who in that particular community were opposed to the crime of lynching. I happen to know that in this particular case many people in the community were just as much opposed to it as the Senator was.

Yet under the terms of the bill we would tax them for their proportionate share of the $10,000. I suppose the Senator's answer to that question is, "That is true"; but there is no better way we could find to bring some measure of recompense to the children or the offspring of the man who had been lynched. As that was the best way we could get at it, we had to do it in that way. Nevertheless, the fact remains that it does penalize innocent people who had no part in the lynching, and to that extent we are embracing the very thing which we seek to eliminate.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HATCH in the chair). Does the Senator from South Carolina yield further to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Since the last remarks were addressed to me I merely wish to refer once again to the fact that in about 11 States of the Union there now are provisions in State laws making cities, or counties, or both, liable in such cases.

I directed the attention of the Senate the other day to the fact that Professor Chadbourn, assistant professor of law in the University of North Carolina, in a book entitled, "Lynching and the Law", published in 1933, compiled these statutes and introduced a table showing that in the State of South Carolina, one of the pioneer States in introducing and enacting this type of legislation, no lynching has occurred in any county of the State in which judgments under such a law were collected, as they were, against counties.

Mr. TYDINGS. I am glad to learn that from the Senator.

If the Senator from South Carolina will permit me further, my own feeling in the matter is that I should like to see every State in the Union, rather than the Federal Government, take whatever action it could logically take to discourage and minimize the promptings toward lynching.

Mr. BANKHEAD. May I answer the suggestion of the Senator from Colorado by stating that lynchings had about ceased, anyway. The fact that we have not had any lynching in South Carolina does not prove anything except that we are wiping it out. If we may be let alone, we will complete the job.

Mr. TYDINGS. I myself believe the number of lynchings is declining. My own State had a very enviable record. I am very sorry that recently that record was not maintained. I should like to support any legislation I could which would eliminate lynching. My only fear is that I doubt very much that we will accomplish what we hope by the bill which we are now discussing.

In that connection a lady came to my office the other day asking me to support the bill. By way of arriving at her viewpoint I said, "What would you have done if you had met Hauptmann the day after Mr. Lindbergh's baby was discovered dead?" She said, "I would have shot him down in cold blood, without the least hesitation." Yet the lady was there asking me to support antilynching legislation.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the Senator from Colorado said with reference to South Carolina that, after judgment had been obtained, no lynching occurred subsequently in that county. Last year no lynching occurred at all in South Carolina in any county. I am glad to say in the last 8 or 10 years our record has been a splendid one. The Senator's statement does not prove anything. I have heretofore quoted from the record to show that after the adoption of that provision, not by statute, but in the constitution of South Carolina, in the 10 years following the adoption of the constitution in 1895 there were just as many lynchings as had occurred in the 10 years preceding 1895.

One might consider the logic of Professor Charbourn that a mob, having in custody a rapist who had aroused the emotions to such extent that they were about to violate the law and take human life, would stop and say, "Now, we had better not lynch this man because the county will have to pay $2,000."

No; it would not be done!

There is only one way, and the one way is the way in which we have been proceeding; that is to have every teacher, every preacher, every editor, day in and day out, preach that lynching is murder, and for it there shall be no excuse; that the law must be upheld at all hazards. In response to that a sentiment has grown which has resulted in a wonderful improvement not only in our State, but in every other State. The figures have been placed in the RECORD. It ought to be known by all men that since 1882 when there was a total of 113 lynchings, the number has decreased until 1932 when there were but 8 lynchings in all the Nation, though the number increased to 28 in 1933, but again last year decreased to 15.

There were but 15 lynchings in 1934, according to figures compiled by the Tuskegee Institute, and even as to those there is always some question because it is difficult for some people to agree as to exactly what constitutes a lynching.

There will be even more difficulty, if we enact such a statute as is here proposed, to determine, if three persons participate and a human being is killed, whether it is a lynching. I imagine in what has been classified as "lynching" by the Tuskegee officials, they have had in mind where there was a mob composed of a large number of people, and not merely an assemblage of three persons who would constitute a mob under the terms of the bill which we are here discussing.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. Certainly.

Mr. LOGAN. I know the Senator means to be fair, but he and other Senators have argued the matter from a standpoint which I think is erroneous. The bill does not provide that if three persons simply go out and kill a man, then the provisions of the bill shall apply; but he must be someone who is in the custody of an officer, who has been convicted of a crime, or charged with a crime, or is suspected of a crime. It is not a question of three men conspiring together to go out and kill a man.

Mr. BYRNES. If he is suspected.

Mr. LOGAN. In other words, he must be a criminal who is either in custody or whom the officers are preparing to take into custody, and then if three or more men take him they constitute a mob.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will the Senator from South Carolina yield to me at that point?

Mr. BYRNES. Certainly.

Mr. BLACK. Unfortunately the Senator from Kentucky is mistaken. I analyzed this morning the first paragraph of the bill. All the Senator has to do is to read the bill in careful detail to see that no such requirement is there. As a matter of fact, it is provided under one of the clauses that he must be in prison or in custody or must be suspected of a crime, but under another clause, all that is necessary is that three or more persons shall meet and as a consequence of their meeting together the man or the corporation—because the provision includes corporations—shall be deprived of due process of law, or be deprived of equality under the law.

I know the keen legal mind of the Senator from Kentucky, and the training he had on the supreme court bench. I would suggest that the Senator read the bill carefully and in connection with it the brief of Mr. Tuttle, which is a very able brief. He will find there are three different conditions which control the group of three people and bring them within the definition of a mob. Two of them do not require that it be an injury to someone who is in custody or has been suspected of a crime.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for just one question?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. Instead of dealing in technicalities, as it is so easy to do if one seeks reasons for opposition, why not face the facts? Is it not generally known what lynching is and how it takes place, so that when we talk about it we confront not some imaginary situation but something which everybody knows and recognizes? We know how lynchings occur and what they are.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, if the Senator from New York knows what a lynching is, what is it? If everybody knows it, will the Senator tell us what it is?

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator from South Carolina has talked about lynchings. He has said that only so many have taken place in his State and so many in another State, that there are less lynchings now than there were some years ago, and that, therefore, this legislation is unnecessary. He intimates that if a thousand victims were involved they would be entitled to protection, but that if only 15 lose their lives they are not entitled to protection. That is a sort of logic that I cannot follow.

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator from New York is the author of the bill in which it is stated that it is a bill to prevent and punish the crime of lynching, and he says everybody knows what lynching is. I ask the Senator if he will tell us what constitutes a lynching. He is the author of the bill, and if we are wrong about it I should like to have the author of the bill tell us what constitutes a lynching. He says everybody knows. Now, what is it?

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator from South Carolina has been talking about lynchings.

Mr. BYRNES. I have been talking about the bill the Senator from New York introduced. What is it, then?

Mr. WAGNER. One is charged with a crime—and, by the way, it is not always rape. As a matter of fact, the records show that offenses other than rape are charged most generally. Some very trivial offenses have been charged, usually against persons of a certain race. When a suspect is apprehended, and the community is aroused, and three or more persons go into the jail and take the victim from the custody of a sheriff and string him up to a pole, or do something like that, that is called a lynching. When that occurs, either with the connivance of the sheriff or other official or through his neglect—and we know exactly what that means—then not only is the officer in such a case guilty of a crime but the county should pay by way of liquidated damages for his offense.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I know the Senate is delighted to have the author of the bill advise us that what he intended to say when he drafted this bill was that if two or more men enter a jail and take a prisoner——

Mr. WAGNER. No; I am not limiting the definition to that. The Senator from South Carolina asked me about the ordinary case of lynching. That is the ordinary case. There are other cases.

Mr. BYRNES. This bill is to prevent and punish the crime of lynching. Therefore, it is good to know not only what is in the proposed law but what it was the intention of the Senator from New York to place in the proposed law.

Mr. WAGNER. I do not wish to have the Senator from South Carolina confine me to that particular definition, because there are other cases where the official whose duty it is to protect the prisoner or to apprehend the offender fails to do so.

Mr. BYRNES. Is that lynching?

Mr. WAGNER. No; but that is neglect to protect the particular individual charged with the crime.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I know we are fortunate in having the Senator from New York tell us exactly what we are doing.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. Before yielding, I should like to say that, while the bill is said to be a bill to prevent lynching, of course, we know that regardless of the intention of the author of the bill, if the intention has not been expressed in the law, it is unfortunate so far as the victim is concerned who is hauled up for violating the law. Nevertheless, what the Senator intended to say in drafting this bill was that whenever two or more persons enter a jail and take a prisoner and carry him out and hang him up to a pole and kill him they shall suffer the penalties that are provided.

Mr. WAGNER. Yes; they are guilty of lynching.

Mr. BYRNES. It is unfortunate that that is not the way the bill is expressed. If it had been, it would have made unnecessary a great deal of the debate which has proceeded according to the language of the bill. The language of the bill is entirely different.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President——

Mr. BYRNES. I yield to the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. BLACK. The Senator from New York asked if there was any misunderstanding on the part of anybody as to what a lynching is. I called attention today to the fact that Alabama has been charged with a lynching, and I gave the facts. They are the facts as stated, even in the publication which referred to the occurrence as a lynching. I challenge anybody to make the statement, under those facts, that that was a lynching. That is one case where there was clearly a mistake.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, I should like to have my colleague restate those facts.

Mr. BLACK. It was a case where three girls were held up by a man with a pistol, and one of the girls broke away and went to a nearby meeting and told the persons at that meeting that they were being assaulted; and men in the meeting rushed to the place, and the man who was assaulting the girls proceeded to break away and shoot at them, and they shot him and killed him. That is the "lynching" which was charged up to the State of Alabama last year!

Mr. BYRNES. And under this bill the family of the rapist in that instance would be entitled to sue and recover $10,000!

Mr. BLACK. He did not succeed in his purpose. The men got there before he could take the girls away, even at the point of a pistol.

Mr. BYRNES. The man was committing the assault, then, with intent to commit rape.

Mr. BLACK. But here is the point: The Senator from South Carolina calls this an antilynching bill. He read the title of the bill, and designated it as an antilynching bill. I submit that the only place where it can be said to be an antilynching bill is in the title. I submit that the bill covers far more than an antilynching measure does, as I have set out here today.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a suggestion?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. In view of these differences of opinion, would not the logical thing be to proceed with this proposed legislation as we have proceeded with other proposed legislation? Let us bring up the bill for consideration, and if the language of the bill does not accurately reflect what it is intended to accomplish, then we may by amendment and discussion and deliberation perfect the language, for out of this composite view there undoubtedly would emerge a perfected bill. It seems to me illogical to discuss the merits of the bill now, when the pending motion is merely that the Senate take up the bill for consideration, deliberation, amendment, and then final action one way or the other.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, in the first place, I desire to say that I stated at the outset that I was addressing my remarks to the motion of the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] to amend the motion of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], and to take up the bill providing for the payment of the adjusted-compensation certificates. I stated that I believed that motion to be a wise one, because I did not believe in the provisions of this bill, and I was showing the reasons why I took that position. I submit to the Senator, however, in all seriousness, that when it does appear that there is such an absolute difference of opinion even as to what constitutes lynching, and when I think the Senator, upon reading the bill, will agree that it does not express the view of lynching which he expressed here a few moments ago, the thing to do is not to consider the bill at this time, but to redraft it in accordance with the Senator's statement of his intention, and reintroduce it at a later date, when it can be considered.

Mr. WAGNER. There are some amendments which the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN] and I have agreed to offer the moment that the bill is up for consideration. Our minds are open. If there are Senators interested in this legislation who will suggest language that is more desirable than the language used, of course we shall accept it. That course has been followed every day. Why make an exception of this particular legislation, by preventing us from even bringing the matter up for consideration and amendment? Since I have been in the Senate, I do not know of any other piece of legislation reported by a committee that occasioned a discussion of the merits of the measure upon a motion to take the bill up for consideration.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, there is nothing about the motion to bring the bill up for consideration which makes it at all sacred. Pending at this time is the bill for the payment of the adjusted-compensation certificates, to be followed by the N. R. A. bill and the social-security bill. The Finance Committee declares it is ready to bring those measures in.

The Senator from New York says he and the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN] have talked about a number of amendments. Now, when it appears that as to the very foundation thing, the definition of lynching, what is, according to the title, sought to be prevented, there is to be an amendment, I suggest that the Senator should first change the language of the bill in its definition of lynching, and perfect these other amendments, and then next week he can offer it.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. Does the Senator think that when the national recovery bill comes up for consideration there will be no perfecting amendments offered and adopted upon the floor?

Mr. BYRNES. No; I do not.

Mr. WAGNER. Or that when the social-security bill and the bonus bill are up for consideration there will not be some Senators who will offer amendments to perfect the legislation? Why not deal with this antilynching legislation just as we shall deal with the N. R. A. legislation, the social security legislation, the labor-disputes bill, and other bills which we are bound to consider before we adjourn? What is there about this proposed legislation that should prevent its receiving the consideration which I know we shall accord the measures which the Senator predicts will be reported?

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I regret exceedingly that the Senator from New York has not been able to be here, or he would have heard a number of reasons urged. First, there was presented the question of the unconstitutionality.

Mr. WAGNER. Oh, well——

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator says "Oh, well." I know he would be opposed to considering the constitutionality, but still that has been urged with great force by Members of the Senate who believe it is a matter still to be considered.

Mr. WAGNER. Is not that so as to every piece of new-deal legislation that has been proposed? Has not all such legislation been attacked, particularly by the other side, upon the ground that it was beyond our constitutional authority to enact laws of that kind? If we are satisfied with the merits of the proposal, we can safely leave the constitutional question to be determined by the courts.

Mr. BYRNES. I know that that is the attitude of the Senator.

Mr. WAGNER. It is the attitude of the Senator from South Carolina, too.

Mr. BYRNES. If the Senator is satisfied with it, we need never consider the constitutionality at all.

Mr. WAGNER. It was the attitude of the Senator from South Carolina with reference to the National Recovery Act, and with reference to other measures we have enacted here, which were attacked particularly as being in contravention of the Constitution. It did not disturb the Senator very much that constitutional questions were raised.

Mr. BYRNES. I am very glad to have the Senator make a speech, but the trouble with the Senator is that when he discovers that he cannot exactly justify his position he speaks of attacks from the other side. Nobody from the other side is attacking the constitutionality of this measure, with the exception of one or two. No one on the floor of the Senate has attempted to support the constitutionality of the measure except the Senator from New York and the Senator from Colorado, in two prepared addresses. Every other Senator who has addressed the Senate upon the measure has declared what the United States Supreme Court has decided, that legislation of this character is unconstitutional.

When the Senator says that when the security legislation is offered some amendments may be offered, I agree; but no amendment will be offered and seriously considered which will entirely change the character of the measure. Yet the Senator now says that his definition of "lynching" is that two men must go into a jail, pull a man out, and hang him to a telegraph pole. That is what the Senator said.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, the Senator asked me what the ordinary case of lynching was. The Senator must not make misstatements of fact.

Mr. BYRNES. I read to the Senator the language of his own bill, and asked him to give us the benefit of a statement as to what he intended by that language. His language is in the RECORD, and by that I am willing to stand. I contend he made an entirely different statement than that which is contained in the bill, a statement which is entirely different in effect from the language of the bill.

I wish to submit further that from the standpoint of policy the measure should not be considered at this time. I have read heretofore from the record as to the improvement in conditions. I know that the Senator from New York is inspired by no motive other than a laudable one, to make punishable an offense which he believes is not punished in every State of the Union with the speed with which some people would like to have it punished. But I think the Senator from New York agrees that the development of sentiment in this Union for the enforcement of law for the prevention of lynching is nothing short of remarkable. The States have been doing remarkable work, because the best elements in every State have been devoting their time to teaching, preaching, and writing in an effort to encourage a sentiment in behalf of law and order, and in condemnation of lynchings wherever and whenever they occurred. We are making headway with the development of this fine spirit of law enforcement, and at this time, when we are proceeding to reduce the commission of this offense, no matter how it is classified, we should not be handicapped.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. BYRNES. Just one moment, and I will yield.

The debate with my friend, the Senator from New York, was brought about by my statement that it is difficult to classify lynchings. The officials of Tuskegee Institute hardly ever agree with other authorities on the subject. The Day Book will show a number differing from the number given by Tuskegee, and necessarily there must be some difference. My statement was simply to show that at times it is difficult to tell how the statisticians arrive at their conclusions and figures.

Now I yield to the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. BLACK. The Senator was discussing another point, concerning which I intended to make a suggestion.

The Senator called attention to the extent to which we had reduced this particular crime in the United States. As a matter of fact, statistics show that we have reduced this crime in the United States more than any other crime on the statute books has been reduced. Take the crime of murder, for instance, in the State of New York or in the State of Alabama. Take the crime of burglary in the State of Alabama, or the State of New York, or in the Nation. It will be found that the crime to which the bill is directed has been reduced far more than murder, burglary, robbery, stealing, or any other crime has been reduced.

The Senator asks why, if there were only 14 lynchings last year, should we pass this bill? Why should we select one class of crimes in the prevention of which we have made more remarkable progress than in the case of any others in the Nation? We have not made that progress with reference to convictions for burglary or murder.

Mr. BYRNES. I will say to the Senator from Alabama, who has devoted considerable thought to the legal aspects of this subject——

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a question?

Mr. BYRNES. I will yield in a moment.

The Senator from Alabama refers to other offenses. If, under the Constitution, we have the power to legislate with respect to three or more persons participating in killing a human being, why, under the Constitution, cannot Congress legislate that if two or three persons participate in burglary, the offense referred to by the Senator from Alabama, they can be tried in a United States court? By what reasoning could we say that Congress did not have the right to provide that where three persons participated in a burglary they could be tried in the United States court?

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. I not only say it with reference to three, but with reference to one. This bill is based on the theory that it rests on the fourteenth amendment. The Supreme Court has held that the fourteenth amendment protects property rights as well as personal rights; and this particular bill would cover the case of burglary if it were intended to do so, because it is not limited to lynchings, as I stated, but to cases which come within the purview of depriving one of due process of law. When anyone takes a man's property from his house by burglary, he does not do it by due process of law. He does it beyond the law. There is no due process of law connected with it; so there is no reason why we should not include burglary if we include lynching. There is no reason why we should not, for instance, take cognizance of the fact that gang killings in the city of New York, in the city of Chicago, in the city of Cleveland, and in various other cities of the Nation, have not been decreasing but increasing.

We deprive people of their property without due process of law. If we are to enact Federal legislation to protect where there is the most crime, why is it necessary to shut our eyes and not see where the crime actually is? We all know there has been more crime in this country of the type of gang killings, gang rackets, racketeering, and crimes of that kind, than any other type of crime in America; and yet in this bill there is picked out the only type of crime which the American people have turned their faces against, and brought down to the lowest point in all the history of the Nation, making a record which is absolutely the most commendable of any record we have established in connection with the suppression of crime. In the case of the crimes which have been decreasing, we are asked if there are 14 crimes of a particular kind, why we ought not to invite Federal legislation. Then why not invite Federal legislation to stop the crimes that are the most prominent, the most terrible, the crimes increasing most in number and in viciousness?

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. Of course, the Senator and I will surely agree upon the proposition that it is the duty of the Federal Government to see that the States give equal protection of the laws to its citizens. That is not merely a State function, but also the duty of the Federal Government. It is a mandate of the Federal Constitution. Will the Senator tell me, if he has the statistics, how many prosecutions there have been of those charged with the crime of lynching in relation to the number of lynchings that have taken place? And, secondly, after he has given us the number of those who have been prosecuted for these crimes, will he give us the percentage of convictions?

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, before the Senator does that, will he yield for another question in connection with it?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. If he has those statistics, will he also tell us what was the number of gang crimes committed last year in Chicago, in New York, and in the other great cities of this country? Will he tell us, if he has the statistics, what percentage of the criminals were apprehended? Will he tell us what percentage were convicted?

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the Senator from Alabama has answered the Senator from New York.

Mr. WAGNER. That is the answer; is it?

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, if it does not answer the Senator from New York, it is because he does not desire to receive information.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. GLASS. After all, when people who engage in lynch law are tried, are they not tried by jurors?

Mr. BYRNES. They are.

Mr. GLASS. Do they not have the right, under the Constitution, of trial by jury?

Mr. BYRNES. Undoubtedly.

Mr. GLASS. Are not the jurors drawn from the very same people in the State courts as in the Federal courts?

Mr. BYRNES. Absolutely.

Mr. GLASS. Then why may we not expect convictions in State courts just as well as in Federal courts?

The whole thing goes back to this utterly vicious tendency to invade the police powers and every other power of the States for political purposes.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the Senator from Virginia has stated the matter much better than I could ever hope to state it. When, under a section of this bill, it is provided that it must be made to appear to the court—

> That the jurors obtainable for service in the State court having jurisdiction of the offense are so strongly opposed to such punishment that there is probability that those guilty of the offense will not be punished in the State court.

Where are the jurors for the United States court to be obtained, as the Senator from Virginia inquires? From that county and from the adjoining counties—the same kind of people. If there could not be found in a county jurors who would probably find a true verdict under their oaths in the State court, what right have we to expect that it could be done in the United States court? It would be utterly impossible, but that is proposed to be done by this bill.

There is another provision to which I should like to call attention. In the section providing that the county shall be liable, it is provided that—

> In the event that any person so injured or put to death shall have been transported by such mob or riotous assemblage from one county to another county or counties during the time intervening between his seizure and injury or putting to death, the county in which he is seized and the county in which he is injured or put to death shall be jointly and severally liable to pay the forfeiture herein provided, and action shall be brought and prosecuted by the United States district attorney of any district wherein any such county is located.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. I asked the Senator to give me some statistics.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I was interrupted by the Senator from Alabama——

Mr. WAGNER. This will only take a second, Mr. President. I will give the Senator authentic statistics on that. There have been 5,071 lynchings in the United States since 1882, and 280 since 1922. Since the turn of the century only eight-tenths of 1 percent of these crimes have been followed by prosecutions, and in only 12 instances have convictions resulted.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I have not the statistics, but I wish I could make such a statement as to the commission of similar crimes in the State of New York of the character described by the Senator from Alabama, the gangster crimes. Those of us who read the newspapers are filled with horror as we read of the commission of crimes wherever they occur, whether the crimes be of the character described by the Senator, where a man is taken and hung up to a pole, or whether a man innocently walking along the streets of Chicago, New York, or some other great city, is shot down from an automobile by a machine gun, the automobile continuing on its way, scattering death wherever it goes, with no hope of ever convicting the criminals, no hope of ever trying them, or ever taking them.

Those of us who live in other sections extend sympathy to the law-abiding people of New York who would like to prevent the commission of such crimes, and would like to see them punished when they do occur.

We know, however, that such matters must be left to the people of New York. Not only under the Constitution, but under all good common sense such matters must be left to them, and we rely upon the law-abiding people of that State, the overwhelming majority of whom denounce such crimes, to build up a sentiment which will prevent them or, whenever they do occur, will see that those who commit the crimes are punished.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. I shall get the statistics for the Senator, because he is interested in that question, but there has never been a suggestion made, in any of these cases, that any of those offenses were committed with the connivance of any public official, or through his failing to protect the innocent victim.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I wish I could agree with the Senator.

Mr. WAGNER. I shall give the Senator the statistics.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. In just a moment.

In the first place, the Senator from New York could not give me any statistics because they never have been able, in the city of New York, where he lives, to keep up with the number who are killed each year, and the Senator knows it. Many crimes are committed where the criminal could not be detected because of the great population. The Senator from New York can never be able to give the statistics of human beings who have lost their lives. The Senator says that in no case has there been any connivance. Hereafter I shall endeavor to keep a little scrapbook for him about such matters, because I know it would enlist his sympathy.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will the Senator remind the Senator from New York of Lieutenant Becker?

Mr. WAGNER. Yes; and Becker was prosecuted, convicted, and executed.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I only want to say that because such statistics are not available, and the Senator from New York says such things are not done, I am going to present the little scrapbook to the Senator. Because of his wonderful industry, his wonderful intellect, I ask him to use some of it in the State of New York to get his State to enact a law similar to that enacted in South Carolina, so that when a human being is killed by three or more, the family of the deceased may recover something from those who killed him. He should do this before he comes to the Congress and asks Congress to legislate in that way for other States of the Union.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, right on that point let me say that I have here the statutes of Virginia, and I invite the Senator from New York to contrast them with the statutes of New York against mob violence and lynching.

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator from New York has no statute with which to contrast the statutes of Virginia.

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator overlooks the fact that when this bill is enacted into law it will apply to New York just as it will to any other section of the country.

Mr. BYRNES. That is what I said. The representative of the great State of New York rises on the floor of the Senate to say, "We cannot do it in the State of New York; New York would not do it; so we come to the United States Government and ask that the United States Government shall force us to do something for the innocent victims of the mob." The Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS] has said that in his State a law has been enacted to provide for such cases. That is true of North Carolina, South Carolina, Illinois, and Ohio, but nothing of the kind has been enacted in New York or in Colorado.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. The Senator from New York said that never had it been charged that the gangsters and racketeers in New York were protected by the officials and the politicians. During the many years I have heard of gang killings and racketeer killings, it has been charged all over the country in every State in the Union that frequently the criminals are protected by political clubs, by politicians, and by officers, and I include in that the charge that has been printed frequently for many years that they are protected by political organizations in the city of New York. Why should the Federal Government be called on to attempt to purify the city of New York? Of course, I understand New York might be able to purify all the other sections of the country, but I have always heard something about taking the mote out of one's own eye before beginning work on the beam in somebody else's eye.

Mr. BYRNES. I think the Senator from New York has heard that suggestion, too. Others have heard it, I know.

As a matter of fact, I have spent considerable time denying the truth of the charge to which the Senator has referred, and I think all of us have. It is charged that these officials in the city of New York were guilty of conniving with those committing crimes. I did not believe it possible to the extent it was charged throughout the country. I am still hopeful that it is not so.

Mr. President, I desire now to return to a discussion of the details of the bill. Among those details is a provision to which I invited attention a few moments ago, that if a person injured shall have been transported by a mob or riotous assemblage from one county to another county or counties during the time intervening between the seizure and the injury or putting to death, the county in which he is seized and the county in which he is injured or put to death shall be jointly and severally liable.

In other words, if a man is taken in a county adjoining the city of Washington and is transported into another county under the cover of darkness and there put to death, the county into which he is carried, having nothing to do at all with the matter, the county whose people are not engaged in the matter, the county which has committed no offense other than to exist and to have a telephone pole or a tree, is to be held liable. Because in the middle of the night there were not sufficient officers of the law standing all along the border line of the county to prevent coming within the borders of the county the mob with this individual; because they failed to do that and the man was killed in that county, the taxpayers of that county must be forced to pay damages, possibly $10,000, to the heirs of the deceased.

The bill even provides that in a case where a mob takes an individual from one county to another if they should cut across the corner of a third county then each of the three counties shall be liable for not less than $2,000 and not more than $10,000, and innocent taxpayers, having nothing to do with the affair, must pay taxes because of the action of some people in a county removed possibly 75 or 100 miles. In this day of automobiles and good roads, when men travel across county lines rapidly, such an event is possible at any time, of course. Such a provision would be utterly impossible of enforcement, and absolutely unfair if it could be enforced.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I should like to know if the Senator means, if a mob of racketeers or otherwise in the night should be organized along the line of one county and without any notice pass across the county line into another county, that the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] proposes to tax the county into which they pass although it and its officials had nothing to do with the affair? Is that the sense of justice contained in this measure?

Mr. BYRNES. It is not only proposed to give the right of suit, but if they do not pay the judgment the courts may proceed to sell the property of the county, the courthouse, the almshouse, even the schoolhouses, and thus take away the opportunity for education, in order to compensate for an action occurring in another county. Let me read the provision:

SEC. 6. In the event that any person so injured or put to death shall have been transported by such mob or riotous assemblage from one county to another county or counties during the time intervening between his seizure and injury or putting to death, the county in which he is seized and the county in which he is injured or put to death shall be jointly and severally liable to pay the forfeiture herein provided, and action shall be brought and prosecuted by the United States district attorney of any district wherein any such county is located. Any district judge of the United States District Court of the judicial district wherein any suit or prosecution is instituted under the provisions of this act may by order direct that such suit or prosecution be tried in any place in such district as he may designate in such order.

Accordingly, it may be tried in any county of the judicial district in which the judge is presiding.

Mr. WAGNER. That is, the constitutional provision of the State of South Carolina imposes upon the particular county where the lynching takes place a fine or liquidated damages of some kind?

Mr. BYRNES. It provides in all cases of lynching where death ensues that the county where the lynching shall take place, without regard to the conduct of the officer, shall be liable in exemplary damages of not less than $2,000 to the legal representatives of the deceased.

Mr. WAGNER. Is that different from the provision in this bill?

Mr. BYRNES. It is somewhat different.

Mr. WAGNER. Does the Senator approve or disapprove that?

Mr. BYRNES. I was in favor of the constitutional provision. I have been pleading today, though the Senator from New York was not here, and I repeat my plea now, since he is here, that the Senator from New York use his influence to have a similar statute enacted in his State if he believes it is constitutional without a constitutional provision. I doubt it. Such a provision is in our Constitution; but, because of the Senator's interest in it, I hope he will have the State of New York do likewise, because, if the Constitution authorizes it, it is within the power of the State to do it.

Mr. WAGNER. Then I misunderstood the position of the Senator from South Carolina. I understood him to criticize the proposition of compelling a county to pay at all when a lynching occurs within its borders.

Mr. BYRNES. Oh, no! We have been discussing that subject all afternoon. What we are discussing is taking the man into another county.

Mr. WAGNER. That is what we are discussing at this moment; but some time ago the Senator from South Carolina referred to the imposition upon a county of the payment of liquidated damages.

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator misunderstood me.

Mr. WAGNER. Then the Senator agrees upon the principle of making a community or a county pay when a lynching occurs in that community or county. But the Senator takes the position that each State should enact a statute of its own; that the provision ought not to be in a Federal statute?

Mr. BYRNES. If, under its constitution, it can do so.

Mr. WAGNER. Of course, the attitude of the Senator from South Carolina differs from that of some of his colleagues in this respect.

Mr. BYRNES. I have called attention several times to the States wherein such constitutional provisions and such statutes exist, the eight of them that are cited in the record. I have expressed the hope that other States, including the State of the Senator from New York, would do the same thing; and I have stated that if any good could be accomplished by that course, that was the way to do it, and not by a Federal statute. That is the position I have been endeavoring to present; but what I desired to call to the attention of the Senator was that under the present bill, the case in behalf of the heirs of the deceased is to be tried in the United States courts, and it may be tried in another county. The provision is that the district judge of the judicial district "wherein any suit or prosecution is instituted may direct that such suit or prosecution be tried in any place in such district as he may designate in such order"; and the county to which the prisoner or the victim of the mob is taken, having nothing to do with it, is likewise made liable to the heirs of the deceased.

Mr. President, I heard some Senators say they wish to vote. I do not desire to be interrupted when I am addressing the Senate upon the details of this nefarious bill.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President——

Mr. BYRNES. I yield to the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator from South Carolina has not concluded his address?

Mr. BYRNES. I have not. I could conclude in 30 minutes or so, I think.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to permit me to offer for the RECORD some messages received today?

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes.

Mr. COSTIGAN. I am in receipt of various telegrams on the antilynching bill from different parts of the country; also, a resolution adopted by the city council of Denver, my home city. I ask unanimous consent to have these messages placed in the RECORD. I should say that one of the telegrams, which is from Denver, is signed by two of that city's most prominent and estimable citizens, one the pastor of Plymouth Congregational Church. Mr. Platt Lawton, who also signs, has been helpfully active for years in our civic affairs. The other messages speak for themselves. I ask unanimous consent to have them printed in the RECORD.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I should like to examine the telegrams first.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator reserves the right to object. Is there objection to the request from the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. CONNALLY. There is.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Texas objects.

Mr. COSTIGAN subsequently said: Mr. President, the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] temporarily objected to the insertion in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of certain messages and a resolution received and tendered for publication. It is my understanding that he withdraws his objection.

Mr. CONNALLY. I withdraw the objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the insertion of the messages and resolution in the RECORD?

There being no objection, the messages and resolution were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DENVER, COLO., April 27, 1935.

Senator EDWARD P. COSTIGAN,
Washington, D. C.:

Denver Interracial Commission of 84 citizens, representing educational, business, religious, and civic leadership, protestant, Catholic, and Jewish, are vitally concerned about passage of Costigan antilynching bill. Wide-spread sentiment in Colorado favors this effective measure for abolishing lynching, a national disgrace and peril.

VERE V. LOPER, President.
PLATT R. LAWTON, Secretary.

Resolution no. 17

Whereas lynching has for many years been a national disgrace and contrary to the fundamental American principle that the punishment of crimes should be meted out through the orderly processes of the courts, rather than resort to mob violence; and

Whereas many innocent American citizens have lost their lives as a result of lynchings on account of mistaken identity; and

Whereas the United States Government is better equipped to cope with the situation than the several States; and

Whereas there is now before the Congress of the United States a bill known as the "Costigan-Wagner antilynching bill", which is designed to remedy this condition: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the council of the city and county of Denver, That the Congress of the United States be requested to enact said bill into law, and that a copy of this resolution be transmitted to all Colorado Senators and Representatives in Congress.

Passed by the council and signed by its president this 25th day of March, A. D. 1935.

WILLIAM KNIGHT, President.

STAUNTON, VA., April 29, 1935.

Senator EDWARD COSTIGAN,
United States Senate:

Regret deeply filibuster being carried on with regard to antilynching bill. As a southern woman, feel the need of Federal control of the terrible evil of lynching absolutely essential. Trust all forces are being rallied to bring bill up for vote. My congratulations on splendid work you have done so far. Two friends sign with me.

Mrs. W. S. PLUMER BRYAN.
Mrs. A. STUART BALDWIN.
Mrs. R. L. WALTON.

NEW YORK, N. Y., April 29, 1935.

Senator COSTIGAN:

We commend and encourage your advocacy of Costigan-Wagner bill.

STUDENTS LITERARY ASSOCIATION.

NEW YORK, N. Y., April 26, 1935.

WALTER WHITE,
Care of Hon. Edward P. Costigan,
Senate Office Building:

Since filibuster of September 21, 1922, to date, lynchings total 248—225 Negroes, 23 whites; 243 men, 5 women; 13 burned.

R. G. RANDOLPH.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., April 26, 1935.

EDWARD P. COSTIGAN,
United States Senate:

To encourage you to press for roll-call vote on antilynching bill. Most Senators must be with you.

EMMA R. SIDLE,
Philadelphia Society of Friends.

CHICAGO, ILL., April 26, 1935.

EDWARD P. COSTIGAN,
United States Senator:

Twenty-three thousand readers of the Chicago World urge you to resist filibuster and stand firm for passage of the antilynching bill at all costs.

CHICAGO WORLD,
JACOB R. TIPPER.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., April 26, 1935.

Senator EDWARD P. COSTIGAN:

Because we are deeply interested in the future of our American Commonwealth, in the salvation of our Nation from interracial slaughter, we urge that the Senate will pass the antilynching bill now in discussion.

J. H. JACKSON,
Executive Secretary Foreign Mission Board.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., April 26, 1935.

EDWARD P. COSTIGAN,
United States Senate:

Enlightened young people throughout country are backing you in splendid antilynching fight. We are praying for Senate vote today.

JOS. R. SILVERS,
Philadelphia Young Friends Movement.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., April 26, 1935.

EDWARD P. COSTIGAN,
United States Senate:

Young people of Philadelphia and churches we represent urge continued effort for vote on antilynching bill today. More power to you.

WILLIAM SMITH,
Young Peoples' Fellowship.

CHICAGO, ILL., April 26, 1935.

Hon. EDWARD P. COSTIGAN:

The Citizens Civic and Economic Welfare Council, composed of 100 leading colored men of both political parties, commend you for your work for the antilynching bill, and urge that you resist with all your might the filibuster of misguided Senators, even if it does take all summer.

HARRY H. PACE, President.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 26, 1935.

Hon. EDWARD P. COSTIGAN,
United States Senate:

As president Cincinnati Branch National Association for Advancement Colored People, we join national office in commending your fight for antilynch bill. We trust all Senators will actively and orally join in opposition to filibuster and motion to adjourn today.

Respectfully,

T. M. BERRY.

MOBILE, ALA., April 29, 1935.

Senator EDWARD P. COSTIGAN,
United States Senate:

We are grateful for your effort to have legislation enacted making lynching a Federal crime. Hope you may be able to win battle to have measure favorably considered tomorrow. All citizens who believe in the majesty of law are praying for victory. May God give you strength to carry on.

J. L. LEFLORE,
Secretary Mobile Branch National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

LOUISVILLE, KY., April 26, 1935.

Senator EDWARD P. COSTIGAN,
Senate Office Building:

Please resist any filibuster with all your strength and influence on the antilynching bill, and urge party leaders under no circumstances to surrender.

B. S. ETHERLY,
Secretary Louisville Branch, National Association for Advancement of Colored People.

MARION, IND., April 26, 1935.

Senator EDWARD P. COSTIGAN,
Senate Office Building:

In name of Indiana State conference of branches National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, we request and urge you resist filibuster, pledging support in every way, and especially urging that party leaders under no circumstances surrender; but fight for the passage of the Costigan-Wagner antilynching bill.

F. KATHERINE BAILEY,
President Indiana State Conference, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., April 26, 1935.

Senator EDWARD P. COSTIGAN,
United States Senate:

Congratulations for your courage in valiant fight for antilynching bill. Am counting on you to do your utmost to bring bill to vote, as I understand majority of Senators will vote favorably.

DR. VIRGINIA M. ALEXANDER,
Philadelphia Society of Friends.

LOUISVILLE, KY., April 26, 1935.

Senator EDWARD P. COSTIGAN,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.:

With you 100 percent in antilynching bill fight. Please use all your influence to demand an immediate vote.

PETER SALEM POST, NO. 45, AMERICAN LEGION.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., April 26, 1935.

Senator COSTIGAN,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Urge passage of antilynching bill.

LOGAN BAPTIST CHURCH,
REV. C. CRANFORD, Minister.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., April 26, 1935.

Senator EDWARD P. COSTIGAN:

Three thousand members Pennsylvania Branch Women's International League urge every effort to push antilynching bill.

EMILY COOPER JOHNSON,
Chairman.

CHICAGO, ILL., April 27, 1935.

Senator EDWARD P. COSTIGAN,
United States Senate:

We urge you to resist to any limits pressure brought by filibuster designed to delay vote on antilynching bill. The Nation expects a leadership in this cause to fight to end without any compromise. We express the sentiment and opinion of 123 allied organizations representing more than 400,000 people.

SOUTH CENTRAL COMMUNITY COUNCIL.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee on conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 408) to promote safety on the public highways of the District of Columbia by providing for the financial responsibility of owners and operators of motor vehicles for damages caused by motor vehicles on the public highways in the District of Columbia; to prescribe penalties for the violation of the provisions of this act, and for other purposes.

PREVENTION OF LYNCHING

The Senate resumed the consideration of the motion of Mr. COSTIGAN that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 24) to assure to persons within the jurisdiction of every State the equal protection of the laws by discouraging, preventing, and punishing the crime of lynching.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, it is apparent that a deadlock exists, and that it will continue indefinitely unless some arrangement shall be made to take up some other business.

With a view to a motion to proceed to the consideration of the adjusted-compensation bill, I now move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. COSTIGAN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The absence of a quorum being suggested, the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Bankhead	Black	Bulow
Ashurst	Barbour	Bone	Burke
Austin	Barkley	Brown	Byrd
Bailey	Bilbo	Bulkley	Byrnes
Capper	Gore	McNary	Schwellenbach
Carey	Guffey	Minton	Sheppard
Clark	Hale	Moore	Shipstead
Connally	Harrison	Murray	Smith
Copeland	Hastings	Neely	Steiwer
Costigan	Hatch	Norris	Thomas, Utah
Couzens	Hayden	Nye	Townsend
Dickinson	Johnson	O'Mahoney	Trammell
Dieterich	Keyes	Overton	Truman
Donahey	King	Pittman	Tydings
Fletcher	La Follette	Pope	Vandenberg
Frazier	Lonergan	Radcliffe	Van Nuys
George	McCarran	Robinson	Wagner
Gibson	McGill	Russell	Walsh
Glass	McKellar	Schall	White

The VICE PRESIDENT. Seventy-six Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. COSTIGAN. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GLASS (when his name was called). I transfer my general pair with the senior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CUTTING] to the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS], and vote "yea."

Mr. BARKLEY (when Mr. LOGAN's name was called). My colleague [Mr. LOGAN] is unavoidably absent. He has a general pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS].

Mr. TYDINGS (when his name was called). On this vote I have a pair with the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY]. I understand that if the Senator from Arkansas were present she would vote "yea." If I were permitted to vote, I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. AUSTIN. I desire to announce the necessary absence of the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF] and the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS], who are paired on this question. If the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF] were present, he would vote "nay", and the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS], if present, would vote "yea."

I also announce the necessary absence of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK] and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. DUFFY], who are paired on this vote. The Senator from South Dakota, if present, would vote "nay", and the Senator from Wisconsin, if present, would vote "yea."

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] would vote "nay" if he were present and voting.

Mr. ROBINSON. I desire to announce that the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MALONEY] is absent on account of illness.

I also wish to announce that the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BACHMAN], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. COOLIDGE], the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. DUFFY], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GERRY], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG], the Senator from California [Mr. MCADOO], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. MURPHY], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] are necessarily detained from the Senate.

Mr. DIETERICH. I wish to announce the unavoidable absence of my colleague the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS].

The result was announced—yeas 37, nays 38, as follows:

YEAS—37

Adams	Byrnes	King	Robinson
Ashurst	Connally	Lonergan	Russell
Bailey	Dieterich	McGill	Sheppard
Bankhead	Fletcher	McKellar	Shipstead
Barkley	George	Norris	Smith
Bilbo	Glass	O'Mahoney	Thomas, Utah
Black	Gore	Overton	Trammell
Brown	Harrison	Pittman
Bulow	Hatch	Pope
Byrd	Hayden	Radcliffe

NAYS—38

Austin	Capper	Couzens	Guffey
Barbour	Carey	Dickinson	Hale
Bone	Clark	Donahey	Hastings
Bulkley	Copeland	Frazier	Johnson
Burke	Costigan	Gibson	Keyes

La Follette	Murray	Steiwer	Van Nuys
McCarran	Neely	Townsend	Wagner
McNary	Nye	Truman	Walsh
Minton	Schall	Vandenberg	White
Moore	Schwellenbach

NOT VOTING—20

Bachman	Davis	Long	Norbeck
Borah	Duffy	Maloney	Reynolds
Caraway	Gerry	McAdoo	Thomas, Okla.
Coolidge	Lewis	Metcalf	Tydings
Cutting	Logan	Murphy	Wheeler

So the Senate refused to adjourn.

ORDER FOR RECESS

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate concludes its labors today it take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting a convention and a treaty, and also several nominations (and withdrawing a nomination), which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received and nomination withdrawn, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORT OF A COMMITTEE

Mr. LOGAN, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of John D. Martin, Sr., of Tennessee, to be United States district judge, western district of Tennessee, to succeed Harry B. Anderson, deceased, which was ordered to be placed on the Executive Calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there are no further reports of committees, the calendar is in order.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. With the exception of the nomination of John R. Hutchison to be postmaster at Santa Maria, Calif., I ask that the nominations of postmasters be confirmed en bloc.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the nominations, with the exception referred to, are confirmed en bloc.

JOHN R. HUTCHISON

The legislative clerk read the nomination of John R. Hutchison to be postmaster at Santa Maria, Calif.

The VICE PRESIDENT. On this nomination there is an unfavorable report of the committee. The question is, Shall the Senate advise and consent to the nomination?

The nomination was rejected.

IN THE NAVY

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations for promotions in the Navy.

Mr. ROBINSON. I ask unanimous consent that the nominations in the Navy be confirmed en bloc.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

IN THE MARINE CORPS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations for promotions in the Marine Corps.

Mr. ROBINSON. I ask unanimous consent that the nominations in the Marine Corps be confirmed en bloc.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

IN THE ARMY

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Army.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I ask unanimous consent that the nominations in the Army be confirmed en bloc.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

NOMINATION OF EARLE A. BROWN—RECONSIDERATION

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, on Saturday I gave notice that I would move to reconsider the vote by which the nomination of Earle A. Brown to be postmaster at Lunenburg, Mass., was confirmed. I should like to make a brief statement with regard to the matter.

Through an error, the son of the present postmaster at Lunenburg was nominated when it was intended that the present postmaster should be nominated, there being no controversy about the matter.

I therefore move that the vote by which the nomination of Earle A. Brown to be postmaster at Lunenburg, Mass., was confirmed be reconsidered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the vote is reconsidered.

Mr. WALSH. I now ask that the nomination be rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the Senate advise and consent to the nomination?

The nomination was rejected.

RECESS

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate take a recess until tomorrow at 12 o'clock noon, in accordance with the order heretofore entered.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m.) the Senate, in legislative session, in accordance with the order previously entered, took a recess until tomorrow, Tuesday, April 30, 1935, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate April 29 (legislative day of Apr. 15), 1935

DISTRICT ATTORNEY, CANAL ZONE

Joseph J. McGuigan, of the Canal Zone, to be district attorney, Canal Zone, vice himself.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE REGULAR ARMY

GENERAL OFFICERS

To be Surgeon General, with the rank of major general, for a period of 4 years from date of acceptance, with rank from June 1, 1935

Col. Charles Ransom Reynolds, Medical Corps, vice Maj. Gen. Robert U. Patterson, Surgeon General, whose term of office expires May 31, 1935.

To be Assistant to the Surgeon General, with the rank of brigadier general, for a period of 4 years from date of acceptance, with rank from August 1, 1935

Col. Major Augustus Wroten Shockley, Medical Corps, vice Brig. Gen. Albert E. Truby, Assistant to the Surgeon General, to be retired July 31, 1935.

To be brigadier generals

Col. Arthur Stewart Conklin, Coast Artillery Corps, from July 1, 1935, vice Brig. Gen. Abraham G. Lott, United States Army, to be retired June 30, 1935.

Col. Charles Frederic Humphrey, Jr., Infantry, from September 1, 1935, vice Brig. Gen. Pegram Whitworth, United States Army, to be retired August 31, 1935.

Col. Frank Wheaton Rowell, Infantry, from September 1, 1935, vice Brig. Gen. George Vidmer, United States Army, to be retired August 31, 1935.

Col. Clement Augustus Trott, Infantry, from September 1, 1935, vice Brig. Gen. Otho B. Rosenbaum, United States Army, to be retired August 31, 1935.

APPOINTMENTS, BY TRANSFER, IN THE REGULAR ARMY

TO JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT

Capt. Clarence Eugene Brand, Coast Artillery Corps (detailed in Judge Advocate General's Department), with rank from March 11, 1926.

TO QUARTERMASTER CORPS

First Lt. Harold Mills Manderbach, Field Artillery (detailed in Quartermaster Corps), with rank from May 19, 1930.

TO COAST ARTILLERY CORPS

Second Lt. William John Ledward, Field Artillery, with rank from June 13, 1933, effective June 13, 1935.

PROMOTIONS IN THE REGULAR ARMY

To be captains

First Lt. Joseph Magoffin Glasgow, Cavalry, from April 20, 1935.

First Lt. James Lawrence Keasler, Infantry, from April 22, 1935.

To be first lieutenants

Second Lt. Robert Bruce Davenport, Air Corps, from April 20, 1935.

Second Lt. Donald Leander Putt, Air Corps, from April 22, 1935.

MEDICAL ADMINISTRATIVE CORPS

To be captain

First Lt. Seth Overbaugh Craft, Medical Administrative Corps, from April 20, 1935.

To be first lieutenants

Second Lt. Leonard George Tate Perkins, Medical Administrative Corps, from April 23, 1935.

Second Lt. Harold Lincoln Gard, Medical Administrative Corps, from April 23, 1935.

Second Lt. Joe Edward McKnight, Medical Administrative Corps, from April 23, 1935.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate April 29 (legislative day of Apr. 15), 1935

APPOINTMENTS, BY TRANSFER, IN THE REGULAR ARMY

Capt. Elmer Dane Pangburn to Quartermaster Corps.

Second Lt. Charles Gates Herman to Quartermaster Corps.

APPOINTMENT IN THE NATIONAL GUARD OF THE UNITED STATES

GENERAL OFFICER

Carl Eugene Nesbitt to be brigadier general, Adjutant General's Department.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY

Charles St. John Butler to be medical director with the rank of rear admiral.

Edmund W. Burrough to be commander.

Hermann P. Knickerbocker to be lieutenant commander.

Myron T. Richardson to be lieutenant commander.

William E. A. Mullan to be lieutenant commander.

Allen P. Mullinnix to be lieutenant commander.

Benton W. Decker to be lieutenant commander.

Robert D. Threshie to be lieutenant commander.

John Perry to be lieutenant commander.

Thomas S. Combs to be lieutenant commander.

Ira H. Nunn to be lieutenant.

Richard S. Baron to be lieutenant.

Hugh J. Martin to be lieutenant.

James M. Robinson to be lieutenant.

Wilfred B. Goulett to be lieutenant.

Harman B. Bell, Jr., to be lieutenant.

Thomas G. Reamy to be lieutenant.

Sherman W. Betts to be lieutenant (junior grade).

Ray C. Needham to be lieutenant (junior grade).

Eugene Tatom to be lieutenant (junior grade).

Leo O. Crane to be lieutenant (junior grade).

Sidney J. Lawrence to be lieutenant (junior grade).

Edwin A. McDonald to be lieutenant (junior grade).

James B. Vredenburgh to be lieutenant (junior grade).

Michael G. O'Connor to be lieutenant (junior grade).

Edwin H. Bradley to be paymaster.

William T. Ross to be paymaster.

Letcher Pittman to be paymaster.

Harold T. Smith to be paymaster.

John N. Laycock to be civil engineer.

Glen B. Swortwood to be chief boatswain.

MARINE CORPS

John R. Henley to be colonel.

Samuel A. Woods, Jr., to be lieutenant colonel.

Dudley S. Brown to be major.

Ira L. Kimes to be captain.

Luther A. Brown to be captain.

George F. Good, Jr., to be captain.

Harold C. Roberts to be captain.

POSTMASTERS

ALABAMA

Frank A. Bryan, Columbia.

Herman L. Upshaw, Eufaula.

CONNECTICUT

Charles A. Babin, Waterbury.

GEORGIA

Fletcher N. Carlisle, Flowery Branch.

IDAHO

Harry L. Yost, Boise.

Frank H. Chapman, Parma.

Herman A. Krier, Troy.

INDIANA

Clarence E. Steward, Bainbridge.

Ray Dills, Farmersburg.

Firm I. Troup, Nappanee.

Richard G. Averitt, Plainfield.

Heber L. Menaugh, Salem.

IOWA

Augustus W. Lee, Britt.

Samuel H. Sater, Danville.

Walter R. Price, Earlham.

Nora E. Knapp, Quimby.

Hazel O. Graves, Stanton.

Mary C. Ilgen Fritz, Winterset.

MISSISSIPPI

Jesse E. Patridge, Duck Hill.

Abner W. Flurry, Perkinston.

John L. Owen, Utica.

OHIO

Charles J. Neff, Canfield.

Leo A. Bietz, Kent.

William R. Calovini, Laferty.

William J. Moriarity, Lorain.

George A. Greenbaum, New Lexington.

George J. Munger, Perrysburg.

Bernard F. McCann, Put in Bay.

S. Bruce Lockwood, South Euclid.

Merle G. Van Fleet, Waterville.

PENNSYLVANIA

Elwood M. Stover, Kulpsville.

Franklin M. Rorke, Meadowbrook.

Lincoln G. Nyce, Vernfield.

SOUTH CAROLINA

S. Russell Floyd, Olanta.

TEXAS

Edmund T. Caldwell, Bovina.

Oscar G. Williams, Conroe.

William C. Allen, Hearne.

Clara C. White, Megargel.

Grace M. Barnett, Palacios.

Melrose H. Russell, Robert Lee.

WASHINGTON

Lloyd Sullivan, Chehalis.

Charles E. Kinnune, Grand Coulee.

Hazel M. Surber, Pe Ell.

John O. Fresk, Raymond.

Will W. Simpson, Spokane.

WISCONSIN

Rudolph J. Lueders, Columbus.

Hazel I. Hicks, Linden.

WITHDRAWAL

Executive nomination withdrawn from the Senate April 29 (legislative day of Apr. 15), 1935

POSTMASTER

MINNESOTA

Gabriel T. Torgrimson to be postmaster at Grand Meadow, in the State of Minnesota.

REJECTIONS

Executive nominations rejected by the Senate April 29 (legislative day of Apr. 15), 1935

POSTMASTERS

CALIFORNIA

John R. Hutchison, Santa Maria.

MASSACHUSETTS

Earle A. Brown, Lunenburg.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

MONDAY, APRIL 29, 1935

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Infinite God, the Father of our spirits, Thou knowest the foibles and tendencies of our human nature, and we pray for Thy forgiveness that we may spend no time in vain regrets, but with renewed determination we may press toward the mark for the prize of our high calling of God. Immanuel, God with us! May the divine power from the vast cloudy sphere be given us and transmuted into the condition in which we live. Our hearts rejoice that we have One who bears our burdens, who guides our ways and hears our prayers. Shield us against temptation and let us have the real joy and the full fruitage of a good, wholesome life. Bind together the very heart of our great Commonwealth and stimulate our people to patriotism, constancy, high aim, and valiant endeavor. In Thy holy name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Friday, April 26, 1935, was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States, was communicated to the House by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House that on the following dates the President approved and signed bills of the House of the following titles:

On April 19, 1935:

H. R. 3959. An act for the relief of the National Training School for Boys and others; and

H. R. 6359. An act to amend certain provisions relating to publicity of certain statements of income.

On April 22, 1935:

H. R. 2353. An act for the relief of the Yellow Drivurself Co.

On April 24, 1935:

H. R. 2439. An act authorizing adjustment of the claim of the Public Service Coordinated Transport, of Newark, N. J.

On April 27, 1935:

H. R. 7054. An act to provide for the protection of land resources against soil erosion, and for other purposes.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 2035) entitled "An act to amend an act approved June 25, 1934, authorizing loans from the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works for the construction of certain municipal buildings in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes."

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing memorials from the State Legislature of the State of Florida.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

OPENING OCKLAWAHA RIVER FOR COMMERCE

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, the Ocklawaha River in Florida is one of the most picturesque streams in the world. The scenery there and its beauty are unexcelled. It traverses one of the most fertile grove and farm sections of Florida. Its water supply is adequate to bear heavy shipping craft. This stream is altogether worthy of expenditure of Federal funds for its improvement for commerce and navigation. We have placed an item in the river and harbor bill looking to this improvement. The Florida Legislature, appreciating the importance of this proposed improvement, has memorialized the Congress urging the project. Florida State Senate Memorial No. 8 follows:

Memorial to the Congress of the United States of America

A memorial to the Congress of the United States of America now convened in session as the Seventy-fourth Congress of the United States of America.

Whereas the navigable water known and designated by the United States Government as the "Ocklawaha River", with its outlet in the navigable water of the St. Johns River, is in fact navigable only to small craft; and

Whereas the Federal Government has expended large sums of money on said Ocklawaha River in the construction of a lock and dam and dikes, which are utterly useless without other and further work and development of said river for the purpose of making it navigable; and

Whereas the beauties of the Ocklawaha River and the inland waters of Florida connected with said Ocklawaha River are unexcelled in any part of the United States; and

Whereas said Ocklawaha River and its tributaries lie within the most productive and highly developed agricultural sections of the State of Florida; and

Whereas the expenditure of a comparatively small amount of money would make this wonderful land of lakes, rivers, tropical growth, sunshine, and wealth accessible to pleasure and commercial water craft: Be it, therefore:

Resolved by the Florida Legislature, That the Senators and Representatives from the State of Florida in the Congress of the United States be, and they are hereby, respectfully requested and urged to make every effort to obtain the necessary appropriation of moneys to be used for the purpose of making the said Ocklawaha River navigable from its outlet in the St. Johns River to its source in Lake Apopka; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this memorial be immediately forwarded, under the great seal of the State of Florida, by the secretary of the State of Florida, to the President of the United States Senate, to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to each Senator and Congressman of the State of Florida.

THE FRAZIER-LEMKE REFINANCE BILL

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, there is strong sentiment in my State for legislation which has for its purpose the reduction of interest now paid on farm mortgages, and also for general farm-relief legislation. The Florida Legislature, which is now in session, has just passed House Memorial No. 4, which asks for the passage of the Frazier-Lemke bill. The memorial is as follows:

Memorial to Congress requesting that the Congress of the United States without further delay pass the Frazier-Lemke farm refinance bill, S. 212 and H. R. 2066

Whereas unless immediate relief is given hundreds and thousands of additional farmers will lose their farms and their homes, and millions more will be forced into our cities and villages, and the army of the unemployed will necessarily increase to alarming proportions; and

Whereas there is no adequate way of refinancing existing agricultural indebtedness, and the farmers are at the mercy of their mortgagees and creditors throughout this State and Nation; and

Whereas the Frazier-Lemke refinance bill, being S. 212 and H. R. 2066, in the Congress of the United States, provides for the liquidating and refinancing of agricultural indebtedness at a reduced rate of interest, through the Farm Credit Administration and the Federal land banks; and

Whereas the Frazier-Lemke bill has the endorsement of 22 State legislatures, and in addition the lower houses of the States of New York and Delaware, and of many commercial clubs, chambers of commerce, bank organizations, and of business and professional men and women, as well as the great majority of the farmers of this Nation; and

Whereas the enactment of this bill will have a vital effect not only upon agriculture but upon all classes of industry; and

Whereas agriculture is the basic industry of this country, and there can be no recovery until agriculture is put upon a sound basis: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of your memorialists, the members of the Florida Legislative Assembly of the State of Florida, the senate and the house concurring, that the Congress of the United States should enact the Frazier-Lemke bill without further delay; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this Memorial, duly authenticated, be sent by the Secretary of State to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and to each Senator and Representative in Congress from this State, to the President of the United States, and to United States Senator LYNN J. FRAZIER and Congressman WILLIAM LEMKE.

THE THOMAS COST-OF-PRODUCTION FARM BILL

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, in a further effort to cooperate for farm relief, the Florida Legislature, now in session, has passed House Memorial No. 5, urging the passage by the Congress of the Thomas cost-of-production farm bill. I offer it to the House and ask the consideration of my colleagues. The memorial follows:

Memorial to Congress requesting that the Congress of the United States, without further delay, pass the Thomas cost-of-production bill, S. 1220

Whereas unless immediate cost of production is guaranteed, hundreds and thousands of additional farmers will be financially unable to produce crops, and millions more will be forced into our cities and villages, and the army of the unemployed will necessarily increase to alarming proportions; and

Whereas there is no adequate way of guaranteeing cost of production, the farmers are at the mercy of the markets throughout this State and Nation; and

Whereas many farm producers are selling below the cost of production with no immediate relief in sight; and

Whereas the Thomas cost-of-production bill has the endorsement of several State legislatures, commercial clubs, chambers of commerce, business organizations, and business and professional men and women, as well as the great majority of the farmers of this Nation; and

Whereas the enactment of this bill will have a vital effect upon not only agriculture but upon all classes of industry; and

Whereas agriculture is the basic industry in this country, and there can be no recovery until agriculture is put on a sound basis: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of your memorialists, the members of the 1935 Legislative Assembly of the State of Florida. the Senate and the House concurring, that the Congress of the United States should enact the Thomas bill without further delay; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial, duly authenticated, be sent by the secretary of state to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and to each Senator and Representative in Congress from this State, to the President of the United States, and to United States Senator THOMAS of Oklahoma.

RECIPROCAL TARIFF TRADE AGREEMENT

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I present a privileged resolution (H. Res. 84) from the Committee on Ways and Means.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 84

Resolved, That the Secretary of State is hereby directed to furnish the House of Representatives a list of the articles, both foreign and domestic, the names of which are on file in the Department of State for changes in rates of tariff in reciprocal trade agreements now under negotiation between the United States and any foreign country under the provisions of chapter 474 of the Forty-eighth Statutes at Large, page 943.

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the report be read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the report (No. 804), as follows:

[House of Representatives, Rept. No. 804, 74th Cong., 1st sess.]

REQUESTING INFORMATION WITH RESPECT TO NEGOTIATION OF RECIPROCAL-TRADE AGREEMENTS

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee, from the Committee on Ways and Means, submitted the following adverse report (to accompany H. Res. 84):

The Committee on Ways and Means, to whom was referred the resolution (H. Res. 84) to direct the Secretary of State to furnish the House of Representatives a list of the articles, both foreign and domestic, on file in the Department of State for changes in rates of tariff in reciprocal trade agreements now under negotiation, having had the same under consideration, report it back to the House and recommend that the resolution do not pass.

The action of the committee is based upon the following adverse report from the Secretary of State:

FEBRUARY 5, 1935.

The Honorable ROBERT L. DOUGHTON,
House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. DOUGHTON: I have your letter of February 2, 1935, enclosing a copy of House Resolution 84, which was introduced by Representative TREADWAY and is now under consideration by the Committee on Ways and Means. I am glad to give you my views concerning this proposed legislation.

The requirement which the resolution would seek to impose is open to objections that can best be explained by indicating the considerations which led to the adoption of the procedure now being followed.

The Government agencies concerned in the carrying out of the purposes of the act to amend the Tariff Act of 1930, approved June 12, 1934, have given careful consideration to the problem of working out rules of procedure which would facilitate the accomplishment of the purposes of that act. One of the matters to which thoughtful consideration was given was the question of the form and manner of giving public notice of intention to negotiate a trade agreement. On the basis of all pertinent factors, it was decided that only the name of the country concerned should be given in such notices. It was decided also, however, that statistics showing the principal items entering into the trade between the United States and the country concerned, prepared by the Division of Foreign Trade Statistics of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, should be issued along with such public notices.

The announcement of the products or subjects to be considered would involve serious difficulties. Compliance with the spirit and purpose of section 4 of the Trade Agreements Act requires that public notice of intention to negotiate a trade agreement be given before negotiations with the foreign government concerned have been even tentatively completed, in order that full consideration may be given to the views of, and to information supplied by, interested persons while the recommendations of the agencies responsible for advising the President with respect to proposed trade agreements are being formulated. Consequently, at the time public notice is given of intention to negotiate an agreement, these agencies themselves may not know all of the products or subjects to which consideration will be given. The foreign government concerned might later, even during the final stages of the negotiations, propose new products or subjects for consideration. Moreover, it is desired to leave the way open after public notice has been given for American importers, exporters, or other interested persons to make suggestions and call attention to products or subjects which they wish to have considered.

The result of announcing the products or subjects to be considered would be that as new products or subjects were brought under consideration in the course of the negotiations additional public notices, of not less than 30 days each, would have to be given; a procedure which would so complicate and delay negotiations as to interfere seriously with the carrying out of the purposes of the act. Moreover, if the products on which concessions might be granted were announced in advance of negotiations, the bargaining value of our concessions might be seriously impaired.

The present procedure of announcing only the name of the country with which it is intended to negotiate a trade agreement should not leave any serious doubt in the minds of interested persons whether their interests are in fact involved. It has seemed reasonable to assume that American producers, importers, exporters, and other interested persons would know whether the country with which a trade agreement is to be negotiated is of any consequence as a source of supply of, or as market for, the product or products in which they are interested, and that they would know also the factors affecting the trade in such products. As a convenience to those interested in proposed trade agreements, available statistical information concerning products entering into the trade between the United States and each country concerned is made readily accessible.

In my opinion, and in that of my associates, the resolution (H. Res. 84) under consideration by your committee would, if acted upon favorably, seriously hinder the carrying out of the purposes of the act to amend the Tariff Act of 1930, for the reasons set forth above.

If so desired, the Department would be glad to furnish to those Members of Congress who made request therefor copies of all public notices and appended statistical information with reference to trade agreement negotiations.

Sincerely yours,

CORDELL HULL.

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I move that the resolution be laid on the table.

Mr. TREADWAY. Will the gentleman yield before he makes that motion?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee moves that the resolution be laid on the table.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. TREADWAY) there were—ayes 73, noes 33.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that there is not a quorum present, and I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently there is not a quorum present. The Doorkeeper will close the doors. The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 252, nays 91, not voting 88, as follows:

[Roll No. 60]

YEAS—252

Arnold	Dunn, Miss.	Lamneck	Reilly
Ashbrook	Dunn, Pa.	Lanham	Richards
Ayers	Eagle	Larrabee	Richardson
Beiter	Eckert	Lesinski	Robertson
Bell	Edmiston	Lewis, Colo.	Robinson, Utah
Biermann	Eicher	Lewis, Md.	Rogers, Okla.
Bland	Evans	Lloyd	Romjue
Blanton	Faddis	Luckey	Rudd
Bloom	Farley	Ludlow	Russell
Boehne	Ferguson	McAndrews	Sanders, La.
Boland	Fiesinger	McClellan	Sanders, Tex.
Boylan	Fitzpatrick	McCormack	Sandlin
Brennan	Flannagan	McFarlane	Schaefer
Brooks	Fletcher	McGehee	Schulte
Brown, Ga.	Ford, Calif.	McGrath	Scott
Brown, Mich.	Ford, Miss.	McKeough	Sears
Brunner	Fuller	McLaughlin	Secrest
Buchanan	Fulmer	McMillan	Shanley
Buck	Gasque	Mahon	Sirovich
Bulwinkle	Gassaway	Maloney	Sisson
Burch	Gavagan	Mansfield	Smith, Conn.
Caldwell	Gildea	Martin, Colo.	Smith, Va.
Cannon, Mo.	Gillette	Mason	Smith, Wash.
Carmichael	Gingery	Massingale	Smith, W. Va.
Carpenter	Goldsborough	Maverick	Snyder
Cary	Gray, Ind.	May	South
Casey	Gray, Pa.	Meeks	Spence
Castellow	Green	Merritt, N. Y.	Stack
Chandler	Greenwood	Miller	Steagall
Chapman	Greever	Mitchell, Ill.	Stubbs
Citron	Gregory	Mitchell, Tenn.	Sullivan
Claiborne	Hamlin	Montet	Sumners, Tex.
Cochran	Hancock, N. C.	Moritz	Sutphin
Coffee	Hart	Murdock	Sweeney
Colden	Harter	Nelson	Tarver
Cole, Md.	Healey	Nichols	Taylor, Colo.
Colmer	Higgins, Mass.	O'Brien	Taylor, S. C.
Connery	Hildebrandt	O'Connell	Terry
Cooper, Tenn.	Hill, Ala.	O'Connor	Thom
Corning	Hill, Samuel B.	O'Day	Thomason
Costello	Hobbs	O'Leary	Thompson
Cox	Hoeppel	Oliver	Tonry
Crosby	Hook	O'Neal	Truax
Cross, Tex.	Houston	Owen	Turner
Crowe	Huddleston	Palmisano	Umstead
Cullen	Igoe	Parks	Vinson, Ga.
Darden	Jacobsen	Parsons	Vinson, Ky.
Deen	Jenckes, Ind.	Patman	Wallgren
Delaney	Johnson, Okla.	Patterson	Walter
Dietrich	Johnson, Tex.	Patton	Warren
Dingell	Johnson, W. Va.	Pearson	Wearin
Disney	Jones	Peterson, Fla.	Weaver
Dobbins	Kee	Peterson, Ga.	Werner
Dockweiler	Keller	Pfeifer	West
Dorsey	Kelly	Pierce	Whelchel
Doughton	Kenney	Polk	Whittington
Doxey	Kerr	Quinn	Wilcox
Drewry	Kleberg	Rabaut	Williams
Driscoll	Kloeb	Ramsay	Wilson, La.
Driver	Kocialkowski	Ramspeck	Woodrum
Duffey, Ohio	Kopplemann	Randolph	Young
Duffy, N. Y.	Kramer	Rankin	Zimmerman
Duncan	Lambeth	Rayburn	Zioncheck

NAYS—91

Allen	Crawford	Hull	Ransley
Amlie	Crowther	Jenkins, Ohio	Reece
Andresen	Darrow	Kahn	Reed, Ill.
Andrew, Mass.	Dirksen	Kimball	Reed, N. Y.
Andrews, N. Y.	Ditter	Kinzer	Rich
Arends	Dondero	Knutson	Robsion, Ky.
Bacharach	Doutrich	Lambertson	Rogers, Mass.
Bacon	Eaton	Lehlbach	Sauthoff
Binderup	Ekwall	Lemke	Snell
Blackney	Engel	Lord	Stefan
Boileau	Fenerty	Lundeen	Stewart
Bolton	Gehrmann	McLean	Taber
Buckbee	Gifford	McLeod	Taylor, Tenn.
Buckler, Minn.	Gilchrist	Maas	Thurston
Burdick	Goodwin	Mapes	Treadway
Burnham	Gwynne	Marshall	Turpin
Carlson	Halleck	Merritt, Conn.	Welch
Cavicchia	Hess	Michener	Wigglesworth
Christianson	Hill, Knute	Monaghan	Wilson, Pa.
Church	Hoffman	Mott	Wolcott
Cole, N. Y.	Hollister	Pittenger	Wolfenden
Collins	Holmes	Plumley	Wolverton
Cooper, Ohio	Hope	Powers

NOT VOTING—88

Adair	Berlin	Carden	Clark, Idaho
Bankhead	Brewster	Carter	Clark, N. C.
Barden	Buckley, N. Y.	Cartwright	Cooley
Beam	Cannon, Wis.	Celler	Cravens
Crosser, Ohio	Greenway	McReynolds	Schuetz
Culkin	Griswold	McSwain	Scrugham
Cummings	Guyer	Marcantonio	Seger
Daly	Haines	Martin, Mass.	Shannon
Dear	Hancock, N. Y.	Mead	Short
Dempsey	Harlan	Millard	Somers, N. Y.
DeRouen	Hartley	Montague	Starnes
Dickstein	Hennings	Moran	Thomas
Dies	Higgins, Conn.	Norton	Tinkham
Ellenbogen	Imhoff	O'Malley	Tobey
Englebright	Kennedy, Md.	Perkins	Tolan
Fernandez	Kennedy, N. Y.	Pettengill	Underwood
Fish	Kniffin	Peyser	Utterback
Focht	Kvale	Rogers, N. H.	Wadsworth
Frey	Lea, Calif.	Ryan	White
Gambrill	Lee, Okla.	Sabath	Withrow
Gearhart	Lucas	Sadowski	Wood
Granfield	McGroarty	Schneider	Woodruff

So the motion was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Bankhead (for) with Mr. Withrow (against).
Mr. Imhoff (for) with Mr. Focht (against).
Mr. McReynolds (for) with Mr. Higgins of Connecticut (against).
Mr. Hennings (for) with Mr. Thomas (against).
Mr. Dies (for) with Mr. Martin of Massachusetts (against).
Mr. Griswold (for) with Mr. Wadsworth (against).
Mr. Dickstein (for) with Mr. Hartley (against).
Mr. Cartwright (for) with Mr. Seger (against).
Mr. Somers of New York (for) with Mr. Tinkham (against).
Mr. Ellenbogen (for) with Mr. Fish (against).
Mr. Kennedy of New York (for) with Mr. Carter (against).
Mr. DeRouen (for) with Mr. Guyer (against).
Mrs. Norton (for) with Mr. Hancock of New York (against).
Mr. Buckley (for) with Mr. Perkins (against).
Mr. Sabath (for) with Mr. Millard (against).
Mr. Schuetz (for) with Mr. Tobey (against).
Mr. McSwain (for) with Mr. Short (against).
Mr. Mead (for) with Mr. Woodruff (against).
Mr. Beam (for) with Mr. Gearhart (against).
Mr. Celler (for) with Mr. Brewster (against).
Mr. Harlan (for) with Mr. Culkin (against).

General pairs:

Mr. Granfield with Mr. Kvale.
Mr. Rogers of New Hampshire with Mr. Marcantonio.
Mr. Montague with Mr. Englebright.
Mr. Pettengill with Mr. Schneider.
Mr. Fernandez with Mr. Starnes.
Mrs. Greenway with Mr. Lucas.
Mr. Adair with Mr. Kniffin.
Mr. Haines with Mr. Tolan.
Mr. Crosser of Ohio with Mr. Dear.
Mr. Gambrill with Mr. Ryan.
Mr. Scrugham with Mr. Frey.
Mr. Sadowski with Mr. Dempsey.
Mr. O'Malley with Mr. White.
Mr. Lea of California with Mr. Cannon of Wisconsin.
Mr. Barden with Mr. Wood.
Mr. Kennedy of Maryland with Mr. Cravens.
Mr. Clark of North Carolina with Mr. Lee of Oklahoma.
Mr. Underwood with Mr. Carden.
Mr. McGroarty with Mr. Berlin.
Mr. Cummings with Mr. Utterback.
Mr. Moran with Mr. Clark of Idaho.
Mr. Daly with Mr. Cooley.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to was laid on the table.

The doors were opened.

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I present a further privileged resolution (H. Res. 83) from the Committee on Ways and Means.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 83

Resolved, That the Secretary of Commerce is hereby directed to furnish the House of Representatives a list of the articles, both foreign and domestic, the names of which are on file in the Department of Commerce, for changes in rates of tariff in reciprocal trade agreements now under negotiation between the United States and any foreign country under the provisions of chapter 474 of the Forty-eighth Statutes at Large, page 943.

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the report be read.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Clerk will read the report.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Report No. 805

The Committee on Ways and Means, to whom was referred the resolution (H. Res. 83) to direct the Secretary of Commerce to furnish the House of Representatives a list of the articles, both foreign and domestic, on file in the Department of Commerce for changes in rates of tariff in reciprocal trade agreements now under negotiation, having had the same under consideration, report it back to the House and recommend that the resolution do not pass.

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I move that the resolution be laid on the table.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. RICH. I would like to know whether it is going to be possible for us to know what changes are going to be made in the tariff——

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, a point of order. The gentleman is out of order.

The SPEAKER. A motion to lie on the table is not debatable.

The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. COOPER].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MOTT) there were ayes 169 and noes 56.

So the motion was agreed to.

On motion by Mr. COOPER of Tennessee a motion to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to was laid on the table.

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I present a further privileged resolution (H. Res. 82) from the Committee on Ways and Means.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 82

Resolved, That the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby directed to furnish the House of Representatives a list of the articles, both foreign and domestic, the names of which are on file in the Department of Agriculture, for changes in rates of tariff in reciprocal trade agreements now under negotiation between the United States and any foreign country under the provisions of chapter 474 of the Forty-eighth Statutes at Large, page 943.

Mr. COOPER of Tennesse. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the report be read.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Clerk will read the report.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Report No. 806

The Committee on Ways and Means, to whom was referred the resolution (H. Res. 82) to direct the Secretary of Agriculture to furnish the House of Representatives a list of the articles, both foreign and domestic, on file in the Department of Agriculture for changes in rates of tariff in reciprocal trade agreements now under negotiation, having had the same under consideration, report it back to the House and recommend that the resolution do not pass.

Mr. COOPER of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I move that the resolution be laid on the table.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MOTT) there were—ayes 164, noes 54.

So the motion was agreed to.

On motion by Mr. COOPER of Tennessee a motion to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to was laid on the table.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RICH. Do not the Democratic Members of this House want to know anything about the tariff?

The SPEAKER. That is not a parliamentary inquiry.

SECOND LT. CHARLES E. UPSON—VETO MESSAGE (H. DOC. NO. 168)

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following veto message from the President of the United States, which was read by the Clerk:

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith, without my approval, H. R. 3071, an act for the relief of Second Lt. Charles E. Upson.

This bill provides that the said Lieutenant Upson, who was dismissed from the service of the Army of the United States in pursuance of approved findings and sentence of a general court martial, shall hereafter be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States on May 8, 1918, the purpose being to give him, as to the future, the rights, privileges, and benefits conferred by any law upon honorably discharged soldiers.

In view of the facts set forth in the accompanying letter of the Secretary of War, I cannot approve this bill.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, April 26, 1935.

The SPEAKER. The objection of the President will be spread at large upon the Journal.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I move that the bill and message be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Alabama.

The motion was agreed to.

THE NECESSITY FOR AN ADEQUATE AMERICAN MERCHANT MARINE AND PACIFIC COAST SHIPBUILDING

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and print in the RECORD a statement with reference to the necessity of an adequate merchant marine and Pacific coast shipbuilders.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Speaker, from time to time I have invited the attention of the House of Representatives to some of the problems of the American merchant marine. Within recent weeks the President of the United States has forcefully brought this matter to the attention of the Nation by sending a special message to Congress dealing with the subject. More recently the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, under its able chairman, has held hearings on the problem.

We are all in common accord that an adequate merchant marine is necessary. It is necessary in time of peace in order that the entry of American goods into world channels of trade might be guaranteed equality in transportation costs with that of other nations. It is necessary in time of war in which the United States may not be engaged in order to carry on trade and commerce when the ships of other nations might be withdrawn to assist their own navies. It is necessary that we might have an adequate naval auxiliary to meet our own wartime requirements for the transportation of troops, supplies, and equipment. It is necessary that we have adequate shipbuilding facilities always available on our Atlantic and Pacific coasts prepared to meet any emergency requirement.

The President has emphasized these reasons and has stated that direct ship subsidies should be made—

Based upon providing for American shipping, Government aid to make up the differential between American and foreign shipping costs. It should cover, first, the difference in the cost of building ships; second, the difference in the cost of operating ships; and, finally, it should take into consideration the liberal subsidies that many foreign governments provide for their shipping.

Our own experience and the heavy outlays that have been necessary whenever emergencies have arisen point to the urgency of this matter. The United States could have maintained an adequate merchant marine from the foundation of the country up to the World War at one-half the expense that was necessary at the beginning of that war had we maintained a far-sighted policy. Instead, we permitted American manufacturers and producers to depend on foreign bottoms for shipping American goods. When these ships were withdrawn from trade routes our commerce was helpless. We cannot permit that condition to ever exist again.

Every major maritime nation upon the face of the earth subsidizes its merchant marine directly and openly. The United States stands alone among the nations of the world as one with major maritime interests granting subsidies by subterfuge, under the guise of mail contracts. The time has come when we must recognize the national necessity and purpose of an adequate merchant marine by granting these subsidies openly and directly. They should be granted for ship construction to meet the unfair competition imposed by lower standards of living and consequent cheaper costs in foreign countries. They should be granted for ship operation to such routes in international, intercoastal, and coastal trade that will stimulate commerce, insure flexibility in operation, parity in competition, and surety in protection. The savings to American agriculture and industry thus effected will be far greater than the direct cost to the United States Government and will ultimately save the American taxpayer large sums.

The impetus given to a study of our merchant marine problems by our experience during the World War brought about an orderly plan in its development, but the time has now come when we must rehabilitate and maintain our merchant marine at its highest efficiency in accordance with that plan.

While the United States ranks second only to Great Britain in gross tonnage available for ocean-going traffic, a large part of it is what may be termed "static tonnage." Many of these vessels built during and immediately following the World War, cannot meet the competition of modern ships. Technical advances made in type, machinery, and equipment of ocean-going vessels has actually caused the United States merchant fleet to drop to fourth or fifth place among the nations. It is surpassed by every major maritime nation when measured in its ability to quickly and economically carry cargoes from port to port.

Of our entire merchant marine, the United States has only built 11 percent since January 1, 1924, while Great Britain has built 42 percent; Germany, 38 percent; France, 25 percent; Italy, 28 percent; and Japan, 21 percent. With 89 percent of our merchant marine composed of ships over 11 years old, economy in their operation and fair competition with the ships of other nations is almost futile.

Fuel consumption alone is 30 to 40 percent less on modern vessels than on those built 12 years ago. Mechanical equipment has been improved during the past decade to reduce costs, and other operation costs are similarly higher on older ships. In these times when speed of delivery is a major economic factor, the delays caused by the slower movement of these older vessels adds appreciably to the handicap American shipping has to overcome, as well as to operation costs. Steps must be taken now to regain the cargoes we are losing in ever-increasing numbers.

Coincident with the need for an adequate merchant marine is the need for adequate shipbuilding facilities on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. No greater insurance can be given for the success of our Navy than to have proper private shipbuilding and ship-repair yards always available to meet our needs in emergency. The problems involved are much easier of solution on the Atlantic seaboard than on the Pacific coast. At the same time, the need is probably far greater on the Pacific coast than on the Atlantic.

I can recall when shipbuilding was one of the major industries of the Pacific coast. Today it is almost a lost art. Thousands of artisans who formerly worked in shipyards have had to turn their efforts to other lines of trade. Not a single large merchant vessel has been built on the Pacific coast since the World War. With the advent of metal ships, sources of raw material are so distant that shipbuilders, looking primarily to profits, practically ceased west-coast construction because they could not meet east-coast prices and pay the costs of transportation of supplies to the Pacific.

Under present merchant-marine legislation we have loaned $150,000,000 at nominal rates of interest for ship construction. Every dollar of that money has entered into ships constructed within a few hundred miles of this Capitol Building. Certainly, we do not mean national security includes only shipyards within a short radius of Washington. If the primary purpose of this ship-subsidy legislation is to build our merchant marine and shipyards for national security, it must include shipyards on the Pacific coast as well as the Atlantic.

The result of all this has been that there is today not a single privately owned major shipyard on the Pacific coast capable of building a capital ship without first spending large sums to repair their equipment. Notwithstanding this, the United States needs such plants to be available in event of emergency. It must encourage private ship construction on the Pacific coast to guarantee the availability of such shipyards in time of war.

As I have already pointed out, the President has stated as the first purpose in granting these subsidies is to make up the differential between American and foreign costs of ship construction. If this differential is necessary between American and foreign construction, and we are in agreement that it is, the same principle holds true in ship construction in different sections of the United States. There should be a differential allowed to equalize the differences in cost of shipbuilding on the Pacific and Atlantic seaboards.

At one time the Navy Department recognized this principle by allowing a differential in the cost of ship construction at the navy yards on the Pacific coast to equalize the increases due to transportation costs. Congress should also recognize this need and encourage private ship construction by allowing a three-fourths of 1 percent differential on ship-construction loans on vessels built in Pacific coast yards, the home ports of which will be on the Pacific coast. This principle is agreed as necessary by representatives of the shipping and shipbuilding industry, whose primary interests are on the Atlantic seaboard.

Under existing law ship-construction loans are authorized for vessels entering into foreign-trade routes at 3½ percent interest. For such ships constructed on the Pacific coast and which will ply between Pacific coast ports and foreign ports this interest rate should be 2¾ percent. At the present time loans are authorized for the construction of ships for domestic trade, coastwise and intercoastal, at 5¼ percent. This interest rate should be 4½ percent for ships constructed on the Pacific coast and used in trade routes having at least one terminal in ports on the Pacific coast.

Such a differential will not cost the United States Government a single penny, for the Government borrows its funds at much lower interest rates. At the same time it will encourage the rebuilding of shipyards already there but now used only for ship repairs, thus guaranteeing to the United States adequate ship construction and repair facilities for capital ships, both merchantmen and naval.

The effectiveness of our efforts will depend in some measure upon the administration of such legislation as may be enacted. Upon Congress rests the responsibility of effecting the policy and appropriating the funds. We should now prepare to regain our portion of the world's commerce. We should now stimulate American ship construction in all sections of our coast. If we do not, we cannot hope to overcome the obstacles which will be in our way as international trade increases with improving conditions. Neither can we hope to avoid wasteful expenditure of billions of dollars to provide an adequate naval auxiliary should an international crisis arise. It is the cheapest form of insurance, guaranteeing security to our commerce in time of peace and security to our Nation in time of war.

THE THOMAS OIL BILL

Mr. STUBBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and include a memorial from my State legislature.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. STUBBS. Mr. Speaker, probably one of the most controversial measures before the Congress today is the so-called "Thomas oil bill", now under consideration by committees, in which the State of California is vitally concerned.

My district in California, particularly the counties of Kern, Santa Barbara, and Ventura, are big producing areas, and the Thomas oil bill affects them directly.

Therefore, I desire to draw the attention of the Congress to a joint resolution adopted recently by the California State Assembly, which condemns the purpose of this legislative measure.

CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE.

The following joint resolution was adopted April 24 by the California State Assembly by a vote of 68 to nothing and adopted unanimously by the Senate on April 26, 1935.

Introduced by Welsh in assembly; introduced by Wagy in Senate.

Whereas the past history of the sovereign State of California is replete with illustrations of its earnest endeavor to jealously guard the State's rights, prerogatives granted under the Constitution of the United States; and

Whereas there is continuing evidence of a desire on the part of some officials in Washington to compel a surrender of these rights in whole or in part; and

Whereas the oil and gas conservation statutes of this State have been rigidly enforced to prevent physical waste in the production of crude petroleum or natural gas, and to protect the underlying strata that hold these natural resource reserves; and

Whereas there is now pending before the Congress of the United States a bill, generally known as the "Thomas bill", which has for its purpose the attempted regulation of the production of crude petroleum with the several oil-producing States; and

Whereas the objective of the main portion of this bill is contrary to the principles of our dual form of government in that it provides for an attempted invasion of the sovereign powers of California, and would permit Federal encroachment upon the exclusive power of this State to control the production of its natural resources: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly and the Senate, jointly, of the State of California, That Senators and Representatives in Congress from this State be urged to use their utmost endeavor to defeat the passage of this proposed measure and other measures of a similar nature; and be it further

Resolved, That the Governor of the State of California be requested to transmit a copy of this resolution to the members of the California delegation in Congress, to the Presiding Officers of the Senate and House of Representatives, and to the Chairman of the Committee on Mines and Mining of the United States Senate, and to the Chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce of the House of Representatives.

JAMES A. MOFFETT

Mr. KLEBERG. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KLEBERG. Mr. Speaker, my purpose in taking the floor at this time is based upon what I consider a sound statement that generally the road to attainment is paved with mistakes that have been corrected. Several days ago my distinguished colleague on the Democratic side of the House, Mr. STEPHEN YOUNG, of Ohio, made some statements which I honestly believe were the result of sincere belief on his part but none the less mistaken as to the facts involved. I refer to the statement made with reference to Hon. James A. Moffett, Administrator of the National Housing Administration.

I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, at this time to extend my remarks to include therein my own personal investigation of certain facts which the House and the country should know in connection with that statement.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KLEBERG]?

There was no objection.

Mr. KLEBERG. Mr. Speaker, a Member of Congress is confronted at times with the necessity of calling the attention of the House and the country to the operations of one or more of the administrative branches of the Government; this, sometimes, because of a sincere belief on the Member's part that the administration is failing to operate in accordance with congressional intention; at other times based upon the conviction that administrative officers are recreant to their trust and are failing in the performance of their duties. It is not my desire to censure anyone on this occasion, and least of all my distinguished young friend and fellow Member, Mr. STEPHEN YOUNG. It is my belief that if an honest mistake is wrong, that no Member of this House could qualify with a spotless record.

Mr. Speaker, there are two reasons for my taking the floor in an effort to correct what I consider to be an erroneous impression based upon honest error, which of itself was occasioned by insufficiency of factual evidence on the part of my colleague. The first reason is to correct the effect on the country of his statement because of its effect upon the successful operation of the Federal Housing Administration, which I honestly believe is destined to serve a very important part in the recovery of our beloved country. The Federal Housing Administration depends more upon real salesmanship than upon any other thing for its successful functioning. It has no money to spend nor money to loan for either modernization, repair, or new construction. The public in general and financial institutions must do the job. This they will only undertake through an intelligent understanding of the plan involved and the opportunity afforded. Anything which reflects discredit upon the administration, which can certainly be accomplished by the discrediting of the Administrator, Mr. Moffett, obstructs and hampers accomplishment on the part of the F. H. A. of its intended function. Such an administration must command both the respect and the confidence of both those who are desiring to repair or rebuild old homes or build new homes, as well as financial institutions or individuals who must put up the money to effectuate the utilization of this guaranteed field of investment. Many a fellow citizen now on the relief rolls will be denied gainful occupation and self-sustenance by the discrediting and consequent limiting of the otherwise almost limitless field opened through the Housing Act.

The second reason, Mr. Speaker, which actuates me in taking the floor is to correct, if possible, the effect of my distinguished young colleague's honest error in his lack of appreciation of Mr. Moffett as a constructive citizen and a patriot. This because I have known Mr. Moffett many years, and through this long acquaintance I deem him to be my personal friend. There is no doubt but that I am his friend.

Without more ado, Mr. Speaker, my own investigation discloses that with the exception that Mr. Moffett's trip to Florida to attend the wedding of his son and take a 2 weeks' vacation, every other trip which has occasioned his absence from his Washington office has been on official business. Since February 4 and through April 26, I have found the following record of his movements to be true:

February 4 through 27: In Washington office.

Night of February 27: Left for Oklahoma City and Tulsa at the request of Governor Marland to make speeches on the Federal Housing program.

March 4 through 8: In Washington office.

March 9 (Saturday): Attended newspapermen's dinner in New York City.

March 11 through 14: In Washington office.

March 14 (p. m.): Left for Fort Worth, Dallas, San Antonio, and Austin, Tex., to address joint session of legislature, as well as bankers, chambers of commerce, clearing-house associations, and so forth.

March 21 (a. m.) through 23: In Washington office.

March 23 (p. m.): Left for Florida to attend son's wedding and for short vacation.

April 8 (a. m.) through 9: In Washington office.

April 9 (p. m.): Left for Detroit to address leading industrialists, bankers, and so forth.

April 11: En route from Detroit to Princeton, N. J.

April 12 and 13: Princeton University, presiding at round-table discussion on housing.

April 14 (a. m.) through 26: In Washington office.

So much for the period of his service under discussion. In addition to the above, I call your attention to the fact that he was appointed a member of the Industrial Advisory Board of the National Recovery Administration July 31, 1933. He resigned as vice president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey to accept this appointment by the President. On August 30, 1933, he was appointed by our Chief Executive as one of three members to represent the Government on the planning and coordination committee to administer the Petroleum Code. He resigned as a member of the Industrial Advisory Board of N. R. A. on November 1, 1933, in order to be able to devote his full time to his duties on the planning and coordination committee. At the conclusion of his service on this committee, he left Washington on December 19, 1933. On January 15, 1934, he accepted the position of vice president of the Standard Oil Co. of California. On June 30, 1934, he was again called by the President and was appointed by President Roosevelt as Federal Housing Administrator. He has spent full time in Washington, and because his duties as Federal Housing Administrator require his full time, he forthwith resigned as vice president of the Standard Oil Co. of California on September 31, 1934. On April 27 he was given a 90-day furlough from the Federal Housing Administration by the President.

This brief résumé of his activities in connection with Mr. Roosevelt's administration is but a small part of the record of Mr. Moffett's contribution of efficient and patriotic service to our country. Time does not permit further reference to this distinguished and able administrative head on this occasion.

I am perfectly aware, through my first-hand acquaintance with Mr. Moffett and my own personal knowledge of many other meritorious and unselfish activities in which he has participated, that the major reason for the conscientious mistake of my distinguished young colleague is to be found in the fact that he is not so acquainted. Stephen Young and Jimmie Moffet should be more than acquaintances, and if this had been the case I am sure they would be friends.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the House for its indulgence, and may I express the hope that this and other natural consequences of human endeavor and mistakes may be corrected and the highway to recovery may be smoothed permanently and safeguarded against accident.

PROCESS TAX ON TOBACCO

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and include therein a letter received from Secretary Wallace on the processing tax on tobacco.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, under leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I enclose the following letter received by me from the Secretary of Agriculture:

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
Washington, D. C., April 26, 1935.

Hon. JOHN W. McCORMACK,
House of Representatives.

DEAR MR. McCORMACK: Reference is made to your letter of April 4 in which you request information as to what grades or character of tobacco have reached parity under the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and whether or not the processing tax thereon has been reduced.

The 1934 crop of flue-cured tobacco, which has just been marketed, sold at a price above what it now appears will be the fair exchange value or parity price of that crop. In the case of tobacco, the parity price of each type, which is used in determining the rate of processing tax, is based upon the average of the monthly indexes of the prices of articles farmers buy during the year in which the particular crop was sold. The average price for the 1934 flue-cured crop was approximately 27 cents per pound, and the 1934–35 parity price of this crop is expected to average around 20 cents per pound. No action has been taken to adjust or remove the processing tax upon flue-cured tobacco, and it is not contemplated that such action will be taken until the end of the current marketing year for tobacco. The marketing year for tobacco is the period October 1 to September 30, inclusive.

This is in accord with the policy adopted with reference to tobacco processing taxes. Last year when it became evident during the marketing season that the price of the 1933 crop of burley tobacco had fallen below parity by a much larger amount than had been the price of the 1932 crop from which the rate of processing tax was determined, action was not taken to adjust the rate of tax upward until the end of the marketing year. The same was true of the action taken last year in the case of Maryland tobacco when the rate of processing tax was reduced to zero. These adjustments were made effective October 1, 1934.

In cases where possible adjustments in tobacco-processing taxes have been relatively small and where the revenues needed to finance a program already under way have required a continuation of the rate the second year, the rate has been continued. This was done last year in the case of flue-cured, fire-cured, and dark air-cured tobacco. Rates equal to less than the difference between current prices and parity prices have been established for cigar-leaf tobacco and for all kinds of tobacco used in the manufacture of plug, twist, fine-cut, and long-cut tobacco.

You are aware, of course, that each change of processing tax is accompanied by a change in the tax on floor stocks. Frequent changes in the rates of such taxes are confusing to persons in the tobacco trade, and add greatly to the problems of administration.

Sincerely yours,

H. A. WALLACE, Secretary.

Mr. LEA of California. Mr. Speaker, I desire to announce the necessary absence of the gentleman from California [Mr. TOLAN], who is serving today as a member of the Board of Visitors to the Naval Academy.

CONFERENCE REPORT—MOTOR VEHICLE RESPONSIBILITY ACT, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (S. 408) to promote safety on the public highways of the District of Columbia by providing for the financial responsibility of owners and operators of motor vehicles for damages caused by motor vehicles on the public highways in the District of Columbia, to prescribe penalties for the violation of the provisions of this act, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

[To accompany S. 408]

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 408) to promote safety on the public highways of the District of Columbia by providing for the financial responsibility of owners and operators of motor vehicles for damages caused by motor vehicles on the public highways in the District of Columbia, to prescribe penalties for the violation of the provisions of this act, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its amendment.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, the conferees on the part of the House endeavored to follow the instructions of the House, but the Senate insisted on its amendments; and, after several conferences, your conferees recommend that the House recede.

I may say for the benefit of the Members present that some 28 or 30 States have the summons provision in their liability laws. With one exception in these States all that is necessary to get a summons is the posting of $2. In the amendment in question we go a little further in that a bond is required. I can readily understand why this additional requirement is made, for whereas the legislatures of the various States are interested in protecting the rights of the residents of the particular State, we in the national Congress are interested in protecting the rights of our constituents who come from the 48 States. Under the amendment it would be necessary before a suit could be filed that the plaintiff give a bond not only to protect the nonresident against costs but against attorneys' fees. So it will be seen this amendment is a little more stringent than the laws in the individual States.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMISANO. I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. I was one of those who voted with our friend, the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. NICHOLS], against this proposition in the committee, but investigating the matter since then, I am now with the conferees and I believe that their action in replacing this provision should be upheld. I find that in Oklahoma, the State of our distinguished colleague, they have just such a law; and they have practically the same law in 34 States. I am in favor of the action of the conferees, and think that we ought to approve their conference report.

Mr. PALMISANO. There is this difference, however, that in Oklahoma the protection of the bond is not in the law.

Mr. BLANTON. So, really, this provision is much more favorable to nonresident defendants than the law is in the State of Oklahoma.

Mr. PALMISANO. Yes.

Mr. TAYLOR of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMISANO. I yield.

Mr. TAYLOR of South Carolina. Could the plaintiff in such a suit get a default judgment by this process and transcribe it to the State where the defendant resides?

Mr. PALMISANO. He must first procure a summons and serve it by registered letter.

Mr. TAYLOR of South Carolina. I understand that, but he gets jurisdiction by advertising.

Mr. PALMISANO. No; not by advertising; he must send a copy of the summons to the defendant by registered letter; and the attorney, or the plaintiff himself in his petition must file the notice of registered letter showing receipt by the defendant.

Mr. BLANTON. And such a personal judgment rendered in another jurisdiction would not be collectible. So why worry so much about it.

Mr. TAYLOR of South Carolina. If it were properly transcribed to the jurisdiction where the man resides, it would be good, would it not?

Mr. PALMISANO. The summons is served by registered letter, not by a deputy sheriff.

Mr. BLANTON. This would be a personal judgment rendered in a foreign jurisdiction, and would not be collectible in the resident State of the defendant.

Mr. TAYLOR of South Carolina. If it were transcribed to the jurisdiction of the State of the defendant it would be all right.

Mr. PALMISANO. Yes.

Mr. KLOEB. If such judgment were transcribed to another jurisdiction it would operate as a cloud on the title of the real estate of the defendant.

Mr. PALMISANO. As I say, this law is almost identical with the laws of those States which have automobile liability laws except they do not require the plaintiff to file a bond before they can get service. Under the proposed amendment the plaintiff must file a bond to protect the defendant.

Mr. KLOEB. The gentleman said that the costs included the summons and court costs.

Mr. PALMISANO. And costs of attorneys' fees.

Mr. KLOEB. But that does not mean the costs the defendant may be put to in traveling from his home to the District of Columbia to defend himself?

Mr. PALMISANO. Yes.

Mr. KLOEB. The language of the bill does not say so.

Mr. PALMISANO. It covers all necessary expenses.

Mr. KLOEB. But the bill is not so worded.

Mr. PALMISANO. All right; that is within the discretion of the court.

Mr. KLOEB. This provision is a monstrosity.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. NICHOLS].

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I do not feel that it is necessary to make a hard fight on this proposition for as soon as the membership of the House is advised as to what is about to happen under it they will be opposed to it. As I said before when presenting this amendment, there are very few things in the laws of the District of Columbia that will directly affect the constituents of Members of Congress; but if this provision be enacted into law it will affect every constituent of a Member of Congress who visits the city of Washington. I want to read a portion of the bill which was stricken out by the House when the bill was under consideration by the House, but which was restored by the Senate, and which the conferees now want the House to accept:

> The operation by a nonresident or by his agent of a motor vehicle on any public highway of the District of Columbia shall be deemed equivalent to an appointment by such nonresident of the director of vehicles and traffic or his successor in office to be his true and lawful attorney upon whom may be served all lawful processes in any action or proceedings against such nonresident growing out of any accident or collision in which said nonresident or his agent may be involved while operating a motor vehicle on any such public highway, and said operation shall be a signification of his agreement that any such process against him, which is so served, shall be of the same legal force and validity as if served upon him personally in the District of Columbia. Service of such process shall be made by leaving a copy of the process with a fee of $2 in the hands of the director of vehicles and traffic or in his office, and such service shall be sufficient service upon the said nonresident.

It provides further, I grant you, that the serving officer shall mail to your constituent by registered letter a copy of the summons. That is no relief to him, when he is brought back to the District of Columbia from California, Florida, Texas, Oklahoma, or some other distant State to answer a frivolous suit.

The man may have the protection of a bond, but let us look at the kind of a bond that is provided. It says, "A bond by one or more sureties." Certainly there are enough lawyers in this House to know what a bond of one or more sureties, approved by a justice of the peace, amounts to in reference to the sufficiency of the bond in the event that a constituent must return to Washington and institute a suit against the bondmen to recover the money he has expended.

Mr. TAYLOR of South Carolina. Does not this open up a channel for an organized racket?

Mr. NICHOLS. It would be one of the prettiest rackets in connection with the justice of the peace courts that the gentleman ever saw.

This further provides for a personal service. Then it says:

> That said notice of such service and a copy of process may be served upon defendant in the manner provided for in section 105 of the Code Laws of the District of Columbia.

Here is what is provided in the Code Laws of the District of Columbia, and I read:

> Publication may be substituted for personal service of process upon any defendant who cannot be found and who is shown by affidavit to be a nonresident, or to have been absent from the District for at least 6 months, or against the unknown heirs or devisees of deceased persons, in suits for partition, divorce, by attachment, foreclosure of mortgage and deeds of trust, the establishment of title to real estate by possession, the enforcement of mechanics' liens, and all other liens against real or personal property within the District, and in all actions at law and in equity which have for their immediate object the enforcement or establishment of any lawful right, claim, or demand to or against any real or personal property within the jurisdiction of the court.

Mr. Speaker, the argument of my distinguished colleague the gentleman from Texas, is that even if you get a judgment in the District of Columbia it could not be enforced against our constituents in California and other States. I think that is right. I do not think the judgment could be enforced in other States, but if we are going to admit at the very outset of the consideration of this matter that it will have no effect if it is placed upon the books, why in the name of common sense clutter up the books? If it is going to have no force and effect, what is the justification for enacting this into law?

Mr. HULL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. HULL. Will the gentleman point out more clearly than he has already the fact that if this conference report is adopted and this section of the law goes into effect we are going to have a racket here that will work out into the various States and it will compel people to make settlements where no settlement should be made. In other words, it is a general racketeering scheme for a bunch of lawyers to reach out from Washington.

Mr. NICHOLS. I think the gentleman is entirely right. Mr. Speaker, the argument as to 35, 36, or 48 States in the Union having the same law is answered in this way. Do we pass legislation in this great body simply by reason of the fact that some State has passed a similar law? Why, there is no sovereignty in the District of Columbia. This is just a little parcel of land hewed out of the middle of the Nation and we say that this will always be controlled by Congress and will be a neutral ground for all of the citizens of the United States. I say that we should throw safeguards around the visitors to the District of Columbia who want to come here and transact their public and personal affairs in the Nation's Capitol. We ought to throw more protection around them than in a State that has sovereign rights, and which the District does not enjoy.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Is it not true that in the District of Columbia the statute of limitations on tort actions is 3 years?

Mr. NICHOLS. That is right.

Mr. ROBERTSON. How many States does the gentleman know of that have 3-year statute of limitations, where a man could delay his tort action arising out of an automobile injury for 3 years after the witnesses were scattered and all gone?

Mr. NICHOLS. I think that is beside the point. There is certainly provided in this bill a 3-year limit of time in which to bring suit.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BLANTON. There used to be a slogan "Turn Texas loose." Would the gentleman like to have all Texas come here and be turned loose in Washington and the few reckless drivers every State has allowed to run into automobiles, breaking up the machines, and causing serious injury to women and children, and then leave Washington and go back to Texas and be absolutely beyond the reach of the people of Washington?

Mr. NICHOLS. No; but may I say to the gentleman that if the amount of damages reached in dollars and cents the sum of $3,000, I think it is, it would permit the man to go into the Federal court by reason of diversity of citizenship. He could sue in the Federal courts, and that is his recourse, as already provided by the laws of this Nation.

Mr. BLANTON. When any Texas people who are reckless drivers come here and, through reckless driving, cause collisions and are responsible for damages, I want them to respond.

Mr. CARPENTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. CARPENTER. In order to protect our constituents, as the gentleman from Oklahoma has pointed out, we should vote against the adoption of this conference report.

Mr. NICHOLS. Yes; we should vote down the conference report.

Mr. KENNEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. KENNEY. Will the gentleman tell us the amount of bond provided?

Mr. NICHOLS. There is no amount. It says, "A good and sufficient bond of one or more sureties." Go down and get your janitor in the courthouse and a justice of the peace will approve the bond. That is all that is necessary under this law.

Mr. KNUTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. KNUTSON. If a man from California seriously injures a Washingtonian or a person temporarily in the city and he could get out of the District before the papers are served on him, the injured individual would have to go to California in order to sue that party?

Mr. NICHOLS. Unless his injury is enough to permit him to go into the Federal court. If the injury was very great, does not the gentleman think the man would probably be stopped instanter and a process obtained immediately for him?

Mr. KNUTSON. Not necessarily. The accident may happen very near the District line.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I ask the Members to vote against the adoption of this conference report.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN].

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, at first blush I was with my distinguished colleague from Oklahoma, but after getting all the facts and the law I am thoroughly convinced the conference report should be adopted. However, as one of the conferees I insisted on the gentleman having an opportunity to discuss this report. If we do not have the facts and the law on our side, we are not entitled to win and should not win. I am not afraid of a fair presentation of the other side. Let the Members of the House say who is right.

In the District of Columbia last year 135 people lost their lives by reason of automobile accidents. More people lose their lives in the District of Columbia every year than there were soldiers from the District of Columbia killed during the entire World War. Certainly there is a very serious problem here relating to automobiles and automobile accidents.

There is a bill pending which provides that in the event one is convicted of driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor or if he is convicted of leaving the scene of an automobile accident or if he is convicted of any of these named offenses in any other State, before he can operate a motor vehicle in the District of Columbia after such conviction and after it has been upheld, he is required to take out liability insurance to protect the public. This is perfectly reasonable and is not placing a penalty on all the people. It is just requiring those who are found guilty of violating these particular laws to take out insurance to protect the people before they can operate an automobile anywhere in the District of Columbia. That is certainly reasonable. Then the point at issue is this: There is a provision in the bill that in the event there is an automobile collision and one party lives in the State of Maryland, Virginia, or any other State and is at fault, and a District resident or a resident of Illinois or some other State is involved, or suppose it is an Illinois car and a New York car that are involved, and they have an accident in the District and the New York car is at fault. The Illinois man will force the New York man to come to the District, the scene of the accident, where the witnesses live, in order to try the case. This is all there is to it.

If there is an accident in which a New York car and a District car are involved and the New York man is at fault, and the District resident desires to bring suit, before he can bring such suit, under this provision, he has got to give a good and sufficient bond, a bond that the judge of the court will say is good, a bond that will pay the expenses of the man coming back here from Texas or Illinois or California or Maine or Florida. This will guarantee that all the expenses of such trips will be paid, including his witnesses and even his attorney's fees. This is all absolutely guaranteed. It will have a tendency to discourage suits without merit and will certainly discourage small suits.

Now, you say the bond will not be good. When you say that you are impeaching the judges of the District. If the judges of the District will not require faithful performance of that part of the law, we should get rid of the judges, but until they fail we must presume they are going to do their duty as they are sworn to do their duty.

Now, I have an opinion from the corporation counsel. The law cited by the gentleman from Oklahoma was very persuasive to me. The thought that you could get service on people outside of the State by registered mail and require them to come back here and defend a suit was repulsive to me. I practiced law for 14 years, and it was repulsive to me to think that we would require people to come back on such service as that, but having looked into the matter I find that 35 States have similar laws. The State of Oklahoma has this law, and the people there do not have to put up any bond. The plaintiff can bring the suit and require a man from Maine or California or Florida to come back to Oklahoma and not put up any kind of bond, because the accident occurred there, but here, before we will permit a plaintiff to bring a defendant back, he has got to give a good and sufficient bond, and this service by publication mentioned by the gentleman will not apply in this case because the law says that before a judgment can be taken, 20 days must have expired after the actual service or after the notice by registered mail. Some States provide that notice by registered mail may be given if you send it to any person, a member of the family, over 15 years of age. In Oklahoma, if you want to give a defendant notice, just so you can show that the notice was delivered to a member of his family, 15 years of age or more, the service is good in that State, but under this law it it not good. You must actually deliver it to the man himself and get his receipt showing that it has been delivered to him before the service will be any good.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. It seems to me it is a question of which end of the singletree you are on, whether you are the injured or the one who perpetrated the injury; and I take it in Oklahoma the legislature based that law upon the protection of the citizens of Oklahoma.

Mr. PATMAN. That is right.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. In order to prevent them from being required to go to the four corners of the country.

Mr. DONDERO and Mr. NICHOLS rose.

Mr. DONDERO. Would the defendant or the plaintiff put up the bond?

Mr. PATMAN. I am sorry, but I cannot yield now, because if I yield to one I must yield to all.

Let us consider the local situation. Twenty-five percent of the accidents here last year were caused by nonresident cars. Therefore if you strike this provision out, you are eliminating 25 percent of this law that you are passing to promote safety. Remember that cars from Virginia and Maryland operate here all the time, and if you strike this provision from the law, I do not care how many times they have been convicted of driving while drunk or leaving the scene of an accident, you cannot require them to take out liability insurance and you will be exempting them from this provision of the law.

Therefore, my friends, if you want to protect the people of this District, if you want your constituents and your family and yourself protected, it is necessary to leave this provision in the bill. If there should be one abuse of this privilege, I venture the assertion that Congress would quickly repeal the law. If there should be the least kind of abuse of this provision by the judges, we can get the wrong righted.

Mr. NICHOLS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. NICHOLS. If the only reason you keep this in here is to protect the District of Columbia citizens against people having been convicted of an accident before the issuance of a license—I will ask if this is stricken out of the law and that person should come back and make application for a license, he would not be subject to service in this District.

Mr. PATMAN. He would not come back and make application for a license. If he was not using a District of Columbia license, he would not come back here and make application.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. The way the conference report is drawn, putting back this language, is for the protection of all other persons in the United States who come to Washington, as well as the citizens of the District of Columbia.

Mr. PATMAN. It is for protection of people all over the Nation. Suppose someone from Illinois was operating an automobile here in the District of Columbia and that person should have a collision with an automobile from New York. The Illinois man, we will say, was in the wrong. Should the New York man have to go to Illinois? Why should not he be able to require the Illinois man to come back to the District of Columbia?

Mr. ROBERTSON. This provides for a personal judgment in the District.

Mr. PATMAN. Yes.

Mr. ROBERTSON. If you get a judgment in the District and send it to the State where the man resides, they could get judgment in that State.

Mr. PATMAN. I think my friend will agree that the lack of notification is a defense to the judgment. If there was no service, the judgment is not good. I have an opinion from the corporation counsel that this service would not be by publication.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Does not the gentleman think that 3 years is too long?

Mr. PATMAN. That is a question of limitation. Some of the States have 1 year, some 2 years, and some 3 years. Three years is not unusual.

Mr. PARKS. You would have a different rule of law here than in other Commonwealths.

Mr. PATMAN. In my own State they do not require the plaintiff to deposit a bond. This will require them to deposit a good and sufficient bond.

Mr. PARKS. But in the city in which you live, after getting a judgment, you have to get personal service. You give to the District of Columbia a preference that no other city in the Union has.

Mr. PATMAN. No. Thirty-five States have this law. They are imposing a greater burden on the plaintiff in a lawsuit in the District of Columbia under this law than is imposed in any of the other States. So the gentleman cannot say we are giving them any privilege.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. Is it not a fact that in the jurisdiction of practically every State provision is made that where an accident occurs you can sue the wrongdoer, either where the accident occurs or at his home?

Mr. PATMAN. Certainly.

Mr. SISSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. Just a moment now. In Texas it is 904 miles from Texarkana to El Paso. If an accident happens in El Paso County you can either sue the man in El Paso County or in Bowie County, Tex., 900 miles away, if the man lives there.

Mr. DONDERO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. DONDERO. Is there anything in this act to prevent a defendant being represented by sending his deposition, so that he would not have to come back here?

Mr. PATMAN. No. He can be represented any way he wants to. He can be represented by a lawyer and he will be paid if he is right. The expense of his lawyer will be paid. It is more protection thrown around the defendant than any law that I know of.

Mr. GILCHRIST. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. GILCHRIST. The gentleman practices law in Texas. Suppose I come to the gentleman's office and say, "I am sued in the District of Columbia for $250. My time is worth something; your time is worth something"; what advice will you give me?

Mr. PATMAN. Of course, in small cases like that——

Mr. GILCHRIST. The gentleman would say to me, would he not, "You had better pay it and forget all about it"?

Mr. PATMAN. That is just like all lawsuits. Neither side wins in a small lawsuit.

Mr. GILCHRIST. It will simply be racketeering built up here.

Mr. PATMAN. That applies in your home county, as well as in the District of Columbia. The bond required will discourage small suits.

Mr. GILCHRIST. Another question: The gentleman is in error in saying you can sue a defendant in the county where the accident occurs, at least in many jurisdictions. That may be true in the State of Texas, but it is not true in many other places.

Mr. PATMAN. Well, that has no reference to this, anyway.

Mr. GILCHRIST. Suppose I assault you——

Mr. PATMAN. But we are talking about liability insurance now.

Mr. GILCHRIST. But the gentleman was talking about where the suit ought to be brought. I think this is more of a racketeering proposition for the racketeers.

Mr. PATMAN. If I felt a racket could be built up, I would be against it. The judges would not permit it. If they did permit it, then we would go after the judges. The judges can allow a racket to be built up under the present laws if they want to. If we have judges like that, we ought to get rid of them.

Mr. HEALEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. HEALEY. Would not a provision which required the posting of a bond for costs discourage these frivolous and small suits?

Mr. PATMAN. Certainly it would. The gentleman has brought out a very good point.

I ask that you adopt this conference report.

A MEMORANDUM ON THIS REPORT PREPARED BY HON. E. BARRETT PRETTYMAN, CORPORATION COUNSEL, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

(Conference report on S. 408)

The House of Representatives, on March 28, 1935 (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, pp. 4638–4639), struck from the bill that portion beginning with line 16, page 8, down to and including line 5, page 10. The provision thus stricken is that which provides that the operation of an automobile by a nonresident in the District should be deemed equivalent to the appointment of the director of traffic as an agent upon whom process might be served in an action growing out of an accident, provided that such process be served by leaving a copy with the director, and that another copy be forthwith sent by registered mail to the defendant, and the defendant's return receipt be appended to the writ and entered with the declaration.

It also required that in such an action the plaintiff should first file a bond in such an amount as the court may require to reimburse the defendant, on the failure of the plaintiff to prevail in the action, for the expenses necessarily incurred by the defendant, including attorneys' fees, in defending the action.

The conference report recommends that the House recede from its amendment.

The effect of the amendment, if adopted, would be (1) to eliminate the power of the authorities of the District of Columbia insofar as this bill is concerned, to revoke the right of a nonresident to drive on the streets of the District, if such nonresident causes an accident and refuses to pay a judgment for damages rendered against him, and (2) to make it necessary for a resident of the District to sue a nonresident in the latter's home jurisdiction in a case in which such nonresident had caused damages while driving a car on the streets of the District.

A MODERN PROBLEM

The question as to the proper venue for tort actions arising from automobile accidents is a modern problem. A generation ago torts committed against residents of one State by residents of a far distant State were not usual. With the coming of automobiles and transcontinental highways, however, damages inflicted upon residents of one State by automobile drivers from far-distant States became an almost daily legal problem. The situation exists all over the country. Automobiles from distant States are in every jurisdiction. Accidents involving those vehicles have become almost daily occurrences. A serious legal question arose as to the rights of the respective parties in such cases. The old rule, brought down from the common law, did not readily fit the new problem, and did not afford a satisfactory solution. Some new answer must be found.

THE MERITS OF THE PROBLEM

Assume an automobile accident in Illinois involving a resident of that State and a resident of New York. Considering proper venue for a suit consequent to such an accident, the first, and most obvious, provision is that a trial at the place where the witnesses are available ought to be readily possible. The rigid requirement that the suit be brought at the residence of the defendant would, in about half the cases, nullify this possibility. Obviously the law should be so drawn that suit where the witnesses are available should be permitted.

In the second place, assume that in such an accident the resident from New York was at fault. Now clearly wherever the suit be had it will be at the inconvenience of one or the other of the parties; if it be in New York, the inconvenience would be to the resident of Illinois, and if the suit be in Illinois, it would be at the inconvenience of the resident of New York. The question then becomes this: Who should suffer the inconvenience, the person causing the damage or the victim thereof? Thus stated, the answer is easy—clearly the person causing the damage should be put to the inconvenience, if inconvenience be necessary to one or the other of the parties involved. This, of course, means that jurisdiction be conferred upon the courts of the residence of the plaintiff in the action, if that be the place where the accident occurred.

Moreover, the question of public safety is involved. The power of every jurisdiction to protect the users of its own streets against damages and accidents must be protected. As the Supreme Court said in Hendrick v. Maryland (235 U. S. 610, 622):

"The movement of motor vehicles over the highways is attended by constant and serious dangers to the public."

Logically each local jurisdiction should be able to say that if nonresidents operate automobiles on its streets, it will hold such nonresidents strictly accountable for damages caused by them in such operation, and will enforce such requirements by its own laws, and will not require its own citizens to follow such nonresidents to distant points in order to satisfy such damages.

THE ANSWER TO THE PROBLEM

With the foregoing considerations in mind some 35 or 36 States have reached the same answer, and that answer is the one which is contained in the provision which was stricken from this bill by the House amendment. No other satisfactory answer has been devised or suggested.

States which have adopted this provision are:

Alabama, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas, Vermont, Washington, Wisconsin, Wyoming.

PROVISION IS NOT DISCRIMINATORY

The provision here involved does not discriminate against nonresidents, but, on the contrary, places them upon the same footing as residents. To strike the provision from the bill would be to discriminate in favor of nonresidents. To do so would mean that if a nonresident should cause an accident in the District the local person who is injured would have to go into a foreign jurisdiction to recover the damages, no matter how far distant that jurisdiction might be.

CONSTITUTIONALITY

The constitutionality of the provision here involved has been settled. Hess v. Pawloski (274 U. S. 352) involved a Massachusetts statute which contained the same provisions as are proposed in this bill. The case went to the Supreme Court on the flat question whether that enactment was constitutional. The Court held it to be valid, saying:

"Motor vehicles are dangerous machines; and, even when skillfully and carefully operated, their use is attended by serious dangers to persons and property. In the public interest the State may make and enforce regulations reasonably calculated to promote care on the part of all, residents and nonresidents alike, who use its highways. The measure in question operates to require a nonresident to answer for his conduct in the State where arise causes of action alleged against him, as well as to provide for a claimant a convenient method by which he may sue to enforce his rights."

Many State courts have upheld the provision. A list of such cases is attached.

THIS PROVISION IS AN INTEGRAL PART OF THE BILL

The basic purpose of S. 408 is to provide that where an operator of a motor vehicle either is convicted of driving while intoxicated, or leaving the scene of an accident without making his identity known, or fails to pay a judgment placed against him because of the damages caused by him in the operation of the automobile, his right to drive on the streets of the District of Columbia shall be revoked until he furnishes evidence of financial responsibility. To enforce the latter provision of the bill requires some method of obtaining judgments. Against residents the answer is already provided, but what about nonresidents? Should they be permitted to cause damages and remain immune from the provisions of the bill respecting their right to drive? If the provisions here involved be stricken, it would mean that nonresidents could cause damages, and there would be no readily available way to secure a judgment which could be the basis for the revocation of the right to drive on the streets in the District. The bill, with this provision stricken, is only part of a complete enactment for the main purposes sought.

NEED FOR THE PROVISION

That the traffic problem is a serious one, no one will dispute. One hundred and thirty-five people were killed in automobile accidents in the District of Columbia last year. Some method of controlling this tragic situation must be devised. The President of the United States in January of this year wrote letters to all Governors and to the Commissioners of the District, urging their earnest attention to the problem. This bill (S. 408) is a traffic-safety measure designed to help meet this appeal. Not only residents are involved in these accidents. About 25 percent of our accidents involve nonresidents. Thus a quarter of our problem is involved in the provisions stricken by the House amendment.

RECIPROCITY

The most effective enforcement of traffic laws is secured from reciprocity agreements among the States. If two States have the same laws, they help one another by mutual cooperation, exchange of information, and reciprocal punishments of offenders against the law in each jurisdiction. But if the laws be different in the States obviously such reciprocity breaks down. Both Maryland and Virginia have statutory provisions similar to the one here proposed for the District. The enactment here will strengthen the reciprocal enforcement so necessary in each of these jurisdictions.

SERVICE BY PUBLICATION

The suggestion is made that services in these cases might be had by publication after 6 months. Obviously reference is made to section 105 of the Code of Law of the District, which is section 378 of title 24 of the 1929 compilation. (Copy of the complete text of this section is attached.) In passing, we remark that the provision of the bill permitting the application of this section of the code to these cases is included within the part stricken by the House amendment. Regardless of that, however, this section of the code permits publication only in actions which are in principle in rem, and in divorce proceedings. The actions in which this method of service is allowed are listed in the code as "suits for partition, divorce, by attachment, foreclosure, or mortgages, and deeds of trust; the establishment of title to real estate by possession, the enforcement of mechanics' liens and all other liens against real or personal property within the District, and any and all actions at law or in equity which have for their immediate object the enforcement or establishment of any lawful right, claim, or demand to or against any real or personal property within the jurisdiction of the court." So that this section of the code would not, by its own terms, apply to these cases. In the second place, to permit service by publication instead of by the method provided in the provision of the bill here involved would seem to be unfair. The stricken provision of the bill requires either actual service by registered mail with return receipt or direct personal service. Thus actual notice to the defendant is required. Service by publication would not guarantee such actual notice. In the third place, service by publication in this class of cases would be subject to a very serious constitutional question. In Wuchter v. Pizzutti (274 U. S. 13), the Supreme Court held that service of process on a State official, without any provision "making it reasonably probable that notice of service on the Secretary will be communicated to the nonresident defendant who is sued". would be unconstitutional. In Hess v. Pawloski the Court held that the requirement that notice be mailed by registered mail, with return receipt required, was a reasonable provision for such probable communication, and a statute so requiring was valid. If service by publication were substituted for this requirement of service by registered mail, the same question might arise as arose in Wuchter v. Pizzutti.

We might add that the provision in the bill which referred to section 105 of the code was not intended to permit service by publication, but was intended to include only the second paragraph of that section, which permits actual personal service on a nonresident by a person not interested in the subject matter in controversy. This was put in the bill to cover cases where nonresidents might refuse to receive a registered notice and thus tend to defeat the bill; if such nonresident were in a nearby place, actual personal service might be secured, which would guarantee actual notice in such case.

CONCLUSION

This provision was in the bill which passed the House unanimously last year. It was adopted unanimously by the Senate this session. It was approved by the subcommittee and by the full District of Columbia Committee of the House. It was stricken by amendment on the floor of the House.

TITLE 24, SECTION 378, OF THE CODE OF LAW OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

"378. Publication against nonresident, those absent for 6 months, unknown heirs or devisees, for divorce or in rem; actual service beyond District: Publication may be substituted for personal service by process upon any defendant who cannot be found and who is shown by affidavit to be a nonresident or to have been absent from the District for at least 6 months, or against the unknown heirs or devisees of deceased persons, in suits for partition, divorce, by attachment, foreclosure of mortgages and deeds of trust, the establishment of title to real estate by possession, the enforcement of mechanics' liens, and all other liens against real or personal property within the District, and in all actions at law and in equity which have for their immediate object the enforcement or establishment of any lawful right, claim, or demand to or against any real or personal property within the jurisdiction of the court.

"Personal service of process may be made by any person not a party to or otherwise interested in the subject matter in controversy on a nonresident defendant out of the District of Columbia, which service shall have the same effect and no other as an order of publication duly executed. In such case the return must be made under oath in the District of Columbia, unless the person making the service be a sheriff or deputy sheriff, a marshal or deputy marshal, authorized to serve process where service is made, and such return must show the time and place of such service and that the defendant so served is a nonresident of the District of Columbia. The cost and expense of such service of process out of the District of Columbia shall be borne by the party at whose instance the same is made and shall not be taxed as a part of the costs in the case; but where such service of process is made by some authorized officer of the law in this section mentioned, the actual and usual cost of such service of process shall be taxed as a part of the costs in the case (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1206, c. 854, sec. 105; Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 556, c. 153)."

APRIL 26, 1935.

MEMORANDUM IN RE: SERVICE OF PROCESS ON NONRESIDENTS AS PROVIDED BY SECTION 3 OF S. 406 (LINE 16, PAGE 8 OF THE PRINT OF THE BILL AS INTRODUCED IN THE HOUSE)

The leading case is Hesse v. Pawloski, 274 U. S. 352.

Similar provisions are in the statutes of many States and have been considered by many courts and held to be valid. Among the cases in which these statutes have been held valid are:

Pennsylvania statute: Carr v. Tennis (4 F. S. 142), Aversa v. Aubry (303 Pa. 139, 154 A. 311), O'Donnell v. Slade (5 F. S. 265).

Kentucky statute: Hirsch v. Warren (68 S. W. (2d) 767, 253 Ky. 62).

Wisconsin statute: State ex rel. Ledin et al. v. Davison (256 N. W. 718).

Connecticut statute: Barbieri v. Pandiscio (163 A. 469, 116 Conn. 48).

Delaware statute: Beach v. Perdue Co. (163 A. 265).

Nebraska statute: Herzoff v. Hommell (233 N. W. 458).

Texas statute: Morrow v. Ascher (55 F. (2d) 365).

Minnesota statute: Jones v. Paxton (27 F. (2d) 364).

Louisiana statute: Moore v. Payne (35 F. (2d) 232).

New Jersey statute: Cohen v. Plutschak (40 F. (2d) 727).

New Hampshire statute: Poti v. N. E. Rood Mach. Co. (140 A. 587, 83 N. H. 232).

New York statute: Hand v. Fraser (250 N. Y. S. 947, 233 App. Div. 800).

North Carolina statute: Bigham v. Foor (158 S. E. 548, 201 N. C. 14).

OKLAHOMA—CHAPTER 50, ARTICLE 12 (ORIGINALLY SEC. 10137, COMPILED STAT. OF 1921, AS AMENDED BY CH. 116, LAWS OF 1927, AND BY CH. 247, LAWS OF 1929), LAWS OF 1931

An act amending section 10137, Compiled Oklahoma Statutes, 1921, as amended by Session Laws of 1929, chapter 247, and providing for obtaining service of process on owners and drivers of motor cars from other States with automobile tags issued by other States in causes arising in the operation of said cars in the State of Oklahoma, and declaring an emergency

Be it enacted by the people of the State of Oklahoma—

PROCESS, SECRETARY OF STATE, SERVICE ON FOR NONRESIDENT

SECTION 1. Section 10137, Compiled Oklahoma Statutes, 1921, as amended by Session Laws of 1927, chapter 116, section 2, and as amended by Session Laws of 1929, chapter 247, by the addition of two new sections, is hereby amended, as to the said two new sections added, to read as follows:

"SEC. 10137–1. (1) The acceptance by a nonresident of the rights and privileges conferred by section 10137, as evidenced by his operating a motor vehicle thereunder upon the roads and streets of this State for any private use or purpose, or the operation by a nonresident of a motor vehicle on a public road, highway, or street in the State for business or commercial purposes, shall be deemed equivalent to an appointment by such nonresident of the secretary of state of this State, or his successor in office, to be his true and lawful attorney upon whom may be served all lawful processes in any action or proceeding against him growing out of any accident or collision in which said nonresident may be involved while operating a motor vehicle on such public road, highway, or street, and said acceptance or operation shall be a signification of his agreement that any such process against him which is so served shall be of the same legal force and validity as if served upon him personally.

"(2) Summons shall issue and be served as in civil cases, and service of such process shall be made by leaving a copy of the process with a fee of $2 in the hands of the secretary of state, or in his office, and such service shall be sufficient service upon the said nonresident: Provided, That notice of such service and a copy of the process, with the return of the officer endorsed thereon, are forthwith sent by registered mail by the plaintiff to the defendant, and the defendant's receipt and the plaintiff's affidavit of compliance herewith are filed with the papers in said case; or in lieu of mailing said copy by registered mail to the defendant, notice of such service may be had upon the defendant by delivering a copy of such process, with the return of the officer endorsed thereon, to the defendant, or to any member of defendant's family over the age of 15 years, at the usual place of residence of the defendant in any State where the defendant may be found or in which such defendant may reside, by the sheriff, constable, or any other peace officer in such State; such service of said notice to be made upon the defendant shall be made at least 20 days before the answer day provided for in such process, and the affidavit of the sheriff, constable, or other peace officer giving such notice, setting forth the manner and date of same, shall be filed with the papers in said case.

"(3) The court in which the action is pending may order such continuances as may be necessary to afford the defendant reasonable opportunity to defend the action."

FEE, RECORD KEPT BY SECRETARY OF STATE

"Section 10137–2. The fee of $2 paid to the secretary of state by the plaintiff at the time of the service shall be taxed as costs if he prevail in the suit. The secretary of state shall keep a record of all such processes, which shall show the day and hour of such service."

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CARPENTER].

Mr. CARPENTER. Mr. Speaker, I am a member of the Committee on the District of Columbia, and I am a member of the Subcommittee on Traffic and Highways. I have been interested for the last 2 or 3 years in trying to get passed through this Congress some legislation that would give us protection on the highways of the District of Columbia. I have been especially interested in the taxicab-liability legislation. I have been interested in this legislation for the protection it would give to our constituents, who come to Washington by the hundreds of thousands. That being my idea, and being for this legislation, I was very much surprised when I discovered such a provisions in this bill as is incorporated in this conference report. It has no business in this legislation. We are trying to protect our constituents as much as anything else, and here we are subjecting them to a racketeering business, as has been pointed out. It has been stated by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON], in answer to a question, that a judgment would not be worth the paper it was written on outside of this District. Then what is the reason to put such a provision in the bill? It is just to scare some of our constituents.

Mr. PATMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CARPENTER. I cannot yield now. It is for the purpose of scaring our constituents who visit Washington, that they must either come to Washington and stand suit or pay up little $250 claims mentioned by the gentleman from Iowa. It is like a farmer client of mine who came into my office one morning and said, "I am in trouble." I said, "What is the matter?" "Oh", he said, "here are some fellows who have been trying to collect a claim against me that I don't owe, and I am sued." I looked at the title of the paper he handed me and it had at the top, a collection agency versus John Smith. "First notice. If you do not come and pay us the sum so-and-so dollars we are going to turn this over to an attorney." Then he showed me the second notice—the same thing; all titled up like a court action: "If you do not pay within 5 days our attorney is going to commence suit." This man thought he was sued. That is the only purpose of having this in the law. It is to scare our people out in our States and make them think they have been sued. That is the only good it can do.

Mention was made of the fact that it would protect a man in Illinois who was injured by a man from Ohio, who would come here to Washington instead of going to Ohio to bring suit. We know nothing like that would occur, although it has been pointed out that they might get a default judgment and take it to the county in which the man resides and put it on record, and he would have a cloud on the title to his home or his farm that would cause him to go to the expense of having it removed. Some of our constituents could travel through here and some racketeer get the number of their car or their name, and without any accident at all they could commence suit against our constituents and have everything on file because they were not here and did not know anything about it, and a judgment could be obtained against them. If there was any trouble about it, they could say they were mistaken in the identity. I do not believe this Congress would want to give racketeers such a chance at our constituents as that.

Mr. PATMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CARPENTER. I yield.

Mr. PATMAN. I would state to the gentleman that the Supreme Court of the United States has held this service good. The United States Supreme Court has held that the very minute you come into the jurisdiction of a city or the District of Columbia, when there is a law like this, you at that time come under the jurisdiction of that law. You make yourself liable to the jurisdiction.

Mr. CARPENTER. If the Supreme Court has rendered any such decision holding such service valid personal service on which to rest a valid judgment by default collectible in a State other than the one having such a law, that is all the more reason why such a law should not be enacted in the District of Columbia.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, in the consideration of the conference report pending before the House it seems to me we have lost sight of the most fundamental of all principles involved in this legislation. I think it can be stated best simply by saying that if my people from Illinois, or TOM FORD's people from California, or the constituents of any Member of Congress come to Washington, that fact does not give them any special rights in the District of Columbia; they are not entitled to anything more than any other citizen is entitled to under the law; and that is all this bill seeks to do insofar as other States are concerned. If a citizen of the District of Columbia goes across the line into Maryland and runs into somebody, the Maryland law recites that the Secretary of State by virtue of the fact that the person has driven into that State becomes his agent for purpose of service of process. So they serve process on the Secretary of State and then by registered mail serve it upon the person in question for the purpose of determining the equities in the suit. Is there anything unfair about that? Is there a single Member of this House who wants to arrogate to himself the right for his constituents to come to the District of Columbia, have an automobile accident, beat the motor cops or the sheriff or anybody else to the State line and then say, "Good-bye; I am outside the jurisdiction of the District of Columbia"? Certainly you are not asking for that sort of thing for your constituents; I would not. That is what we are doing in this bill. When somebody living outside the District comes into the District, and by a motor vehicle does injury to a resident or the property of a resident of the District of Columbia, this bill says that the Director of Safety shall become the agent of the nonresident for the purpose of service of process. The language then goes on to state that service must be had by registered mail on the defendant; and there is a third provision which requires the plaintiff to put up a bond sufficient to cover court costs, prospective attorneys' fees, travel costs, and all that sort of thing before an action will lie. The amount of the bond is determined by the court. There is not a chance of a default judgment being taken. It is simply an effort to render justice. It is the general experience that due to the increased use of the automobile and people going everywhere throughout the United States, that if an automobile accident happens, unscrupulous persons make for the State line just as quickly as they can. It is not a question revolving around some abstruse, technical, legal point; it is a question of control over those who inflict injuries upon citizens of other States by the negligent or careless use of their motor vehicles. This is the all-important thing. Is it not right that a person living in some other jurisdiction who comes into the District of Columbia and inflicts an injury through the use of his motor vehicle should be made to pay the cost or make some restitution for the damage he inflicts instead of requiring that the injured party journey to California, Illinois, Oklahoma, or some distant State to seek restitution? That is all this bill seeks to do.

So far as racketeering is concerned, I have seen no indication of it in the 34 States whose motor-vehicle responsibility laws contain almost this identical language. You will find it in Illinois, in Iowa, in Michigan, in Pennsylvania, and other States. Surely, if there had been any abuses they would have been exposed long before now. As time goes on, this measure will be adopted in every State of the Union. There will then be complete equality of residents of the District of Columbia with citizens of all States. So I repeat, all this measure seeks to do is to put the District of Columbia upon the same legal, equitable basis as the other States now having similar legislation; and I am asking the Members this afternoon to approve this conference report because this is a good measure and should become a law. The conference report should be approved. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON].

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, when this bill passed the House last session it had this identical provision in it. Not a voice was raised against it in the House, not one. It was recognized then as a just provision.

When again in this session the House recently passed this bill I was one of those who voted for the amendment of the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. NICHOLS], which struck out this provision; but afterward I looked more closely into the matter and found that the law of the State of Oklahoma has this same provision in it, although in Oklahoma no bond is required. If a person from Maine or California has an automobile accident in the gentleman's State of Oklahoma, the out-of-town person can be served by registered mail, with no bond put up to protect him. I ask the gentleman from Oklahoma if this is not so?

Mr. NICHOLS. I do not know; I am not dealing with the State of Oklahoma now; I am dealing with legislation for the District of Columbia. Now, will the gentleman from Texas yield that I may ask him a question?

Mr. BLANTON. Certainly.

Mr. NICHOLS. Just because Oklahoma has some silly laws, would the gentleman seek to have them incorporated as part of the law of the District of Columbia?

Mr. BLANTON. If good, yes; if bad, no. The provision under discussion is good, though; and I will tell you why: Every day in Washington thousands of cars from the 48 States are running on the streets. The gentleman would be surprised to know how many of the foreign cars come from Maryland and Virginia, 10 miles away, to Washington. A very large percent of the motor-vehicle accidents last year, I understand, were caused by Maryland and Virginia cars owned by people living just across the District line.

Why, many of your constituents are here in cars and will be here constantly during the summer. Do you not want to afford them some protection? What right has a person to come to Washington, drive recklessly and cause damage, and then not answer for it? Should anyone from Texas come here to Washington and run into somebody in a reckless manner and cause him to be damaged I want him to stand up like a man and answer for it, and take his medicine, and the same with the constituents of the other Members here.

Why should we not afford protection to Washington people in this matter? Do we want them injured without redress? It is not only the Washington people that will be protected, but your constituents as well, who are visiting in Washington, for they may be injured by other foreign cars. We have people from Texas in Washington this very minute, and a number are from my district. They traveled up here in their automobiles. They are stopping at the hotels and in the tourist camps. There are a number of automobiles from many of the other States here right now. Suppose someone from Maryland or Virginia runs into a car of a constituent of yours in Washington, should they not have some redress? The constituents from your respective towns should have some redress if a car from Virginia or Maryland runs into them here.

Mr. PARKS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. PARKS. How would it be any easier for the gentleman's constituents to bring suit in Washington than go across the river and bring suit?

Mr. BLANTON. This would be where the collision happened. The gentleman from Arkansas is a distinguished lawyer. He used to be one of the finest prosecuting attorneys in his State. The gentleman knows he has a law right now in Arkansas which is a facsimile of the law of Texas that if an accident occurs anywhere in the State the wrongdoer can be sued either at the place where the accident occurred or in his home, even though the place of injury may be clear across the State from where he lives.

Mr. PARKS. Yes; but he cannot get personal judgment unless personal service is obtained. He cannot go to Abilene, Tex., and get judgment unless he has obtained personal service.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman is too good a lawyer not to know that a personal judgment here in Washington on that kind of a service against a constituent in Arkansas would not be worth a 1-cent postage stamp. So, why worry?

Mr. PARKS. That is exactly the way I think about the matter.

Mr. BLANTON. We ought, however, to give the protection of this provision to the people in Washington who have to stay here, for it will be a deterrent. Do the Members realize that there are over 95,000 Government workers here in Washington who have to stay here and face these collisions? They are entitled to the protection given them by this conference report and this law.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I take these few minutes to call attention of the Members of the House to the fact that this is not what might be termed strictly a "District bill." This was not suggested by the people of the District of Columbia. It is in the nature of a general automobile law that is sought to be enacted uniformly throughout the United States, 34 States having already enacted it. It is a model law of the country. In this act there is more restriction and protection for the outsider than there is in the law of any other State. This has to do with the requirement of a bond.

Mention has been made of the racketeering business. May I say to the gentlemen who have brought that question up that their respective States, or some of them, have adopted the law? Did those gentlemen consider the law a racketeering matter against the residents out of those States. I say, if they consider this law a racketeering business, then their respective States that have adopted this law have gone into the racketeering business against you, me, and everyone else.

This law is for the protection of the Members of Congress and their families. If a man from the State of California, for instance, happens to kill someone in the District, who may be a Member of the House, it is necessary to go into other States in order to get service.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. NICHOLS) there were—ayes 83, noes 48.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I make the point there is no quorum present and object to the vote for that reason.

The SPEAKER. Evidently there is no quorum present.

The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 201, nays 128, not voting 102, as follows:

[Roll no. 61]

YEAS—201

Allen	Darrow	Jenkins, Ohio	Ramspeck
Andresen	Dear	Johnson, W. Va.	Randolph
Andrew, Mass.	Deen	Kahn	Ransley
Andrews, N. Y.	Delaney	Kee	Reed, Ill.
Arends	Dies	Kelly	Reed, N. Y.
Ashbrook	Dingell	Kinzer	Reilly
Bacharach	Dirksen	Knutson	Robinson, Utah
Bacon	Ditter	Kopplemann	Robsion, Ky.
Beiter	Dobbins	Lambeth	Rogers, Mass.
Biermann	Dockweiler	Lehlbach	Rudd
Binderup	Dondero	Lewis, Colo.	Russell
Blackney	Dorsey	Luckey	Ryan
Bland	Driscoll	Ludlow	Sanders, La.
Blanton	Duffy, N. Y.	Lundeen	Schulte
Boland	Dunn, Pa.	McCormack	Scrugham
Bolton	Eaton	McFarlane	Shanley
Boylan	Eckert	McGrath	Sirovich
Brennan	Eicher	McKeough	Smith, Conn.
Brewster	Ekwall	McLaughlin	Smith, W. Va.
Brooks	Engel	McLeod	Snell
Brown, Mich.	Englebright	McSwain	Spence
Brunner	Evans	Maas	Steagall
Buchanan	Fenerty	Maloney	Stefan
Buckbee	Fitzpatrick	Mansfield	Stewart
Burnham	Flannagan	Mapes	Sullivan
Caldwell	Fletcher	Marshall	Sumners, Tex.
Carter	Ford, Calif.	Martin, Colo.	Sweeney
Cary	Fulmer	May	Taber
Casey	Gearhart	Mead	Taylor, Colo.
Cavicchia	Gifford	Merritt, Conn.	Thom
Chandler	Gildea	Merritt, N. Y.	Thomason
Chapman	Gillette	Michener	Thurston
Christianson	Goodwin	Millard	Tinkham
Church	Gray, Ind.	Montet	Tonry
Citron	Green	Moran	Treadway
Claiborne	Greenwood	Moritz	Turpin
Coffee	Gwynne	Mott	Vinson, Ky.
Cole, Md.	Hancock, N. Y.	Norton	Waligren
Cole, N. Y.	Hancock, N. C.	O'Connell	Warren
Connery	Hart	O'Day	Weaver
Cooper, Tenn.	Healey	O'Leary	Welch
Costello	Hess	O'Neal	Whittington
Cox	Hill, Knute	Palmisano	Wigglesworth
Crawford	Hill, Samuel B.	Patman	Wilcox
Crosby	Hoffman	Pearson	Wilson, Pa.
Cross, Tex.	Hollister	Pittenger	Wolcott
Crosser, Ohio	Holmes	Plumley	Wolfenden
Crowe	Hook	Polk	Zioncheck
Cullen	Igoe	Powers
Cummings	Jacobsen	Rabaut
Darden	Jenckes, Ind.	Ramsay

NAYS—128

Amlie	Frey	Lord	Sandlin
Arnold	Fuller	McAndrews	Sauthoff
Ayers	Gassaway	McClellan	Schaefer
Bell	Gehrmann	McGehee	Schneider
Boileau	Gilchrist	McGroarty	Scott
Brown, Ga.	Gingery	McMillan	Sears
Buck	Goldsborough	Mason	Secrest
Buckler, Minn.	Greever	Massingale	Sisson
Bulwinkle	Gregory	Maverick	Smith, Va.
Burdick	Haines	Miller	Snyder
Carlson	Halleck	Mitchell, Ill.	South
Carpenter	Higgins, Mass.	Mitchell, Tenn.	Stack
Castellow	Hildebrandt	Monaghan	Stubbs
Colden	Hoeppel	Nelson	Sutphin
Collins	Hope	Nichols	Tarver
Colmer	Houston	O'Connor	Taylor, S. C.
Dempsey	Hull	Owen	Taylor, Tenn.
Dietrich	Johnson, Okla.	Parks	Terry
Doughton	Johnson, Tex.	Parsons	Thompson
Doxey	Kenney	Patterson	Truax
Drewry	Kerr	Peterson, Fla.	Turner
Driver	Kimball	Peterson, Ga.	Umstead
Duffey, Ohio	Kleberg	Pierce	Utterback
Duncan	Kloeb	Quinn	Vinson, Ga.
Dunn, Miss.	Kniffin	Rankin	Walter
Eagle	Kocialkowski	Reece	Wearin
Edmiston	Kramer	Richards	Whelchel
Faddis	Lambertson	Richardson	White
Farley	Lanham	Robertson	Williams
Ferguson	Larrabee	Rogers, Okla.	Woodrum
Fiesinger	Lea, Calif.	Romjue	Young
Ford, Miss.	Lesinski	Sanders, Tex.	Zimmerman

NOT VOTING—102

Adair	Dickstein	Keller	Rayburn
Bankhead	Disney	Kennedy, Md.	Rich
Barden	Doutrich	Kennedy, N. Y.	Rogers, N. H.
Beam	Ellenbogen	Kvale	Sabath
Berlin	Fernandez	Lamneck	Sadowski
Bloom	Fish	Lee, Okla.	Schuetz
Boehne	Focht	Lemke	Seger
Buckley, N. Y.	Gambrill	Lewis, Md.	Shannon
Burch	Gasque	Lloyd	Short
Cannon, Mo.	Gavagan	Lucas	Smith, Wash.
Cannon, Wis.	Granfield	McLean	Somers, N. Y.
Carden	Gray, Pa.	McReynolds	Starnes
Carmichael	Greenway	Mahon	Thomas
Cartwright	Griswold	Marcantonio	Tobey
Celler	Guyer	Martin, Mass.	Tolan
Clark, Idaho	Hamlin	Meeks	Underwood
Clark, N. C.	Harlan	Montague	Wadsworth
Cochran	Harter	Murdock	Werner
Cooley	Hartley	O'Brien	West
Cooper, Ohio	Hennings	Oliver	Wilson, La.
Corning	Higgins, Conn.	O'Malley	Withrow
Cravens	Hill, Ala.	Patton	Wolverton
Crowther	Hobbs	Perkins	Wood
Culkin	Huddleston	Pettengill	Woodruff
Daly	Imhoff	Peyser
DeRouen	Jones	Pfeifer

So the conference report was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Martin of Massachusetts (for) with Mr. Cartwright (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. Imhoff with Mr. Focht.
Mr. McReynolds with Mr. Higgins of Connecticut.
Mr. Hennings with Mr. Thomas.
Mr. Griswold with Mr. Wadsworth.
Mr. Dickstein with Mr. Hartley.
Mr. Cochran with Mr. Seger.
Mr. Ellenbogen with Mr. Fish.
Mr. DeRouen with Mr. Guyer.
Mr. Buckley with Mr. Perkins.
Mr. Schultz with Mr. Tobey.
Mr. Corning with Mr. Short.
Mr. Bloom with Mr. Woodruff.
Mr. Harlan with Mr. Culkin.
Mr. Bankhead with Mr. Withrow.
Mr. Granfield with Mr. Kvale.
Mr. Rogers of New Hampshire with Mr. Marcantonio.
Mr. Boehne with Mr. Cooper of Ohio.
Mr. Cannon of Missouri with Mr. Doutrich.
Mr. Burch with Mr. McLean.
Mr. Oliver with Mr. Rich.
Mr. Gavagan with Mr. Wolverton.
Mr. Disney with Mr. Lemke.
Mr. Huddleston with Mr. Crowther.
Mr. Jones with Mr. Pfeifer.
Mr. Fernandez with Mr. Starnes.
Mrs. Greenway with Mr. Lucas.
Mr. Adair with Mr. Tolan.
Mr. Gambrill with Mr. Meeks.
Mr. Sadowski with Mr. Celler.
Mr. Barden with Mr. Wood.
Mr. Kennedy of Maryland with Mr. Cravens.
Mr. Clark of North Carolina with Mr. Lee of Oklahoma.
Mr. Underwood with Mr. Carden.
Mr. Daly with Mr. Cooley.
Mr. Berlin with Mr. Lamneck.
Mr. Carmichael with Mr. Mahon.
Mr. Patman with Mr. Hill of Alabama.
Mr. Gasque with Mr. Kennedy of New York.
Mr. West with Mr. Smith of Washington.
Mr. Keller with Mr. Hobbs.
Mr. Wilson of Louisiana with Mr. Somers of New York.
Mr. Harter with Mr. Hamlin.
Mr. Werner with Mr. Rayburn.
Mr. Gray of Pennsylvania with Mr. Beam.
Mr. Sabath with Mr. O'Malley.
Mr. Pettengill with Mr. Lewis of Maryland.
Mr. Montague with Mr. Murdock.
Mr. Clark of Idaho with Mr. Lloyd.

Mr. LUCKEY and Mr. CHRISTIANSON changed their votes from "nay" to "yea."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, my colleague the gentleman from California [Mr. TOLAN] is absent on official business and will be absent from the Chamber until Thursday of this week.

BANKING ACT OF 1935

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that there may be printed in the Appendix of the RECORD a portion of the testimony of Dr. Walter Spahr, who appeared before the Committee on Banking and Currency to discuss the banking bill which is now pending in the House. Through an inadvertence a portion of Dr. Spahr's testimony was omitted, and I think simple justice to him requires that this action be taken, and also it is proper for the information of the House that his entire statement may be available.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, under leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I insert the following statement of Prof. Walter E. Spahr, professor of economics, New York University, New York City, before Committee on Banking and Currency of the House of Representatives on Wednesday, March 27, 1935, relating to H. R. 5357—H. R. 7617 not included in printed hearings on the above-numbered bill:

There are no circumstances calling for legislation dealing with the fundamentals of the Federal Reserve System at this time. Legislation of this type should not be undertaken until after a commission of competent experts has made a thorough study of the money and banking problems of this country, and on the basis of adequate evidence and after careful deliberations, has drafted a plan which offers real promise of providing this country with appropriate and workable money and banking systems. Both systems have suffered sad mutilation in recent years, and what is needed now is careful and deliberate overhauling and reconstruction rather than further mutilation and distortion such as will result if title II of this bill is passed under the administrative whip and in the atmosphere of tense emotionalism now prevailing with respect to our money and banking problems.

It is very important that there be no legislation at this time beyond that necessary to correct technical difficulties or to remove crude inconsistencies in existing laws. And even this type of legislation should be undertaken only upon the recommendation of the Federal Reserve Board and in strict accord with specific proposals drafted by the Board.

The Senate and House Committees on Banking and Currency, I think, could perform no better service at this time, with respect to the proposed legislation, as embodied in this bill—S. 1715 and H. R. 5357—than to refuse to vote it out of committee and to substitute in its stead a bill of technical corrections embodying the recommendations of the Federal Reserve Board on specific difficulties.

At the same time a joint resolution should be prepared providing for the creation of a national commission on money and banking to gather evidence on our money and banking problems, and to draft bills to provide this country with the proper type of money and banking systems. This commission, I believe, should be composed of leading money and banking authorities of this country. Its membership might well be composed of: First, those Members of the Senate and House Committees on Banking and Currency who have devoted years to the study of problems of money and banking; second, the most outstanding and experienced professors of money and banking in our leading universities, men whose reputation, intellectual integrity, and capacity are beyond question; third, outstanding bankers who are men of experience, maturity, and social vision; and, fourth, other students of money and banking, drawn from other fields of activity, if they are recognized as thorough students of money and banking problems.

The delay in legislation which would result from the adoption of such a program is eminently desirable. Money and banking mechanisms are probably the most delicate and, at the same time, most vital of all instrumentalities in our economic system; and it is for this reason that hasty and ill-conceived legislation in such a field is very unwise and is to be deplored. In its stead there should be substituted legislation growing out of careful deliberation by our most competent experts.

Title II of the banking bill of 1935 is particularly dangerous, when viewed in its entirety, because it is a manifestation of the unsound philosophy held by some officials in this administration regarding the causal relationships existing between the supply of currency, on the one hand, and prices, recovery, and prosperity on the other. Involved in this false philosophy are also misconceptions as to, first, the proper functions of central banking systems, especially with respect to the appropriate relation between a nation's central banking system and governmental financing; second, the appropriate functions and powers of the central banks with respect to the control of the money and credit supply; and, above all, third, the appropriate relationship between the Government, acting in its supervisory capacity, and a properly constituted central banking system.

These false notions and misconceptions show themselves clearly in those sections of title II which will enable the party in power—I mean any party in power, of course—to control completely the personnel of the Federal Reserve Board. They are revealed in those sections which will enable this politically controlled Board to attempt to put into effect the theories of money and credit control held by many of those in power. They are seen in those sections of the bill which will enable the Government to force the central and commercial banking structure to aid the Government in carrying out the fiscal policies regardless of their wisdom, to give Government credit an artificially high rating, and to use the banking system and people's savings without their approval and regardless of the effect upon commerce, agriculture, and industry.

In short, nearly all the fundamental conceptions regarding the appropriate functions, the methods of operation of a well-conceived central banking system, and the proper relation of the Government to such a banking system, are false, are contrary to the most outstanding lessons learned from central banking experiences, are dangerous, and are almost certain to lead to great trouble in the future.

The following analysis of the various sections of title II of the banking bill of 1935 support the accuracy of the preceding general observations.

Section 201 (a) provides the means by which the board of directors of each Federal Reserve bank will be brought under the control of the Federal Reserve Board, which in turn will be politically controlled. This means of control is found in the fact that the governor and vice governor of each Federal Reserve bank can be appointed only with the approval of the Federal Reserve Board.

The governor and vice governor can come from any district. In this manner the Federal Reserve Board can inflict any outsider on a Federal Reserve bank as governor or vice governor.

Since the governor and vice governor are approved by the Federal Reserve Board, and since two other class C directors, other than the governor, are representatives of the Federal Reserve Board, the Government can have four representatives as against the present three, since the vice governor need not be appointed a class C director. Why the office of deputy chairman is not combined with that of the vice governor is not clear unless the purpose be to enlarge the number of Government representatives on the board of directors of each Federal Reserve bank.

It is to be noticed also that "all other officers and employees of the bank shall be directly responsible" to the governor of the board of directors. This gives him the powers of a czar, and through him the politically controlled Federal Reserve Board can reach directly and arbitrarily down to every employee in every Federal Reserve bank. This means, of course, that the political authorities can reach any employee they please. In this manner every employee of every Federal Reserve bank will lose his independence and become, like the Federal Reserve Board, an unwilling vassal of the political party in power. Classes A and B directors will carry no weight under such a system, since the governor of each Federal Reserve bank is given this authority and is a Government agent.

Today the elected governors of the Federal Reserve banks are chairmen of the executive committees and, in this manner, they have increased their powers as against the chairman-Federal Reserve agent. This bill makes a Government agent chairman of the executive committee, and thus the Government worms its way into the direct operation of each Federal Reserve bank.

The slightest reflection upon such a proposed arrangement should convince one that all activities of each Federal Reserve bank can be brought under the absolute control and domination of the political party in power. These governors and vice governors may be as arbitrary as they please, so long as they satisfy the politically controlled Federal Reserve Board. In this manner the political party in power can lay its rough hands on the Federal Reserve banks, which the Government does not own, but which are owned by the member banks that, in turn, are owned largely by private individuals.

Such an arrangement provides conclusive evidence of the intent of the present party in power to extend its political tentacles over the banking system. In this case it is attempting to lay hold of one of the most delicate and most vital agencies of our economic system, an agency that must be free from such domination if our economic system and our people in it are to maintain any appreciable amount of their traditional freedom. When a nation's banking system passes into control of the political party in power, the freedom of a people can speedily disappear. And certainly there is no reason to expect that better banking can or will result from any such proposal as this one in section 201 (e) of this bill.

It is to be observed that one of the class C directors shall be appointed deputy chairman of the board of directors, and that the vice governor may be appointed a class C director. It is because of this word "may" that the Federal Reserve Board may have four representatives on the board of directors of each Federal Reserve bank.

The duties now performed by the Federal Reserve agent "shall be performed by such person as the Federal Reserve Board shall designate." This provides the Reserve Board with another representative at each Federal Reserve bank. In this manner it can have five agents there at the Federal Reserve bank.

The last paragraph of section 201 (a), on page 40, lines 17 to 22, permitting the present incumbents of the boards of directors to serve out their terms would seem to require a modification of the parts of the bill which provide that this section shall be effective 90 days after enactment.

Section 202 is one of those coaxing, half-hearted measures by which attempts are made to persuade nonmember banks to become members of the Federal Reserve System. Our statute books are cluttered up with these conciliatory provisions in law. That particular provision merely lowers still further the capital requirements of banks which may enter the System. At present the capital requirements are too low. And if it is believed that nonmember banks should be members of the System, then the Federal Reserve Act should be amended so as to provide that all banks should, after a certain date, be members of the System. If the capital requirements of some of the banks are too small, such banks should be made branches of larger member banks. But all legislation of this type probably should be left until a competent money and banking commission makes its report.

Section 203 provides the means by which the Federal Reserve Board is to be made into a politically controlled and dominated agent of the President. Lines 1 to 3, page 42, of section 203 (1), are probably the worst, if not the most subtle in the bill. They provide that the President "shall choose persons well qualified by education or experience or both to participate in the formulation of national economic and monetary policies." It will be noticed that these members of the Board are to be qualified to participate in the formulation of national economic policies as well as monetary policies. Does this mean that they are to participate in the formulation of national economic policies? If this sentence means what it appears to mean, then this Board will become a part of the planning bureaucracy of the Government, and the Federal Reserve System can become, and can be made to become, the financial agent of the Government in carrying out its planning policies. It can be made an engine of oppression, rather than a neutral agent to finance commerce, agriculture, and industry.

This section of the bill is either subtle or stupid. In any case, it is dangerous. It reveals how far removed its drafters are, in their notions of how to constitute a central bank board, from those who would profit from experience.

Section 203 (2) provides a means by which Mr. Hamlin may retire at once and Messrs. Miller and James in 1936, thus removing from the Board in a very short time, even if more arbitrary methods are not used, its three most experienced members. If this provision is to be enacted into law it would seem that it should be so amended that all ex-members of the Board would become ex-officio members of some advisory body, such as the Federal Advisory Council, in order that the benefits of the knowledge and experience of such men are not lost to the younger members of the Board. Such an arrangement could be an effective factor in developing fine traditions in central banking.

Lines 17 to 25, on page 42, are awkward and confusing. Lines 17 to 22 say literally that "each member of the Board so retired from active service who shall have served for at least 5 years shall receive, during the remainder of his life, retirement pay in an amount equal to the annual salary paid" now. Thus he would receive a total pension of $12,000 for the rest of his life, if you take those words literally. How much will he be paid the first year of retirement? Or is he to be paid $12,000 in a lump sum? This sentence probably was intended to give the retired members, who have reached 70 years of age and who have served 5 or more years, an annual pension based upon the years served, the yearly amount to be determined by the number of years served multiplied by $1,000; but the bill certainly does not make this point clear.

According to the first proviso, a person who has served, say, 8 years, will receive $8,000 per year, and if he lives 3 years thereafter he will receive $24,000 in a pension, whereas lines 17 to 22 preceding the proviso would give him only $12,000, regardless of how long he lived.

This proviso also omits the 5-year minimum, and, in line 25, the word "served" apparently should be inserted after the third word, "year." The entire section is badly muddled, and it should be rewritten and made to say what the authors intended that it should say.

Nor is the second proviso, on page 43, clear or sufficiently specific in its meaning. Furthermore, it is to be noted that, according to section 203 (3), every governor appointed and removed will come in for this pension if he is 65 years of age, since he shall be deemed to have served the full term for which he was appointed, even though he may have served only 1 month or even 1 day. What a great opportunity this provides a President to place his friends on a fine pension for life. In 30 days he could give 30 of his friends who had reached 65 years of age a $12,000 pension for life. In 4 years he could develop a large pension list, all to be paid by the Federal Reserve banks. The vice governor apparently can have his term of service terminated by the President without the benefit of it being deemed that he served his full term. It would appear that no member of the board could afford to accept the office of vice governor.

This section 203 (3) reveals clearly the method by which a President can change the Board's personnel within the space of a week to suit his particular wishes. It would be difficult to conceive of a more dangerous provision written into any central banking law. It reveals beyond the shadow of a doubt the purpose of the authors of this measure. They propose to convert the Federal Reserve System into a political instrumentality of the party in power. This section of the bill reflects clearly the authors' motives and concepts regarding central banking. It shows that they stand ready to destroy our Federal Reserve System, which we have tried to evolve into a useful system over a period of 20 years.

If every other section of the bill and of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended by the bill, were perfect, the System still could be destroyed and the bill still would be dangerous. Considering the dangers in sections 201 and 203 of this bill, the possibilities of dangers in the other sections of title II are accentuated. For this reason there are many today who oppose other sections of title II principally because they would be administered by a politically controlled Federal Reserve Board.

The answer to this proposed amendment to the Federal Reserve Act is that it must not be permitted to pass. The lessons of central banking teach that the farther the central banking administrative authorities are removed from political domination, the better for the country concerned. The independence of the Federal Reserve Board should be strengthened, and not weakened, and our Federal Reserve System will not be what it should be until this is accomplished.

There are various ways in which this can be done. Indeed, there are so many devices available that it would be absurd for anyone to insist that he can suggest the best one. My contention is that our lessons have taught us that our Federal Reserve Board has not been sufficiently independent of the Government and that the method of nomination and final selection should be so changed as to remove the Board as far from political control as is the United States Supreme Court.

Of course, every central banking system must come under the control of the Government in some degree; but this control should be exercised through the passage of the proper organic act providing for the proper type of banking system and administrative boards, after which the Government should leave the system to operate, free from partisan politics, within the limits of the organic act. As the Board is reconstituted and strengthened after a careful study of the problem by our best experts, I should like to see the Secretary of the Treasury removed from the Board, though I think he should be a nonvoting auditor or participant in the Board's discussion; and I should like to see the office and functions of the Comptroller of the Currency absorbed by the Board.

Everything that any central banking system can be expected to accomplish can be written into the organic banking act, and thereafter the administration of the system should be left to independent nonpolitical administrative bodies.

Section 204 appears to be free from criticism.

Section 205, creating a new type of Federal open market committee, might have many virtues if the Federal Reserve Board were a properly constituted independent board. But considering how the Board is to be politically controlled, this section of the bill merely provides additional means by which the Government can extend its powers over the activities of the Federal Reserve banks.

Government financing, in the final analysis, should be looked upon as an intrusion into, and a disturbing factor in, the fields of private finance. And, if a well ordered central banking system performs its functions properly, there will be many times in which it must and should go into the open money markets to combat the effects of Government financing.

It is not the function of a central banking system to give Government credit a higher rating than it would otherwise have in the open money markets to which non-Government borrowers and lenders must go. It is the function of all commercial banks to give borrowers the exact credit rating to which they are entitled, and it is the function of these banks and the central banking authorities to give Government borrowers exactly the same type of credit rating. To assume that Government credit should be given an artificially high value by a central banking system is to assume that it is the function of a central banking system to inflate the currency.

This section 205 recognizes no such principle of central banking and opens the way by which the banking system can be made to absorb Government securities on terms satisfactory to the Government and is, for this reason, unsound in principle. The section provides the means by which the Government can compel open market operations to suit its particular notions and purposes, regardless of the needs of commerce, agriculture, and industry, and regardless of any principles of sound central banking.

All five members of the Federal open market committee are to be Government agents. The fact that two of the members are to be selected from the governors of the Reserve banks by the governors does not change this fact, since all these governors will be Government agents.

This committee is also given the power to make recommendations to the Federal Reserve Board from time to time regarding the discount rates of the Federal Reserve banks. It may be presumed that giving this committee this power has no particular significance unless it be assumed that the Reserve Board exercises the power of prescribing discount rates for the Reserve banks. It would seem preferable that the present method of having rates initiated by the respective Reserve banks subject to the approval of the Board, is preferable. But if the Reserve Board were properly constituted and independent of political influences, I should advocate that the Board be given the power not only to review discount rates but to institute the rates when a Federal Reserve bank is clearly running counter to sound national banking policies.

Section 206, which opens the way for discounting any commercial, agricultural, or industrial paper and for advances secured by any sound assets of such member bank, seems to be tacked onto the preceding parts of section 13 of the Federal Reserve Act without any regard to how it affects the preceding paragraphs of that section. It would appear that most of the preceding paragraphs are nullified. Just what the law is would be difficult to determine. It reveals a hasty and careless type of bill drafting.

It is doubtful whether, under the best type of central banking system, such a provision can be defended. It would seem that under such a system this wide-open provision should be reserved for emergencies.

Under a politically dominated system of central banking, as provided by this bill, section 206 provides the means by which the Reserve Board can admit to the portfolios of the Federal Reserve banks any kind of paper, regardless of its illiquidity, and fix the maturity of the paper at any distant date it chooses to adopt.

Since it is not the function of a central banking system to accept illiquid paper, the proper restrictions against such acceptance should be set up. Wise exceptions to meet emergencies can be provided and the proper penalties and handicaps attached, so that emergency transactions will not become the normal ones. This section, as it stands, is unsound and unwise.

Section 207 provides the means by which the Federal Reserve banks can be compelled to absorb Government securities, regardless of maturities. In this manner, the Reserve banks can become gorged with Government securities with long maturities and consequently can become very illiquid. Under a properly organized Federal Reserve Board, and with other appropriate administrative machinery, such a provision might be safe enough, but under the system provided in this bill, this section adds another dangerous provision to the Federal Reserve Act.

Section 208 (1) provides the means by which Federal Reserve notes are to be issued against the general assets of the Reserve banks in addition to requiring the 40-percent reserve of gold certificates. If these assets were liquid, this provision would not be objectionable, but since the way it is opened by this bill for admitting all kinds of illiquid paper to the portfolios of the Reserve banks, this section provides the way for converting illiquid assets into legal-tender paper money. This, of course, means inflation and is unsound in principle.

Then the question may be raised as to why the Federal Reserve notes are made legal tender for all purposes? When a money is legal tender for all purposes it can be used to pay all debts, public and private. This means, literally, that these notes could be used for lawful reserves and could be used to redeem any other currency. Is it intended that these notes shall be lawful money for reserve purposes, thus converting a liability into an asset? This, of course, is not a rational procedure, and yet this is what lines 22 and 23, page 46, really provide.

In contradiction to this, lines 24 and 25 exclude these notes from the lawful money for reserve purposes in the Federal Reserve banks. This means that the Federal Reserve notes are not permitted to fulfill their functions as full legal-tender money. The two provisions are in direct conflict and should make clear the fact that it is irrational to attempt to make Federal Reserve notes full legal tender.

This section provides, in lines 8 to 10, page 47, that the Treasurer of the United States shall cancel and retire unfit Federal Reserve notes coming from a source other than a Federal Reserve bank, but it does not specify or provide any fund for such retirement. The last sentence of this section, lines 10 to 12, page 48, provides that notes unfit for circulation shall be returned by the Reserve banks to the Comptroller of the Currency for cancelation and destruction. Just why both the Comptroller of the Currency and the Treasurer of the United States should be involved in canceling unfit notes is not clear.

This bill abolishes the 5-percent redemption fund with the Treasurer of the United States. It also permits one Reserve bank to pay out the Reserve notes of other Reserve banks without any penalties, and in this manner one of the factors forcing a retirement of these notes is removed. There appears to be no good reason for repealing either of these prevailing requirements. The omission of the latter requirement merely serves as another means of inviting a looser type of banking. The omission of the redemption fund may be due to careless bill drafting.

Section 208 (2) reveals careless bill drafting in the fact that care was not taken to strike out all words which should be deleted. For example, in the second line following the last deletion the words "or subtreasuries" appear again and are permitted to stand by this repealing section.

Section 209, which permits the Federal Reserve Board to change the reserve requirements of the Reserve banks as they see fit, is a dangerous weapon to put into the hands of a politically dominated Board. The preceding sections of title II of this bill, combined with this section, make it possible for the Board to pack Government securities and other illiquid paper into the portfolios of the Federal Reserve banks until the surplus reserves are exhausted, and then the reserve requirements of member banks can be reduced, thus permitting the Board and banks to proceed with their inflation without let or hindrance. The provision that the reserve required of these banks may be changed "in order to prevent injurious credit expansion or contraction" is merely the statement of a pious hope. It would mean nothing in the hands of a politically controlled Reserve Board.

Section 210, stipulating conditions under which member banks may lend on real estate, flies in the face of all practical experience with such loans by commercial banks. Provisions for such loans should be restricted, not enlarged. To raise the percentage of the value of the property for lending purposes from 50 to 60 percent is unwise, as is the 75-percent provision for loans amortized within 20 years. To raise the limits of such investments from 50 to 60 percent of time and savings deposits and from 25 to 100 percent of the bank's capital and surplus is a brazen denial of the value of our past experiences with such loans.

In lines 13 to 18, page 50, in which the real-estate loans are insured by the provisions of title II of the National Housing Act, all restrictions appear to be removed. The answer to this is that in sound commercial banking the question of the proper type of loans is not one of insurance and ultimate liquidation, but one of maturity and immediate liquidity.

Thus we see in title II of this bill a multitude of illustrations of the dangerous banking philosophy held by the advocates and authors of this bill. It must not be passed. It is extremely dangerous. The conceptions underlying it run counter to the best opinion on central banking. If I may say it in that connection, I would like to remind the committee that 66 of the leading monetary economists of this country—men with established reputations on that particular thing—came out in support of this contention I have just made. I should be glad to submit a list of those people to the committee.

The bill is another, and probably the most brazen, daring, and dangerous, attempt of politically minded planners to increase their destructive and devastating hold on business enterprise in this country. There are no sound defenses that can be offered for the bill. If its advocates insist that they have the welfare of this Nation at heart, let them prove it by submitting the bill to a national commission of experts for analysis.

The authors of this bill would not risk such an analysis. What they want is not better central banking, but more political banking by political planners. They want to build a bigger and better political machine. Professions to the contrary are annihilated by the sections of this bill which provide the means desired by the political planners, and which are in harmony with the immature and muddled notions regarding principles of money and banking expressed from time to time by the chief backers of the type of proposals incorporated in this bill.

No person well trained in the principles of money and banking could examine the theories set forth by the present acting Governor of the Federal Reserve Board in his testimony before the Senate Committee on Finance in its investigation of economic problems in February 1933, without preceiving the dangers in this bill and the dangers in having our Federal Reserve System, as amended by this bill, administered by an official holding such views. In that testimony is revealed a confusion of understanding as to the causal relationship between the currency supply and a sound business recovery; in that testimony the currency is held responsible for conditions which can only be traced properly to the maladjustments created by the World War. There is advocacy of the issue of fiat money, of currency manipulation to raise the price level artificially, and it is even proposed that money be given away. There is revealed an appalling lack of understanding of the nature and consequences of inflation; more inflation is recommended to correct the difficulties caused by inflation. Economic planning is an obsession, and it is proposed to use the Federal Reserve System to make such planning effective.

These disconcerting facts are pointed out, and I say it with all deference, because this bill apparently has been drafted for the purpose of providing the means by which these unsound and dangerous theories of money and of banking and of currency control can be thrust upon the people of this Nation.

If this bill becomes law I believe only the most providential good luck will prevent this country from suffering severely as a consequence.

I firmly believe the best interests of the people of this Nation are served by registering as vigorously as one can his protests and objections to this bill. It was born in secrecy. No known or trusted experts attended its birth. Its parentage is hidden largely in obscurity and anonymity, although the Acting Governor of the Reserve Board, in his Columbus, Ohio, address of February 12, 1935, speaks of what "we propose" in referring to the changes provided by the bill. It reveals traits found in political and economic concepts alien to the best principles of central banking and the best traditions of the people of this Nation. It is an un-American, unsound creation that must never be permitted to find its way into our statute books.

OLD ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH, PITTSBURGH

Mr. MORITZ. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include therein a radio talk delivered by myself.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. MORITZ. Mr. Speaker, under leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD I include the following address, on behalf of Old St. Patrick's Church in Pittsburgh, Pa., which I recently delivered over the radio:

My friends—and I consider you all my friends that are the friends of Father Cox—March 21 of this year was, indeed, a startling and tragic day for Pittsburgh, for it was on this day the church of St. Patrick, known as "Old St. Patrick's Church", burned down. It left its pastor, Reverend Father Cox, stranded. It left, indeed, an empty, gaping space, where once was a temple and edifice of generosity. Old St. Patrick's Church was, indeed, the heart and centerpiece of many humanitarian activities fostered by Father Cox. Just across the street from the church was the activity of "Shanty Town", which served as the happy sheltering place for the down-trodden and ignored members of society. These men are now happily lodged in the old Ralston School, but they still remain under the care and guidance of Father Cox. The parochial school is filled with the children of the slums, cared over and watched by the good Sisters of Mercy.

The old abandoned convent, which was attached to the church and which was utterly destroyed by the fire, proved, indeed, a loss to many homeless young men whom Father Cox permitted to use it as a home. Before the fire, a visitor, who by chance visited the site of old St. Patrick's would necessarily come to the conclusion that surely here was a haven of rest, a refuge for humanity. "This was, indeed", the visitor spontaneously exclaimed, "an island of refuge in a sea of misery." Who was responsible for this outstanding work? I dare say, without Father Cox old St. Patrick's would have been but another church. There would not have been that distinctive mark which characterized old St. Patrick's without his magnanimous personality. His works antedate by years the humanitarian acts of the new deal. Long before the new deal, when society knew little of the depression and nothing of financial adversity, Father Cox fed daily the unfortunate "down and outers", irrespective of creed or race until his finances prevented a continuation of this generosity. A huge deficit of $60,000 forbade him to continue God's work of feeding the hungry.

It was in the year of 1932 Father Cox led the march of 20,000 of the unemployed to Washington to ask for relief and received in answer a stone.

It was this same Father Cox who called the unemployed together and filled the numerous seats of the University of Pittsburgh Stadium as a protest to the then administration.

It was this same Father Cox who allowed himself to be drafted as a candidate for the Presidency of the United States. Not so much to win the office but to protest the lack of humanitarian efforts.

My friends, we are speaking about rebuilding a church. It was this same old St. Patrick's Church in which many prominent Pittsburghers have been baptized, received their first holy communion, entered into the bonds of matrimony, and, lastly, were buried with the last rites given at the foot of this altar. Is it any wonder that we have sentiment for a church? We have sentiment for any church of any denomination, because it is in church that the people get back to their Creator. Here was work carried on for man. Man, the greatest work of the Creator. To serve the wants of man for man's sake is the highest kind of religion. Man, with all his faults and virtues, after all, whether he be poor or rich, "is a man for all that." As Shakespeare so well expressed it, "What a piece of work is man; how noble in reason; how infinite in faculties; in form and moving, how express and admirable; in action, how like an angel; in apprehension, how like a god."

My dear friends, St. Paul expressed no truer words when he said, in effect, "If I have faith that would move mountains but had not charity, I would be but a tinkling cymbal and a sounding brass." As Christ Himself has said, the greatest commandment, after loving God, is loving our neighbor as well as ourselves. This has been exemplified by Father Cox by word and action ever since the day of his priesthood. Now he stands deserted in the midst of charred bricks and ruins, and the same generosity his big heart has shown he fails to receive from his friends.

Somewhere and somehow there necessarily must be an evening-up of returns on his dividends of charity, but I regret to say the dividends are slow in coming. The returns and the success for the rebuilding of old St. Patrick's Church look anything but cheerful. The words of Christ are surely appropriate when only 1 of the 10 lepers returned to thank him. Christ said, "were there not 10; where are the other 9?" I ask you where is the huge army of people, including politicians and candidates for many offices, who did not think it beneath their dignity to visit old St. Patrick's Church to procure his support. Where also is that huge army of sick and dejected, heart-broken, and discouraged populace who were granted many interviews and were dismissed with that fine spirit of a new life and renewed courage, which could only come from that sympathetic heart of Father Cox. Just last week I received a letter from a millionaire stating that he did not wish to serve as a member on the committee to rebuild old St. Patrick's Church. I replied that I think Pittsburgh appreciated the fact of his keeping his residence in Pittsburgh, and it is entirely his affair to whom he gives and to whom he refuses, but it strikes me if only 1 percent of the money he invested in art, which has no practical use, would be ample to fill the gap which misfortune thrust upon the slums of Pittsburgh.

My friends, I do not ask you for contributions, I simply ask those of you who have been the beneficiaries of this great "shepherd of the unfortunate" to now arise in ordinary decency and gratitude and come to the aid of one who can never refuse a request, whether it be for God's poor, the wealthy, or the politicians.

I call upon all lodges, unions, societies, and theaters to hold special affairs, called "Old St. Patrick's Nite", for the rebuilding of old St. Patrick's. I call upon the special friends of Father Cox, who might be compared to spokes of a wheel, which spokes meet at the hub, and this hub is Father Cox. He is, without doubt, one of the most popular clergymen in the country, because he works among God's favorite children—the poor and unfortunate.

As I stand afar and look at the bare ruins of the church—high brick walls surrounding a mass of tangled girders—I ask myself, "Is this the church where a few months before the crowds gathered from all over the city and county to worship God? Is this the same place and the same pulpit where Father Cox gave to the congregation and his unseen radio audience his great sermons?"

My friends, how queer it would be for Pittsburgh to be without its St. Patrick's. Then, indeed, would Penn Avenue and Liberty Avenue of the "Strip" be a "desolation of desolation", a slum without a guiding spirit. Pittsburgh must not be without this helping hand and old landmark of charity.

BANKING ACT OF 1935

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 205.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 205

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of H. R. 7617, a bill to provide for the sound, effective, and uninterrupted operation of the banking system, and for other purposes, and all points of order against said bill are hereby waived. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed 15 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the Chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANSLEY].

Mr. Speaker, this rule is for the consideration of the banking bill. It is an open rule providing for 15 hours of general debate. We hope the debate will proceed with expedition and that the Committee will find orators up to 5 or 5:30 o'clock each day, so that general debate can be finished Wednesday or early on Thursday, in order that the consideration of the bill may be completed and the matter come to a final vote this week.

I reserve the balance of my time, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HOLLISTER].

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the Rules Committee for bringing this bill in under an open rule, so that all Members of the House may have an opportunity to suggest any amendments which they may care to offer; also for the granting of reasonably adequate time to discuss the highly important matters which are contained in the proposed legislation. Twice 15 hours would hardly be enough if the Members of the House really cared to go in detail into the many matters which are covered in this three-barreled bill.

A word of explanation here may very well be in order. Title I of the bill deals with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, title II of the bill deals with basic changes in the Federal Reserve System, and title III contains a number of amendments, some minor and some perhaps of more importance to the general banking laws of the country.

In the time given me now I shall not try to discuss particular sections of the bill in detail. I know the distinguished chairman of the committee will take considerable time to explain the bill to the Members of the House minutely, and I beseech the Members of the House to stay on the floor and listen to the chairman so that they may be well apprised of what this bill contains, because the questions of currency, credit, and the general banking system are basic and fundamental to our well-being and are as complicated as any questions which this House will have to consider at this session of the Congress. It is very necessary that all Members of the House should, therefore, apprise themselves of what this bill contains in order that they may ultimately act intelligently when the measure comes to a final vote.

Title I of the bill will not be discussed by me at the present time. There is little objection to it in its present form. The same thing can be said of title III, but sandwiched between titles I and III is title II, which contains a philosophy with respect to our Federal Reserve System which heretofore has not been found in any of the banking legislation which this House has passed.

Most of you know the history of the original inception of the Federal Reserve System. At that time there was no central banking system in this country and had not been since the times of the First and Second Banks of the United States of somewhat unhappy memory. For some strange reason the people of this country have never been able to consider banking questions without dragging in politics at the same time, and the First Bank of the United States, which was put into operation in 1791, was embroiled in politics from its beginning. Its term ran out and was never renewed. The Second Bank of the United States, which went into operation in 1816, died when Andrew Jackson vetoed a renewal of its charter in the thirties, and when its 20-year term ran out in 1836 it also died. I am going into this to point out how unfortunate it has been that politics and banking have been tied together in this country.

Outside of these two United States Banks, there never was a real central banking system of any nature whatsoever in this country except that which was evolved by the banks themselves for their own particular needs, until the passage of the Federal Reserve Act in 1913. This act was the result of long and detailed study by various committees, and particularly the National Monetary Commission, which was appointed as a result of the Aldrich-Vreeland Act passed in 1908.

This committee was assisted very greatly by the National Citizens' League, and a number of the men who know most about the banking system of the country today were experts who assisted the National Citizens' League 25 years ago, when plans for the Federal Reserve Act were first made.

You all know that the Federal Reserve Act was finally passed under Woodrow Wilson. The Democratic Party has taken credit for the passage of the act, and the Republican Party has countered by saying that it drafted the preliminaries for the program.

To me such claims are wholly unimportant. It matters very little to me which party put the Reserve Act into existence. The important thing is whether or not we have a central banking system which is adequate for the banking needs of the country.

Now, a few words as to central banking generally, and do not think that I hold myself up as an expert on these matters. There are few real experts. I wish there were more around here. Most of us who sat morning and afternoon for weeks on the committee working on these problems have assimilated a little knowledge, and perhaps this little we may be able to pass on and may be of some value to Members of the House.

I want to point out that the Federal Reserve System is not a central bank in any sense of the word. It is, however, a central banking system which was evolved as a kind of compromise between those who felt that there should be complete Government control—a central bank of the Nation—and those who felt that any Government connection whatever with the banking system was a mistake.

The Federal Reserve System set up 12 regional banks wherein the banks had majority control. They were the stockholders and could elect two-thirds of the directors, the other one-third to be appointed by the Federal Reserve Board. The Federal Reserve Board was to be named by the President—named for a long term of 12 years, so there could be continuity and as little as possible of political influence brought to bear on the members.

It was felt that the Government should have some influence, should be at least in close advisory connection, so the Secretary of the Treasury was made a member of the Board, and so also was the Comptroller of the Currency, who is appointed for a 5-year term and therefore does not necessarily go out with the President.

In addition, the President was permitted to appoint one of the members of the Federal Reserve Board as the Governor of the Board, and one as Vice Governor. Thus, of the 8 members of the Federal Reserve Board, 6 are appointed for 12-year terms and 2 are Federal officials, and the dominant figure on the Board, the Governor, is also designated by the President. The Board is therefore, to a great extent, under the control of the President.

The Federal Reserve Board did not, however, at the beginning and never has had complete control over the Federal Reserve banks or complete control over the banks which constitute the Federal Reserve System. The Reserve banks are independent in their operations, and the Federal Reserve Board has merely supervisory power, and has also certain particular technical matters under its control.

In the time that I have to discuss this matter under the rule I shall not try to go into great detail on those technical matters where the Federal Reserve Board has its control and where it has not. I do want to point out, and point out as forcefully as I can, the essential changes which this bill tends to bring about in title II, because it is toward title II that I am directing my attention.

Title II gives first to the Federal Reserve Board greater control over the management of various Federal Reserve Banks than it has had in the past. It gives to the Executive somewhat greater control over the Federal Reserve Board itself than the Executive has had in the past. It gives to the Board much greater powers over the operation of Federal Reserve banks and over the whole credit system of the country than the board has had in the past. Those steps may be spelled out in detail, and I shall attempt to do this later when discussing the bill under general debate, pointing out that whereas each step by itself may not be a very radical departure from the existing situation, when you take the cumulative combination of four or five different steps and read them as a whole, you will realize very clearly how much greater Executive control will be placed over the credit resources of the country.

There are, in addition, certain liberalizations with respect to obligations that may be discounted with the Federal Reserve banks by the Federal Reserve member banks, much greater liberalization in the borrowings that the member banks may make from the Federal Reserve banks, and a greater liberalization in the amount of real estate which national banks may carry. While these matters do not bear on the chief objection to title II, which, in my opinion, is the further centralization of governmental control, they are nevertheless worthy of very deep consideration by the Members of this House before adoption.

One of the chief dangers which this bill brings about is the position in which it places the Government in its control over the Federal Reserve Board, of being able to compel the credit resources of this country to be applied to the acquisition of Government obligations. You all know today how many billions of Government obligations are held by Federal Reserve banks and the member banks. A very large proportion are now in the portfolios of the banks; in fact, such a proportion that most bankers dread the situation, most of them feeling that it is unwise and dangerous that the obligations of the Government should be held so generally by banks instead of being distributed among the people.

Let me say here something which is not generally understood, that under a proper credit policy the Government should sell its obligations in the open market, in the same way that private interests sell their obligations. There should be an open, free market by which the savings of the public can be invested in Government securities; in which those who have savings may decide whether they prefer a Government obligation with certain interest rates and with certain taxable provisions eliminated, or prefer to invest in private obligations. If the time ever comes that the Government is in a position to force upon an unwilling lot of buyers its own obligations against their will, then the time has come when the credit of the country is beginning to fall. Most of us know that the financing of continuing Government deficits by fiat money is the road to ruin. By "fiat money" is meant merely the printing of greenbacks, obligations behind which there is nothing but the promise of the Government. When the Government once starts to pump out such obligations and compels individuals to take currency of that nature instead of currency which has something behind it, either the Government is on the road to ruin or its people are, because it means ultimately a partial or total default, to the extent that the value of those obligations goes down and prices go up correspondingly.

If the Government, by compelling buyers to acquire Government obligations which bear interest, which are called "bonds", as distinguished from Government obligations bearing no interest, which are called "greenbacks", forces its promises on its people there is absolutely no difference in the procedure or the result. It is a compulsory process, and it means that the credit of the Government is gone; that the Government may no longer sell its obligations in the open market.

One of the chief objections to this bill is through the open-market provisions by which the Federal Reserve Board is given power to compel Federal Reserve banks to enter into open-market operations on the buying side. When that is once passed, then we have put into the control of the Federal Reserve Board a most dangerous instrument. We have reached the point then where, if sufficient Treasury control is exercised on the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Reserve Board in turn may compel the Federal Reserve banks of the country, which, of course, have the reserves and the excess reserves of the various member banks in their vaults, to keep on buying and buying and buying Government obligations, even though all wise bankers and all careful economists would have served notice long before that the Government might not continue to issue obligations of the nature they are compelling the banks to acquire.

Now, this may seem far-fetched. You probably do not know that in no civilized democratic country today is there a central bank under government control. The Bank of England is frequently mentioned as a fine example of how banking operates in connection with the Government, and there are a great many people who believe that the Bank of England is a governmental bank. It is in no sense that. It is a private institution, under no Government control whatsoever, although admittedly cooperating thoroughly with the Government. It is because of this effectual, free cooperation between the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the governor of the Bank of England that England has been able through so many years to handle its finances as successfully as it has.

No one would resent quicker than the English people an attempt by the Government to exercise domination over the Bank of England. I could go into detail with reference to the central banking systems of the different countries, but let me point out in this connection that the two outstanding countries which today have banks entirely under Government domination are Italy and Russia; Italy, where the set-up is apparently a private one, but where by various edicts the Government has complete control; in Russia, where there is no pretext about its being a private banking system, but where the four banks are entirely controlled and operated by the Government. [Applause.]

A SUMMARY OF THE RELATIONS OF THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT WITH BANKING IN THE UNITED STATES

The Continental Congress chartered the oldest bank in the United States, the Bank of North America, in 1781. The Congress, however, was uncertain of its power to create a bank, so the bank soon obtained a charter from the State of Pennsylvania, so that it might be assured of a legal existence. Robert Morris was the most important factor in the foundation of this bank and the reason for its creation was the dire distress of Washington's army. Financial aid had to be obtained in some way. Pennsylvania repealed the charter in 1785, but after facing the prospect of having the bank move to Delaware, the charter was soon renewed and was periodically renewed until 1863, when the bank entered the national bank system.

The next step which the Federal Government took in the banking field was in the form of the First Bank of the United States. Alexander Hamilton, then Secretary of the Treasury, outlined his plan for a central bank in a report made to the House of Representatives on December 14, 1790. The bill creating the bank followed Hamilton's ideas almost to the letter.

The capital of the bank was to be $10,000,000; that is, 25,000 shares at $400 a share; $8,000,000 worth of shares were to be offered to the public, to be paid for in 2 years. One-fourth of this was to be paid for in specie and one-fourth in Government obligations bearing 6-percent interest. The other $2,000,000 worth of shares were to be taken by the United States and paid for in 10 annual installments at 6-percent interest.

No voting by proxy was allowed so it was practically impossible for foreign-held shares to be voted. Each single share had 1 vote, 3 shares had 2 votes, and so on, but no single shareholder was to have more than 30 votes no matter how many shares he controlled.

Circulating notes might be issued up to the amount of the capital stock, exclusive of deposits. The Secretary of the Treasury was to have power to examine the affairs of the bank at any and all times and might require statements as often as once a week. Private accounts, however, were excepted from these examinations. The notes of the bank were to be receivable for all public dues so long as they were payable in gold and silver coin.

The Treasury was not required to deposit the public moneys with the bank. The bank might sell any part of the public debt of which its capital was composed, but was not to purchase any part of it, nor was the bank to purchase anything which could not be pledged for money loaned and not repaid. The interest on any loan was not to exceed 6 percent.

There was a great deal of doubt in the minds of many as to the constitutionality of the act creating the bank. President Washington was not sure, and asked for the opinions of both Edmund Randolph and Thomas Jefferson. They both held the creation of the bank to be without the constitutional powers of Congress. They could not find that it was "necessary" to carry out any of the powers of the Constitution. Hamilton reviewed their opinions and reached the conclusion that "necessary" meant fitting and proper and that in that sense the bank was "necessary" in order to carry out constitutional powers. These views prevailed on Washington, and he signed the bill in 1791. This gave the bank an exclusive charter for 20 years.

There are few statements of the bank in existence, and it is difficult to ascertain how much, if any, influence the Treasury exercised over the affairs of the bank. It is uncertain how often the Secretary of the Treasury examined the condition of the bank or how often reports were made to him. Only two such reports have been found, which were two of those submitted by Gallatin in connection with the renewal of the bank's charter.

The charter of this first bank was to expire in 1811. There was a great deal of disagreement about whether it should be allowed to expire or be renewed. Henry Clay was one of the strongest opponents to renewal. His argument was based on the fact that war with England was pending, that 15,000 shares of the bank stock were held abroad, principally by Englishmen, and that they would surely gain control. Secretary Gallatin had pointed out years before that no votes could be cast by foreign shares unless the holder was here to vote, but this did not seem to carry much weight and the bank expired in 1811. It was in splendid shape and liquidated at once.

The liquidation of the bank led to a mushroom growth of State banks to finance the War of 1812. By 1814 they had flooded the country with a worthless currency and many of them soon after collapsed. The financial condition of the country was desperate. Even Clay recognized the need of a central bank and favored a bill which would create one. One such bill had passed the House, and a rather different one had passed the Senate when news of the Treaty of Ghent reached Congress. The House then postponed further consideration of the Senate bill and nothing further was done until 1815.

In his speech of December 5, 1815, President Madison recommended a new national central bank to bring about the resumption of specie payments. A bill creating the Second Bank of the United States was reported to the House in January 1816, and it became law in April 1816.

The new bank was capitalized for $35,000,000, four-fifths to be subscribed by private persons and one-fifth by the United States. There were 25 directors, of whom 20 were elected by the shareholders and 5 to be appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate. Foreign stockholders could not vote either in person or by proxy. All notes and deposits were paid in specie. The bank was given a right to issue notes, but heavy penalties were prescribed in the nature of forfeitures if the bank failed to pay any note, obligation, or deposit in specie on demand. The charter was again exclusive and to last 20 years, but this time the bank was to pay $1,500,000 bonus to the Government for the charter. (The specie payments were deemed important, because it was the practice at that time to pay deposits in the notes of the banks of other cities which were usually at a discount below par.) The bank was given the right to issue post notes but only for $100 or more. (Post notes were bank notes payable in the future.) In many ways the charter was merely a copy of that of the first bank.

In the early years of the bank's operation it was badly managed, the stock subscriptions were not paid up, and there was a great deal of trading in the shares before they were paid for. Mr. Langdon Cheves, of South Carolina, became president of the bank in 1819 and saved it from collapse. It then continued to prosper and became a great and respected institution until the Jackson Democrats, the "enemies of privilege", came along and succeeded in destroying it.

In 1829, in Jackson's first annual message to Congress, he recommended that the charter of the bank be not renewed when it expired in 1836. This thought was repeated by him the next year in a message to Congress, but the following year his opposition to the bank had softened greatly. If the bank had not been drawn into politics and made an issue by Henry Clay and his National Republican Party, it is fairly certain that Jackson would have signed a bill for its renewal in 1836. (By this time Henry Clay had become an advocate of the bank.) The bank was made an issue by the National Republicans, and they did their best to force a renewal bill through both Houses of Congress in the early summer of 1832. Their aim was to get President Jackson to veto the bill and by so doing sign his own death warrant in the approaching Presidential election.

The bill came to the President for signature in July 1832. By that time President Jackson's ire had been thoroughly aroused by reason of continued opposition to his wishes in both Houses, the virtual order of Congress, through their refusal to adjourn, that he sign or veto the bill and not kill it by pocket veto, and several banking indiscretions of Mr. Biddle, then the president of the bank. The result was that on July 10, 1832, the bill was vetoed and the message that accompanied the veto was so fiery and demagogic that the National Republicans were greatly encouraged. They felt certain of Mr. Clay's election and the eventual renewal of the bank's charter.

The result, however, was quite the opposite, and President Jackson was returned to power by a tremendous majority. In 1833 he desired to start the withdrawal of Federal funds from the bank. Secretary of the Treasury McLane refused to do so. He was removed by the President and placed in the State Department. William J. Duane was then put at the head of the Treasury. Although he had been opposed to the bank, he looked upon the deposits as a contract with the bank which could not be broken. He was therefore removed and Roger B. Taney succeeded to his place. He finally in 1833 began the removal of Government funds and the bank lost its final connection with the Government.

The bank did not go out of business in 1836, however. It sold more shares to replace those of the Government and obtained a charter from Pennsylvania. It was overcapitalized, however, for the limited territory of Philadelphia and vicinity and found it necessary to lend money on shares of stock. It speculated heavily and finally suspended operations in the panic of 1837. Suspension came again in 1838, and the last time in 1841. The liquidation of the bank took 15 years. All creditors were paid in full, but the shareholders got nothing.

Both the First and Second Banks of the United States became embroiled in politics through no wish or fault of their own, but the result was disastrous each time, and a truly central bank of the United States has never been created since.

From 1836 until the passage of the National Bank Act in 1863 the Federal Government did not in any way concern itself with the banking of the country. In 1861 Mr. Chase, then Secretary of the Treasury, recognized the need of some means to finance the Civil War. He conceived the idea of a uniform national currency backed by the Federal Government and issued on the basis of United States Government bonds. He suggested that Congress pass a banking bill designed to make all of the currency uniform. Perhaps the greatest single motive behind Mr. Chase's bill was the need to have a steady market for United States securities in order to finance the war. Nevertheless, he did recognize the dire need then existing for one uniform currency.

At first there was a great deal of opposition to the new banking system and the bill proposing it was twice defeated in the House of Representatives. Finally, however, the Senate passed such a bill by a bare majority and the House then fell in line. The bill became law on February 25, 1863. Hugh McCullock, formerly of the Indiana State Bank, became Comptroller of the Currency and head of the system. He suggested a great many amendments to the bill, and it was revised and amended as suggested and a supplementary bill passed on June 3, 1864.

The new act set forth a unified banking system for all the States and Territories. It was upon regulations taken from State banks then or previously in existence. Aside from the uniformity of the system, the main features were as follows: All national banks were put under the supervision of the Comptroller of the Currency, an officer of the Treasury Department. Any association of five persons having the necessary amount of capital could organize a bank, never less than $25,000, and such only in small towns. The capital requirements rose with the population of the urban districts in which they were to be established.

The powers of national banks were limited to discounting notes, drafts, bills, and so forth; receiving deposits; trading in exchange, coin, and bullion; loaning money on personal security; and the exclusive issue of circulating notes. Each bank had to deposit a certain number of registered United States bonds with the Secretary of the Treasury whether the bank intended to issue notes or not. Rules and regulations were imposed upon directors and the elections of them. The double liability of shareholders was created except in the case of the Bank of Commerce of New York, the only bank having a "capital of not less than $5,000,000 and a surplus of 20 percent on hand."

Each bank was entitled to receive circulating notes from the Comptroller equal to the par value of the bonds deposited by it, but not exceeding the market value thereof and not exceeding its capital stock actually paid in. Rules and regulations for the redemption and retirement were prescribed. A tax of one-fourth of 1 percent was put on the notes in circulation. Reserve requirements were set forth. Each bank in cities of 500,000 or more inhabitants was to keep a reserve of lawful money equal to 25 percent of its deposits. Other banks were to keep a like reserve of 15 percent, three-fifths of which might consist of balances on deposit in banks approved by the Comptroller in "Reserve" cities. Any Reserve city bank might keep one-half of its reserve as deposits in a "central reserve city", that is, New York, Chicago, or St. Louis.

Interest rates to be charged were to be no higher than those allowed by State law. One-tenth of net profits were to be carried to the surplus fund of each bank until the surplus reached 20 percent of the capital. Restrictions were put on the amounts that could be loaned by the banks, and rules and regulations were set forth for reports and examinations of the banks, appointment of receivers, and taxation by States. Any national bank might be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury as a depositary of the public moneys, so long as the legal reserve of 25 percent of Government bonds was maintained.

The new currency caused the greatest opposition to the bill. It did not at first have any effect on driving out the old circulating notes of State banks. The State bank notes were legion in kind and number any they were badly depreciated but they were greatly favored in the localities where they were issued. Secretary Chase saw the necessity of taxing the State notes out of existence but such a tax was not imposed until after he had ceased to be Secretary of the Treasury. In 1865 a 10-percent tax was passed which went into operation in 1866. It was only then that national-bank notes became the accepted and predominant medium of exchange. The rigidity of the new national-bank-note issue was not regarded with favor as against the usual State regulation allowing $2 of notes to be issued against $1 of capital. The national-bank notes could never have gained foothold if the confiscatory tax had not been imposed.

The new National Bank System after once getting started worked well for some time. It weathered the crisis of 1873 with only 11 failures in the entire system during that year. By the year 1876 there had been only 49 national-bank failures since the inception of the system, and for 45 years the system served the country with only slight variations in the law.

One feature of the system, however, which many never felt to be sound was the rigidity of the note-issue structure. There was no method of expanding or contracting the currency as the needs of the community dictated. This feature became quite a political issue and some legislation would have probably resulted if the Spanish-American War had not intervened. The war did intervene, however, and the Government, instead of paying off the bonds then due, which were the basis of the currency, and passing some legislation to establish a more flexible currency, refunded the old debt and left the currency as it had been originally.

It is interesting to note the movements of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Honorable Leslie M. Shaw, as a result of the inflexibility of the country's monetary unit. In 1902, he decided to render the currency elastic by making his own rules and regulations without changing the law. First, he decided that that phrase of the law establishing the security required for the deposit of Government funds as "United States bonds and otherwise" meant "United States bonds or otherwise." This opened the door to the use of State and municipal bonds as security. He later allowed railroad bonds to be used in the same capacity. At the same time he argued that banks well protected with United States bonds as security need not keep the 25-percent cash reserve against Government deposits as the law required. The act of Congress of May 30, 1908, finally repealed that part of the law. He made another ruling that banks designated as depositaries of public money were branches of the Treasury, in order that public funds might be transferred to or from such banks at any time. He made rulings designed to further the movement of gold to this country and he attempted to aid the movement of crops and avert the usual autumnal pinch by withdrawing $60,000,000 from the banks and locking it up in order to release it in the harvest season.

These money movements failed, however, because of speculation, in spite of Secretary Shaw's regulation that there should be no speculation in these activities. The results of these rulings are partially to blame for the panic of 1907. The speculators of Wall Street threw prudence to the winds and "clamored for Treasury relief" whenever their own operations produced tightness in the money market. One author says of Mr. Shaw's actions:

> They were glaring examples of "paternalism in Government" which assumes that the holders of public office know how private business ought to be conducted better than business men themselves, and think that their powers ought to be made commensurate with their superior knowledge.

The panic of 1907 showed conclusively that the banking structure of the country was outmoded and unsuited to business and credit needs. Reform was badly needed and it was clear that it must come from the Federal Government and supply the essentials of what was provided by clearing houses during the panic in granting a means of payment by clearing-house certificates. The result was the Aldrich-Vreeland Act of May 30, 1908, which was notable because it established the National Monetary Commission. The bill also established national currency associations for the issue of currency during the recovery period after the panic; but this measure was purely temporary and had no lasting effect.

The National Monetary Commission headed by Senator Aldrich did a splendid piece of work. Senator Aldrich himself carried on a great deal of the work and an extensive study was made of many topics, especially banking in other countries. Following the act of 1908 several banking schemes were proposed. Among them was that of Mr. Paul M. Warburg who was a strong advocate of a central bank of the European type. His plan was known as the "United Reserve Bank of the United States." Another plan was the Aldrich bill.

The Aldrich bill had its origin in several sources. Senator Aldrich called a secret meeting at Jekyl Island in December 1910. Henry P. Davison, Paul M. Warburg, Frank A. Vanderlip, and Charles D. Norton were present besides the Senator. This conference lasted 2 weeks and at the end of it a rough draft of the bill the Senator later sponsored was drawn up. A large portion of this draft was the result of Senator Aldrich's studies made under the auspices of the Monetary Commission. The bill in that stage was far from perfect. Senator Aldrich was mainly interested in the administrative and control measures. He favored the idea of a strong central bank but did not perfect the recognized banking principles, and the bill as it stood at that time was rejected by banking experts as worthless. Conferences continued, however, and the bill was studied by experts and changed until the final result was the Aldrich bill, which was presented to the National Monetary Commission in December 1911. Senator Aldrich had called into his conferences the best banking talent, both practical and theoretical, which could be discovered in the country. Among them were J. B. Forgan, A. B. Hepburn, George M. Reynolds, and J. Lawrence Laughlin, in addition to those who had met at Jekyl Island.

During the period between 1908 and 1911 it was conceded by all those connected with banking reform that a program of education would be necessary in order to bring reform legislation to final passage. The result was the formation of the National Citizens League in May 1911. The league was formed by a nonpartisan group of business men throughout the country with J. Lawrence Laughlin, of Chicago, at the head. The purpose was to educate people and not to back any particular legislation unless it was found to be a sound plan best suited to the needs of everyone. As a result it did not endorse the Aldrich bill. On the other hand, it was not hostile to the bill. The league ceased to function actively except in a few sections of the country before the final passage of the Federal Reserve Act in 1913, but it did a great deal of good and its reform education was thorough and lasting.

The National Monetary Commission considered the Aldrich bill extensively with daily hearings and sessions during the month of December 1911. The bill was finally reported to Congress January 8, 1912. But by this time there was a Democratic majority in Congress, and the bill was turned over to the Banking Committees. It was never reported out in the session of 1911–12, and there died a natural death. The strong opposition of bankers and Democrats to the central bank features of the bill were responsible for its final demise.

In 1912 there were many so-called "radicals" in Congress, especially in the House, who were vitally interested in playing politics with the trust issue. In order to appease them in view of the coming election the Banking Committee of the House was divided into two bodies. The main committee under Mr. Pujo, the chairman, carried on an extensive investigation of the Money Trust in New York City. The other part of the committee under Mr. CARTER GLASS was given over to the study of banking legislation. In those days Mr. GLASS was deemed to be rather a novice in the banking field, but his close adviser was Mr. H. Parker Willis, who was quite familiar with the technical phases of the subject.

Although the Aldrich bill was out of the question, there was still a great deal of agitation for banking reform, and the time was fast becoming ripe for the passage of some legislation. In view of this, Mr. GLASS and Mr. Willis called in several experts, among them J. Lawrence Laughlin, who drafted three preliminary bills. The final one, plan D, presented in December 1912, carried many of the essential provisions which eventually became law under the Federal Reserve Act. The first conference with President Wilson was had on December 26, 1912, before he was inaugurated. Another conference was held January 30, 1913. By this time the bill drafted by Representative GLASS and his associates had become fairly definite and it then entered the so-called "political" stage.

President Wilson called a special session of Congress in April of that year, presumably to consider only tariff legislation. The President, however, recognized the importance of new banking legislation and realized that this was the psychological time to bring it up for passage. Therefore a new banking committee was organized in the House and Mr. GLASS became chairman of it. His official appointment as chairman did not come until June 3, 1913, but already a great deal of publicity had been given to his banking bill. The bankers of the country as a group declared war on the legislation in April. This culminated in a conference between the President and some of the important bankers who were leading the opposition. At this conference the President won out over the bankers and succeeded in settling the matter of appointment of members of the central reserve board. The bankers wanted representation on the board while the President desired to appoint the five members who were to make up the board with the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Comptroller of the Currency. The President was successful and the bankers left the conference without representation on the board.

Further opposition to the bill developed all along the line. Secretary of the Treasury MCADOO presented a plan to the President, William Jennings Bryan had his plan, and the New York group who advocated the central bank principles of the old Aldrich bill bitterly opposed the Glass bill. President Wilson appeased Mr. Bryan by making minor concessions in the note-issue power of the Glass measure and disregarded Secretary MCADOO's plan because of impracticability. The Glass bill was finally reported to the House of Representatives.

Extended hearings were then had by the Banking and Currency Committee and all phases of the bill were thoroughly gone over. The committee was, on the whole, in accord with the views of Mr. GLASS and the bill was favorably reported out by the committee and sent to the Democratic caucus for approval. It passed the caucus by an overwhelming vote.

When the Glass bill reached the Senate there was more organized opposition. The Senate formed a Banking Committee for the first time and gave it the new legislation for consideration. Senator Robert L. Owen was made chairman of the committee, and the first thing he did was draft a bill of his own. This put three bills in the field for President Wilson to consider; that is, the Owen, the McAdoo, and the Glass bills. The President again endorsed the Glass measure, already passed by the House. He finally won over Mr. MCADOO and was also able to bring Senator Owen into line. This did not bring the rest of the Senate over to his views, however, and this was accomplished only by a great many personal interviews at the White House with various insurgents and a rising tide of public opinion in favor of the new Federal Reserve Act—the Glass bill. It eventually passed the Senate on December 19, 1913, under the name of the Owen bill, with a few minor changes which were ironed out in a conference between the House and Senate committees, and became law on December 23, 1913.

The act, of course, centralized the banking of the country to a degree which had not been known since the days of the Second Bank of the United States. The country was divided into 12 Reserve districts, with a Reserve bank in 1 of the principal cities of each district. The 12 banks were governed largely by the Federal Reserve Board in Washington. The Board was composed of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency and five members—later six—appointed by the President. Currency was made more elastic in that member banks might get Federal Reserve notes from the Reserve banks upon the deposit of various kinds of paper, certain United States bonds, and gold, rather than through issuing notes only against United States securities with the circulating privilege. The new notes became obligations of the United States. All national banks were compelled to become members of the Reserve System or else surrender their charters. Certain reserves of all member banks were transferred to the Reserve bank. The operations of Reserve banks were carefully prescribed and powers were given to the Federal Reserve Board to determine other operations and policies. The discount rate was made uniform throughout each district, but might vary in different districts, as the bank of each district might determine.

The system, although young and almost untried, was found to be of great service in helping the Government finance the World War. Since the original enactment there have been many amendments to the Reserve Act. Yet none have changed basically the relation of the Federal Reserve Board to the banking system of the country or taken away the autonomy of the individual Federal Reserve banks.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Helderman, Leonard C., National and State Banks, Boston 1931.

Hoggson, Noble Foster, Epochs in American Banking, New York, 1929.

Laughlin, J. Lawrence, The Federal Reserve Act, Its Origins and Problems, New York, 1933.

White, Horace, Money and Banking (fourth edition), New York, 1911.

CENTRAL BANKING SYSTEMS OF VARIOUS FOREIGN COUNTRIES

I. THE BANK OF ENGLAND

Ownership and general function: The Bank of England is a privately owned joint-stock company with approximately 10,000 shareholders. The authorized, issued, and paid-up stock amounts to £14,533,000. The governor and deputy governor are chosen by the directors and the 24 directors are elected by the shareholders who each have one vote so long as they hold more than £500 worth of stock. The governor, deputy governor, and eight directors are elected each year but those retiring may be reelected (governor and deputy governor automatically retire each year but the Honorable Norman H. Montague has been reelected governor since 1920). Directors are chosen from the best bankers and business men of England, and since the governor is elected by seniority, the governors have usually served as directors for 20 years before becoming eligible for election as governor. The bank has 9 branches, 1 in London (besides the main office), and 8 others in the principal cities of England.

The Bank of England is the fiscal agent of the British Government and acts as the Government's banker. When the Government balances are too low to pay the quarterly interest on the British debt the bank makes "deficiency advances", and when the Government revenue is coming in too slowly to keep up with expenditures the bank makes "ways and means advances." The bank also manages any loan operations or issues which the Government desires to make, besides acting as the regular bank of the Government. The bank, however, is not owned by the Government and is in no way subservient to its desires or needs. The bank, besides acting as a State bank, carries on a general banking business and acts as a bank for bankers. There are a few other large banks in England, but there is nothing comparable to the American system.

Currency: Since 1884, with the exception of the years between 1914 and 1928, the Bank of England has had the exclusive right of note issue. Since 1928—the currency and bank-note act of 1928—the bank may issue notes to the extent of £260,000,000 over and above the amounts of gold coin and bullion in the issue department. This amount of currency may be increased by the bank requesting the treasury department to authorize an increase above the £260,000,000. The treasury department may then authorize an increase for 6 months, and this may be increased to 2 years. Beyond that time Parliament must authorize the increase. In 1932 the issue was increased £15,000,000, and stood so until April 1933, when it was reduced to normal.

A credit in the books of the Bank of England has come to be regarded as just as good as so much gold. As a result when an increase of circulating currency is needed, it can be attained by an increase in the balances of the other banks at the Bank of England—the other banks thereby get more cash to be used as the basis of credit. Then balances can be increased by borrowing from the Bank of England, which is generally carried out not by the banks themselves but by their customers from whom they have called in loans. The Bank of England is thus enabled to provide emergency currency with great ease, by means of loans, and so forth, which are used to swell the balances of the other banks, which thus show an increase of the cash at the central bank, which is used as a basis for credit operations.

Reserves, discounts, and so forth: Unlike the Federal Reserve System, no English banks, including the Bank of England, are required to maintain a minimum reserve. The Bank of England maintains, however, a high proportion of cash to liabilities, which is usually around 40 or 50 percent. Other banks do not keep such a high reserve but ordinarily a low one, and multiply credits based ultimately on the Bank of England reserve. Other banks ordinarily do not borrow from the Bank of England but adjust their position through their holdings of banker's bills, treasury bills, and loans to bill brokers and discount houses.

At tax-payment time money flows into the bank as the fiscal agent of the Government. At such times it is said the "market is in the bank" and so merchants and bankers borrow from the bank at the bank rate, which is the official minimum rate, and has been at 2 percent for the past year at least. Ordinarily, however, the market borrows from the bank at the bank rate, or when the bank makes advances on securities, one-half of 1 percent above the bank rate. The Bank of England controls the market by controlling the discount and rediscount rates, which seem to be the same. It is absolutely necessary that the bank have this control over the market, since all the banking of the country is based on the reserves of the bank.

II. LE BANQUE DE FRANCE

Ownership and general functions: The banque is privately owned by approximately 41,000 shareholders. Only the 200 largest of these may vote, and then they have 1 vote for every 5 shares up to 4 votes. They form a general assembly to represent all the shareholders and elect the 15 regents—board of directors. The regents, in turn, place the direct management of the affairs of the banque in a committee of three regents. The French Government exercises some control over the banque by appointing the governor and deputy governor. Besides this power, 3 of the 15 regents must be treasury officials. There are many other banks throughout France, but this one operates over 650 branches and connecting and auxiliary offices throughout France.

The banque is the center of the credit organization of France. It discounts paper directly for clients, but it is, above all, a bank of rediscount for bankers and credit companies. It is the fiscal agent of the Government, holder of the nation's reserves, and general clearing house for all banking business in the nation.

Currency and reserves: The most important function of the banque is the issue and regulation of the nation's paper currency, with the correlative function of maintaining the nation's reserves. The banque has the sole right of note issue in France, and the law provides that the banque shall maintain a 35-percent gold reserve against all engagements. Included, of course, are note issue and "creditor current accounts." An agreement between the Government and the banque removes any limit to the bank's note circulation, except for that placed there by the 35-percent requirement. The banque redeems its notes in gold at sight. The proportion of gold on hand to sight liabilities is now about 80 percent, and the banque's gold now aggregates about 82,000,000,000 francs (as of Financial and Commercial Chronicle, Nov. 24, 1934).

III. THE BANK OF CANADA

Ownership: The Bank of Canada was established by legislation passed at the session of Parliament ending in July 1934. As a result it has not yet begun operations.

Ownership of the bank is to be private. It is now capitalized at $5,000,000, i. e., 100,000 shares at $50 a share. This may be increased from time to time. No more than 50 shares may be held for the benefit of any shareholder, and shareholders must be British subjects ordinarily resident in Canada (including corporations). No chartered banks or directors, officers, or employees thereof may hold stock. The board of seven directors shall be elected from diversified occupations by the shareholders. The governor, deputy governor, and assistant deputy governor are to be appointed for 7 years by the Governor General in Council. After the first term, however, these officials shall be selected by the directors, subject to the approval of the Governor in Council.

The bank is to put its services at the disposal of the Government but is to retain a definite autonomy and is not to be subject to interference with details of its administration.

Note issue and currency: The bank shall be the central bank of issue. At present notes are issued by the Dominion Government—legal tender—and the chartered banks (not legal tender but notes so issued now constitute the greater part of circulation). The bank will take over all the Dominion notes, retire them, and issue in their place its own notes which shall be legal tender. The act creating the Bank of Canada also provides for the gradual reduction of bank notes and eventual extinction of the right of chartered banks to issue them. (At present the chartered banks are permitted to issue notes up to the amount of paid-up capital. A tax of 1 percent per annum is paid on such issue, and there are no legal reserve requirements.) Bank of Canada notes shall be redeemable in gold bullion in minimum quantities of 400 ounces fine.

The purposes of the bank shall be to regulate credit and currency and protect the external value of the national monetary unit. So far as is possible within the scope of monetary action, the bank will attempt to mitigate, by the influence of the monetary unit, the general level of production, trade, prices, and employment. Provision is also made for limited expansion of note issue during crop-moving seasons.

Gold and gold reserves: All gold now held by the Government and by the chartered banks shall be delivered to the bank upon its opening for business. This shall be held as reserve against the legal tender notes and deposit liabilities of the bank, and, indirectly, of the whole banking system.

The act requires a gold reserve of 25 percent to be held against all note and deposit liabilities of the bank. But because of Canada's need of working balances in foreign centers, funds carried in gold form with the Bank of England, Bank for International Settlements, Federal Reserve Bank of New York, and the central bank of any gold standard country may legally constitute reserves.

Discount: The Bank of Canada shall act as the fiscal agent of the Government, and the way is paved for a short-term money market in Canada, thus providing for more economical short-term financial operations of Government bodies.

Although termed a "banker's bank", the bank is empowered to deal with individuals to a limited extent in exchange or discounting. It may effect trade acceptances, banker's acceptances, and drafts and bills of exchange drawn in or on places outside of Canada having a maturity of not more than 90 days sight from the acquisition by the bank. The bank may buy, sell, or discount certain securities of the Dominion and the Provinces, short-term securities of the United Kingdom, any British Dominion, the United States, and France. The bank may also buy, sell, or discount bills of exchange and promissory notes endorsed by a chartered bank.

Besides this the chartered banks are given access to central bank credit in a set of provisions which are designed to insure a flow of credit in times of need, as are the elegibility rules under the Federal Reserve Act.

IV. THE RESERVE BANK OF INDIA

The bill creating this bank was passed by the Council of State in February 1934. It is planned on a model of the Bank of England. The bank is not yet operating.

Ownership and management: India is to be divided into five areas, with headquarters at Bombay, Calcutta, Delhi, Madras, and Rangoon.

Ownership will be private. The capital of the bank will be divided into 5 parts and offered for subscription to the residents of the 5 areas. There are to be local boards and one central board. One officer of the Government, without voting power, will sit on the central board. It is assumed, however, that the governor and deputy governor will be appointed by the Governor General of India in Council. The bank will be free from political influence.

Note issue: A sterling standard will probably be established.

The bank shall take over all notes outstanding and retire them, issuing its own in their place. All bank gold coin, gold bullion, silver securities, rupee coin, and rupee securities to the amount of notes then outstanding will be taken over from the Imperial Bank and the Government. So the new bank is taking over an already unified currency system.

The new legislation provides for 40-percent gold and sterling security reserves, but at no time is the gold holding to be less than 400,000,000 rupees in value. With previous sanction of the bank, the Governor General in Council may allow the gold reserves to fall below 40 percent for not exceeding 30 days, renewable for not more than 15 days. Even then the 400,000,000-rupee gold minimum must be retained. To provide ample coverage besides the gold reserves, the Government must transfer to the bank 50 percent coverage.

V. THE CENTRAL BANKS OF RUSSIA

The Russian banking system consists of four distinct central banks and a system of savings banks, all owned and operated by the Government.

A. State Bank of Soviet Russia: This bank is the largest and broadest in scope of all the central banks. It operates 2,500 branches in all parts of the union and employs 25,000 people. It is the primary source of all short-term credit for industry and agriculture and is the fiscal agent of the Government.

Currency and note issue: The unit of legal currency is the chervonets, which is equal to 10 gold rubles. The State bank has the right of issue along with the treasury department. The State bank issues chervontsi—plural of chervonets—and the treasury issues gold rubles, silver coin, and other notes. The treasury department was originally to issue notes in an amount to exceed 50 percent of the State bank issue, but this has since been raised to 100 percent.

No definite reserve is assigned against Treasury notes but the bank holds, as the fiscal agent, reserves in gold, platinum, and stable foreign currency. The minimum reserve for the issue of the State bank currency, however, is 25 percent in gold and precious metals and stable foreign currency.

Banking functions and duties: Because of its control over credit the State bank has the right and it is its duty to keep in touch with all movements of the agencies it supplies with financial support. This includes prescribing the systems of accounts to be kept, checking up on the wage and price scales used, as compared with those prescribed, and following the progress of goods from the manufacturer to the consumer. The bank is really one of the agents of the Government to make sure that the decrees of the Government are carried out. This is made possible by the fact that a large part of the business of the Union is carried on by simply making debit and credit entries on books of the bank in the accounts of the parties to the transaction concerned.

B. Bank for industry and electrification: This bank is the source of long-term credit for industrial and other construction. In carrying this out the bank follows the procedure of the State bank in checking on its debtors at every step. It does not, however, concern itself with manufacture and trade and extends no short-term credit.

The bank has branches but the number is not given.

C. Agricultural bank: This bank has the function of extending long-term credit to agriculture. It is concerned chiefly, however, with the "socialized" forms of agriculture or the large collective farms. It finances all phases of these institutions. It does not extend credit to the individual farmer who is fast being crowded to the wall because of lack of credit facilities.

The agricultural bank is probably located at Moscow and has 69 branches.

D. Cooperative Bank of Russia: This bank has the special task of financing the operations of all cooperative societies. It also finances "workartels" or associations of hand workers and artisans who produce a large supply of consumers' goods and whose place has not yet been taken by large-scale industry.

E. Soviet savings banks: There are 60,000 branches of this Government-owned savings bank. Its chief function is to market the bonds of the Government rather than take the deposits of the people. High rates of interest are paid, however—8 to 9 percent—and the deposits run well over a billion rubles. The capital of savings banks is invested in Government stock and cash holdings are small.

VI. THE REICHSBANK OF GERMANY

Established in 1924 under German laws as part of the Dawes plan. It acts as a central bank of issue and reserve for the German Republic.

Ownership: The Reichsbank is a private institution and independent of governmental influence or control. Nevertheless the president is appointed by the President of the Republic. The Reich also shares in the profits made after at least 10 percent is paid into the legal reserve—until it reaches the amount of the paid-in capital—and after an 8-percent dividend to the shareholders. Of surplus profits then the Reich takes from 75 to 95 percent. The Reich and the bank have no other important relations, except as banker and customer.

Note issue and reserves: The bank has the exclusive right of note issue for 50 years. A 40-percent reserve must be kept against note circulation, of which at least three-quarters must be gold. A 40-percent reserve must also be kept against all demand deposits. This need not be in gold, however, but may consist of demand deposits of the bank in German or foreign banks, checks on other banks, bills of exchange for 30 days or less, and claims arising from collateral loans.

VII. THE BANK OF JAPAN

Ownership: The Bank of Japan (Nippon Ginko) is a joint-stock company organized under the Act of the Bank of Japan in 1882. It has a subscribed capital stock of 60,000,000 yen and in 1930 had 2,316 shareholders.

Note issue: The bank conducts a general banking business and acts as a central bank. It has power to issue notes against any gold and silver specie reserve provided the value of silver shall not exceed one-fourth of the total.

VIII. THE BANK OF ITALY

The Bank of Italy was set up in 1893 as a central bank of issue together with the Bank of Naples and the Bank of Sicily. The bank is a private institution, there being about 11,000 shareholders. The bank is, however, closely connected with the State, it being directly under the supervision of the treasury. The Government shares in the profits to the extent of one-third above the 5 percent to special reserves and 5 percent on capital to shareholders.

By the decrees of May 6, 1926, and December 28, 1930, the bank was given the sole right to issue notes until 1950. It has been issuing notes since then to retire those formerly issued by the Bank of Naples and the Bank of Sicily.

A reserve of 40 percent in gold and foreign currencies convertible in gold must be kept against currency in circulation and all deposits, except treasury deposits.

The bank operates 13 central offices, 78 branches, 45 agencies in Italy and 8 auxiliary offices in the Italian colonies.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. GREENWOOD].

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Speaker, we have in this resolution a rule proposed for the consideration of the banking bill, a wide-open, liberal rule, that allows 15 hours of debate confined to the bill and full freedom of amendment. The Rules Committee felt this was a measure that called for the very widest debate, because the banking business as regulated under this measure and under the previous act is an activity that touches every group of citizens; and many of the phases of the banking law have been tested during the last 2 or 3 years as they have never been tested before. We thought that the widest debate should be provided to give everyone a chance to discuss the bill and to offer any amendments he wished.

The Rules Committee, I think, by experience during this session has learned something about procedure that will be of advantage in the future consideration of measures in the House. During my few years' experience on the Rules Committee it has frequently been the custom for the chairman of a legislative committee with other ranking members to come before the Rules Committee and ask for a restricted rule on the theory that the best procedure by which to handle any bill was to get it through as hurriedly as possible and with as little debate, and sometimes with as little discussion as possible. The Rules Committee has not always been in favor of this procedure; in fact, rarely has there been a time when the Rules Committee was unanimous for the reporting of any kind of so-called "gag rule." In the handling of the recent social-security legislation under a wide-open rule which provided 20 hours of general debate and full freedom of amendment, we saw a bill handled as nearly to the unanimous satisfaction of the House of Representatives as any bill within my experience. Every Member was given an opportunity to discuss the measure and to offer any amendment he wished, and the Ways and Means Committee stayed here on the floor of the House and defended their bill against all amendments. The ultimate result of procedure under that method was that the bill was changed slightly if at all. I think the Banking and Currency Committee, one of the great committees of the House, will be in the same position to defend this bill they are proposing, at the same time allowing the Members full opportunity not only to discuss the bill but to offer any amendments they may wish. It is true some slight change may be made, but I presume that when consideration of the bill is finished it in large measure will be as it comes from the committee.

This is my idea of the way legislation should be handled. I was very much pleased with the way in which the social-security bill was handled by the Ways and Means Committee. As I say, the Committee on Rules, as the result of that experience, learned that probably this method of procedure is the best that can be followed. At least, it meets with the complete and unanimous satisfaction of the Members. So the Committee on Rules has reported a wide-open liberal rule allowing full freedom of discussion and amendment.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman from Indiana 2 additional minutes.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREENWOOD. I yield.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. It is a fact, is it not, that the Committee on Banking and Currency did not ask for a closed rule?

Mr. GREENWOOD. That is true; and I am glad to note this change on the part of legislative committees coming before the Committee on Rules; they ask for more liberal rules and express a willingness to defend their measures, as did the Committee on Banking and Currency when it came before the Committee on Rules.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREENWOOD. I yield.

Mr. STEAGALL. I would remind the gentleman that in times past it has been the practice of this committee to request closed rules; but, as a matter of fact, since the present chairman of this committee took his position as chairman, the Committee on Banking and Currency have not presented a measure which has not been considered under an open rule.

Mr. GREENWOOD. I am willing to concede to the Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency that he came in the spirit of asking for this kind of a rule. The Committee on Rules is very much like other committees of the House; we like to give the kind of a rule sought by the committee appearing before us. I am glad to note the change, however. I must say that the legislative committees are asking for what I think is a more democratic and a more sensible method of handling these various pieces of legislation.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREENWOOD. I yield.

Mr. SWEENEY. Is it not a fact that the rebellion against gag rules has brought about the change?

Mr. GREENWOOD. I think that has had some effect. I would remind the gentleman, however, that at one time last year the Democrats in a caucus required the adoption of a closed rule on a certain piece of legislation; and that was the only rule that was defeated—the one the caucus asked for.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 7 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. CAVICCHIA].

Mr. CAVICCHIA. Mr. Speaker, I want to compliment the Rules Committee for the very liberal rule they have given us, and I also want to compliment the Chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee as well as my colleagues. It is splendid to have a group of men who devote the time that they do to such important legislation as this. Even though we do not agree, we have a high regard for one another.

Like the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HOLLISTER] I am not a banker, nor do I hold any bank stock, so whatever I say concerning this bill has been suggested to me during the 25 or 26 years that I have practiced law and in dealing with financial institutions.

Those of you who have read the bill will wonder whether it is wise to permit banks to grant loans on 60 percent of the appraised value of real estate. National banks today have $2,700,000,000 in real-estate mortgages on a 50-percent appraised basis and many of these mortgages are now considerably over 50 percent due to the drop in value of real estate. It is proposed to make borrowing easier from national banks. If the mortgages that the banks held in 1933, during the bank holiday, were frozen assets and caused some of these banks to close, are we going to put $10,000,000,000 more of time deposits in the form of real-estate mortgages to be lent on more liberal terms than the 50-percent mortgages that the banks now hold?

Heretofore each one of the 12 Reserve banks made their own discount rates. Each of the 12 Reserve banks throughout the United States has a peculiar function because of climate and business conditions, and the requirements are different. Each one has to decide what the discount rate shall be. Are you willing to give all power to the Federal Reserve Board to make rates, to raise or lower them, for all the 12 banks? Is it wise to do that?

Sixty percent of the capital and surplus of the banks, members of the Federal Reserve Board, is today invested in Government bonds.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CAVICCHIA. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. The gentleman has referred to the power to control the rediscount rate. Is it not a fact that there is no difference in the proposed law from the existing law with respect to control of the rediscount rate?

Mr. CAVICCHIA. I may be mistaken; and if so, I should like to be corrected.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. The gentleman is mistaken, and I know he wanted to get only the facts before the Congress.

Mr. CAVICCHIA. If I am mistaken, I take that back; but I understood the bill gives the Federal Reserve Board the power to raise or lower the rediscount rates. See the committee report, on page 8.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Under the present law the Federal Reserve Board has that power, and there is absolutely no change.

Mr. CAVICCHIA. The Board has the power in the present law, but I am told it has not exercised it; leaving the individual Federal Reserve bank to raise or lower the discount rate.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CAVICCHIA. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The gentleman does not mean to say that the Federal Reserve Board, under present operations, can force any Federal Reserve bank to act in unison with all the other Federal Reserve banks with reference to rediscount rates?

Mr. CAVICCHIA. In the open-market operations the Federal Reserve Board becomes the boss of all the 12 banks. It tells the banks what do do and they must do it. I did say that the Federal Reserve Board would be given authority to lower or raise the discount rates for the 12 banks. The gentleman from North Carolina tells me that is not so.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. No; I say the Federal Reserve Board has that power at the present time and they have under the proposed act the same power they now have under the existing act.

Mr. CAVICCHIA. I thank the gentleman for his statement.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. There is absolutely no change with respect to the law as applicable to the rediscount rate.

Mr. CAVICCHIA. The open market operation is no more or less than giving power to the Federal Reserve Board to buy Government bonds. Sixty percent of the surplus and capital of those banks is now invested in Government bonds. How much more in the way of holdings of Government bonds do you want to give the banks?

Mr. Speaker, I am afraid the foundation is being laid under title II of this proposed law for another banking holiday that is going to be much worse than the one we had in 1933. If the banks invest $10,000,000,000 of time deposits in mortgage loans of 60 percent of their appraised value, plus the purchase of Government bonds by the billions, most of the Government bonds will be held by the member banks of the Federal Reserve. Two years ago the Government bonds were selling for 85 and 82. Even in times of prosperity I can foresee a bank holiday. If the bond market should improve and industrials become profitable to investors, your Government bonds are going to be unloaded on the market and a drop of 15 or 20 points will wipe out the capital and surplus of your banks and they will close up.

I hope to speak more fully on this question during the debate on this bill.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RANSLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of the time to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, may I pay a little testimonial to the Chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee? Money and financing at best is a very abstruse subject and I suppose its abstruseness is the reason why so many millions of us fail to accumulate very much, but in like proportion banking and currency bills are things that tax the patience of Job and the tolerance of a saint to preside over the deliberations of a committee that has to do with that kind of a subject. We have had no end of witnesses before the committee, ranging from the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board to Dr. Spahr, of New York University, and including Mr. Frank Vanderlip, at one time a reporter on the Chicago Tribune and later president of the National City Bank of New York; Mr. James Rand, of Remington Rand, and a great many others.

Mr. Speaker, sometimes it is very bewildering; after you have listened to all these experts you feel something like an expert yourself. Close attention then becomes necessary and a host of problems present themselves for a solution. I want to say on behalf of the committee that the Chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee has dealt very kindly and courteously with the Members of the minority and has shown a rare and gentle patience.

He has been very deferential to our wishes, firm and yet courteous in his treatment, never resisting or denying at any time full and open opportunity to be heard.

I believe I voice the sentiments of the entire committee, when I pay him my respects and my tribute here this afternoon for the gentlemanly and kindly and efficient and expeditious way in which he has presided over the deliberations on this bill that started on the 21st of February, over 9 weeks ago, and have been continued ever since. [Applause.]

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

THE LATE CLYDE KELLY

Mr. DARROW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. DARROW. Mr. Speaker, it is with deep regret that I announce to the House the death today of our late colleague and friend, Hon. Clyde Kelly, who faithfully and conscientiously served Pennsylvania in Congress for a period of 20 years.

It was shortly after 9 o'clock this morning in Adrian Hospital at Punxsutawney, Pa., that Clyde Kelly received the final summons.

Before entering the public service Mr. Kelly was engaged in newspaper work in Braddock, Pa., where, at the age of 21, he founded the Braddock Leader, and 3 years later purchased the Daily News and Evening Herald.

He served as a member of the State legislature from 1910 to 1913; was elected to the Sixty-third Congress; then to the Sixty-fifth Congress, and continued such service until the conclusion of the Seventy-third Congress.

Mr. Kelly was known to all of us as one of our most painstaking and hardest workers. He will especially be remembered for the deep interest he took in postal matters, and his death will be deeply mourned not only by his former colleagues but by the large host of friends he made, not only in his district and State but throughout the Nation.

Mr. QUINN. Mr. Speaker, death is always shocking, but when it comes with the suddenness of the dash of a wave or the crash of thunder it leaves one appalled, and today when I learned of the death of my predecessor, the Honorable Clyde Kelly, words cannot express my profound regret at his untimely passing.

For 20 years he served as a Member of this honorable body, the Representative of the Thirty-first District of Pennsylvania, the world's greatest industrial center and developed a Nation-wide reputation and countless thousands of admirers by his tireless energy and unselfish devotion to the causes he espoused.

Our political differences and views were as wide apart as the poles, but none can deny and all did admire his courage to stand by his conviction.

Twenty years he served in this House and throughout all that long period he displayed his obligation to the masses of the people and disclosed that feeling by his legislative work. He did not seek to win the approval of the unthinking by unjust attacks on any class. He represented all and gave every legitimate assistance in his power to the things he believed right.

No simple words of mine can pay him adequate tribute. His record of achievement is written high on the roll of honor in the history of the State and Nation he loved and served so well.

We think of the sad might-have-been 'mid our tears, but God knew what was best and took him away from the oncoming years. Peace to his ashes, rest to his soul.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. Speaker, as Chairman of the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads, with which our dear friend Mr. Kelly, of Pennsylvania, became associated many years ago, and speaking for the members of that committee, may I say that in the loss of this distinguished former colleague we feel the country has lost its best informed legislator on postal problems. Author of a number of books on postal policy, publisher of many illuminating and enlightening statements, he was of tremendous value to our committee, as well as to the House, and his contributions to the upbuilding of this great business Department of the Government stands out in the record unsurpassed, in my judgment, during the life of the American Congress.

Mr. Kelly was the father of the air mail. He was extremely interested in the personnel of this Department, concerned with all of its various ramifications and in all the deliberations of the committee a spirit of partisanship was never manifested by him. We respected his great ability, admired his personality. He was studious, energetic, kindly, and lovable—a splendid character, a true friend. The Congress has lost a great counselor, the Post Office personnel a great champion, and his State and the Nation one of its foremost citizens. We Members of the majority feel most keenly this loss, and every member of our committee will join me in extending our sincere sympathy to the members of his family. Clyde Kelly was my friend, and I cannot express the loss I have suffered by his passing.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I suggest the absence of a quorum, and make the point of order there is not a quorum present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently there is not a quorum present.

Mr. ARNOLD. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, when the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 62]

Adair	Dempsey	Kennedy, Md.	Rich
Bacon	DeRouen	Kennedy, N. Y.	Rogers, N. H.
Bankhead	Dickstein	Kerr	Sabath
Barden	Disney	Kvale	Sadowski
Beam	Dockweiler	Lambertson	Schuetz
Berlin	Doughton	Lamneck	Schulte
Bloom	Doutrich	Lee, Okla.	Sears
Boehne	Ellenbogen	Lemke	Seger
Brooks	Farley	McClellan	Shannon
Buckley, N. Y.	Fernandez	McCormack	Short
Burdick	Fish	McGroarty	Sisson
Burnham	Flannagan	McMillan	Somers, N. Y.
Cannon, Wis.	Focht	McReynolds	Starnes
Carden, Ky.	Fulmer	McSwain	Sumners, Tex.
Cartwright	Gambrill	Maloney	Tobey
Casey	Granfield	Marcantonio	Tolan
Celler	Greenway	Martin, Mass.	Treadway
Christianson	Greever	Meeks	Underwood
Claiborne	Griswold	Monaghan	Wadsworth
Clark, Idaho	Guyer	Montague	Walter
Clark, N. C.	Haines	Montet	Werner
Cochran	Halleck	Moritz	West
Connery	Hamlin	Nichols	White
Cooley	Hartley	O'Brien	Wilson, La.
Cooper, Ohio	Hennings	Oliver	Wilson, Pa.
Cravens	Higgins, Conn.	O'Malley	Withrow
Crosser, Ohio	Hill, Knute	Perkins	Wood
Crowther	Igoe	Pettengill	Woodruff
Culkin	Imhoff	Peyser
Cummings	Johnson, W. Va.	Polk
Daly	Keller	Randolph

The SPEAKER. Three hundred and nine Members have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

BANKING ACT OF 1935

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7617) to provide for the sound, effective, and uninterrupted operation of the banking system, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, with Mr. WOODRUM in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman and members of the Committee, the bill under consideration has three titles. The first relates to the provisions of the Banking Act of 1933, which provides for the establishment of a corporation to insure bank deposits.

Under the act of 1933 a plan was provided which would insure all deposits up to the amount of $10,000 in full, and afford insurance to the amount of 75 percent of deposits between the amount of $10,000 and $50,000, and insurance of 50 percent of all deposits in excess of $50,000.

The act provided for a fund which is made up of subscriptions to the capital stock of the corporation by the Treasury of the United States in an amount equal to the sum paid into the Treasury by the Federal Reserve banks in lieu of a franchise tax amounting approximately to $150,000,000.

A further sum to be made up by the subscription to capital stock of the corporation by the Federal Reserve banks to an amount equal to one-half of their surplus of approximately $147,000,000.

Additional capital would be obtained by the assessment upon the banks to be absorbed by subscriptions for stock in the corporation based on the total deposits of the banks. The total capital would be about $350,000,000.

That act provided that in case the funds of the corporation were reduced to an amount equal to less than one-quarter of 1 percent of all deposits of participating banks, it would be the duty of the board to assess all participating banks the amount of one-quarter of 1 percent of total deposits to replenish the insurance fund. The corporation was authorized to expand its capital three times by issuing obligations, making a maximum fund of about $1,400,000,000. That act was to become operative on the 1st of July 1934.

Another provision in the act of 1933 established a temporary insurance fund insuring all participating banks to the amount of $2,500, for each individual depositor, to be operative from the 1st day of January 1934 to the 1st day of July 1934. Under the temporary plan the initial capital stock was supplemented by assessments upon all participating banks not to exceed one-half of 1 percent, to be collected in installments.

Under both the permanent and temporary plans provided for in that act, all national banks, and all State member banks of the Federal Reserve System were to be automatically covered into participation in the benefits of the insurance fund.

State nonmember banks were to be insured upon application upon certification of solvency by the duly constituted State authorities and examination by the insurance corporation, showing to the satisfaction of the board that such banks were in solvent condition.

The bill as passed by the Senate contained a provision requiring State nonmember banks to become members of the Federal Reserve System as a condition precedent to participation in the benefits of the insurance fund under the permanent plan. The bill as it passed the House had no such requirement. A compromise in conference was reached which made that requirement effective on the 1st of July 1936.

In 1934 another act was passed, which provided for the continuation of the temporary insurance plan for a period of 1 year, but raising the amount of insurance for each individual depositor to $5,000 and extending until July 1, 1937, an additional year, the time within which nonmember banks should be permitted to remain as members of the Deposit Insurance Corporation fund, after which they should be required to join the Federal Reserve System.

The bill now before the House provides for the permanent continuance of insurance of deposits up to the amount of $5,000 for each individual deposit, and the assessment hereafter, under the new bill to be levied against the participating banks, is to be a fixed, specific assessment of one-eighth of 1 percent upon the total deposits of all participating banks, relieving the banks of the liability to assessment under the permanent mutual plan established in the first act, which would hold the banks liable to respond in amounts equaling one-fourth of 1 percent of the total deposits to replenish the fund in the event it should be reduced to an amount less one-fourth of 1 percent of all the deposits of all participating banks.

Under the bill now before the House nonmember State banks would be admitted to participation in the insurance fund upon terms of equality with national banks, State member banks of the Federal Reserve System, upon application, after a thorough examination by the Board of the Corporation and ascertainment by the Board of the soundness of the capital structure of such bank and that its assets are adequate to enable it to meet all its liabilities. All members of the temporary insurance fund are transferred into the permanent fund by the provision of the bill. The capital of the Corporation under the plan provided in the bill before the House will remain the same as heretofore, except that assessments paid by participating banks are not to become part of the capital stock of the Corporation. The Corporation may issue obligations in three times the amount of its capital. Such obligations shall be fully guaranteed by the Government of the United States. The requirement that State nonmember banks should become members of the Federal Reserve System after the 1st of July 1937 as a condition precedent to membership in the deposit insurance fund has been eliminated by the bill now under consideration.

Mr. BIERMANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. Yes; I yield.

Mr. BIERMANN. In other words, does that mean, if this bill is adopted, that a State bank will hereafter not have to join the Federal Reserve System?

Mr. STEAGALL. That is the provision of the bill now before the House.

Mr. BIERMANN. It will not have to join the Federal Reserve System in order to get the benefit of this insurance?

Mr. STEAGALL. That is correct.

Mr. EDMISTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. EDMISTON. Is there not a time limit within which State banks may become a member?

Mr. STEAGALL. There is no such requirement under this bill.

Mr. DUFFEY of Ohio. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. DUFFEY of Ohio. They will have the privilege to join, will they not, however?

Mr. STEAGALL. Of course, their privilege of membership in the Federal Reserve System will continue. I was about to say in that connection that under this bill provisions for the admission of nonmember banks in the Federal Reserve System have been liberalized, so that the Federal Reserve System may waive requirements embodied in existing law, as to capital and other provisions, before the admission of State nonmember banks into the System.

Mr. ARNOLD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. ARNOLD. Is there anything in this bill that prevents nonmember banks from obtaining full benefits under the Federal deposit insurance law?

Mr. STEAGALL. Not under the bill now before the House.

Mr. ARNOLD. They can stay out of the Federal Reserve System and still get the benefits under the Federal deposit insurance?

Mr. STEAGALL. Absolutely, under the provisions of the bill now under consideration.

Mr. SWEENEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. SWEENEY. Is that irrespective of their capital structure?

Mr. STEAGALL. There is no limit except such as I have indicated.

Mr. ARNOLD. It has just been called to my attention that eventually they will be required to come in. That is what I wanted to get clear in my own mind.

Mr. STEAGALL. Not under the provisions of the bill now before the House.

Mr. ARNOLD. Will this change existing law that will avoid the necessity of them coming in later on?

Mr. STEAGALL. I am not sure that the gentleman's question clearly indicates what he has in mind, but there is in existing law, a provision which would require State nonmember banks to join the Federal Reserve System by the 1st of July 1937 if they are to remain participants in the insurance fund.

Mr. ARNOLD. I understand that.

Mr. STEAGALL. Under the bill submitted to the House and now under consideration, that requirement has been removed.

Mr. ARNOLD. I am very glad to hear that.

Mr. STEAGALL. In that connection let me say I do not care at this time to enter into any extended discussion of this question of membership of nonmember banks in the Federal Reserve System as a condition upon which they may share in the benefits of the insurance fund. I will say in this connection that on three or four different occasions this House expressed itself on that question and in each instance the House voted overwhelmingly in favor of the admission of State nonmember banks into the insurance fund without requirement that they become members of the Federal Reserve System.

It was in deference to that sentiment in the House, as well as the views of members of the Committee on Banking and Currency who felt the same way, that the provision was incorporated in the bill now before you, relieving nonmember banks of that requirement. That matter was fought out as an issue between the two Houses of Congress. Some Members of the Senate at least, were of the opinion that all banks should be required to join the Federal Reserve System, if permitted to share in the benefits of deposit insurance. That view was expressed in the bill as it passed the Senate.

The other view was embodied in the bill that passed the House, and in conference a compromise was reached by which the time for the requirement of membership in the Federal Reserve System on the part of nonmember State banks desiring membership in the deposit fund should be extended to the 1st of July 1936, a period of 3 years; and then last year, when the temporary insurance plan was extended for a year, the same provision as to the requirement of membership in the Federal Reserve System by nonmember State banks was extended another year, giving them until July 1, 1937, within which to join.

Mr. PATMAN. Will the gentleman answer this question: Is it not a fact that Governor Eccles recommended that the existing law remain in regard to requiring State banks to become members of the Federal Reserve System by 1937?

Mr. STEAGALL. It is not.

Mr. PATMAN. He did not recommend it?

Mr. STEAGALL. This is what happened: The bill before the House, as agreed upon by the interdepartmental committee which had part in framing the legislation, made no reference to that question and did not seek to deal with it in any way. The provisions of the bill were designed to accomplish certain changes in existing law, and no change was proposed in that regard. The existing law was simply left undisturbed.

Mr. PATMAN. Did he testify in regard to the particular feature that we are now discussing?

Mr. STEAGALL. I was not present during the entire time that Governor Eccles testified before the committee. I do not think I can answer the gentleman's question specifically because I was away some of the time and not privileged to be present at all the hearings, nor have I had the opportunity of reading all the hearings conducted in my absence. For this reason I should prefer to consult the record to be sure of accuracy.

Mr. PATMAN. It is a fair question, though, to ask the chairman of the committee to state how the committee voted on this proposition.

Mr. STEAGALL. It is my recollection that on the final vote in the committee on which this question was tested out on a motion of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WILLIAMS], there were five voting against the motion. The members of the committee will remember whether I am accurate in my recollection——

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. The gentleman has correctly stated the number of votes in opposition to striking out the provision requiring banks to come into the Federal Reserve System; but I am sure the gentleman, by refreshing his recollection, will remember the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board several times before the committee testified in favor of requiring nonmember State banks to come into the Federal Reserve System. The record is replete with his testimony to this effect.

Mr. STEAGALL. I have not stated that the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board did not express the view that at sometime nonmember State banks should be required to join the Federal Reserve System.

Mr. BEITER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. BEITER. Are there any provisions in this bill guaranteeing 100 percent the deposits of municipalities or school districts?

Mr. STEAGALL. No.

Mr. BEITER. There is no such provision in the bill?

Mr. STEAGALL. No.

Mr. BEITER. And none under the Federal Deposit Insurance Act?

Mr. STEAGALL. The Deposit Insurance Act insures up to $5,000 of each individual deposit.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. COX. I believe the gentleman in his report on this bill states that it would protect about 98½ percent of the entire depositors of the country.

Mr. STEAGALL. The figures seem to disclose that under the plan now proposed deposits would be insured in full covering something like 98 percent of the number of depositors in the country and probably 33⅓ to 40 percent of the total amount of deposits. Fourteen thousand banks are members of the Deposit Insurance Corporation. About 1,100 State nonmember banks are not members of the Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Mr. COLDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield before he passes that point?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. COLDEN. I believe the gentleman stated the bill in its present form would insure about 98 percent of all depositors.

Mr. STEAGALL. Of the number of depositors in full.

Mr. COLDEN. And the gentleman also made the statement that it would insure about only 35 percent of the amount of the deposits.

Mr. STEAGALL. An amount between 33⅓ to 40 percent.

Mr. COLDEN. That would indicate, then, that 2 percent of the depositors own about 60 percent of the deposits.

Mr. STEAGALL. The figures, as I remember them, disclosed that about 800,000 depositors own nearly 60 percent of all bank deposits of the country, and that the total number of depositors is something like 50,000,000.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. SWEENEY. Was the extension of insurance to nonmember banks influenced by the fact that the R. F. C. now owns the capital stock of 5,000 banks, some of which are nonmember banks in cities of less than 5,000 population?

Mr. STEAGALL. I assume that the gentleman has hardly expressed accurately what he desires to say.

Mr. SWEENEY. Approximately 5,000.

Mr. STEAGALL. I understand the gentleman to mean that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation owns a portion of the capital of these banks.

Mr. SWEENEY. The R. F. C. owns the majority of the capital stock of 5,000 banks. I stand on this statement.

Mr. STEAGALL. I am not advised as to that.

Mr. SWEENEY. I want to know whether the committee was influenced by this fact.

Mr. STEAGALL. I may say to the gentleman that the R. F. C. has supplied more than twice the amount of aid to member banks of the Federal Reserve System than it has to the nonmember banks. But this has all been done since the passage of the act for insuring deposits.

I do not care to pursue this discussion, but I think it should be stated that the Chairman of the Board of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, Mr. Crowley, very clearly expressed the view that it would be unwise and destructive to require nonmember banks to become members of the Federal Reserve System before having their deposits insured. I shall refer to an extract from his testimony.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Where was this testimony given?

Mr. STEAGALL. This is his testimony before the Senate subcommittee. At that time he said there were 5,387 banks that could have qualified on June 30 and 2,134 banks that could not. The deposits in these 2,134 banks amount to $502,000,000. This would indicate quite clearly, I think, in reference to these banks referred to by the chairman of the Board of the Deposit Insurance Corporation as being unable to obtain membership in the Federal Reserve System at this time would be forced to close if excluded from the benefits of deposit insurance because of failure to join the Federal Reserve System. If we are to judge the future by the past, 2,134 banks could not be closed automatically without closing a large number of other banks as a result.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Will the gentleman advise the Committee why those banks were not able to qualify for membership in the Federal Reserve System, and will he also state to the Committee that under the bill before the House at this time all capital requirements are waived so that the banks that are undercapitalized may seek admission into the Federal Reserve System?

Mr. STEAGALL. The gentleman's inquiry would involve a discussion that would probably be unwise and certainly unnecessary and unfortunate if we were called upon to name each individual bank listed by the chairman of the Board of the Corporation.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. The gentleman knows that I was not seeking that information.

Mr. STEAGALL. I understand. I have not the information in full, but I may say to the gentleman that the rights of the Federal Reserve System to waive requirements on the part of nonmember banks applying for membership does not relate alone to the fundamental questions of solvency. The desirability of continued operation of a bank in the situation of the applying bank and other inquiries determine the question of admissibility to membership in the Federal Reserve System.

The Federal Reserve bank before admitting any bank into the System looks upon the whole surroundings, the entire portfolio of the applying bank, its capital structure, its management, the community it serves, its competition, whether or not there is a chance for a bank to earn a livelihood in the community, and upon all of these considerations the Federal Reserve bank determines whether or not the connection of a State bank with the Federal Reserve System is a desirable thing for the Federal Reserve System, because the Board of the Federal Reserve bank is not the guardian of the independent nonmember banks of the United States. On the contrary, it is their business and duty to look first as conservative bankers to the best interests of the Reserve bank itself.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. COX. I am wondering if the gentleman's committee was divided on that provision of the bill extending the privilege to nonmember banks of participating in the insurance fund or if they were divided to the extent that it is a controversial matter in this debate?

Mr. STEAGALL. There has never been in the committee of the House any substantial controversy as to the desirability of admitting nonmember banks to the benefits of the deposit-insurance fund.

Mr. COX. I had reference to the gentleman's committee sponsoring the legislation. Was that subject controversial within the committee itself?

Mr. STEAGALL. It has not been heretofore.

Mr. COX. If it is not a controversial matter, it seems to me that we might devote this time—and it is valuable—to a discussion of some other features of the bill, because we are being taken far afield.

Mr. STEAGALL. The gentleman's suggestion is very appropriate.

Mr. COX. I am not criticizing the gentleman. I thought the gentleman desired to pass over that matter, but was led into a full discussion of it. If it is not controversial, we should not spend so much time on it.

Mr. STEAGALL. I have not entered into a full discussion. What I have said arises out of what the gentleman may understand as the situation in the committee, which disclosed the votes in the committee favoring the proposition that we should ultimately require membership in the Federal Reserve System on the part of nonmember banks.

Mr. COX. I was particularly anxious that the gentleman might be privileged to push his argument a little farther on.

Mr. STEAGALL. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. MAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. MAY. The gentleman will recall that when the Federal Reserve System was first organized we had a lot of suits in this country where the Federal Reserve Board undertook to coerce banks to become members of the System. As I understand the gentleman's statement now, this bill provides that the Federal Reserve System may reject their application to become members in the System?

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman yield further? I think if the gentleman will examine the legislation he will find that there is a liberalization in it instead of a restriction.

Mr. STEAGALL. Yes; I have attempted briefly to call attention to the fact that this bill liberalizes the provisions for membership in the Federal Reserve System; but there never was any requirement and could not be any requirement by an act of Congress that required State-chartered nonmember banks to join the Federal Reserve System. The law had a provision which permitted nonmember banks to join upon application and upon meeting certain requirements.

Mr. FIESINGER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. FIESINGER. I want to clarify something that has been said here. The gentleman stated if there was a requirement that the bank should come into the Federal Reserve System about 2,000 nonmember banks would have to fold up.

Mr. STEAGALL. I predicate that statement upon the testimony of Mr. Crowley, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. I have no doubt the statement is correct.

Mr. FIESINGER. It was not on the question of solvency that they would be compelled to close up, but because of conditions imposed by the Federal Reserve System, which did not have anything to do with solvency?

Mr. STEAGALL. I cannot say what the facts are.

Mr. FIESINGER. I should hate to think we had 2,000 banks in this country that were insolvent.

Mr. STEAGALL. That would be one of the questions involved. Of course, we have no way here of knowing how many of those banks would find it difficult at that point; but the testimony of the chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation is to the effect that we have that number of State nonmember banks that are not prepared to join the Federal Reserve System now.

Mr. FIESINGER. I have taken the view that all banks ought to be members of the Federal Reserve System, but I can see now, with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, it is not so necessary to have them belong to the Federal Reserve System.

Mr. STEAGALL. There is another thing I want to bring out. If we were to require State nonmember banks to join the Federal Reserve System, unless we desire to precipitate the difficulties pointed out by Mr. Crowley, of which he has peculiar knowledge, the only prudent thing on the part of those who may desire and who may hold the view that nonmember banks should ultimately be brought into the Federal Reserve System is to approach that task with care and caution and work it out with the knowledge of all the facts and in a way that will accomplish the desired result without risking the destruction of a large number of State banks in the United States. Such an act would be dangerous at this time, and no matter how desirous it may be to have all State banks join the Federal Reserve System, ultimately no one can say now when such a change can be prudently and safely undertaken.

Mr. FIESINGER. One of the reasons I took that view and now take that view is that in the administration of these banks that have been closed up, the national banks and banks that belong to the Federal Reserve have shown results incomparably better than the administration of the State banks. The administration of the State banks has not paid out nearly as well as the national banks, and it is the saving of assets and the depositors' money that I am looking after.

Mr. STEAGALL. I think I must profit by the suggestion of my friend from Georgia and not spend quite so much time on this phase of the discussion, because I see that I am going to consume much more time than I desired.

Mr. MAY. If the gentleman will yield for one further question, which is closely related to the last question, I would like to ask the gentleman whether or not it imposes any additional restrictions on admissions of banks into the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation other than the restrictions put in the act of 1933, which required certain populations in the different towns and, I believe, a capitalization of $50,000 before they could become eligible for such membership. Is there any change in that requirement?

Mr. STEAGALL. The requirement was not so strict as the gentleman states. In the act of 1933 the rule laid down as a test for membership in the Deposit Corporation by a nonmember State bank was solvency, and under that all State banks except 1,100 joined the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Under the existing law these requirements are tightened and solvency alone is not the test, but the bank is required to show a proper, sound capital structure and ability to meet its obligations outside its capital stock. This applies to banks hereafter applying for membership in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Mr. MAY. The gentleman means under the pending bill rather than existing law?

Mr. STEAGALL. Under the pending bill; yes.

Let me leave this phase of the matter for the moment. It will be remembered that the plan to insure bank deposits did not meet with universal favor in the banking world. I shall not review that contest now, although I was engaged in the struggle for quite a number of years before final enactment of the first bill in this House in 1932.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. COX. As I recall, it was through the efforts of the gentleman, extending over a period of 14 or 15 years, that such a result was accomplished, and in my judgment, and I think in the judgment of a majority of the people of the country, this measure has done more than any other bill that has been enacted in the past 3 years to strengthen our banking system and to bring about recovery.

Mr. STEAGALL. I thank the gentleman for his statement and for his kindly reference to me. I may say I have thousands of letters and messages from various sections of the Nation voicing the view he has expressed.

Mr. COX. It was the salvation of the small banks of the country.

Mr. STEAGALL. I want to call attention, not in a controversial spirit but because it has a proper place in the record of these developments, to the fact that the House passed a bank-deposit insurance bill in 1932. It embodied a plan for the insurance of State nonmember banks upon terms of equality with national and member banks and without discrimination against any nonmember bank because of its capital structure or the fact it was not a member of the Federal Reserve System. The gentleman was here and had something to do with the fight at that time in the interest of State nonmember banks in the United States and played an important part, for which he deserves the thanks of his State and the Nation. That bill failed of passage in the Senate.

In 1933 we passed a bill that I had the honor to introduce, which was finally worked out in a compromise of the views of Members representing the two Houses of the Congress. I have explained briefly what that was. I want to read to the Committee a resolution passed by the American Bankers Association at their annual meeting in Chicago in the fall of 1933, following the passage of the banking act of that year:

> The American Bankers Association hereby records its deliberate judgment that the dangers involved in attempting to initiate at the beginning of 1934 the provisions for deposit insurance contained in the Banking Act of 1933 are genuine and serious. It holds that the whole project for deposit insurance embodied in that law should be reconsidered, and it reiterates its conviction that the postponement of the first phase of the project is of first importance.

The resolution called upon the President of the United States not to permit the act to become operative.

Immediately after the assembling of Congress in 1934, during the period in which limited insurance of $2,500 for each depositor was in effect, the bankers, through their representatives, by letter and in person expressed hearty approval of the extension of the plan permanently, limited to the amount of $2,500 for each depositor; but we raised the amount to $5,000 insurance for each depositor under the bill that extended the temporary plan for 1 year. This year the bankers, practically without exception, have declared that the plan for insurance of deposits to the amount of $5,000 for each depositor should be made a permanent law.

Under the temporary plan of insurance deposits of $2,500 each we did not have a single bank failure in the United States of any bank that participated in the insurance fund during that 6-month period of 1934. [Applause.] Down to this hour, a period of nearly 1½ years, 6 months of the time being covered by the first temporary plan and the other period in which we have insurance at $5,000, we have had only 11 bank failures in the United States of banks that belonged to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Six of these failures grew out of defalcations.

Mr. MAY. From the inside.

Mr. STEAGALL. Three of them involved no loss to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. The losses sustained in the others amounted to a little over $300,000 since the enactment of the law, effective the 1st of January 1934.

Deposits in United States banks have increased from seven and one-half billion dollars to $10,000,000,000.

Mr. MAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. MAY. Can the gentleman tell us approximately the number of banks that failed during 18 months preceding the guaranty law?

Mr. STEAGALL. I have not the figures, but we had a wave of bank failures unprecedented in the history of the country. It culminated in the collapse of the whole bank structure in March 1933. Ten thousand banks had gone down in failure over a period of less than 10 years.

The officials of the American Bankers Association assure us that the banks of the country were never in so sound a condition as that which they enjoy at this hour. What of the dire predictions made at the Chicago convention as embodied in the resolution which I have just read? The plain fact is that the experience of these recent years has demonstrated quite clearly that our leaders of the banking world do not possess the infallible wisdom which we have been accustomed to ascribe to them. It is manifest that they are the victims of the same limitations and weaknesses under which the rest of mankind suffers. In any event, whatever else may be said, the resolutions adopted by the Chicago convention last year lend poor support to any contention that our bankers possess the gift of prophecy.

The public will not fail to note that at the first annual meeting of the American Bankers Association, 1 year from the passage of the resolution adopted at Chicago and following the first year of the operation of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, during which period the Nation for the first time experienced relief from the distress and suffering incident to bank failures, there is to be found no official recognition of these happy developments by the Washington convention. It is a source of gratification to all of us that conditions have so improved that our friends, the bankers, seem to have forgotten the resolution adopted in Chicago in 1933. It is even more gratifying to know that a vast majority of the bankers of the Nation appreciate and approve what has been done for the elevation of banking.

In the light of what has transpired it would be folly to expect any system in the future to command public confidence, or to operate successfully without a guaranty upon which citizens may rely for the return of their deposits. The time has come when depositors who appear at the window of a bank will demand to know if the institution has its deposits protected by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

The Nation will never cease to remember the constructive service of Hon. J. F. T. O'Connor, both during the struggle for the enactment of the legislation and as Comptroller of the Currency and member of the Board, who bore the chief responsibility in laying the foundation for the remarkable success with which the act has been administered. Mr. Cummings, the first chairman of the Board and Mr. Crowley, who now serves so efficiently in that capacity, have placed the Nation under an immense debt of gratitude to them.

I want to call attention to that, not in faultfinding, but it is a little remarkable that at the first national meeting of the Banking Association in Washington, 1934—when at the meeting in Chicago they denounced the law and called on the President not to permit it to become operative—at the next meeting at the national convention at Washington—for the first time in a quarter of a century they gathered at the National Capital, after the banks of the country had gone through a period without a bank failure—as I say, they met at Washington and forgot the resolution at Chicago in 1933; they made no mention of what they had done at Chicago.

Mr. MAY. Will the gentleman further yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. MAY. Does the gentleman have any information as to the number of banks out of the 11 he mentioned a while ago that closed up by reason of fear or lack of confidence, or was it bad assets?

Mr. STEAGALL. Let me say that no man in a position of responsibility in the banking business or in a Government position need hang his head in shame because of the unsoundness of our banking system or that solvent banks have been forced to close because of the lack of insurance of bank deposits. No solvent bank will be forced to close, nor will bankers refuse legitimate loans because of the fear of runs and withdrawals of deposits.

Mr. SWEENEY. The gentleman stated that there were several thousand bank failures. Does the gentleman know how many of those banks were members of the Federal Reserve System?

Mr. STEAGALL. I have not those figures in my mind—I cannot carry them all in my mind. I will be glad if the gentleman has them to supply them. For the moment, I do not remember those figures.

Mr. FIESINGER. I think about 1,100.

Mr. STEAGALL. I think that is pretty nearly accurate.

Mr. FIESINGER. I think Mr. O'CONNOR said that the other day at a meeting.

Mr. STEAGALL. Let me say this: The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation has been operating at a profit of nearly a million dollars a month for the first year and a half, and the Corporation could pay a substantial dividend on the capital stock if it was desired to do so.

Mr. HEALEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. HEALEY. I would like to have it appear that the depositors in the 11 banks that the gentleman referred to received 100 cents on the dollar of their deposits.

Mr. STEAGALL. That is substantially true.

Mr. MICHENER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. MICHENER. As the gentleman knows, I have agreed with him for a number of years on guaranteed bank deposits. If we had had that, we would not have been where we were, in my judgment; but the gentleman has referred to the lack of stability on the part of banks since we have had this deposit insurance.

Now, as a matter of fact, every bank in the country was closed following the language of the President, and before a bank was permitted to open it must be shown to be a sound bank. Therefore, all of the banks having this insurance have gone through the wringers before they got the insurance, and we started out with banks with sound assets when we insured them. So I do not think we can take a whole lot of credit yet because a bank, if it was opened, should not have failed unless there were defaults, as the gentleman has suggested.

Mr. STEAGALL. The gentleman has called attention to a phase of the matter that has its proper place in this discussion. We could not expect to continue to show such a record as has been made during the first year and a half of the operation of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. If I seem to have exaggerated in my statements it grows out of the fact that what I have undertaken to say is in connection with the dire predictions that were made by the American Bankers Association at their annual meeting in Chicago in 1933.

Mr. MICHENER. The gentleman understands I do not agree with the American Bankers Association.

Mr. STEAGALL. Oh, I am sure of that. I do not mean to criticize the American Bankers Association or the bankers of this country. The bankers have not escaped suffering. I do not think they are worse than the rest of us. I do not desire to say unkind things about our bankers. But I wish Members of Congress and the country could understand that these men in the banking world do not know everything just because they represent big business interests. They make their mistakes just like all the rest of us.

I did not intend to consume so much time on title I of the bill. I have not analyzed all the provisions of title I. I will undertake to supplement what I have stated regarding title I, by some further technical explanation of its provisions.

A nonmember bank may withdraw from the plan as of June 30, 1935, by giving notice to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation within 30 days after the enactment of the bill, and notice to its depositors not less than 20 days before June 30, 1935. Insurance of a State nonmember bank is also terminated on June 30, 1935, unless before enactment of the bill, the bank filed the statement showing its deposits as of October 1, 1934, and paid the assessment as of that date, as required by existing law. A bank's insurance is also terminated as of June 30, 1935, if prior to the enactment of the bill it has permanently discontinued banking operations.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation directors are authorized to terminate the insured status of a bank for continued unsound practices or repeated violations of the law or regulations to which the bank is subject. A statement of such violation must first be given the Comptroller of the Currency in the case of a national or district bank, the State supervisory authorities in the case of a State bank, and also the Federal Reserve Board in the case of a State member bank, for the purpose of securing a correction of such practices or condition. If correction is not made within such period, not exceeding 120 days, as the Comptroller, State authority, or Board, as the case may be, shall require, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation directors, if they determine to proceed further, shall give the bank not less than 30 days' written notice of intention to terminate its insured status, and fix a time and place for hearing. If the bank does not apear, or if the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation directors make a written finding (such written findings to be conclusive) that any ground specified in such notice has been established, the directors "may order that the insured status of the bank be terminated." The Corporation may publish notice of the termination, and the bank must give notice to its depositors in the manner prescribed by the directors.

After such termination, the insured deposits of each depositor in the bank on the date of termination, less subsequent withdrawals, remain insured for 2 years; and during that period the bank must continue to pay assessments like any other insured bank and remains subject to all other duties of an insured bank. However, no additional deposits are insured, and the bank must not advertise or hold itself out as having insured deposits unless it states with equal prominence that deposits received after the date of termination are not insured. When the insured status of a bank is thus terminated, if it is a State member bank the Federal Reserve Board shall terminate its membership in the Federal Reserve System in accordance with the provisions of section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act; and if it is a national bank the Comptroller shall appoint a receiver for the bank (which shall be the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation if the bank is unable to meet demands of its depositors).

Any insured nonmember bank, upon not less than 90 days' written notice to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, may terminate its status as an insured bank, with continued insurance of existing deposits for 2 years as noted above in the case of expulsion.

Assumption of the liabilities of an insured bank by another bank terminates the insured status of such insured bank with like effect as if terminated as above, except that if the insured bank gives its depositors notice of such assumption within 30 days thereafter, in the manner prescribed by regulations of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation directors, the insurance of its deposits completely terminates at the end of 6 months, and all future obligations of the bank to the corporation also terminate. In lieu of the limited power of examination given the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation in the existing section 12–B (y), the bill permits the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation examiners, whenever considered necessary, to examine any State nonmember bank which is insured or seeking insurance, and also any closed insured bank. With the written consent of the Comptroller of the Currency, they may also examine any national or district bank and with such consent from the Federal Reserve Board, any State member bank. In addition to the usual powers of examination, these examiners have power to administer oaths, take and preserve testimony under oath and apply to court officials for subpenas to compel the production or taking of testimony.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation is authorized to publish, in such manner as it may determine, any part of the report of such an examination of an insured bank, except a national or district bank, if such bank fails to comply with the recommendations of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation based on such report of examination, for a period of 120 days after written notice of such recommendations. Not less than 90 days' notice of intention to make such publication must be given.

Insured State nonmember banks, except district banks, are required to make condition reports to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation in such form and at such times as the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation directors may require, and the directors may require publication of these reports. Failure to make or publish such a report within such time, not less than 5 days, as the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation directors may require, subjects a State nonmember bank to a penalty of $100, recoverable by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation for each day of such failure.

Prior written consent of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation is required for an insured bank to consolidate or merge with a noninsured bank, assume liability for the deposits of a noninsured bank, or transfer assets to a noninsured bank in consideration of the assumption of liability for any portion of its deposits. Such consent is also required for an insured State nonmember bank, except a district bank, to reduce the amount or retire any part of its common or preferred stock or capital notes or debentures.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation directors may by regulation require insured banks to protect themselves against insurable losses by carrying burglary, fidelity, and similar insurance; and, if an insured bank fails to comply with such requirements, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation may contract for such protection, adding the cost to the assessment otherwise payable by the bank.

The requirement of existing law that insured banks display a sign indicating the insurance of their deposits is extended to require that they also include such information in advertisements relating to deposits and in forms furnished for use of depositors. A definite penalty of $100, recoverable by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, for each day of violation of this provision, is substituted for a mere authorization to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to impose a penalty not exceeding that amount in its regulations on the subject.

Upon the closing of an insured bank, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation need no longer organize a new bank in all cases, as a means of paying off the insured deposits. It may follow this method, or it may pay off such deposits by transferring them to another insured bank in the same community or by any other procedure adopted by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Directors. The provision is added that if a new bank is organized it must be organized in the same community. However, in certain circumstances, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Directors may change the location of the new bank to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation office or some other place. Obligations guaranteed as to principal and interest by the United States are made eligible investments for such new banks.

Through claim agents the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation may investigate claims for insured deposits, such claim agents having power to administer oaths, take and preserve testimony under oath, and apply to court officials for subpenas to compel the production or taking of testimony. Except as the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation directors may prescribe, neither the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, a new bank, or a bank to which insured deposits have been transferred by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, need recognize a claim to a part of a deposit not appearing on the closed bank's records as partly owned by the claimant, if it would increase the aggregate insured deposits of the closed bank. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation may withhold payment of an insured deposit to the extent necessary to insure payment of a stockholder's liability or any other sums due from a depositor to a closed bank, which are not offset by a claim due from the bank.

Payment of an insured deposit discharges the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, a new bank, or a bank to which the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation has transferred an insured deposit, to the same extent that payment by the closed bank would have relieved the closed bank from liability for the insured deposits; and failure of a depositor to claim an insured deposit within 1 year after the appointment of a receiver for a closed bank bars the depositor's claim for insurance, leaving him merely the claim he would have had against the closed bank's estate if his deposit had not been insured.

The depositor and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, under the bill, will participate proportionately in the dividends from the liquidation of the closed bank, whereas, under existing law, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation receives complete repayment before the depositor begins to receive dividends on the uninsured portion of his deposit.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation need not give bond as receiver of a national or district bank, may appoint agents to assist in such duties, and subject to the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency, may fix the fees and expenses for such liquidation and administration. In order to simplify administration, the Comptroller may relieve the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation from compliance with his receivership regulations.

In the event of a vacancy in the office of the Comptroller of the Currency, the Acting Comptroller is authorized to act on the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Board of Directors in his stead; and in the absence of the Comptroller of the Currency any Deputy Comptroller may, within the limits prescribed by the Comptroller, act as a member of the Corporation's Board of Directors in his stead.

The capital structure of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation is altered by the bill. Instead of consisting of 3 kinds of $100 par value shares, 2 of which types were to be held by the Treasury and the insured banks, respectively, and were to receive 6-percent dividends annually, the stock is to be that subscribed for before enactment of the bill—that is, by the Treasury and the Federal Reserve banks—and is to be no par value. None of the stock is to pay dividends, just as now provided with respect to stock issued to the Federal Reserve banks; and all stock in the Corporation is to be nonvoting. One share is to be issued, or exchanged and reissued, for each $100 of consideration, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation directors are to allocate this consideration to the Corporation's capital or surplus as they deem desirable. Since the insured banks are no longer to own stock in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, provisions for varying the Corporation's capital stock with variations in the insured banks' deposits, or upon the insolvency of insured bank, are eliminated.

The approval of the Secretary of the Treasury is made a prerequisite to the issuance of bonds or other obligations of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the amount of such obligations the Corporation may have outstanding is changed from three times its capital, to three times the amount received in payment of its capital stock and of the first annual assessments of the insured banks. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to deal in the Corporation's obligations as a public-debt transaction, and proceeds of securities sold under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as amended, may be used for such purpose or securities may be issued thereunder for that purpose. Obligations guaranteed as to principal and interest by the United States are made eligible for investment of the Corporation's funds.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation's duty to purchase the assets of banks which closed before its creation is ended; and, similarly, the power of bank receivers to apply to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation for sales of or loans on the assets of closed banks is changed to apply only to receivers of closed insured banks, rather than to receivers of all closed member banks. If the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation is also receiver of the closed bank, the loan or purchase must first be approved by a court of competent jurisdiction.

To avoid threatened loss to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, or to encourage mergers or consolidations, and so forth, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, until July 1, 1936, may lend upon or purchase the assets of any insured bank or guarantee another insured bank against loss by reason of assuming the assets and liabilities of an insured bank. National and district banks or, with the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency, conservators thereof, are given the necessary authority to contract for such loans from or sales to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation is given access to examination and condition reports made to the Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Reserve banks. It may accept reports made by or to State bank supervisory authorities, and it may furnish to the Comptroller, the Federal Reserve banks, or such State authorities, examination, or condition reports made by or to it.

The routine operating expenses of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (excluding payments such as insured deposits, expenses of acting as receiver, actual loans, expenses in running new banks, and so forth) must conform to estimates approved by the Director of the Budget and accounts necessary for this purpose are to be maintained on the books of the Treasury.

This concludes my discussion of title I of the bill, and brings us to a consideration of title II of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. STEAGALL] has expired.

Mr. COX. I trust the gentleman will not ask unanimous consent to conclude his argument on title II, but that he will reserve that for, perhaps, tomorrow. However, if the gentleman wishes to go on, I am sure he can obtain unanimous consent. I think title II is the most important title of the bill, and there should be a better attendance here. I know the gentleman can obtain unanimous consent if he wishes to continue. Would the gentleman wish to continue now?

I am particularly anxious that the gentleman shall discuss title II, but I do not want to see him do so under the disadvantage that he operates under at this particular time. There should be a better attendance.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. O'CONNOR. What was the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

The CHAIRMAN. There is no request pending. The gentleman from Alabama has consumed 1 hour. Does the gentleman desire to prefer a unanimous-consent request to continue further?

Mr. STEAGALL. I think I shall yield the floor at present to other gentlemen and resume my discussion at some future time. [Applause.]

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH].

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, I am very glad to be asked to follow the able Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, a man who has devoted his entire time in this House to the leadership of that important committee, who has made a thorough study of banking; and I am happy to serve with him, although belonging to the other party. He has been fair to the members of the committee. He is big-hearted, kind, cooperative, and I agree with him in most everything except he is a dyed-in-the-wool Democrat and I am an unrepentent Republican. I am sorry he feels compelled to support this measure as an administration measure and to place more power in the hands of the Chief Executive, in defiance of the fundamental principles of his party, of the old Jeffersonian party.

I came here today to listen to the gentleman discuss title II; but unfortunately he did not reach title II. I am expected to answer the gentleman on that particular title. I do not know what my friend the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox] is trying to do, but it is a little embarrassing when you prepare to answer the remarks of the chairman of the committee on title II to have him defer his argument on title II for the time being. So instead of that, I shall spend a few minutes in replying, in a general way, to the radio speech made last night on the state of the Union by the President of the United States, covering most everything, including banking, and omitting nothing except the A. A. A. and the antilynching bill, which is now being attacked in the Senate by the Democratic leadership.

I only do so in a somewhat humorous vein, because there were a few headlights in that speech, according to the New York Times, in which the President is quoted as saying that conditions were vastly better; that people were happier, and practically that the depression had changed into recovery. Such a statement would be humorous if it were not actually so terribly tragic and pathetic out of the mouth of the President.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman must confine his remarks to the banking bill. Under every rule brought into this House as long as I remember there has been a provision in the rule requiring that the remarks must be confined to the bill. I shall object every second to any remarks that the gentleman makes which do not pertain to the Banking Act of 1935.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will proceed in order.

Mr. FISH. Then, Mr. Chairman, I shall have to confine myself not only to title II of the pending bill but to a statement of the finances of the country under the present operation of the Federal Reserve System.

What is the situation? The situation is that the administration has no policy, no policy except to pile debt upon debt, to borrow billions, more billions, and still more billions without any attempt to extinguish the debt or to avoid the inevitable day of reckoning and bankruptcy. If this vicious system of borrowing billions persists we are headed straight for inflation, chaos, ruin, insolvency, and repudiation. In the remarks of President last night he made this statement, "While our present and projected expenditures "——

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order the gentleman cannot read anything on the floor without unanimous consent.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained. The gentleman will proceed in order.

Mr. FISH. I will memorize it. [Laughter.]

He says that we must now consider making provisions for the future, provisions to raise taxes to pay for this wild squandering of money. But when and how does the President propose to levy additional taxes or balance the Budget? This new-deal administration, since it has come into power, has issued about $15,000,000,000 of bonds, including $4,800,000,000 that was just authorized; and it is appealing to the banks to take these bonds and the banks are taking them and other Government securities and Treasury notes that are being continuously issued until today the banks hold in some instances as much as 40 percent—some banks have as much as $200,000,000—of these securities. There are approximately $30,000,000,000 of Government bonds outstanding and about 50 percent are owned by the banks and Federal Reserve System. The banks are terrorized. You did not see any bankers coming here and daring even to denounce title II. They are paralyzed with fear. I do not stand here speaking for the bankers. In my humble opinion there are no more cowardly people in America, although I cannot blame them for being complacent and quiescent. They are scared to death because they know that the Government already controls the banks even in spite of this proposed centralized-bank bill that just places another nail in the coffin and gives the Executive and the Federal Reserve Board just a little bit more power, although they have sufficient power at the present moment to do almost anything they want to banks and bankers. Were the Federal Government in any way to manipulate these bonds through the Treasury Department or Federal Reserve Board, so that they went down 10 points or 15 points, practically every bank in the United States would be ruined and would be forced into bankruptcy automatically. The bankers have got to play ball wtih the administration; and they do not even dare to come here and protest against this mammoth centralized-bank-control bill. If the bill were twice as vicious, if title II were twice as bad, eyen then the bankers would not dare open their mouths. As it is, some of these big banks, like the Chase and the City National, have borrowed $50,000,000 from the R. F. C.; and I am informed that 99 percent of the securities owned by the Federal Reserve Banking System is in Government bonds and notes.

If these bankers want to borrow from the Federal Reserve and their collateral is not quite as good as it should be, if the paper is not quite as sound as it ought to be, the Federal Reserve System can shut right down on them. That is the real danger of placing political control in the Federal Reserve Board and over both money and credit.

I do not go quite as far as some people who say that this bill aims to nationalize the banks, the currency, and credit, and is the first step to socialism and communism. Lenin always said that the first step to communism is the nationalization of banks, credit, and the currency. Certainly this procedure is consistent with other steps of the new-deal administration; it is a direct step toward state socialism and in defiance of every Jeffersonian principle. It is a revolutionary procedure as far as the Federal Reserve System is concerned, which was the creature, the baby, the pet of the real Jeffersonian party under Woodrow Wilson and which has functioned admirably. It should be amended in some respects but in a disinterested manner, not a political way. I am not for control of the Federal Reserve System by the bankers, nor, on the other hand, am I in favor of its control by politics. Some 60 economists recently suggested that there ought to be a committee, a commission, or a board created to give the most intense and disinterested study to title II, in order to revise our entire banking system and put it under fair and disinterested control, not banking control, nor Presidential or political control. I believe that is the attitude of the Republicans. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HOLLISTER], the ranking Member on the Republican side, probably will speak tomorrow on the details of the bill; but I believe I express at least the general sentiments of our objection to title II: That we do not want the control of the banks to be political nor do we want the bankers to control, but we want it in a disinterested group. You can add a disinterested member or two to the Federal Reserve Board, representing business and the economists. It takes so much time for worthwhile intensive study that a small group ought to be studying this question for the next year and then present sound, disinterested recommendations, not political or banking viewpoints, but policies that will improve our banking system and protect the people's money from selfish or political control and abuse.

I would strike out all of title II, but I know it cannot be done, for this is an administration measure. You Democrats, with a 3 to 1 majority, are going through with it regardless of whether it is right or whether it is wrong, because, unfortunately, in the last election, for the best interests of the American people and our American system based upon the initiative of the individual and private profit, unfortunately for you, too, my friends on the Democratic side, you pledged yourselves at a time when popular feeling was in favor of the President that you would uphold him in all things. Now that the time has come for you to deliver, you are going to have to deliver against the interests and wishes of your own constituents, whose feelings and views have been changing for the last 4 months. I know how they feel, for I have been among them and discussed matters with some of these Jeffersonian Democrats. They do not believe in turning more power over to the Chief Executive. I feel sorry for you, for I have nothing but the friendliest of feelings for all of you.

Many of you when you get back home and start explaining will find Jeffersonian Democrats looking for your job on the very ground that you were not sent here to be rubber stamps and defy Jeffersonian principles of government by turning over all legislative powers to the Executive, betraying thereby representative government, reducing Congress to a mere debating society with hardly any other function than to affirm the edicts and orders of the autocrat in the White House.

It would be a different matter if the Budget were balanced and there was confidence in the country. It would be different if we did not have 11,500,000 unemployed and 23,000,000 on the relief rolls. I know that the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR] will not permit me to continue to reply to the President's radio speech under the rules of the House on the pending bill, but certainly that is not an evidence of recovery. That is what I started out to say, but I do not believe I can go any further without a point of order being made, so I will get back to section 2.

What are these banks doing? They are taking most of the bonds the Government is issuing, then with those bonds they either create currency or credit; then they buy more bonds. It is just a vicious circle. The Government gets the money for Government operations and it is diverted from private industry. If there is anything lacking, and I think everyone agrees with that regardless of partisanship, it is confidence, and what we want more than anything else is the restoration of business confidence. As soon as you have business confidence there will be a demand for credit to go into private industry in order to turn the wheels of industry and employ people. But there can be no business confidence as long as the Government insists on controlling and regimentating all business, small and large. But what is happening now? The banks are taking the money and with that money they are buying more bonds. They make a small profit. They may make 2 percent or 3 percent, and take no immediate risk. They load themselves down with all these Government securities and to that extent divert money from private industry which alone can solve the unemployment situation.

Mr. RABAUT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. RABAUT. Does not the gentleman know that the type of speech that he is making now and putting in the RECORD is one of the causes for lack of confidence in the country?

Mr. FISH. We might as well settle that issue right now. I want to know from the gentleman whether it is treason in this country to tell the truth. Does the gentleman mean to say that the American people back home are not entitled to know the facts?

Mr. RABAUT. They know the facts.

Mr. FISH. They know there is no confidence because they are beginning to find out that most of the new-deal policies are unsound. There is only one way to restore business confidence in America and that is by applying sound principles and American principles and stop experimenting at the expense of the people and increasing unemployment.

Mr. RABAUT. The gentleman just took the words right out of my mouth.

Mr. FISH. The gentleman does not want to hear the facts, but the people back home are entitled to them. That has been the whole trouble with this administration. Hundreds of publicity agents, agents paid out of the Treasury of the United States, have been getting out propaganda day and night in the press and over the radio in defense of the new deal, and making out to the people back home that Roosevelt and recovery were synonymous. The facts are beginning to seep through to the people and they are beginning to understand the deplorable situation and to realize in spite of the honey words, fireside chats, and propaganda that there are a million and a half more unemployed than there were a year ago. They are beginning to understand the unsound new-deal policies are retarding recovery and impoverishing the people; yet the gentleman claims the Republican opposition must remain silent or join the "new dealers" in deceiving the people. It is not only the right, but the duty of the opposition to expose the failure of these unsound, unworkable, and socialistic policies. He says, "No; do not say a word. Hush! You will destroy business confidence." No speech of mine or any other Member of Congress will destroy business confidence. Business confidence is destroyed by unsound experiments and not by those who expose their failures. That is the only way to correct them and to eradicate the cause.

All I can say is I am sorry there are not more people in the gentleman's party like Senator Glass, Senator Byrd, Senator Tydings, Bainbridge Colby, Governor Talmadge, and I can mention a lot of others, including Huey Long, but he can speak for himself.

Mr. RABAUT. So can the rest of the party.

Mr. FISH. As Professor Kammerer, of Princeton, said: "I have been trying to find out what the financial policy of the Democratic Party is for the last 2 years, and I have been unable to do it." He says: "It is like trying to nail a custard pie to the wall. It just does not stick."

Now, you come in here with title II of the banking bill which simply rivets upon the banks more tyranny, and places more power in the hands of the President. Today the banks are terrorized; they are fearful of moving one way or the other, either because they are afraid they cannot get a loan from the Federal Reserve banks when necessary, or because through manipulation of the Secretary of the Treasury, Government securities will go so low as to put them out of business and then the Government will own all the banks. If Government bonds or securities dropped 10 percent it would mean virtual bankruptcy for most of the big banks.

No one yet has given us the reasons for granting more control to the Federal Reserve Board and establishing a political control. I had hoped that the chairman would speak on title II. May I ask who wrote title II? Who was the author? Who sponsored it? What are the reasons? Why should the President of the United States be given additional power? Why should the Federal Reserve Board be turned into a political machine? What is the hurry? We do not anticipate another panic at this time. Can we not wait and solve this problem the way it should be solved, for the best interests of all concerned, instead of for political interests? We have already turned over to the President the making of tariff schedules. We have given him the power to regulate money. We have turned over the purse strings of the Congress. Now we propose to say to the President: "Here is full power and control over the banks, currency, credit, and the wealth of the country", including the people's money, not the Democratic money, not partisan money, but the people's money. This is exactly what title II does.

I would have preferred to have heard the Chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee give his reasons first as to what title II does before trying to answer him. That would be the proper procedure. But the gentleman talked for an hour and did not touch on title II, which is the most controversial part of the bill.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Will the gentleman kindly analyze section 2 for the benefit of the Members?

Mr. FISH. I think title II, as the gentleman probably knows, gives political control, and that is the only part to which I seriously object, to the Federal Reserve Board, which in turn controls the Federal Reserve banks through the governors and the appointment of the governors, and in that way right down to the other banks which deal with the Federal Reserve System. I used the word "President." I might just as well have said the Secretary of the Treasury or the Federal Reserve Board. They are all synonymous. The President has the appointive power and he controls the Treasury; the Treasury controls the Board; they in turn control the Federal Reserve System, and the Federal Reserve System controls the banks, each with a little more power as provided in title II.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I yield to the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Will the gentleman explain to the Committee how the President controls the operations of the Federal Reserve Board and its various functions? The governors are appointed, as the gentleman knows, for a period of 12 years.

Mr. FISH. Yes; but when they resign, and many of them will resign, because of the pension feature of the bill——

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. They have not resigned in the past.

Mr. FISH. And the President has the power of appointment. The President has the appointment of the Governor of the Board and he likewise has the appointment of the members, and may I further point out that this bill provides for a new and more advantageous pension system.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. He appoints the Governor, but the Governor is a member of the Board for 12 years. He can remove him as Governor, but not as a member of the Board.

Mr. FISH. And the Governor of the Board, as I understand it, also controls directly the appointment of the governors of the Federal Reserve banks.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. The gentleman is mistaken about that.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. The gentleman is very much mistaken in that respect.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. The gentleman knows that the governor of each Federal Reserve bank is to be selected by the directors of the bank, with the approval of the Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. FISH. Yes; the Federal Reserve Board has to pass on the appointment, and no one can be appointed without its approval. That is why I am opposed to making a political machine out of the Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. There is a vast difference, and it is not the President.

Mr. FISH. Oh, no; not the President; but, as I said, I was using the President, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board in a synonymous way, because the President appointed the Governor of the Board, and the gentleman knows that as well as I do. We are not going to haggle or quibble about a matter of that kind. This centralized bank bill gives more power to the President. The chairman of the committee admitted it in a public speech the other day, and I had supposed that every member of the committee admitted that fact.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. It does not give more power to the President, because the removal of the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board does not remove him from the Board. He still continues to be a member of the Board, and the only thing the President can do is to change the Governor.

Mr. FISH. He can change the Governor and he appoints every member of the Board. I do not say and I have not stated today that we are taking away legislative powers from Congress in this particular case except so far as it is difficult to rescind legislation or rewrite it over a Presidential veto. What I say is that we are giving more power to the President, to the Treasury Department, and to the Federal Reserve Board to rivet their political control over the banking system and currency and credit, and that it is unwholesome, dangerous, and un-American.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. How are we giving more power to the Treasury Department?

Mr. FISH. Because the Treasury is under the control of the Secretary and he will make recommendations with respect to membership on the Board, or I assume he will make such recommendations, to the President, as he has always done in the past. He already has gigantic powers over floating securities and stabilizing the value of the currency.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. The Secretary of the Treasury has been a member of the Board ever since the Federal Reserve Act was passed.

Mr. FISH. Yes; and I suppose the Secretary of the Secretary of the Treasury will make recommendations to the President as to who is to be on the Board.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. Yes.

Mr. PATMAN. Is it not in the interest of the people that the power to regulate money be in the President, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Congress rather than a few private bankers, as it is under the existing system which we have now and have had for many years?

Mr. FISH. I thought the gentleman realized that that power was supposed to be lodged in the Congress, and that we have delegated it very largely to the President to determine the value of money.

Mr. PATMAN. The gentleman realizes we cannot exercise that power until we have a unified banking system. Two-thirds of the banks now are State banks and Congress cannot exercise the power that the Constitution confers until we have a unified system, and this bill is a step in the direction of a unified banking system.

Mr. FISH. The gentleman and I must differ on that particular issue, although I want an improved banking system. I think the gentleman will find that even the Chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee admits that title II gives added power to the President and the Federal Reserve Board and sets it up as a more or less of a political machine, and probably this is why he did not discuss it this afternoon.

Of course, it takes it away from the bankers, and that may be all right. We are not complaining about that, but we are maintaining that the control should be in disinterested hands.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I am sorry, but I cannot yield, even to a member of the committee, as my time is expiring.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Please let me ask just one question.

Mr. FISH. If the gentleman is so insistent I shall have to succumb.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. How would the gentleman secure a disinterested body in this country to operate the banking system? What would be the gentleman's method of approach to that objective?

Mr. FISH. I tried to make it clear at the beginning of my remarks that I would appoint a committee or commission—and I would be very pleased to have the gentleman from North Carolina on it because he has given much time and a great deal of study to this problem—to revise not only the banking system, but the control of it, and then have the committee come back here with an entirely nonpartisan, disinterested solution, so the control would not either be in the hands of the bankers nor in the hands of the President or any political control. That is exactly what I have in mind.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Who would name such a board?

Mr. FISH. Why should not Congress name it, why should not the resolution come from the Committee on Banking and Currency?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Does the gentleman mean to write the names into the bill?

Mr. FISH. No; there should be one Member of the House, one Member of the Senate, one member representing the banking association, one representing the public—a disinterested group—and one representing the Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Has the gentleman ever made any such suggestion to the Committee on Banking and Currency?

Mr. FISH. I do not know whether I made a direct suggestion to the committee, but I think that it has been done by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HOLLISTER], who is the Republican spokesman of the committee.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. A very able man.

Mr. FISH. Very able and industrious. Now, I am somewhat handicapped this afternoon because my good friend from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR] does not realize the fact that you have to go outside of Washington to see what is going on; to get a picture of what is going on you have to go outside of the city of Washington.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. That is what the President said last night.

Mr. FISH. Precisely. You have to go out to sea on a big yacht so as to understand what the people are doing and thinking about. Of course, Congress is still in Washington, and is still trying to legislate. We are now trying to legislate, but this is the wrong place, the worst place, the President says, to get a view of the country as a whole, in spite of the fact that the whole country is being run from Washington; yet he says he must go fishing or to Hyde Park, a fine Republican town in my district, to think quietly about the country and find out what is actually going on. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee determined to rise; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. WOODRUM, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 7617) to provide for the sound, effective, and uninterrupted operation of the banking system, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution thereon.

STATE ALLOTMENTS UNDER THE COTTON CONTROL ACT

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the House Joint Resolution 258, to provide for certain State allotments under the Cotton Control Act.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Joint resolution to provide for certain State allotments under the Cotton Control Act

Resolved, etc., That section 5 (a) of the act entitled "An act to place the cotton industry on a sound commercial basis, to prevent unfair competition and practices in putting cotton into the channels of interstate and foreign commerce, to provide funds for paying additional benefits under the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and for other purposes", approved April 21, 1934, as amended, is amended by inserting before the period at the end of the first sentence thereof a colon and the following: "Provided further, That no State shall receive an allotment for any crop year beginning with the crop year 1935–36 of less than 4,000 bales of cotton if during any one of the 10 crop years prior to the date of the enactment of this act the production of such States exceeded 5,000 bales."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. SNELL. Reserving the right to object, does the gentleman think that this is really an emergency matter?

Mr. KELLER. Yes; we want to know what the allotments are before we plant.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, if this refers to cotton I would like to know what it is.

Mr. KELLER. When we had the cotton-industry bill up I was permitted to put in an amendment giving Illinois 4,000 bales. That amendment was accepted.

Mr. PATMAN. Has the gentleman consulted the chairman of the committee about this?

Mr. KELLER. Yes, I have; and this was put in the RECORD 10 days ago.

Mr. PATMAN. And he had no objection?

Mr. KELLER. No; none at all.

The resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A motion by Mr. KELLER to reconsider the vote was laid on the table.

YOUR POCKETBOOK AND TRANSPORTATION

Mr. KNUTE HILL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a speech by the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. PIERCE]. delivered over the Notional Broadcasting Co. last Thursday.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. KNUTE HILL. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following radio address of Hon. WALTER M. PIERCE, of Oregon, at Washington, D. C., April 25, 1935:

It is a curious fact that methods of transportation remained practically unchanged from the very dawn of history to almost recent times. In the very shadows of the beginning we find boats propelled by sails, navigating the Mediterranean and the Nile. Early in historic times we find the wheel in use. Only during the last century has the world entered the era of mechanical methods of transporting freight, human beings, and news. When the seat of government was located on the Potomac, the clumsy stagecoach and the riding horse were the only methods in use for bringing to this National Capital from the farms and villages of our country those privileged to visit the scene of national activities. Every community at the birth of this Nation dreamed of having a ditch filled with water, called a "canal" upon which boats could be drawn by horses or mules. Our ancestors thought this the modern method of transporting freight from place to place.

A hundred years ago, when Jackson was President, venturesome men were starting to lay the bands of steel that were destined to bind this Nation together. I am just wondering if those who engaged in transportation by canal or stagecoach did not at that time look with apprehension upon the coming of this new method of transportation. I wonder if men financially interested in those very early enterprises ever sought for some method by which their financial investments could be saved from bankruptcy? As our ancestors progressed in their knowledge in the use of steam and the metals they made possible the building of more efficient railroads, and for a time ruined canal and river transportation.

As time progressed, that group interested in finance, commerce, and industry, grasped the opportunity of capitalizing and manipulating the aggregation of these units of capital, that were necessary to promote, build, and synchronize the railroad transportation of the country. An accurate history of the period marked by railroad development will chronicle shameful doings in the financial world, transactions which have no parallel in our story of economic development. These were the deeds of men who forgot everything else as they struggled to gain control, a complete and ruinous control, of the railroads. These Titans, whose power extended with each mile that rails advanced, exploited the land for the last possible penny. "The public be damned" was the slogan under which they conducted their frenzied grabbings. A bond issued for every railroad tie, capitalization beyond all reason, with often enough, little or no reference to honest investment or income-earning power—these were marked features of railroad operations. Traffic rates were then pegged at levels high enough to cover the cost of operating expenses and to pay dividends upon millions of dollars representing the face value of watered bonds and stocks. With the rising railroad rates, fixed by the monopolists in their effort to get money and still more money, came public rebellion against those rates. That rebellion finally resulted in regulation of the railroads by the United States Government through the establishment of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Just join me for a moment to consider the word "regulation." Whenever you come upon the existence of regulation you come upon the existence of control. And where you find control you find one of three things: Establishment of a monopoly, safeguarding a monopoly, or displacement of a monopoly by a new monopoly. I realize how often I have repeated the word "monopoly", but it is just as well that I did so, because that word denotes the very thing which is today the center of the great transportation controversy—a controversy that involves the contents of our pocketbooks. With the growing manufacture and use of automobiles came the inception and growth of the campaign for better roads. It was a campaign which embodied so much power and which was backed by so great a display of public demand that it was simply irresistible.

The number of men engaged in automotive transportation equals, if it does not exceed, the number of men employed by the railroads. The railroads were and are a natural monopoly. Every firm desiring it could not have its own cars, and transport them over lines of steel, as the originators dreamed they would do a hundred years ago. The highways and waterways are not a natural monopoly; they are open to free competition. Anybody and everybody should be allowed to use them by conforming to reasonable rules and regulations. Such regulations should not govern rates.

The main reason for the difficulties which now face the railroads is not the development of highway transportation. It is to be found in the fact that the railroads were overcapitalized through greed. During the period through which this overcapitalization has been in process they have failed to discard obsolete methods. The sole object of the railroads has been to pay big dividends to the holders of their stocks and bonds. In connection with that fact it must be remembered that the railroads are controlled by the big banks. There are in the United States today approximately 270 railroads, all controlled by about a dozen banking groups, among the leaders of which are J. P. Morgan & Co. and Kuhn-Loeb & Co.

Now, the ears of the Nation's producers, shippers, and consumers are filled with the loudly proclaimed doctrine that unregulated competition between different kinds of transportation is as greatly to be feared by the public as unregulated monopoly. Chief among the prophets who are dinning this doctrine upon the public ear is Mr. Eastman, the Federal Coordinator of Transportation. His name is used for the bill that passed the Senate last week with little consideration and without a roll call. That bill (S. 1629) proposes to place highway transportation within a strait-jacket of regulation that has been designed by those who seek to regain for the railroads some vestige of the monopoly they once enjoyed. We who pay the freight wonder from what banking house this unique doctrine emanated.

Those who shout this dictrine at us would be only too glad if we would forget the time-proven fact that competition is the very life of trade. And they would be equally glad if they would make us forget that to competition may be traced every impulse and desire to improve—every impulse and desire that has led to the commercial and industrial developments which have brought to the United States a distinction among nations.

Now Congress is confronted with proposed legislation to destroy the beneficial effects of competition by regulating through Federal authority all common and contract motor carriers engaged in interstate commerce, all water transportation, and that which is air borne. Legislation pending in Congress requires a certificate of public convenience and necessity for all such carriers as I have indicated. The only exemptions are those individuals or firms which transport their own products in their own vehicles, and these operators are to be standardized by this same infallible Interstate Commerce Commission.

Who is asking for this? It surely is not the shipper. He has now the choice between water, motor, and railroad transportation, depending upon his location. He surely will not be benefited, but most seriously harmed by such regulation. It surely cannot be the consumer who asks this because the natural tendency of unregulated transportation is lowering of costs, and what the consumer desires, above all other things, is low cost for the commodities he consumes. Surely it cannot be the farmer who is desiring this regulation, for he naturally believes in competition; neither can it be the ordinary truckman or busman who is working for hire. The vast majority of them are small operators, owning on the average two trucks or less. They do not want to have the burden of applying for a certificate of public convenience and necessity. They do not wish to be obliged to start and stop at certain hours, at certain stations, be allowed to go only to certain places, and be paid a financial reward to be fixed in Washington. The independent truck owner, above all persons, would object to such regulation if he knew its ultimate effects.

Before going further, let me clear away a misapprehension which exists in the minds of many persons who have read or heard about the rising opposition to the Federal regulation of highway transportation proposed in the measure now before Congress. This measure, known generally as the "Eastman bill", is not a measure which deals with the control of size, weight, and speed of trucks and busses, nor does it concern itself with the effort to see that all such vehicles are equipped to provide the greatest possible safety upon the highways. Those among my listeners who have been led to believe that this bill has as its purpose the increase of convenience and safety on the Nation's highways should know that the measure is directed toward a different goal. Everybody who has voiced opposition to the Eastman bill advocates reasonable and proper regulation of motor vehicles for the purpose of promoting safety and convenience on the highways. Do not, therefore, allow anyone to make you think that the type of regulation proposed by the Eastman bill is anything but the type of regulation that seeks to foster a transportation monopoly which will increase the Nation's transportation bills and will unjustly take money out of our pockets.

The railroads know that enactment of this bill will have the effect of boosting highway transportation rates. And they hope that the boosting of those rates will enable them to regain some of the traffic they have lost, because they bled the traffic for all it would stand during the days when they had a monopoly on transportation.

Let us take a look at this proposed legislation which would so vitally affect all of us, if it were permitted to become a law. The declared purpose of the bill is to "improve the relations between, and coordinate transportation by regulation of motor carriers and other carriers." Use of the words "improve" and "coordinate" in this bill means simply that the measure's purpose is to make the situation in motor transportation just like the situation in railroad transportation. That means that highway transportation rates will be boosted to the same level as railroad rates. Railroads have to charge these rates in order to make any kind of profit in the face of their high interest charges, and other burdens, created as a result of their wild financial orgies of other days. Do you think, for one minute, that the railroads would be fighting tooth and nail for enactment of this Eastman bill if they thought it would have any other effect than to raise rates? They certainly would not.

You can look through the text of this legislative proposal, from one end to the other, and you will not find anything that will give protection against excessive rates to users of highway transportation. You may be able to find something that looks as if it might afford that protection, but if you study the text carefully, you will reach the conviction that the bill is directed toward fixing minimum rates and not toward control of maximum rates.

Every cotton grower and shipper knows that rail rates for transporting cotton were decreased on account of truck competition. Fruit and vegetable growers and shippers well know how the reasonable rates afforded by highway transportation have enabled them to keep their heads above water during the recent troublesome years. Every livestock man knows that at least 40 percent of the livestock shipments in this country today are moving to market by highway transportation.

The National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation estimates that this bill, if enacted by Congress and approved by the President, will result in increased hauling charges to the dairy farmer of between fifty and sixty-eight millions of dollars a year.

It would be necessary to call the roll of virtually all the classes of producers and shippers in the United States, if one were to attempt to cite those which have been aided in these days of economic hardship by the economies and facilities that highway transportation affords. This highway transportation has brought relief from high railroad rates.

Ultimate users and consumers of goods that are transported—and that means you and me—are unable to ascertain what percentage of our living-cost bills must be charged to transportation. That fact keeps us from knowing how much highway transportation has meant to us in dollars and cents.

If the Eastman bill should be enacted, regulating commercial trucking, the next regulatory move would attack those of us who carry our own goods and materials in our own motor vehicles.

It is evident that when the railroads have managed to get the commercial trucks under Government regulation, they will have only begun their move to wipe out the honest competition which motor vehicles provide. No good citizen wants to see that sort of thing happen.

That is what is coming if the banker-controlled railroads have their way and get the Eastman bill enacted. Wall Street bankers, carrying on their books railroad stocks and bonds often listed at three times their actual value, are making a great effort to enact this bill. Since the World War noncompetitive railroad rates have been increased more than 50 percent. Now those who speak for the railroads demand 17 percent additional increase, or a net income of one-half billion dollars more each year. The bankers want their last pound of flesh. Already they have been powerful enough to borrow from our Government $450,000,000 through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and nearly two hundred millions from the Public Works Administration, that custodian of sacred funds supposed to give work to the unemployed.

It is said by those who are deeply read on this subject and have given it much thought that the final solution is governmental ownership and operation of the railroads. If that time ever comes, the crime of all crimes will be committed if these broken-down railroad lines unload on the Government their much depreciated railroad securities at their fictitious values.

Mr. Eastman has said that he wishes to delay Government ownership. If it must come, why try to stop it? It is a false notion that this Government is going to pass out of this so-called "depression" in a few months, or even years, and that prosperity is to reign as it did in the past. We are living in a new era.

Why must our country regard as sacred an investment in railroad securities? Six million farmers invested in lands, horses, and farm wagons, buggies, and harness. They have seen these investments cut in half by the depression. Why is money invested in a railroad bond any more sacred than the investment of a farmer in Oregon or Illinois? It is treated as more sacred for the reason that these holders of bonds are generally closer to the Government and the powers that be than are the owners of isolated farm homes. Their voices, I find, are far more effective in legislative halls. That is the reason they could, without any consideration, pass the Eastman bill through the Senate.

Waterways and highways should be free. Freight rates by water are generally about one-half of what they are by rail. Twelve thousand miles of railroad have been abandoned since 1920, and at least twice as much should be abandoned now. Should the people make good the losses that have come to those who have been unfortunate in these particular investments alone? We want no transportation bureaucracy in this land. This legislation will nullify every sound and accepted navigation policy, and it will make transportation excessively expensive, which will seriously affect any return of prosperity to the masses.

The entire automobile industry pays one and one-quarter billions of dollars in taxes, and the trucking industry pays three hundred and twenty-five millions of this amount. The average commercial truck engaged in interstate hauling today pays $1,875 in taxes and licenses annually, which nearly equals the original cost of the truck. In face of such a contribution to the Public Treasury, why regulate them out of existence for the benefit of New York bankers?

On the Great Lakes, from Lake Erie ports to Lake Superior ports, a distance of 800 miles, the freight rate on coal is from 30 to 40 cents a ton. The railroad rate is $3. The railroad freight rate from Pittsburgh to Memphis on iron is $11.50 a ton; by water it is $4.50. Does anyone believe that if the bankers can succeed in putting over these bills such water rates will be allowed to stand?

The farmers of the Northwest are paying, in freight rates, three times as much as is paid by the wheat farmers for similar distances in the Mississippi Valley where there is water competition. The price demanded by the New York or Wall Street banker is too heavy for this Government to pay. It means the further impoverishment of the country for the benefit of the favored few; it means that one more link will be forged in the chain of slavery with which that group has bound us.

The bill regulating trucks has already passed the Senate, almost without any consideration. The Senate devotes hours and days to discussion of the most trivial subjects, but the regulation of the trucks and motor busses, which will affect not only the many employed in their operation, but also many millions of patrons, drew from that august body only the most casual consideration. The bill is now before the House.

You, whose pocketbooks would be affected if the Eastman bill were to be enacted, are in a position tonight to do something that will mean much to you. Your Representative in Congress is being flooded by telegrams and letters inspired by the bankers and the railroads, calling upon him to help put the Eastman bill on the law books of the Nation.

Your Representative knows there is another side to this whole affair, and he would like to know what you think about it.

Help your Congressman to fight this battle by telegraphing or writing him, telling him you want him to use every means at his command to stop the Eastman bill from becoming the law of this land. With evidence of your support of his action, your Congressman will let members of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, before whom the bill is now pending, know that the people do not want a law that will make it necessary for interstate truck operators to apply to Washington for a certificate of public convenience and necessity before they may operate. Farmers, truck operators, stockmen, business men, write your Congressman to oppose the Eastman bill, S. 1629. Act for your own sake and in the interests of 95 percent of the people before it is too late.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks today on the auto-liability bill, a memorandum prepared by the corporation counsel of the District of Columbia.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

TAKE HAND OF GREED FROM THROATS OF PEOPLE

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD a copy of speech I made on the public-ownership bill.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following address delivered by me at the Public Ownership Conference at the Willard Hotel, Washington, D. C., Monday, February 25, 1935, at a meeting presided over by the Honorable Carl D. Thompson, 127 North Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill., executive secretary of the Public Ownership League of America:

Congress should reassume the privilege of issuing and distributing currency and Government credit and use such privilege for the purpose of paying off entirely the national debt, thereby saving about $1,000,000,000 a year to the taxpayers; refinance all debts of States, counties, road and school districts, and municipalities, and all districts institutions, and projects that are used wholly in the interest of the general welfare, representing public improvements or educational facilities in a way that no interest will have to be paid by these different divisions and organizations for the use of the Government credit for such purposes, thereby reducing the tax burden on farmers, home owners, and others approximately 50 percent.

BLANKET MORTGAGES

The people who own the real estate of this Nation pay taxes on what they owe and not necessarily upon what they own. Banks issue blanket mortgages on all this property in the form of currency and pay no interest for the privilege. These blanket mortgages should be issued in the interest of the people who own the wealth that is used to secure such blanket mortgages.

HOW TO GET PEOPLE INTERESTED IN MONETARY REFORM

You will accomplish absolutely nothing by merely talking about money and monetary reform. People will not pay any attention to you. But if you will show the people how they can get some of this money or benefit by reason of such reform, directly, purely a pocket-book and barrel-head proposition, you can get them interested, and accomplish something.

SUDSIDIZED PRESS

We cannot overlook the power of that part of the press that is controlled by selfish, greedy interests. Many newspapers are at the mercy of the powerful few who control the finances of this Nation. They print what they are told to print. If they do not, they will find themselves in the position of one large newspaper in a great city not so long ago. It failed to get the eight pages of advertising on a certain day in the week that it had always gotten. The advertiser had told the newspaper store to change his policy in which he opposed a certain candidate for office, and he refused. Later this policy was changed, and the advertising was resumed.

Less than 10 days ago in this country, the land of the free and the home of the brave, a newspaper chain that reaches forty or fifty million people every day, was compelled to change its policy in regard to monetary reform, and one of the greatest and most popular columnists, whose views are sound from the standpoint of the people, was put in the dog house so far as this monetary issue is concerned.

I am wondering what the outcome will be. The power of the great means of communication is unlimited, and with this power against you it takes a long time to sell a good cause to the American people.

MORE MONEY NEEDED

A sufficient medium of exchange is very much needed. In 1929, bank clearings in New York City aggregated $500,000,000,000; in 1933, only $157,000,000,000.

Chicago reduced from $36,000,000,000 in 1929 to nine billion in 1933. San Francisco, from eleven billion in 1929 to four billion in 1933. In Detroit, a reduction of from eleven and one-half billion in 1929, to two billion in 1933.

From 1926 to 1929, the demand deposits in banks subject to check averaged $21,000,000,000. In 1933 and 1934 the average was $14,000,000,000. The banks deliberately canceled and destroyed $7,000,000,000 of our circulating medium.

Now, many of us are called radicals and fools because we want to restore $2,000,000,000 of that circulating medium that the banks have destroyed. The same people who criticize us say it is all right for the banks to put credit into circulation, but they don't want the Government to put money into circulation instead.

PROTECT THE FINE JERSEY COW

In other words, they are like the farmer who was purchasing medicine at the drug store. The pharmacist was wrapping up the two bottles, which had been filled in accordance with two prescriptions. The farmer said, "Mark plain them bottles, which is for the wife and which is for the cow. I sure don't want anything to happen to that fine Jersey cow."

Our critics say, "Be careful about who puts the money into circulation. We don't want anything to happen to the great and powerful privilege that a few banks now have to use the credit of the Nation freely."

Although the money that people have to pay with has considerably decreased, and the purchasing power of the dollar has gone up considerably, property values have been destroyed. Interest payments that amounted to $4,000,000,000 in 1929 increased to four and one-half billion dollars in 1933.

PER CAPITA DEBT

Our per capita public debt in 1916 amounted to $11.96. In 1934 it amounted to $213.75. This includes the national debt at $27,000,000,000. It is now $28,000,000,000, and the interest on this debt will amount to over $6 per capita annually. If we pay 3 percent interest on the $28,000,000,000 the Government now owes, in 30 years the American people will have paid $38,000,000,000 in interest alone and will still owe the principal; and in 60 years we will have paid $130,000,000,000 in interest and still owe the principal of $28,000,000,000.

TAKE HAND OF GREED FROM THROATS OF PEOPLE

There is only one way to take this impossible and unfair burden off the American people, ourselves and our children, and that is to take from the throats of the American people the hand of privilege and greed.

There is only one reason why the American people tolerate for one moment the existing idiotic and imbecilic system of issuing and distributing currency and Government credit, and that is because they are not informed and have been misled by the press and newspaper writers, many of whom are bought and paid for.

BROADCASTING COMPANIES COMMENDED

With the proper use of the radio, this stranglehold can be broken and the people given the truth. I commend the broadcasting systems of this Nation for their liberal and generous use of time to speakers who are presenting the other side of questions that are not presented in many of the powerful newspapers of our country.

The people are entitled to the truth, and when they get the truth the country will be safe.

WORLD'S GREATEST RACKET

The world's greatest racket is the abuse of Government credit in the interest of a few.

Four tons of paper money a day is printed at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

Corporations pay no tax on Government bonds and the banks hold $16,000,000,000 of these bonds.

LOST OR DESTROYED MONEY

Today we have about five and a half billion dollars, theoretically, in circulation. That is, presuming that all the money that has ever been issued is still outstanding. That is not taking into consideration the fact that over a period of 75 years or longer much of this money has been lost or destroyed. We know that some of it was destroyed in the Chicago fire. We know that much of it has been lost in shipwrecks. We know that much of it has been burned and lost in other ways, and buried in the ground. Much of it has been hoarded by criminals, even. Often it is discovered that criminals years ago buried money which is just now being discovered. When the old bills, the large ones, were called in several years ago they were being replaced with new ones. About a year ago it was made known that $500,000,000 of that money had never been brought in for redemption. I do not know what the figures are now but there is a very large sum outstanding.

Other countries use our money. Poland and Cuba use our money almost exclusively. Many foreign governments and possessions use our money. Consequently, much of our money is not here at all but is in foreign countries. But theoretically and presumably we have five and one-half billion dollars in circulation.

BANKS HAD $1.75 TO PAY EVERY $100

When all the banks of the country closed in March 1933, the banks had in their vaults about $1.75 to every $100 that they owed their depositors. One dollar and seventy-five cents to every $100. That does not mean that was all the money they had access to, because in the Federal Reserve banks and other banks they had an additional sum, which, however, would not aggregate more than $2 to every $100 that they owed their depositors. Therefore, taking the two, they did not have, or have available, more than $3.75 in money to every $100 that they owed their depositors. You will wonder how they could do business. The reason is that the people do not all call for their money at the same time, no more than all people who are insured by life-insurance companies die at the same time. They were able to do business. But they, with that small amount of money, were doing a business aggregating hundreds of billions of dollars a year. Individual depositors were owed about forty-some-odd billion dollars when all the banks closed, almost $50,000,000,000.

PAY OFF NATIONAL DEBT WITH NEW MONEY

My theory is that you can pay off the National debt of this Government with United States notes—new money—and not disrupt our financial system if you will do it gradually, and at the same time increase the reserve requirements of banks. As it is today, those banks can extend loans amounting to $10, on the average, to every $1 that the bank has in its vault. We can change that. As we put additional money into circulation, we can say that hereafter a bank cannot loan more than $8 to every $1 or $5 to every $1 or $3 to every $1, and finally we can reach that stage, which I hope we will reach some day, where we will have 100 cents in money for every dollar that the banks owe their depositors. In other words, the banks would not be permitted to extend loans when they did not have the money with which to make the loans. They would only be permitted to extend loans when they had actual money to make them.

Under our system, money only represents about 5 to 10 percent of our circulating medium. The remainder is represented by bank credit, which we should control.

CHANGE RESERVE REQUIREMENTS OF BANKS

If you were to issue $20,000,000,000 in money and did not change the reserve requirements for banks, the banks could issue $200,000,000,000 in credit on that. But as you increase the volume of money, if you want a safety valve to prevent undue expansion of the currency, you should change the reserve requirements of the banks at the same time, and, if necessary, take actual money out of circulation. Then, if you need expansion, you can liberalize the reserve requirements and make it easier for credit to be put into circulation. I understand that if you inflate to the extent that there is fear in the minds of the people there will be flight from the dollar to commodities, but none of us hopes to go that far. We expect to have these safety valves along with all these measures so as to protect the people against undue expansion or inflation. There is much said about protecting the people from inflation but too little said about protecting them from deflation.

FAMOUS GOLD RESERVE

We have in the Treasury today $8,000,000,000 in gold. We could pay off our entire national debt and have a safe gold reserve and go back on the gold standard having more gold per dollar than the foreign countries of Europe have ever had to back up their currencies. And we could do this with our present gold supply of $8,000,000,000. We have $2,800,000,000 of gold in the Treasury, which is the Government's profit on revaluation of gold. It is included in the $8,000,000,000 mentioned.

England stayed on the gold standard 100 years with a 10-percent and less gold reserve. On a 40-percent gold standard, we can issue $20,000,000,000. Since we have only $5,500,000,000 in circulation, $14,500,000,000 more may be issued on gold and have a 40-percent reserve. In addition, we have a billion ounces of silver that may be used as a reserve for the issuance of a larger amount.

GOVERNMENT SHOULD TAKE OVER FEDERAL RESERVE BANKS

There are 12 Federal Reserve banks in this Nation. As originally framed, the Federal Reserve law was a good one, and the Federal Reserve banks were intended to serve a useful purpose; but the law has been changed by these so-called "perfecting amendments" until the Federal Reserve Banking System no longer serves the very useful function it was organized to serve. It has failed to extend credit at a time when credit was needed. The Federal Reserve Banking System has almost gone out of business except in the bond-brokerage business and the use of Government credit to buy Government bonds. It has today very few millions of dollars in bills it has purchased or rediscounted for member banks. They do, however, hold $3,500,000,000 in United States Government bonds. I say that it is an idiotic system that we have permitted to grow up. In other words, for the Government to let any banking institution or system on earth use the Government's credit to purchase United States Government bonds and then the Government continue to pay interest on those bonds is not sound business. It is nothing more than if I, having a $3,000 mortgage against my home, give you $3,000 to pay the mortgage, you pay the mortgage and have it transferred to yourself and still expect me to continue paying interest on this liquidated mortgage. This is the situation we are in with regard to the Federal Reserve banks holding United States Government bonds. These bonds were purchased with Government credit and the Government should not continue to pay $40,000,000 a year interest on these bonds while they are being held in this way.

GOVERNMENT CAN ISSUE A SOUND DOLLAR BILL IF IT CAN ISSUE A SOUND DOLLAR BOND

Furthermore, the private banks of the country hold about $13,000,000,000 of Government bonds (not including the $3,500,000,000 held by Federal Reserve banks), and when they collect interest on those bonds they are collecting nothing but a Government subsidy or bonus, and they should never be permitted to collect it. The Government should not issue such bonds. Thomas A. Edison was right when he said that any government that can issue a dollar bond that is good can issue a dollar bill that is good. The only difference is the bond draws interest and the bill does not draw interest. The bill is easier to pay because it does not draw interest, and usually the people who are objecting to paying the debts with this money, under a safe, sound system, are those who are drawing interest on Government bonds which are unnecessary for this Government to issue. We are paying this year nearly $800,000,000 interest on bonds, on which we should not pay one dime. It is useless; it is unnecessary. The Government debt can be paid off and at the same time not have undue expansion of the currency.

FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM PRIVATELY OWNED

Remember that the Federal Reserve Banking System we are talking about is not a Government-owned institution. It is true that the Government has a limited and restricted supervision over those banks through an indirect board that exists here in Washington, but they have 12 banks and 12 boards of directors. These banks are owned by private banks that are member banks. The Government does not own one penny of stock in them. Last year a group of Members of this House made a trip to New York City, and one of the objects of the trip was to go through the Federal Reserve bank.

While we were down in the bank vault, 50 feet below sea level, Governor Harrison was showing us where the gold used to be until, as he said, we took it away from him, and one of the gentlemen from the West said, "You took it away from us first." I asked him where the directors' room was. He stated that it was up on the tenth floor. I told him that was the room I wanted to see. He said, "There is nothing up there to see; but if you want to go up and see, all right." I told him I desired to see that room. We went up there and we found that the directors' room was on the north end of the building. Of course, "directors' room" does not mean anything. So I asked him, "Where is the Federal Reserve agent's room?" He showed us a suite of rooms on the east side and told us that "these are the Federal Reserve agent's rooms. This is his private office." The Federal Reserve agent used these rooms when acting as Federal Reserve agent.

I next asked him, "Where is the office of the chairman of the Board?" We then walked across the hall to the west side, and he told us, "Here is the office of the chairman of the Board and his suite of rooms where all of his stenographers and assistants are employed." It was just like on the other side. I next said, "I want you to explain to me and to these people assembled here why you have two offices for one official." And he is the same person. He is the Federal Reserve agent on the east side and chairman of the Board on the west side. The only difference is when he is Federal Reserve agent he is supposed to represent this great Government of ours. In that capacity he has the privilege of calling up the Bureau of Engraving and Printing here in Washington and have money printed and sent to him. The money will be printed and sent to him in New York City.

REPRESENTS BOTH BANKS AND GOVERNMENT

When that money is sent up there, he does not send the securities down here to deposit for that money; he deposits them up in New York City. When the money comes back, he goes across the hall and becomes chairman of the board. He then represents the member banks of that Federal Reserve district. It is his business to listen to those banks in reference to putting out that money. May I say further that two-thirds of the directors are elected by the banks and only one-third are appointed by the Federal Reserve Board; therefore, they have a balance of power. These Federal Reserve agents acting in their dual capacity I do not think are in position to properly represent the interests and the general welfare of the people of this Nation.

FOUR TONS OF PAPER MONEY DAILY

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing is running every day. They turn out about 4 tons of paper money a day. Each pound contains 500 bills, whether they be dollar bills or $10,000 bills. This money goes out every day to the banks of the country.

The money I propose to issue is no more fiat money or bologna dollars than the money issued every day by the banks of the country. The bankers hold to that "fiat money" view, but they do not stop and explain that the money they handle every day is fiat money, according to their own definition, and that the credit they handle is also fiat credit.

I respectfully submit for your consideration the following:

First. The Federal Reserve banks should be taken over by the Government and operated in the interest of all the people, banks, industry, agriculture, and commerce.

Second. No private corporation, or corporation owned by private corporations, should have the right to issue money.

Third. The Government should issue currency when in need of money instead of tax-exempt, interest-bearing bonds.

Fourth. No additional taxes should be levied as long as we need additional money.

Fifth. Very few of the bankers of the country, even the real good ones, have ever studied or thought anything about this monetary problem.

Sixth. A billion dollars a year can be used by the Government to a better advantage than paying it as interest on Government bonds that may be used as a basis for the issuance of currency.

Seventh. Direct credits should receive the thoughtful consideration of the people.

Eighth. Opposition to any progressive proposal may be expected from those who will be deprived of special privileges, the die-hard, orthodox, hard-money advocates, and the poll-parrot satellites of Wall Street who only repeat what others say and never think for themselves.

Ninth. We need and must have more money as a circulating medium, but we should not issue more Government bonds in order to get it. Money itself is of no value; it is a simple tool desired for the one purpose of making exchanges. Money is no mysterious thing; no mystic principles veil or obscure it; it is a tool for making exchanges, just as a hammer is a tool for driving nails.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to speak for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. The Members of the House may have already noticed that the United States exported to Japan 134,280 bales of cotton less last month. I should like to insert in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks a statement showing the amount of cloth that we have imported from Japan, which shows a great deal of increase in that also.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The statement referred to is as follows:

Imports of piece goods from Japan

MONTH OF MARCH 1935

	Square yards	Value
Unbleached	114,000	$4,000
Bleached	6,219,000	308,000
Printed, dyed, or colored	958,000	67,000
Total for March 1935	7,291,000	379,000

January to March, inclusive

	1935		1934
	Square yards	Value	Square yards	Value
Unbleached	124,000	$5,000	None	None.
Bleached	13,806,000	663,000	342,704	$14,961
Printed, dyed, etc	2,791,000	186,000	107,667	9,936
Total	16,721,000	854,000	450,371	24,897

Above figures from Textile Division, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Exports of raw cotton from United States to Japan

	Bales
	1935	1934
January	149,232	166,800
February	98,026	137,089
March	51,632	129,281
Total	298,890	433,170

Decrease, 134,280 bales.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. These figures show the immediate need for the President and his Cabinet board to take action to increase our raw cotton market and also to prevent the importing of cheap Japanese cotton goods. You will note it is a concentrated competition against a certain type of American-made cotton cloth.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD in connection with my remarks on the rule today certain statements concerning central banks in other countries, which statements have been prepared from official sources; and also a summary of the relations of the Federal Government with banking in the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

THE PATMAN BONUS BILL

Mr. STACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and insert therein a speech delivered by Hon. WRIGHT PATMAN at Philadelphia at the Three Hundred and Twelfth Field Artillery banquet.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. STACK. Mr. Speaker, under leave to extend my remarks, I insert herewith a speech delivered by the Honorable WRIGHT PATMAN, at the Broadwood Hotel, Philadelphia, Saturday, April 27, 1935, at 8 p. m., at the ninth annual banquet of the Three Hundred and Twelfth Field Artillery, composed chiefly of Philadelphia citizens. Commander James A. Russell, commander of the association, presided as toastmaster. The speech was delivered over a national radio hook-up.

From the comments I have received since the speech was delivered, the people of Philadelphia and Pennsylvania have a fuller understanding of what the Patman bill really is, and I personally am satisfied that the reaction in Philadelphia, quondam home of Republicanism and Toryism, was very favorable.

Mr. PATMAN's speech was as follows:

Mr. Toastmaster, members of the Three Hundred and Twelfth Field Artillery Association, distinguished guests, ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience: I am very glad of the opportunity to address an audience in the great city of Philadelphia, Pa., the cradle of American liberty and the city of brotherly love, and in the congressional district of my good friend and colleague MICHAEL J. STACK.

STACK PRAISED

This is one of the busiest times of my life, and ordinarily I would not have accepted your very kind invitation to be here, but remembering the strong, able, and effective support Congressman STACK has given to the cause that is so near and dear to my heart, I could not conscientiously decline. Congressman STACK served in the Ninetieth Division of the American Expeditionary Forces in France. He was wounded in battle, and his blood was spilled in time of war for the cause of his country. By reason of his great services upon the field of battle, and the heroic sacrifices made, he has received the distinguished honor of being decorated with the Order of the Purple Heart. Congressman STACK is making a good record in Congress. He is working hard and is admired by his colleagues for his courage and ability.

SENATOR GUFFEY

The Nation and the Democratic Party that I belong to—naturally I know more about the Democratic Party—have reasons to be grateful to Pennsylvania for sending us such an able and fearless delegation of Congressmen to the House of Representatives and such an able Senator, the Honorable JOE GUFFEY. I know all of these gentlemen, and know that they are sympathetic to the cause of the veterans of the World War and their dependents. The Democratic Members from the House unanimously, and a substantial number of the Republican Members, stood 100 percent for the Patman bill to pay the veterans in United States money, the best money on earth.

OUR PROBLEM—UNDERCONSUMPTION

Our national problem is not overproduction, it is underconsumption. If every person in the United States could buy all the needed comforts, necessities, and conveniences of life for himself and family, there would be a shortage of practically all commodities instead of a surplus. People in the South, who are producing cotton, are not financially able to buy the cotton goods that they need. The wage earners in the factories of the North do not have the purchasing power to buy what their factories produce. The first step toward lasting prosperity in this country must be made by the consumers. The consumers cannot make this necessary step unless they have purchasing power. Therefore, our first major problem is to distribute purchasing power among the masses of the people. Any plan that will distribute this purchasing power quickly, uniformly, and evenly into every nook and corner in the Nation with the least delay and with the least possibility of graft or favoritism should be given early consideration by the Congress of the United States.

ADJUSTED-SERVICE CERTIFICATES

I am here to discuss the payment of the adjusted-service certificates to 3½ million World War veterans. If these certificates are paid in cash now, the veterans will receive approximately $2,000,000,000. The 259,931 certificate holders in the great State of Pennsylvania will receive $155,000,000. The certificate holders in Philadelphia County alone will receive $31,500,000. A similar distribution will be made in all the 3,072 counties of the United States.

HOUSE FAVORED H. R. 1

When this subject is mentioned, it is not unusual for an uninformed person to say these certificates are not due until 1945 and the Patman bill—H. R. 1—provides for their payment in printing-press money. The Committee on Ways and Means in the House of Representatives considered this bill for several days. A majority of the members of that committee, who favored any bill providing for full payment favored H. R. 1, the Patman bill. This bill was discussed for several days before the House of Representatives, composed of 435 Members. Two-thirds of the Members of that body who favored any bill favored H. R. 1—the Patman bill—and it was passed in the House of Representatives and sent to the Senate.

SOLDIERS' ARMY PAY

The Senate Committee on Finance has reported our bill to the Senate, with a recommendation that the Harrison bill be substituted. I am opposed to the Harrison bill or any other bill that does not provide for full and immediate cash payment of these certificates. It is true that the certificates are legally not due until 1945. They were given to the veterans as adjusted pay, not as a bonus. The word "bonus" is a misnomer and should never be used. Congress realized that the soldier who received $30 a month during the war was required to pay practically all of it on allotments to dependents, insurance, and necessary expenses not borne by the Government. The average soldier allotted from $5 to $20 a month of his $30 pay to dependents. He was compelled to pay $6.60 a month to the Government for insurance. (The veterans gave Uncle Sam $400,000,000 in this way.) In addition, he paid his bills for laundry, barber, tailor, mending and altering clothing and shoes, and other incidental expenses, after which, if any part of his monthly pay remained, he was required to buy a Liberty bond on the installment plan or be called a slacker. These Liberty bonds went down in price after the war, but the veterans realized $80 and $85 on the $100 for them.

COMPOUND INTEREST

Congress passed a law confessing a debt of another dollar a day to every veteran who served in the United States and $1.25 extra for every day served overseas. The question of pay was not seriously discussed before the men entered the service. This credit, together with a 25-percent increase for deferred payment and 4-percent interest for 20 years—1925 to 1945—was given to the veteran in the form of an adjusted-service certificate that he now holds. The average certificate is for $1,000 and 6 out of 7 veterans have borrowed the limit allowed by law—50 percent—on their certificates. They are required to pay compound interest on these loans, and if the law remains as it is now, this compound interest will practically consume the remainder of each certificate by 1945, when they are legally due.

CERTIFICATE REALLY PAST DUE

It is my contention that unless we can show that these certificates, which are payable in 1945, are as a matter of justice and right past due, we are not entitled to succeed in our efforts to get them paid now. In computing interest on what Congress confessed was due, the Government absolutely ignored nearly 7 years' interest. This has been acknowledged and confessed by high Government officials and no one questions it.

We are merely asking that these certificates be changed so as to give each veteran the amount of money that Congress confessed was due him, the $1 a day for domestic service and $1.25 a day for service overseas, as of the time he rendered the services with a fair and reasonable rate of interest from that time. If that is done, each veteran was entitled to receive an amount equivalent to the face or maturity value of his certificate on October 1, 1931. Therefore, since each veteran was entitled to an amount equal to the face value of his certificate October 1, 1931, he should not be required to pay interest on loans since that time. H. R. 1, the Patman bill, provides that each veteran shall be paid the full amount of his certificate now in cash after deducting all loans and interest on loans before October 1, 1931.

NO TAXES OR BONDS NECESSARY

This debt can be paid now without a bond issue, without creating a new debt, and without increasing taxes by merely converting the adjusted-service certificates, which represent one form of Government obligation, into United States notes—currency—another form of Government obligation. The uninformed and the puppets and hirelings of Wall Street interests immediately brand a proposition of this sort as unsound, claiming we propose to issue fiat or printing-press money.

It is in the interest of Wall Street to prevent the issuance of this money, if it is possible for them to do so. It is stepping on the toes of the big bankers and is a step in the direction of Congress doing what they have succeeded in preventing Congress doing, that is, coining money and regulating the value thereof as required by the Constitution of the United States. This great privilege of issuing money has been farmed out to them by our Government, and they do not want anything done that will be in the direction of denying them this great privilege that is worth billions of dollars and is probably the greatest racket on earth.

BONUS TO BIG BANKERS

Our Government is paying almost a billion dollars a year interest on its own credit to holders of Government securities. It is not right for the people to be compelled to pay a penny of this amount. If our Government were to borrow money from a foreign country or a foreign bank, it would be right for our Government to pay interest on the amount borrowed, or if our Government should borrow gold from our own citizens to use in international trade to promote the interest of our country, our Government should pay our citizens interest for the use of that gold.

Today, however, our Government does not borrow money from a foreign country or a foreign bank, neither is it borrowing gold from its own citizens; therefore, it should not be compelled to pay tribute, interest, bonus, or gratuity to a few big bankers for the privilege of using its own credit. That is exactly what our Government is doing. It is an imbecilic and idiotic system that has grown up over a period of years that cannot be charged directly to any one political party or any one individual. The people have discovered this idiotic system. They have finally gotten the truth. The ones who enjoy these special privileges are making every effort to becloud the issue, deceive and mislead the people with red herrings, and all kinds of propaganda and downright falsehoods disseminated by their hired hands, puppets, and easily misled citizens.

THE MONEY WE PROPOSE TO ISSUE

Let us see what kind of money we propose to issue to pay these certificates with. We have in circulation today $346,000,000 in United States notes—the kind of money often referred to as "greenbacks"—that is in circulation every day. We propose to issue $2,000,000,000 more of these United States notes to pay the veterans.

January 30, 1934, our great Chief Executive approved a law which places all right, title, and interest in and to all gold in the United States Government. I have before me a recent statement from the United States Treasury, which discloses that it has the enormous gold reserve of $8,700,000,000. The act of March 14, 1900, requires the Secretary of the Treasury to keep this money—United States notes—on a parity or equality with all other money coined or printed by the United States Government. Existing laws, therefore, require the Secretary of the Treasury to use all the gold available for the purpose of maintaining this parity.

MONEY WILL HAVE 100-PERCENT GOLD BACKING

There is outstanding today in general circulation, issued by the Government, $5,500,000,000 in currency and coin. If we issue $2,000,000,000 additional, we will have outstanding $7,700,000,000 in currency and coin. Therefore, after this additional money is issued, the Government will have in the Treasury sufficient gold to pay 100 cents on the dollar all outstanding money, and it will be the duty of the Government to use this gold for that purpose if necessary. If this money should be so redeemed, 100 cents on the dollar, the Government will have remaining in the Treasury idle and unused more than $1,000,000,000 in gold in addition to $1,000,000,000 in silver. Can anyone say that money that has a 111-percent gold reserve to back it is fiat money or printing-press money? It is certainly the best money that our Government can issue?

NO INFLATION

Another charge that is made by the poll parrot satellites of special privilege is that the payment of this money will cause an inflation of the currency. This argument was anticipated. Proper safeguards have been inserted in the bill, H. R. 1, that will absolutely prohibit even a possible inflation of the currency. The bill provides that the Secretary of the Treasury may cause Federal Reserve notes, another form of currency, to be retired. The bill, H. R. 1, provides that if the price level exceeds the 1926 price level or if the Secretary of the Treasury believes—it is left entirely to his judgment—that there is danger of an undue expansion of the currency, he can cause Federal Reserve notes to be withdrawn that will prevent it. There is outstanding today $3,500,000,000 in currency in the form of Federal Reserve notes. Our total circulating medium of coin and currency aggregates $5,500,000,000. According to the terms of our bill, H. R. 1, the Patman bill, this payment of $2,000,000,000 can be made to the veterans and the circulating medium not increased by one dollar if the Secretary of the Treasury withdraws Federal Reserve notes from circulation as he pays United States notes to the veterans in payment of the remainder due on their certificates. Any person who says that this bill is an inflationary bill or that the money we propose to issue is fiat money is either uninformed or is willfully misrepresenting the facts.

IF FAIR FOR BANKS, FAIR FOR VETERANS

In actual practice, we propose in H. R. 1—the Patman bill—that a veteran who holds a Government security—an adjusted-service certificate—payable in 1945, shall have a right to deposit that certificate with the Government and get another form of Government obligation in return for it. In asking this, we are not seeking to invoke a new principle or policy for the issuance of money. Under existing laws, a Federal Reserve bank, which is owned by private corporations—not one dollar of the stock is owned by the Government or any individual—can deposit a Government obligation that is payable January 1, 1945, and receive new money in return for it. The only charge is the cost of printing, which is about 27 cents a thousand dollars. The Government's credit is used absolutely free, and such banks continue to draw interest on the Government security that it deposited to secure the money. The money secured is Federal Reserve notes, printed at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing at Washington, at the same place the United States notes are printed. The same Government that guarantees the payment of the Reserve notes will guarantee the payment of United States notes.

If it is fair and right for the banks to receive money in return for a deposit of Government obligations that are payable in 1945 and continue to get interest on the deposited obligations, is it not equally fair and right for the veterans to be permitted to do identically the same thing in the same way, except they will not be permitted to draw interest on the obligations deposited? If it is fair for the banks, it is certainly fair for the veterans. Can anyone say that these money-creating corporations should have privileges that good citizens of this country should not have?

ONE-FOURTH CIRCULATING MEDIUM DESTROYED

Our circulating medium consists of outstanding money in the form of greenbacks and coins and demand deposits in banks subject to check. Over a period of years, the amount of outstanding money has remained practically the same, about five and one-half billion dollars. Demand deposits subject to check, however, have increased and decreased greatly over the same period. From 1926 to 1929, these demand deposits aggregated $21,000,000,000. Times were good then. The banks have called loans, however, and canceled these deposits and they have decreased to $14,000,000,000 at the end of 1934. Therefore, the banks have destroyed $7,000,000,000 of our circulating medium. Are we committing an economic crime in trying to restore $2,000,000,000 of this circulating medium that the banks have destroyed $7,000,000,000 of through their deflationary policies?

The circulation of money and credit from 1926 to 1930 averaged $200 per capita. It is now down to $150 per capita. Therefore, one-quarter of our medium of exchange has been absolutely destroyed. You can no more do business with an insufficient amount of money than you can handle the commerce of this country with insufficient transportation facilities.

If we pay the veterans $2,000,000,000, no one will be paying interest on this money while it is outstanding, and $2,000,000,000 of the $7,000,000,000 destroyed will be restored.

WILL SUPPORT ANY BILL FOR FULL PAYMENT

My first objective is the payment in full in cash now of the adjusted-service certificates. We were never able to get much attention or support from nonveterans until we were able to show that the payment could be made without cost to the Government and in the same kind of money that the Government now issues to the banks in return for Government securities. I expect to support any bill that provides for full and immediate cash payment whether the method of payment is satisfactory to me or not, but I do believe and insist that the method we propose is in the interest of the country as well as the veterans and should be adopted because it will save the Government money instead of costing the Government money, thereby eliminating the necessity for considering new tax bills or bond issues.

HARRISON BILL UNSATISFACTORY

Next Monday the United States Senate is expected to take up for consideration our bill that passed the House of Representatives March 22, 1935. Senator PAT HARRISON, of Mississippi, will doubtless offer the Senate committee amendment to the bill, which provides that all of our bill be stricken out after the enacting clause, and the Harrison bill inserted. The Harrison bill will not cause the veterans to get much money. The average veteran who holds a $1,000 certificate has borrowed $500. He owes accumulated interest of $100. Under the Harrison bill he will have his note and interest canceled and will receive from $150 to $175 in cash in full settlement and satisfaction of his $1,000 adjusted-service certificate. During the war civilians were paid from $8 to $20 a day. After this adjustment to the veterans they will be paid on the basis of $2 or $3 a day. Evidently Congress considered this amount small and increased the deferred payments 25 percent. The Harrison bill eliminates this 25-percent increase for waiting that Congress has heretofore confessed was reasonable. It is claimed for this bill that it will save the taxpayers a billion dollars. That is probably true and it will cause the veterans to lose the billion that will be saved by the taxpayers. It is unthinkable that this proposal can possibly be a satisfactory settlement or solution of this problem. If the Harrison bill passes the Senate I predict that the House will not accept it; that a free conference committee will be appointed from each House to iron out the differences between the Harrison bill and the Patman bill, and this conference committee will make an effort to agree upon a bill that will be satisfactory to both Houses of Congress and the President. All of this should be done and this problem settled one way or another within the next 15 or 20 days.

IF OUR BILL FAILS, WILL SUPPORT VINSON BILL

Another bill that is insisted upon is the Belgrano-Vinson bill, which provides for full cash payment. If this bill should pass, bonds will have to be sold by the Government to obtain the money to pay the veterans. Interest will have to be paid on these tax-exempt bonds. By the time the bonds are paid, a few large bankers will get as much money in interest as the veterans have received in cash. I prefer our method of making the payment, but if our method cannot be adopted I will vote for the Belgrano-Vinson bill, because the debt to the veterans is long past due and should be settled like all other Government obligations are settled, in cash.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN—PHILADELPHIA—CONSTITUTION

It is inspiring to me to be in the great city of Philadelphia, where the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States were framed and agreed to. Every school child in America knows about Philadelphia being the home of Benjamin Franklin and that Benjamin Franklin not only helped to write these great documents, but he was also one of the signers of each of them. It was here 146 years ago that the Constitution of the United States was framed. Benjamin Franklin, doubtless, helped to write into this great document a mandate that Congress shall coin money, regulate its value, and fix the standard of weights and measures.

Congress has carried out its duty to fix the standard of weights and measures, but instead of performing its duty in regard to coining money it has farmed out that great privilege to a few large bankers, who have enjoyed it for the benefit of themselves and caused the American people to pay tribute to them in return for the issuance of blanket mortgages upon their own property.

I think it is fitting to remind this audience of what Benjamin Franklin said in his autobiography in regard to the issuance of money. Benjamin Franklin's statement was as follows:

"About this time there was a cry among the people for more paper money, only £15,000 being extant in the province, and that soon to be sunk. The wealthy inhabitants oppos'd any addition, being against all paper currency, from an apprehension that it would depreciate, as it had done in New England, to the prejudice of all creditors. We had discussed this point in our Junto, where I was on the side of an addition, being persuaded that the first small sum struck in 1723 had done much good by increasing the trade, employment, and number of inhabitants in the province, since I now saw all the old houses inhabited and many new ones building, whereas I remembered well that when I first walk's about the streets of Philadelphia, eating my roll, I saw most of the Houses in Walnut-street, between Second and Front-streets, with bills on their doors, 'To be let'; and many likewise in Chestnut-street and other streets, which made me then think the inhabitants of the city were deserting it one after another.

"Our debates possess's me so fully of the subject, that I wrote and printed an anonymous pamphlet on it, entitled The Nature and Necessity of a Paper Currency. It was well receiv'd by the common people in general; but the rich men dislik'd it, for it increas'd and strengthen'd the clamor for more money and they happening to have no writers among them that were able to answer it, their opposition slacken'd, and the point was carried by a majority in the House. My friends there who conceiv'd I had been of some service, thought fit to reward me by employing me in printing the money; a very profitable job and a great help to me. This was another advantage gain'd by my being able to write.

"The utility of this currency became by time and experience so evident as never afterwards to be much disputed; so that it grew soon to fifty-five thousand pounds, and in 1739 to eighty thousand pounds, since which it arose during the war to upwards of three hundred and fifty thousanad pounds, trade, building, and inhabitants all the while increasing, tho' I now think there are limits beyond which the quantity may be hurtful."

If Benjamin Franklin were here today, he probably would not see so many signs on the doors of the buildings "To be let", but he would certainly find upon the streets of Philadelphia and all other American cities good, able-bodied men, who are able, willing, and anxious to work but cannot find jobs. The benefits which the people of Philadelphia received by the issuance of money in Franklin's time will be repeated now if we invoke the same principle for the paying of the adjusted-service certificates as provided in the Patman bill as Benjamin Franklin advocated in the city of Philadelphia 200 years ago. Times have changed, conditions have changed, but this one economic principle that the Government and not the bankers should issue currency has remained just as sound as it was when Benjamin Franklin advocated it and when it was written into the Constitution of the United States.

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, may I remind you that under the Patman bill the veterans of this Nation can be paid the remainder due in cash now—$2,000,000,000—without creating a new debt and without causing a bond issue or an increase in taxes. It will actually save the Government more than a billion dollars. If you desire this plan adopted you should communicate your wishes to your United States Senators. If the Harrison plan is adopted, the 3,000,000 veterans who have borrowed on their certificates will not get a satisfactory settlement and the question will still be before Congress and the country.

If this debt is not paid to the veterans now, compound interest will consume the remaining half of every certificate borrowed on within the next few years and the veterans will have practically nothing coming to them in 1945.

The distribution of this $2,000,000,000 will be a godsend to the people of this Nation. It will be used to buy comforts and necessities of life, to pay debts, purchase homes and farms, and for other good purposes. The substantial payment will help the veterans greatly at a time in life when their children are young and when the money is needed the most. It will be paid to them at a time when they should exercise the very best judgment in its distribution. Such payment will not only help the veterans and their families, but it will increase purchasing power in every section of our country and will help everybody.

AMERICAN RETAIL FEDERATION

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the provisions of House Resolution 203, the Chair appoints as members of the Special Committee to Investigate the American Retail Federation the following Members of the House: Mr. COCHRAN (Missouri), chairman; Mr. WARREN (North Carolina); Mr. DOCKWEILER (California); Mr. LUCAS (Illinois); Mr. MCLEAN (New Jersey); Mr. COLE (New York); Mr. BOILEAU (Wisconsin).

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. COCHRAN, for 1 week, on account of illness;

To Mr. STARNES, indefinitely, on account of pressing business affairs; and

To Mr. DEROUEN, at the request of Mr. MONTET, indefinitely, on account of illness.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled a bill of the House of the following title, which was thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 5914. An act to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in connection with the California-Pacific International Exposition to be held in San Diego, Calif., in 1935 and 1936.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to an enrolled bill of the Senate of the following title:

S. 2035. An act to amend an act approved June 25, 1934, authorizing loans from the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works, for the construction of certain municipal buildings in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

BILL PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on this day present to the President, for his approval, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 5914. An act to authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in connection with the California-Pacific International Exposition to be held in San Diego, Calif., in 1935 and 1936.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 3 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Tuesday, April 30, 1935, at 12 o'clock noon.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. DARDEN: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R. 6512. A bill to authorize the crediting of service rendered by personnel (active or retired) subsequent to June 30, 1932, in the computation of their active or retired pay after June 30, 1935; without amendment (Rept. No. 807). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. DIES: A bill (H. R. 7774) to provide for the Federal incorporation of the Veterans Club of America; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SWEENEY: A bill (H. R. 7775) to amend title 40, section 276 A, of the United States Code, supplement VII; to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. RAMSPECK: A bill (H. R. 7776) authorizing the Secretary of War to appoint cadets to the United States Military Academy from the honor graduates of "honor schools" designated by the Secretary of War, in which Junior Reserve Officers' Training Corps units are conducted; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BEITER: A bill (H. R. 7777) creating the World War Memorial Commission and providing for the erection, in Washington, of a memorial to the soldiers, sailors, and marines of the United States who lost their lives in the World War; to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. DOCKWEILER: A bill (H. R. 7778) to adjust the salaries of rural letter carriers, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. MOTT: A bill (H. R. 7779) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear and determine claims of certain bands or tribes of Indians residing in the State of Oregon; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. THOMPSON: A bill (H. R. 7780) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near New Boston, Ill.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma: A bill (H. R. 7781) to define the election procedure under the act of June 18, 1934, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. SUMNERS of Texas: A bill (H. R. 7782) to provide for retirement of Justices of the Supreme Court; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma: A bill (H. R. 7783) relating to Osage Indians, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. VINSON of Georgia: Resolution (H. Res. 207) for the consideration of H. R. 7220; to the Committee on Rules.

Also, resolution (H. Res. 208) for the consideration of H. R. 4767; to the Committee on Rules.

Also, resolution (H. Res. 209) for the consideration of H. R. 5731; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. FISH: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 266) to prohibit the exportation of arms, munitions, or implements of war to belligerent nations; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, joint resolution (H. J. Res. 267) to propose a multilateral agreement renouncing the sale or export of arms, munitions, or implements of war to any foreign nations; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ANDRESEN: A bill (H. R. 7784) granting a pension to Max Durrenfeld; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BELL: A bill (H. R. 7785) for the relief of the Franklin Ice Cream Co.; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CASEY: A bill (H. R. 7786) for the relief of William Gionet; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. DIETRICH: A bill (H. R. 7787) authorizing the President to present in the name of Congress a medal of honor to Wilson C. Price; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DISNEY: A bill (H. R. 7788) for the relief of Mrs. Earl H. Smith; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7789) to provide a right-of-way; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. EDMISTON: A bill (H. R. 7790) for the relief of S. A. White; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. FORD of California: A bill (H. R. 7791) for the relief of Bernard Gallagher; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HALLECK: A bill (H. R. 7792) granting a pension to Mira W. Miller; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HARTLEY: A bill (H. R. 7793) for the relief of G. Goldberg & Sons; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7794) for the relief of the Newark Concrete Pipe Co.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. LEWIS of Maryland: A bill (H. R. 7795) for the relief of Robert Delauder; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma: A bill (H. R. 7796) for the relief of Skelton Mack McCray; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 7797) granting a pension to Lillie Sharp; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. THOMAS: A bill (H. R. 7798) granting an increase of pension to Kate M. Farrell; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. UNDERWOOD: A bill (H. R. 7799) for the relief of George O. Claypool; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7800) granting an increase of pension to Margaret R. F. Newell; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7801) granting a pension to Charles C. Cloud, Sr.; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WILCOX: A bill (H. R. 7802) for the relief of Shirley D. Wells; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7803) for the relief of the Florida National Bank & Trust Co., a national banking corporation, as successor trustee for the estate of Phillip Ullendorff, deceased; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

7837. By Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma: Petition headed by L. V. Dunn, of Breedsville, Mich., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7838. Also, petition headed by J. L. Burgess, of Loretto, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7839. Also, petition headed by F. M. Harris, of Kiamichi, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7840. Also, petition headed by A. Dixon, of Stroud, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7841. Also, petition headed by R. E. Hill, of Tamo, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7842. Also, petition headed by A. Scott, of Wallace, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7843. Also, petition headed by George Patterson, of Rochelle, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to 50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7844. Also, petition headed by H. W. Huggins, of Dossville, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7845. Also, petition headed by Ernest W. Grinney, of Logansport, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7846. Also, petition headed by N. Taylor, of Madison, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7847. Also, petition headed by J. B. Wilks, of Henagar, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7848. Also, petition headed by Isaac Ray, of Bastrop, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7849. Also, petition headed by S. Lemley, of Grant, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7850. Also, petition headed by A. L. Smith, of Flat Rock, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7851. Also, petition headed by O. E. Parsons, of Bessemer, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7852. Also, petition headed by J. H. Sullivan, of Corridon, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7853. Also, petition headed by R. Lee, of Alexandria, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7854. Also, petition headed by J. E. Cooper, of Talladega, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7855. Also, petition headed by J. C. Mock, of Cowarts, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7856. Also, petition headed by James Linsey, of Wrightsville, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7857. Also, petition headed by L. Welch, of Harrisville, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7858. Also, petition headed by E. J. Green, of Chalybeate, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for a direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7859. Also, petition headed by Jessie Self, of Decatur, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7860. Also, petition headed by L. S. Arndt, of Christopher, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7861. Also, petition headed by J. Frye, of Burnwell, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7862. Also, petition headed by Louis C. Waitz, of Cleveland, Ohio, favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7863. Also, petition headed by James Dixon, of Logansport, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7864. Also, petition headed by Edward Fernell, of Keatchie, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7865. Also, petition of A. Bankester, of Robertsdale, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7866. Also, petition headed by M. L. Rowell, of Chicago, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7867. Also, petition headed by Carl Chambers, of Beaumont, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7868. Also, petition headed by C. Stewart, of Mount Vernon, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7869. Also, petition headed by G. W. Chatman, of Monroe, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7870. Also, petition headed by T. Lowery, of Owensboro, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7871. Also, petition headed by M. Smith, of Moulton, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7872. Also, petition headed by G. Montgomery, of Greenburg, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7873. Also, petition headed by R. I. Cunningham, of Siluria, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7874. Also, petition headed by Saul Wills, of Tunica, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the

Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7875. Also, petition headed by Charley Jackson, of Robinsonville, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7876. Also, petition headed by T. N. Kendrick, of Starke, Fla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7877. Also, petition headed by J. D. Cargile, of Beaverton, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7878. Also, petition headed by R. M. Merritt, of Winnsboro, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7879. Also, petition headed by Nat Norwood, of Tallulah, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7880. Also, petition headed by I. Bryant, of Olmstead, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7881. Also, petition headed by Newton Strange, of Campbellsburg, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7882. Also, petition headed by Joseph Ball, of Bedford, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7883. Also, petition headed by A. H. Mann, of Mansfield, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7884. Also, petition headed by Henry David, of Monticello, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7885. Also, petition headed by Thomas Griffin, of East Florence, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7886. Also, petition headed by M. Presley, of Luling, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7887. Also, petition headed by C. Huffman, of Christopher, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7888. Also, petition headed by James A. Ciarlo, of Steger, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7889. Also, petition headed by R. D. Layne, of Cullen, Va., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7890. Also, petition headed by D. L. Robinson, of Dunn, N. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7891. Also, petition headed by Arthur Lee Cook, of Selma, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7892. Also, petition headed by H. C. Hoover, of Ponchatoula, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7893. Also, petition headed by V. Carter, of Orrville, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7894. Also, petition headed by A. D. White, of Ardmore, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7895. Also, petition headed by Will Nelson, of Boliver, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7896. Also, petition headed by L. N. Turner, of Strawberry, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7897. Also, petition headed by Frank Fields, of Powell, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7898. Also, petition headed by Joseph McHenry, of New Orleans, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7899. Also, petition headed by L. H. Andrus, of Houston, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7900. Also, petition headed by Nick Hester, of Pontotoc, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7901. Also, petition headed by L. C. Millican, of Greenwood Springs, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7902. Also, petition headed by O. C. Newell, of Pontotoc, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7903. Also, petition headed by John F. Silas, of Greenwood Springs, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7904. Also, petition headed by Joseph H. Lusk, of Manchester, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7905. Also, petition headed by T. Battle, of Athens, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7906. Also, petition headed by Edgar Sides, of Athens, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7907. Also, petition headed by R. Taylor, of Shreveport, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7908. Also, petition headed by Allen Stephens, of Wellington, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7909. Also, petition headed by R. H. Junkin, of Gordo, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7910. Also, petition headed by G. W. Tapp, of Hardin, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the

Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7911. Also, petition headed by C. Griffin, of Altha, Fla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7912. Also, petition headed by M. Graham, of Picayune, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7913. Also, petition headed by C. M. Miles, of Pleasant Hill, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7914. Also, petition headed by Lon Smith, of Oxford, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7915. Also, petition headed by W. A. Pearson, of Samson, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7916. Also, petition headed by C. Newell, of Kenton, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7917. Also, petition headed by S. D. Lowery, of Danville, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7918. Also, petition headed by J. C. Brackin, of Town Creek, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7919. Also, petition headed by W. I. Ramsey, of Ashville, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7920. Also, petition headed by Earl C. Jett, of Trinity, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7921. Also, petition headed by V. Authement, of Houma, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7922. Also, petition headed by W. S. Smith, of West Point, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7923. Also, petition headed by G. B. Mims, of Maringouin, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7924. Also, petition headed by J. L. Crim, of Renfroe, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7925. Also, petition headed by A. Cemp, of Maringouin, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7926. Also, petition headed by J. E. Stewart, of Florence, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7927. Also, petition headed by A. Porter, of Lucy, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7928. Also, petition headed by Jasper Thompson, of Lambert, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7929. Also, petition headed by Bryant Southworth, of Sadieville, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7930. Also, petition headed by W. L. Spivey, of Oxford, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7931. Also, petition headed by C. Kelley, of Greenville, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7932. Also, petition headed by Lee Arnold, of Jackson, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7933. Also, petition headed by W. L. Thompson, of Waxahachie, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7934. Also, petition headed by D. Eggenberg, of Gasconade, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7935. Also, petition headed by George Johnson, of Montgomery, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7936. Also, petition headed by Edward McCluny of Tuscumbia, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7937. Also, petition headed by Fred Ronnebeck, of West Helena, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7938. Also, petition headed by Hardy Johnson, of Rohmer, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7939. Also, petition headed by H. H. Bader, of McGehee, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7940. Also, petition headed by J. B. Fields, of Saltillo, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7941. Also, petition headed by R. Cook, of New Orleans, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7942. Also, petition headed by Grover C. Rich, of Celina, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7943. Also, petition headed by E. McDonald, of Borger, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7944. Also, petition headed by Andrew J. Holzworth, of Grafton, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7945. Also, petition headed by Grady Aldridge, of Kennedy, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7946. Also, petition headed by P. Slatt, of Sipsey, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7947. Also, petition headed by C. L. Rhodes, of Cullman, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7948. Also, petition headed by J. N. Oswalt, of Fayette, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the

Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7949. Also, petition headed by Will Montgomery, of Grenada, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7950. Also, petition headed by M. Scolaro, of Tampa, Fla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7951. Also, petition headed by Clifford White, of Chattanooga, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7952. Also, petition headed by H. H. Hudson, of Manila, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7953. Also, petition headed by Leland A. Hatten, of Truman, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7954. Also, petition headed by E. Beasly, of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7955. Also, petition headed by G. A. Palmer, of Guntown, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7956. Also, petition headed by A. E. Williams, of Oil Trough, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7957. Also, petition headed by G. D. Laird, of Newport, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7958. Also, petition headed by N. Jones, of Somerville, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7959. Also, petition headed by A. C. Coffman, of Russellville, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7960. Also, petition headed by M. L. Borker, of Guthrie, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7961. Also, petition headed by James W. Davis, of Locust Hill, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7962. Also, petition headed by J. H. Sullivan, of Corridon, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7963. Also, petition headed by S. Wiley, of Chamberlin, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7964. Also, petition headed by Vernon Shaw, of Caruthersville, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7965. Also, petition headed by Sam Nays, of Miston, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7966. Also, petition headed by Teodore Eubansk, of Boaz, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7967. Also, petition headed by N. Potter, of Steele, Mo., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7968. Also, petition headed by G. W. Humphrey, of Shamrock, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7969. By Mr. BUCK: Memorial of the California State Legislature, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to include the Central Valley project in the national program of work relief; to the Committee on Flood Control.

7970. By Mr. FORD of California: Resolution of the Senate and the Assembly of the State of California, recommending the Central Valley project to the President and to the Congress of the United States as of first and prime importance to the State of California and requesting that adequate funds be made available from the work-relief appropriation for immediate construction of the project, thus conferring lasting benefits upon the people of California; to the Committee on Flood Control.

7971. By Mr. HIGGINS of Connecticut: Resolutions of the General Assembly of the State of Connecticut, favoring additional hospital facilities for the veterans' hospital at Newington, Conn.; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

7972. By Mr. JOHNSON of Texas: Petition of A. R. Erskine, chairman of postal affairs committee, Memphis Chamber of Commerce, Memphis, Tenn., favoring House bill 2798; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7973. Also, memorial of A. T. Baggett, Jr., president Chamber of Commerce of Midlothian, Tex., favoring House bill 7201; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

7974. By Mr. KIMBALL: Resolution of Arizona State Chamber of Commerce, endorsed by the Marshall (Mich.) Chamber of Commerce, urging continuation of the tax on foreign copper; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7975. By Mr. LAMNECK: Resolution of Columbus Aerie No. 297, of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, favoring that part of the social-security bill (S. 1130 and H. R. 4142) providing for Federal monetary assistance to the States paying old-age pensions; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7976. By Mr. LUNDEEN: Petition of Minnesota State Legislature, urging Congress to pass legislation providing for an adequate tariff on the pulpwood and newsprint paper to protect American labor and industry; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7977. Also, petition of the Central Regional Conference of the Minnesota District of the Evangelical Synod of North America, urging Congress to pass legislation to nationalize the munition industry; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

7978. Also, petition of the Minnesota State Legislature, memorializing Congress to amend section 5219, Revised Statutes of the United States, so as to permit the States to tax national banks upon a fair and equitable basis; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

7979. Also, petition of the Wyanett Township Farmer-Labor Club, Minnesota, urging the enactment of legislation to provide that the Federal Government take over all private banks, and urging the enactment of House bill 3008 to provide for a Bank of the United States; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7980. Also, petition of the City Council of St. Paul, Minn., urging the enactment of the Pettengill bill (H. R. 3263); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7981. Also, petition of the Lutheran Minnesota Conference of the Augustana Synod, of Minneapolis, Minn., urging the enactment of the Pettengill bill (H. R. 6472) to outlaw the practice of block-booking in the moving-picture industry; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7982. Also, petition of the Lutheran Minnesota Conference of the Augustana Synod, Minneapolis, Minn., urging the enactment of various measures to prevent the participation of the United States in a future war; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

7983. Also, petition of the Northwestern Lumbermen's Association, of Minneapolis, Minn., expressing opposition to the appointment of officers of a nationally known mail-order company to positions of trust and responsibility in Federal departments; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7984. Also, petition of the Northwestern Lumbermen's Association, of Minneapolis, Minn., urging the discontinuance of the Retail Lumber and Building Material Code after June 16, 1935; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7985. Also, petition of Hennepin County Veterans Farmer-Labor Club, urging that the committee investigating un-American activities give full publicity as to prior hearings and continue its investigation at public hearings; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

7986. Also, petition of the Minnesota Junior Association of Commerce, urging that there be a closed season on migratory waterfowl throughout the United States and Alaska; to the Committee on Agriculture.

7987. Also, petition of the executive council of the Minnesota Historical Society, urging Congress to appropriate sufficient funds for the publication of three volumes of Territorial Papers by the Department of State; to the Committee on Appropriations.

7988. By Mr. MAPES: Petition of 236 residents of Grand Rapids, Kent County, Mich., recommending the repeal of the Wheeler-Howard Act and protesting against the continuance in office of the present Commissioner of Indian Affairs; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

7989. By Mr. MERRITT of Connecticut: Resolution of the General Assembly of the State of Connecticut, urging the Congress to appropriate the necessary funds for the completion of the United States veterans' hospital at Newington, Conn.; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

7990. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of New York Typographical Union, No. 6, New York City, concerning the national labor-relations bill; to the Committee on Labor.

7991. Also, petition of the New York branch, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, New York City, concerning the Wagner-Costigan antilynching bill; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

7992. Also, petition of the Merchants' Association of New York, concerning the Federal banking bill for 1935; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

7993. By Mr. SCHAEFER: Petition of the Senate, Illinois General Assembly, importuning Congress to reduce Federal tax on beer from $5 per barrel to $2.50 per barrel; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

7994. Also, petition of citizens of East St. Louis, Ill., urging Congress to enact into law House bills 2010, 2885, and 3048, House Resolution 2733, and House Joint Resolutions 69 and 4, all providing for the extermination of communism in the United States; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

7995. Also, petition of members of Progressive Miners of America, Belleville, Ill., protesting enactment of the Guffey bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7996. Also, petition of members of labor organizations, Belleville, Ill., urging enactment of the Wagner labor-disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

7997. Also, petition of citizens of East St. Louis, Ill., urging the House of Representatives to pass Senate bill 1629, providing for Federal regulation of interstate highway transportation; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7998. By Mr. STUBBS: Joint resolution adopted April 24, 1935, by the California State Assembly, by a vote of 68–0, condemning the Thomas oil bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7999. By Mr. TRUAX: Petition of Milk Drivers and Dairy Employees Union, Local 361, Toledo, Ohio, by their business representative, E. J. Haumesser, favoring the passage of House bill 7172, known as the "Mead substitute bill" providing for sick leave and annual leave for all postal substitutes, ratio of 1 substitute to 7 regulars, graduated pay from the present rate of 65 cents per hour to the rate of the third grade, or $1,900 per year, and prohibition against furloughs or dismissals, also favoring the passage of House bill 6990 providing for a 40-hour week for all postal employees; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

8000. Also, petition of Milk Drivers and Dairy Employees, Local 361, Toledo, Ohio, by their business representative, E. J. Haumesser, urging passage of the Wagner-Connery labor-disputes bills, the Guffey bill on mining codes, and S. 87, by Senator BLACK, providing for a 30-hour work week in industry, also favoring the continuation of the National Industrial Recovery Act which expires June 15, as it is necessary to retain the code provisions for hours and wages because they represent a definite move in the right direction and believing that it seems certain that unless the gains already effected through the National Recovery Administration codes can be made permanent through the continuation of the National Industrial Recovery Act that labor will receive a serious set-back; to the Committee on Labor.

8001. Also, petition of United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Ladies Auxiliary, Toledo, Ohio, by their secretary, Mrs. Ida M. Gilger, urging support of House bills 7172 and 6990, the Wagner bill, the Connery bill, and the continuation of the National Recovery Act; to the Committee on Labor.

8002. Also, petition of International Hod Carriers' Building and Common Laborers' Union of America, Local 498, Massillon, Ohio, by their secretary, Claude R. Kramer, urging support of the Wagner-Connery labor-disputes bills, the Guffey bill on mining codes, the amended National Recovery Act, and S. 87 providing for the 30-hour week in industry; to the Committee on Labor.

8003. Also, petition of students of Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, by their chairman, James Phillips, urging their official Representatives in Washington to work to bring the United States unreservedly into a collective security system which will provide legislative, executive, and judicial agencies adequate for world government; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

8004. Also, petition of Ella T. Smith and numerous others of Kennedy Heights, Ohio, urging support of House bill 6995 relative to Spanish War veteran legislation; to the Committee on Pensions.

8005. By Mr. WELCH: California Senate Joint Resolution No. 16, relating to Federal legislation granting subsidy or assistance to the American merchant marine; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

8006. Also, Senate Joint Resolution No. 14, memorializing and petitioning the President and the Congress of the United States to include the Central Valley project in the national program of work relief; to the Committee on Appropriations.

8007. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the commissioners' court, of Carson County, Tex.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

8008. Also, petition of the Common Council of Delaware, Ohio; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

8009. Also, petition of the Association of Commerce, Lake Charles, La.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

8010. By Mr. DRISCOLL: Petition signed by Hon. J. Fred Thomas, mayor, and attested by Hon. Fred H. Williams, city clerk, of Sharon, Pa., urging the construction of a dam for flood control, and other purposes, above the borough of Sharpsville, Pa., on the Shenango River; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

8011. Also, petition signed by Hon. John E. Cleary, president of council, and Hon. H. R. Parsons, burgess of Sharpsville, and the secretary of council, Mame K. Robins, attested to it, urging the construction of a dam for flood control, and other purposes, above the borough of Sharpsville, Pa., on the Shenango River; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

SENATE

TUESDAY, APRIL 30, 1935

(Legislative day of Monday, Apr. 15, 1935)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

THE JOURNAL

Mr. ROBINSON. I ask unanimous consent that the Journal of the proceedings of the Senate of the calendar day Monday, April 29, be approved without reading.

Mr. BLACK. I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed a joint resolution (H. J. Res. 258) to provide for certain State allotments under the Cotton Control Act, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. ROBINSON. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Connally	King	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Coolidge	La Follette	Robinson
Austin	Costigan	Lewis	Russell
Bachman	Couzens	Logan	Schall
Bailey	Dickinson	Lonergan	Schwellenbach
Bankhead	Dieterich	Long	Sheppard
Barbour	Donahey	McAdoo	Shipstead
Barkley	Duffy	McCarran	Smith
Bilbo	Fletcher	McGill	Steiwer
Black	Frazier	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	Gerry	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Borah	Gibson	Minton	Townsend
Brown	Glass	Moore	Trammell
Bulkley	Gore	Murphy	Truman
Bulow	Guffey	Murray	Tydings
Burke	Hale	Neely	Vandenberg
Byrd	Harrison	Norris	Van Nuys
Byrnes	Hastings	Nye	Wagner
Capper	Hatch	O'Mahoney	Walsh
Caraway	Hayden	Overton	Wheeler
Carey	Johnson	Pittman	White
Clark	Keyes	Pope

Mr. LEWIS. I announce that the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MALONEY] is absent because of illness, and that the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], and the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] are necessarily detained from the Senate. I request that this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF] is absent from the city with a committee of the Senate, and that the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK] is necessarily detained from the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-seven Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following resolution of the Senate of the State of Illinois, which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

Senate Resolution 13

Whereas one of the important reasons for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment of the United States Constitution was to eliminate the unsatisfactory conditions created by persons engaged in the illegal manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages; and

Whereas this important purpose is being defeated due to the present high Federal tax of $5 per barrel on beer, which unduly encourages and tempts those engaged in the manufacture and sale of beer to evade this high tax; and

Whereas the amount of revenue which will be lost to the Government on account of a reduction in the amount of the said tax will be partly if not totally offset by the increased volume of beer which will be reported for taxation purposes under a lower tax: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the Fifty-ninth General Assembly of the State of Illinois, That in view of existing conditions Congress is respectfully importuned to reduce the Federal tax on beer from $5 per barrel to $2.50 per barrel; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this preamble and resolution be forwarded to the President of the United States, the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Seventy-fourth Congress, and to each Congressman and Senator from Illinois.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of Connecticut, which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

Resolution concerning the United States Veterans' Hospital at Newington

Resolved by this assembly—

Whereas there exists a veterans' hospital at Newington, Conn., of 266-bed capacity; and

Whereas the need that existed 10 years ago clearly indicated the necessity for the construction of a 500-bed hospital; and

Whereas the hospital actually constructed was so planned as to make feasible its expansion to a 500-bed institution; and

Whereas this hospital serves and is so situated as to serve a wide area in southern New England; and

Whereas the demands for hospitalization in this area are constantly increasing, and the time has now arrived where hospital facilities are taxed to their utmost, which indicates a situation in the near future where they will be altogether inadequate; and

Whereas the construction of additional facilities at Newington can be had at a minimum cost per bed: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Connecticut, in general assembly convened this 24th day of April 1935, do hereby respectfully urge the Congress of the United States to appropriate the necessary funds for the completion of this hospital; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution, properly attested by the secretary of state of the State of Connecticut, be sent to the President of the United States, the Vice President of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Chairman of the House Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation, the Chairman of the Subcommittee on Hospital Construction, the Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee; to the Honorable AUGUSTINE LONERGAN and the Honorable FRANCIS T. MALONEY, United States Senators from the State of Connecticut; and to the honorable Representatives of the State of Connecticut in the Congress, the Honorable WILLIAM M. CITRON, the Honorable HERMAN P. KOPPLEMANN, the Honorable WILLIAM L. HIGGINS, the Honorable JAMES A. SHANLEY, the Honorable SCHUYLER MERRITT, and the Honorable J. JOSEPH SMITH.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolutions of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, which were referred to the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs:

Concurrent resolution declaring that the Territory of Hawaii shall be made a State, and requesting and urging the Congress of the United States of America to pass an enabling act authorizing the people of the Territory of Hawaii to form a constitution and State government to be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States

Whereas the Territory of Hawaii is an integral part of the United States of America and for a long period of years has demonstrated its ability to govern itself; and

Whereas the population and wealth of the Territory exceeds that of several of the States of the Union; and

Whereas the people of the Territory of Hawaii contribute in income taxes to the Federal Government a larger amount than many of the States of the Union; and

Whereas the people of the Territory desire to participate in the Government of the United States freely, fully, and loyally as a sovereign State: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii (the senate concurring), That the people of the Territory of Hawaii desire that said Territory shall become a State and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States:

That the Congress of the United States of America be and it is hereby requested and urged to pass an act enabling the people of the Territory of Hawaii to form a constitution and State government to be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States;

That the proposed enabling act hereinafter set forth being an act entitled "An act to enable the people of Hawaii to form a constitution and State government to be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States", and reading as follows:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

"SECTION 1. That the inhabitants of all that part of the area of the United States now constituting the Territory of Hawaii, as at present described, may become the State of Hawaii, as hereinafter provided.

"SEC. 2. That all citizens of the United States who have qualifications for voters for representatives to the Territorial legislature are hereby authorized to vote for and choose delegates to form a convention in said Territory. Such delegates shall possess the qualifications of such electors; and the aforesaid convention shall consist of 30 delegates, apportioned among the several counties within the limits of the proposed State in the same proportion as the proportion in the house of representatives of said Territory, as follows: Hawaii County, first representative district, 4 delegates; Hawaii County, second representative district, 4 delegates; Mau County, third representative district, 6 delegates; city and county of Honolulu, fourth representative district, 6 delegates; city and county of Honolulu, fifth representative district, 6 delegates; Kauai County, sixth representative district, 4 delegates; and the Governor of said Territory shall within 30 days after the approval of this act issue a proclamation ordering an election of the delegates aforesaid in said Territory to be held at a time to be designated in the proclamation within 6 months after the approval of this act, which proclamation shall be issued at least 30 days prior to the time of holding said election of delegates. The election for delegates shall be conducted, the returns made, the result ascertained, and the certificate of persons elected to such convention issued in the same manner as is prescribed by the laws of said Territory regulating elections therein of members of the legislature. Persons possessing the qualifications entitling them to vote for delegates under this act shall be entitled to vote on the ratification or rejection of the constitution, under such rules or regulations, as said convention may prescribe, not in conflict with this act.

"SEC. 3. That the delegates to the convention thus elected shall meet at the seat of government of said Territory on the second Tuesday after their election, excluding the day of election in case such day shall be Tuesday, but they shall not receive compensation for more than 60 days of service; and, after organization, shall declare on behalf of the people of said proposed State that they adopt the Constitution of the United States, whereupon the said convention shall be, and is hereby, authorized to form a constitution and State government for said proposed State.

"The constitution shall be republican in form, and make no distinction in civil or political rights on account of race or color, and not to be repugnant to the Constitution of the United States and the principles of the Declaration of Independence. And said convention shall provide, by ordinance irrevocable without the consent of the United States and the people of said State:

"First. That perfect toleration of religious sentiment shall be secured, and that no inhabitant of said State shall ever be molested in person or property on account of his or her mode of religious worship.

"Second. The State of Hawaii shall retain all the public property, vacant and unappropriated lands lying within its limits, now ceded, transferred, and in possession of the United States, except such as are in the possession of and used by a department of the United States, and may dispose of the same as the said State may direct.

"Third. That the debts and liabilities of said Territory of Hawaii shall be assumed and paid by said State.

"Fourth. That provision shall be made for the establishment and maintenance of a system of public schools, which shall be open to all the children of said State and free from sectarian control.

"SEC. 4. That in case a constitution and State government shall be formed in compliance with the provisions of this act, the convention forming the same shall provide by ordinance for submitting said constitution to the people of said State for its ratification or rejection at an election to be held at a date to be fixed by said convention, which shall be not more than 60 days from the date of its adjournment, at which election the qualified voters of said proposed State shall vote directly for or against the proposed constitution and for or against any provisions separately submitted. The return of said election shall be made to the secretary of Hawaii, who shall cause the same to be canvassed, and if a majority of the votes cast on that question shall be for the constitution, the Governor of the Territory of Hawaii shall certify the result to the President of the United States, together with a statement of the votes cast thereon and upon separate articles or propositions, and a copy of said constitution, articles, propositions, and ordinances. And if the constitution and government of said proposed State are republican in form, and if all the provisions of this act have been complied with in the formation thereof, it shall be the duty of the President of the United States to issue his proclamation announcing the result of said election, and thereupon the proposed State of Hawaii shall be deemed admitted by Congress into the Union, under and by virtue of this act, on an equal footing with the original States, from and after the date of said proclamation.

"SEC. 5. That the sum of $———, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the defraying of the expenses of the elections provided for in this act, and said convention, and for the payment of the members thereof, under the same rules and regulations and at the same rates as are now provided by law for the payment of the Territorial Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, and the disbursements of the money appropriated by this section shall be made by the secretary of the Territory of Hawaii.

"SEC. 6. That until the next general census, or until otherwise provided by law, said State shall be entitled to one Representative in the House of Representatives of the United States, which Representative, and two Senators of the United States, together with the Governor and other officers provided for in said constitution, shall be elected on the same day of the election for the adoption of the constitution; and until said State officers are elected and qualified under the provisions of the constitution, and the State is admitted into the Union, the territorial officers shall continue to discharge the duties of the respective offices in said Territory.

"SEC. 7. The said State when admitted as aforesaid shall constitute one judicial circuit, to be known as the "District of Hawaii." The district courts for the District of Hawaii shall be held one term at Honolulu and one term at Hilo, each year. And the said district shall, for judicial purposes, until otherwise provided, be attached to the ninth judicial circuit. There shall be appointed for said district 2 district judges, 1 United States attorney, and 1 United States marshal. There shall be appointed a clerk for said district, who shall keep his office at Honolulu. The regular term of said courts shall be held at the places designated in this act, at Honolulu on the first Monday in January and at Hilo on the first Monday in March in each year, and one grand jury shall be summoned in each year in each of said district courts. The district courts for said district, and the judges thereof, respectively, shall possess the same powers and jurisdiction and perform the same duties required to be performed by the other district courts and judges of the United States, and shall be governed by the same laws and regulations. The marshal, district attorney, and clerk of the district courts of said district, and all other officers and persons performing duties in the administration of justice therein shall severally possess the powers and perform the duties lawfully required to be performed by similar officers in other districts of the United States, and shall, for the services they may perform, receive the fees and compensation now allowed by law to officers performing similar services for the United States in other districts of the United States; and that the laws in force in the Territory of Hawaii, as far as applicable, shall extend over and apply to said State until changed by the legislature thereof.

"SEC. 8. That all appeals or writs of error taken from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii, to the Supreme Court of the United States, or the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, previous to the final admission of such State shall be prosecuted to final determination as though this act had not been passed. And all cases in which final judgment has been rendered in such territorial appellate court in which appeals or writs of error might be had except for the admission of such State may still be sued out, taken, and prosecuted to the Supreme Court of the United States or the United States Circuit Court of Appeals under the provisions of existing laws, and there held and determined in like manner, and in either case the Supreme Court of the United States, or the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, in the event of reversal shall remand the said causes to either the State supreme court or other final appellate court of said State, or the United States Circuit and district courts of said State, as the case may require; provided, that the time allowed by existing law for appeals and writs of error from appellate courts of said Territory shall not be enlarged hereby, and all appeals and writs of error not sued out from the final judgments of said courts at the time of the admission of such State shall be taken within 6 months from such time.

"SEC. 9. That all causes pending in the supreme and circuit courts of the Territory of Hawaii and in the United States courts arising under the Constitution, laws or treaties of the United States, or affecting ambassadors, ministers, or consuls of the United States, or of any other country or State, or of admiralty or of maritime jurisdiction, or in which the United States may be a party, or between citizens of the same State claiming lands under grants from different States; and in all cases where there is a controversy between citizens of said Territory prior to admission and citizens of different States, or between a citizen of any State and citizens or subjects of any foreign state or country, and in which cases of diversity of citizenship there shall be more than $2,000 in controversy, exclusive of interest and costs, shall be transferred to the proper United States district court for final disposition: Provided, That said transfer shall not be made in any case where the United States is not a party except on application of one of the parties in the court in which the cause is pending, at or before the second term of such court, after the admission of said State, supported by oath, showing that the case is one which may be so transferred, the proceedings to affect such transfer, except as to time and parties, to be the same as are now provided by law for the removal of causes from a State court to a circuit court of the United States; and in causes transferred from the appellate courts of said Territory the district court of the United States in such State shall first determine such appellate matters as the successor of and with all the power of said Territorial appellate courts, and shall thereafter proceed under its original jurisdiction of such causes. All final judgments and decrees rendered in such district courts in such transferred cases may be reviewed by the Supreme Court of the United States or by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in the same manner as is now provided by law with reference to existing United States district courts.

"SEC. 10. That all cases pending in the Supreme Court of said Territory of Hawaii not transferred to the United States district courts in said State of Hawaii shall be proceeded with, held, and determined by the supreme or other final appellate court of such State as the successor of said Territorial supreme court and appellate court, subject to the same right to review upon appeal or error to the Supreme Court of the United States now allowed from the supreme or appellate courts of a State under existing laws. Jurisdiction of all cases pending in the courts of original jurisdiction in said Territory not transferred to the United States district courts shall devolve upon and be exercised by the courts of original jurisdiction created by said State.

"SEC. 11. That the supreme court or other court of last resort of said State shall be deemed to be the successor of said Territorial appellate courts and shall take and possess any and all jurisdiction as such, not herein otherwise specifically provided for, and shall receive and retain the custody of all books, dockets, records, and files not transferred to other courts, as herein provided, subject to the duty to furnish transcripts of all book entries in any specific case transferred to complete the record thereof.

"SEC. 12. That the courts of original jurisdiction of such State shall be deemed to be the successor of all courts of original jurisdiction of said Territory and as such shall take and retain custody of all records, dockets, journals, and files of such courts except in causes transferred therefrom, as herein provided; the files and papers in such transferred cases shall be transferred to the proper United States district court, together with a transcript of all book entries to complete the record in such particular case so transferred.

"SEC. 13. That all cases pending in the circuit courts of the Territory of Hawaii at the time said Territory becomes a State not transferred to the United States district courts in the State of Hawaii shall be proceeded with, held, and determined by the courts of said State, the successors of said circuit courts of the Territory of Hawaii with the right to prosecute appeals or writs of error to the supreme court of said State, and also with the same right to prosecute appeals or writs of error from the final determination in said causes made by the Supreme Court of said State of Hawaii to the Supreme Court of the United States, as now provided by law for appeals and writs of error from the supreme court of a State to the Supreme Court of the United States.

"SEC. 14. That the constitutional convention shall by ordinance provide for the election of officers for a full State government, including members of the legislature, 2 United States Senators, and 1 Representative to Congress. Such State government shall remain in abeyance until the State shall be admitted into the Union and the election for State officers held as provided for in this act. The Governor and secretary of said State shall certify the election of the Senators and Representative in the manner required by law; and said Senators and Representative shall be entitled to be admitted to seats in Congress and to all the rights and privileges of Senators and Representatives of other States in Congress of the United States. And the officers of the State government formed in pursuance of said constitution, as provided by said constitutional convention, shall proceed to exercise all the functions of such State officers; and all laws in force in the Territory of Hawaii at the time of the admission of said State into the Union shall be in force throughout said State, except as modified or changed by this act or by the constitution of the State, and the laws of the United States not locally inapplicable shall have the same force and effect within said State as elsewhere within the United States.

"SEC. 15. That all acts or parts of acts in conflict with the provisions of this act, whether passed by the legislature of said Territory or by Congress, are hereby repealed."

be and the same is hereby approved in form and substance as the act that the Congress of the United States of America is requested to pass: And be it further

Resolved, That certified copies of this resolution be forwarded to the President of the Senate and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States, and to the Delegate to Congress from Hawaii.

Concurrent resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States of America to provide funds for making a survey to determine the feasibility of bringing water from the north coast valleys of Molokai to the southerly side of the island for use on Hawaiian Homes Commission lands

Whereas the lands set aside for the use of the Hawaiian Homes Commission are dry areas that cannot be served with any irrigation water at the present time; and

Whereas the success of homesteading on these areas is believed to be dependent upon the delivery of a sufficient amount of irrigating water to said areas; and

Whereas it is believed that a sufficient amount of irrigating water at high level is available in the valleys on the north coast of the island of Molokai: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the house of representatives (the senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States of America is hereby formally requested, through the Delegate to Congress from the Territory of Hawaii, to provide funds for the purpose of having a survey made to determine the feasibility of bringing said north coast waters of the island of Molokai to the lands of the Hawaiian Homes Commission; and be it further

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States of America is hereby further requested, through the Delegate to Congress from the Territory of Hawaii, to provide funds for fully completing the project of bringing said waters from the north coast to the south side of the island of Molokai, providing the said survey shows the project to be feasible; and be it further

Resolved, That certified copies of this concurrent resolution be forwarded to the President of the Senate of the United States, to the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, to the Secretary of the Interior of the United States, and to the Delegate to Congress from Hawaii.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a memorial of the Legislature of the State of Florida, favoring the prompt enactment of the so-called "Frazier-Lemke farm-refinance bill", which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

(See memorial printed in full when presented today by Mr. FLETCHER, p. 6603.)

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a memorial of the Legislature of the State of Florida, favoring the prompt enactment of Senate bill 1220, known as the "Thomas cost-of-production bill", which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

(See memorial printed in full when presented today by Mr. FLETCHER, p. 6604.)

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a memorial of the Legislature of the State of Florida, favoring the making of an appropriation to reimburse the county of Okaloosa, Fla., in the sum of $355,241.74, expended for construction of roads and bridges within the boundary of the Choctawhatchee National Forest, which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

(See memorial printed in full when presented today by Mr. FLETCHER, p. 6604.)

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a memorial of the Legislature of the State of Florida, favoring the appropriation of funds to make the Ocklawaha River navigable from its outlet in the St. Johns River to its source in Lake Apopka, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

(See memorial printed in full when presented today by Mr. FLETCHER, p. 6604.)

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a letter in the nature of a petition from the Spokane Valley (Wash.) Poultry Local praying for the enactment of House bill 5802, imposing an excise tax of 5 cents a dozen on eggs imported in the shell, 10 cents a pound on frozen eggs, and 31 cents a pound on dried eggs, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the Business Men's Club, of Brinsmade, N. Dak., favoring the repeal of the long-and-short-haul clause of the fourth section of the Interstate Commerce Act, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also laid before the Senate a letter from Hon. Vicente Sotto, a delegate to the Constitutional Convention of the Philippines, enclosing a protest, signed by himself and various members of the bar and citizens of the Philippine Islands, against the appointment of Hon. C. M. Recto to the Supreme Court of the Philippines, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by Columbia Lodge No. 85, of the Improved Benevolent Protective Order of Elks of the World, of Washington, D. C., favoring the prompt enactment of the so-called "Costigan-Wagner antilynching bill", which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. BARBOUR presented a letter in the nature of a petition from the Newark (N. J.) Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, praying for the prompt enactment of the so-called "Costigan-Wagner antilynching bill", which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. FLETCHER presented the following memorials of the Legislature of the State of Florida, which were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

Memorial to Congress requesting that the Congress of the United States, without further delay, pass the Frazier-Lemke farm-refinance bill, S. 212 and H. R. 2066

Whereas unless immediate relief is given, hundreds and thousands of additional farmers will lose their farms and their homes and millions more will be forced into our cities and villages and the army of the unemployed will necessarily increase to alarming proportions; and

Whereas there is no adequate way of refinancing existing agricultural indebtedness and the farmers are at the mercy of their mortgagees and creditors throughout this State and Nation; and

Whereas the Frazier-Lemke refinance bill, being S. 212 and H. R. 2066, in the Congress of the United States, provides for the liquidating and refinancing of agricultural indebtedness at a reduced rate of interest through the Farm Credit Administration and the Federal land banks; and

Whereas the Frazier-Lemke bill has the endorsement of 22 State legislatures, and in addition the lower houses of the States of New York and Delaware, and of many commercial clubs, chambers of commerce, bank organizations, and of business and professional men and women, as well as the great majority of the farmers of this Nation; and

Whereas the enactment of this bill will have a vital effect, not only upon agriculture but upon all classes of industry; and

Whereas agriculture is the basic industry of this country, and there can be no recovery until agriculture is put upon a sound basis: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of your memorialists, the members of the Florida Legislative Assembly of the State of Florida, the senate and the house concurring, that the Congress of the United States should enact the Frazier-Lemke bill without further delay; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial, duly authenticated, be sent by the secretary of state to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and to each Senator and Representative in Congress from this State, to the President of the United States, and to United States Senator LYNN J. FRAZIER and Congressman WILLIAM LEMKE.

Memorial to Congress requesting that the Congress of the United States, without further delay, pass the Thomas cost-of-production bill, S. 1220

Whereas, unless immediate cost of production is guaranteed, hundreds and thousands of additional farmers will be financially unable to produce crops and millions more will be forced into our cities and villages, and the army of the unemployed will necessarily increase to alarming proportions; and

Whereas there is no adequate way of guaranteeing cost of production, the farmers are at the mercy of the markets throughout this State and Nation; and

Whereas many farm producers are selling below the cost of production with no immediate relief in sight; and

Whereas the Thomas cost-of-production bill has the endorsement of several State legislatures, commercial clubs, chambers of commerce, business organizations, and business and professional men and women, as well as the great majority of the farmers of this Nation; and

Whereas the enactment of this bill will have a vital effect upon not only agriculture but upon all classes of industry; and

Whereas agriculture is the basic industry in this country, and there can be no recovery until agriculture is put on a sound basis: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of your memorialists, the members of the 1935 Legislative Assembly of the State of Florida (the senate and the house concurring) that the Congress of the United States should enact the Thomas bill without further delay; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial, duly authenticated, be sent by the secretary of state to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and to each Senator and Representative in Congress from this State, to the President of the United States, and to United States Senator THOMAS, of Oklahoma.

Mr. FLETCHER also presented the following memorial of the Legislature of the State of Florida, which was referred to the Committee on Claims:

House Memorial 3

A memorial to the Congress of the United States of America requesting an appropriation reimbursing the County of Okaloosa, State of Florida, the sum of $355,241.74 expended for construction of roads and bridges within the boundary of the Choctawhatchee National Forest, reservation of the United States Government.

Whereas the county of Okaloosa was created by an act of the Legislature of Florida, 1915 session, and that the territory embraced ranges 22, 23, 24, and 25 west of Tallahassee meridian; and

Whereas it appears that at the time of the creation of said county a portion of said territory was within the boundary of the Choctawhatchee National Forest, a reservation of the United States Government, and at this time is still a portion of said reservation; and

Whereas at the time of the creation of said county there were no improved public roads traversing said forest and in order that such highways be constructed for the accommodation of the citizens and residents in said territory, the said citizens from time to time voted the issuance of bonds in the sum of $105,000, which said moneys were expended by the county of Okaloosa, in the cooperation with the Forestry Department in the construction of roads in said territory, the principal and interest of said bonds to be paid from ad valorem taxation on the real estate in said territory; and

Whereas, during the years 1926 and 1927, it was found that said roads were inadequate for the accommodation of the territory, the board of county commissioners by petition and resolution requested the Legislature of Florida to authorize the said board to issue and sell bonds in the sum of $600,000, the proceeds to be used in the construction of certain permanent roads in the county, a portion of said roads being within the said forest reservation; and

Whereas the Legislature of the State of Florida authorized the said board of county commissioners to issue and sell said bonds, and the said board did sell same for the sum of $585,000, and a portion of said sum was spent for the construction of the following designated State roads in said forest, the following amounts:

$357,277.79, State Road No. 10, from Walton County line to Santa Rosa County line;

$71,680.89, State Road No. 54, from Crestview to Niceville;

$26,283.06, State Road No. 105, from Yellow River to Wright, and that the principal and interest of said bonds to be paid from ad valorem taxes and other sources; and

Whereas it appears that since the issuance and sale of the bonds aforesaid that the timber on lands owned by individuals and corporations in said forest has been cut and removed from said lands thereby reducing the value of said lands to the extent the said county at this time receives practically no tax on said lands and that the said Forest Service has purchased several thousands acres of land in said territory and has bargained to purchase several thousand acres more with apparent intention to consolidate forest area, thereby causing the county of Okaloosa to be deprived of any revenue from said lands; and

Whereas it appears that due to the inability of the said county of Okaloosa to receive taxes from its said lands to meet the interest and principal payments on said bonds, and other obligations of the county, that the credit of said county has been crippled, causing embarrassment to the county and its creditors to the amount of approximately $500,000: Therefore

Whereas in view of the fact that the sum of $355,241.74 was expended in good faith by said county in the construction of permanent roads and bridges; and

Whereas said sum was expended for the permanent improvement of, and did improve, the said forest reservation: Therefore, be it

Enacted by the Legislature of the State of Florida, That the Senators and Representatives from the State of Florida, in the Congress of the United States of America, be, and they are hereby, respectfully requested and urged to introduce and have passed by the Congress of the United States an appropriation reimbursing the county of Okaloosa the sum of $355,241.74 expended for construction of roads and bridges as aforesaid in said county; be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state of the State of Florida be requested to send each of the Senators and Representatives of Florida a copy of this memorial, and that he also send a copy of this memorial, under the great seal of the State, to the President of the United States and to the United States Congress.

Mr. FLETCHER also presented the following memorials of the Legislature of the State of Florida, which were referred to the Committee on Commerce:

A memorial to the Congress of the United States of America, now convened in session as the Seventy-fourth Congress of the United States of America

Whereas the navigable waters known and designated by the United States Government as the Ocklawaha River, with its outlet in the navigable water of the St. Johns River, is in fact navigable only to small craft; and

Whereas the Federal Government has expended large sums of money on said Ocklawaha River in the construction of a lock and dam and dikes, which are utterly useless without other and further work and development of said river for the purpose of making it navigable; and

Whereas the beauties of the Ocklawaha River and the inland waters of Florida connected with said Ocklawaha River are unexcelled in any part of the United States; and

Whereas said Ocklawaha River and its tributaries lie within the most productive and highly developed agricultural sections of the State of Florida; and

Whereas the expenditure of a comparatively small amount of money would make this wonderful land of lakes, rivers, tropical growth, sunshine, and wealth accessible to pleasure and commercial watercraft: Be it therefore

Resolved by the Florida Legislature, That the Senators and Representatives from the State of Florida in the Congress of the United States of America be, and they are hereby, respectfully requested and urged to make every effort to obtain the necessary appropriation of moneys to be used for the purpose of making the said Ocklawaha River navigable from its outlet in the St. Johns River to its source in Lake Apopka; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this memorial be immediately forwarded, under the great seal of the State of Florida, by the secretary of the State of Florida, to the President of the United States Senate, to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to each Senator and Congressman of the State of Florida.

Senate Memorial 9

Whereas the construction of the canal between the Choctawhatchee Bay and West Bay, Fla., and the improvement of the canal between the Apalachicola River and St. Andrews Bay, Fla., are the last remaining uncompleted projects in that part of the Gulf Coastal Canal System between the Apalachicola River and Corpus Christi, Tex.; and

Whereas full and complete approval of these two projects has been given by the Rivers and Harbors Committee of Congress and the United States Army Engineers as set forth in House Documents No. 259 and No. 52 of the Seventy-second Congress; and

Whereas every Federal agency has proven the economic necessity and justification for the expenditure of the cost of these projects which has been estimated by the United States Army Engineers; and

Whereas the only present means by which Federal funds can be appropriated for the construction of these projects is from the proceeds of the recently enacted Federal security fund; and

Whereas it will be incumbent upon our Senators and Congressmen in Washington to take active and immediate steps to secure the appropriation from the Public Works Administrator and such other agency as may be set up for the distribution of the recently enacted security fund; and

Whereas the Gulf Coastal Canal System on which the Federal Government has already expended some $80,000,000 cannot be completed or brought into full fruition until these two Florida projects are completed; and

Whereas when the same are completed they will provide a means of continuous water transportation between the upper regions of the Apalachicola River and the St. Marks River on the east, the entire Gulf coast to Corpus Christi, Tex., on the west, and through the Mississippi River to Chicago and the Great Lakes; and

Whereas this continuous water-transportation facility is of tremendous economic importance particularly to the Gulf coast and interior sections of Florida, Georgia, and Alabama; and

Whereas the expenditure at this time of the funds in this area of Florida will be of great assistance in helping to relieve the unemployment burden of the area: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Legislature of the State of Florida hereby requests the Senators and Congressmen of Florida, Georgia, and Alabama to use all possible means to secure the appropriation for the immediate construction of these projects; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States, to the Public Works Administrator in Washington, and to any other Federal agency which the President may appoint for the purpose of allocating funds to such Federal projects and to our Senators and Congressmen in Washington and to the Senators and Congressmen of Georgia and Alabama and to the press of the several respective States.

REPORT OF MILITARY AFFAIRS COMMITTEE

Mr. AUSTIN, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 166) for the relief of Jack Doyle, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 560) thereon.

ENROLLED BILL PRESENTED

Mrs. CARAWAY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on the 29th instant that committee presented to the President of the United States the enrolled bill (S. 2035) to amend an act approved June 25, 1934, authorizing loans from the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works, for the construction of certain municipal buildings in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED

Bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. McGILL:

A bill (S. 2714) for the relief of Fred R. Cuddy; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CONNALLY:

A bill (S. 2715) conferring jurisdiction on the Court of Claims to hear and determine the claims of the Choctaw Indians of the State of Mississippi; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. SMITH:

A bill (S. 2716) to provide for the establishment of a national monument and cemetery in Greenwood County, S. C., to be known as the "Star Fort National Monument and Cemetery"; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

By Mr. BYRNES:

A bill (S. 2717) to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to make surveys of representative farm areas each year in each State for the purpose of obtaining and publishing information upon the economic condition of agriculture throughout the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. BAILEY:

A bill (S. 2718) for the relief of Walter D. Foster; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. FLETCHER:

A bill (S. 2719) for the relief of Capt. Guy L. Hartman; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. GUFFEY:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 110) authorizing Brig. Gen. C. E. Nathorst, Philippine Constabulary, retired, to accept such decorations, orders, medals, or presents as have been tendered him by foreign governments; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SCHALL:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 111) directing the President of the United States of America to proclaim October 11, 1935, General Pulaski's Memorial Day, for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 258) to provide for certain State allotments under the Cotton Control Act, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

INCLUSION OF PUERTO RICO AND VIRGIN ISLANDS IN SOCIAL-SECURITY PROGRAM

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I have received from the Secretary of the Interior a letter enclosing a proposed amendment to the social-security bill. The letter goes on to say that Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands are not included in the social-security bill, and, because of the argument made by the Secretary, I ask that his letter be printed in the RECORD and that the amendment which he has enclosed be referred to the Committee on Finance.

There being no objection, the amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. TYDINGS (by request) to the bill (H. R. 7260) to provide for the general welfare by establishing a system of Federal old-age benefits, and by enabling the several States to make more adequate provision for aged persons, dependent and crippled children, maternal and child welfare, public health, and the administration of their unemployment compensation laws; to establish a social security board, to raise revenue; and for other purposes, was referred to the Committee on Finance, and the letter, together with the proposed amendment, was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, April 24, 1935.

Hon. MILLARD E. TYDINGS,
Chairman Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR TYDINGS: Enclosed is a draft of a proposed amendment to H. R. 7260, the social-security bill.

The amendment relates to titles I, IV, V, and VI, dealing with grants for old-age assistance, aid to dependent children, maternal and child welfare, and public-health work. The bill in its present form provides for grants for these purposes to the States, the District of Columbia, Alaska, and Hawaii, but not to the insular possessions. The proposed amendment would extend the definition of the term "State", where used in these titles, to include Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

The need for aid of this sort in those possessions is at least as great as in the States and Territories. It is demonstrable by figures that in the case of Puerto Rico the actual need per capita is very much greater than in any State of the Union. Puerto Rico has suffered particularly from legislation designed to benefit the American people as a whole, to the cost of which Puerto Rico has contributed, but the benefits of which were not applicable to its citizens. There seems to be no just reason for discriminating against these possessions. Indeed, because of their lack of representation in Congress, it seems to me that we should be particularly solicitous that they do not suffer economically through their lesser political status.

In the original economic-security bill, H. R. 4120, Puerto Rico was included among the "States" entitled to grants under the titles corresponding to titles I, IV, and V. In the present bill, H. R. 7260, Puerto Rico has been excluded and the amounts authorized to be appropriated have been somewhat reduced. The proposed amendment would restore the amounts authorized to be appropriated in those titles in the original bill, in order to make some provision for the needs of the island possessions.

I am advised by Mr. A. J. Altmeyer, Second Assistant Secretary of Labor, on behalf of Miss Perkins, the chairman of the President's Committee on Economic Security, that "the Committee on Economic Security has never given specific consideration to the question of whether the security legislation should cover the Territories and possessions of the United States", and that he believes, therefore, that I am free to make such recommendations on this subject as I deem proper.

In view of the urgent need for aid of this sort, so essential to social security in these possessions, I strongly recommend that this amendment be given favorable consideration.

I have transmitted to Senator HARRISON, as Chairman of the Committee on Finance, a similar letter advising him of the facts and recommending that this amendment be adopted. For your convenience, I am enclosing a copy of my letter to Senator HARRISON.

Sincerely yours,

HAROLD L. ICKES,
Secretary of the Interior.

Amendments intended to be proposed by Mr. TYDINGS (by request) to House bill no. 7260, the social-security bill.

On page 2, line 5, to strike out "$49,750,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$50,000,000."

On page 19, line 23, to strike out "$24,750,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$25,000,000."

On page 25, line 6, to strike out "$3,800,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$4,000,000."

On page 30, line 13, strike out "$2,850,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$3,000,000."

On page 59, line 13, after "Columbia", insert a semicolon and the following: "and when used in titles I, IV, V (except section 531) and VI, the term 'State' includes, in addition, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands."

AGRICULTURE—ADDRESS BY SENATOR M'GILL

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, I ask leave to have printed in the RECORD a very able address upon the condition of agriculture, and the work of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, delivered by Hon. GEORGE MCGILL, of Kansas, April 29, 1935, over the National Broadcasting Co. network from the Capitol Building in Washington, D. C.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

I wish to take this opportunity to thank the National Broadcasting Co. for the privilege of discussing over the radio some of the questions affecting the agricultural industry of the country.

During the 4 years immediately preceding the Roosevelt administration we had witnessed inaction in the affairs of our Government looking toward any policy or program calculated to be beneficial to the masses of our people. During that entire period we had witnessed the loss of foreign markets, the building of huge agricultural surpluses, the falling of commodity prices, and the paralysis of business generally. During a period of peace no such calamitous conditions without cause or reason had at any time theretofore been foisted upon our people.

Time will not permit, nor would it seem necessary for the purposes of the subject I propose to discuss on this occasion, to review the perilous conditions in which our people were living at the time the present administration came into power.

It will, I am sure, be conceded that the basic industry of this country and the one from which our wealth is largely derived is the agricultural industry; and therefore, for the brief period allotted to me on this program, I shall devote the time to questions affecting that industry as embraced in the policies which have been in vogue during this administration as well as to the pending bill to correct the economic instability resulting from some forms of farm tenancy and especially as it pertains to rural rehabilitation and which has been introduced in the Senate by my friend, Senator BANKHEAD, of Alabama.

When President Roosevelt was inaugurated in March 1933, there was in storage in this country a surplus of approximately 13,000,000 bales of cotton, which is more than the normal production in this country in 1 year; there was also in storage in this country a surplus of approximately 400,000,000 bushels of wheat, as well as a surplus of virtually every other basic agricultural commodity. For these surpluses there existed no outlet or market, and the result was prices for the products of the farm had been driven down far below the cost of production and agriculture was in a state of ruin—all of which had a paralyzing effect on every other industry and vocation in this country. There could have been no degree of economic recovery without a program to rehabilitate agriculture—a program to not only restore value but a profit to the farmer in the products of the farm. Centered around this problem was one of the major issues of the campaign of 1932. It was then the contention of the supporters of the present administration that, instead of the policies of the then Federal Farm Board of buying and storing surpluses, thereby destroying market prices, there should be a voluntary cooperative allotment program, not to be engaged in wholly at the expense of the producers but at the expense of the public generally, whereby production would be caused to become in harmony with the consumptive demands. The result was the enactment by the Congress early in the history of this administration of what is known as the "Agricultural Adjustment Act."

The purpose of the Agricultural Adjustment Act largely is to raise funds by a processing tax, which is in effect the farmers' tariff, with which to pay farmers a rental for land the farmers will agree to and will take out of production, and thereby enhance the prices farmers will receive for what they produce and place agriculture on a profitable basis. I would not be so vain as to contend that the entire increase, which has since occurred in the market price of farm commodities, has been due to the administration of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, but do contend it is the one general act of Congress which has far surpassed all others as a direct and positive aid in tending toward the restoration of economic stability of the farmers of our country. Those who criticize the Agricultural Adjustment Act and the administration of it will find if they but inquire among them that the farmers of the Nation are strongly in favor of a continuation of the program.

My home State of Kansas normally produces annually approximately one-fifth of all of the wheat produced in the entire country. In 1930, 1931, and 1932 the farmers of that State were receiving at the local markets approximately 25 cents per bushel for that commodity, which meant that the market price at Chicago was approximately during that period 40 cents per bushel. The price those farmers were receiving during that period was less than the cost of production. Today the price of wheat on the Chicago market is approximately $1 per bushel and from 80 to 85 cents per bushel on the local markets of the principal wheat-producing States. In addition to the price increase the wheat farmers for stabilizing production to a point near the market demands have received substantial rental payments under the agricultural adjustment program for the land removed from production.

The history of other basic agricultural commodities under the agricultural-adjustment program is similar to that of wheat, and unless and until adequate foreign markets can be and are restored, this program is the only one thus far suggested whereby the farmer may expect to sustain his business on a profitable basis. As has been suggested in addition to the increase in the market price, rental or benefit payments made under the act to farmers should not fail to receive proper consideration. Examination of the Budget Division of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration will disclose that for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, cotton farmers were paid rental or benefit payments amounting to $139,525,359.58, and that for the period from July 1, 1934, to March 31, 1935, cotton farmers received additional payments of the same character amounting to $85,437,179.51, a total during the entire period of $224,962,539.09; that for the year ending June 30, 1934, the wheat farmers were paid rental or benefit payments amounting to $68,965,433.17, and for the period from July 1, 1934, to March 31, 1935, wheat farmers received payments of the same character amounting to the sum of $93,479,422.95, a total for the entire period of $162,444,856.12. The corn-hog farmers were paid to March 31, 1935, the sum of $253,536,280.21 in rental and benefit payments. For the year ending June 30, 1934, to and including March 31, 1935, tobacco farmers had received payments of the same character amounting to the sum of $31,216,317.34, and sugar farmers had received payments of like type for the same period amounting to the sum of $6,256,933.69. During the period to which I have referred the various classes of farmers described have received in rental or benefit payments in addition to the substantial increase in market prices for the commodities mentioned the total sum of $678,416,926.45. During the same period the processing tax collected has amounted to the total sum of $772,963,077. It will be observed the program has been and will be practically self-sustaining.

I strongly favor the efforts which have been made and are now being made toward creating foreign markets for our surplus agricultural commodities; but until accomplishments in that direction are more fully realized, no agricultural program thus far advanced looking to the welfare of our farmers surpasses the Agricultural Adjustment program in bringing to pass economic recovery among the tillers of the soil.

I would be remiss in my obligations as a representative of a great agricultural State if I did not on this occasion pay tribute, which I freely do, to Mr. Secretary Wallace, whom I regard as one of the greatest Secretaries of Agriculture we have had in any administration, for the sympathetic and efficient manner in which the Agricultural Adjustment Act has been administered under his administration of that high and responsible office.

At the inception of my remarks I stated that I proposed also to discuss briefly the bill which has been introduced by Senator BANKHEAD, of Alabama, relating to rural rehabilitation and the farm-tenancy situation. As I view this measure, it is in no way in conflict with the agricultural-adjustment program, will not materially increase the production of the commodities of the farm, will tend to increase consumption of farm commodities and promote the welfare and independence of our people and make it possible for many families to live in peace and comfort who otherwise would be without homes and oftentimes in want.

To my mind ultimate economic stability in this country is dependent not only upon a reduction of farm tenantry but also on engaging upon a program which will induce many of those in the crowded population of our cities where there is not and probably never will be sufficient employment to maintain them to move upon and cultivate farms from which they can derive sufficient in production and income to maintain themselves in comfortable if not commodious homes. Our wealth is derived from the earth, and if a larger portion of our population were living in the rural districts, our problems as a nation would be much less difficult.

Approximately 43 percent of our farmers are tenants. This is a deplorable condition. This is not a race problem—the great percentage of our farm tenants the country over are white people. Neither is farm tenancy a sectional problem—it is Nation-wide. In my home State of Kansas 42.1 percent of our farmers are tenants. In the neighboring States bordering on Kansas the number of farm tenants in point of percentage to all farmers is: Colorado, 33.9 percent; Nebraska, 47 percent; Iowa, 47.3 percent; Missouri, 33 percent; and Oklahoma, 54.3 percent. These averages are as high as any in the United States and evidence the fact that the problem is national in scope. Naturally the better, more stable, and independent farmer is the one who lives on and farms land which he owns.

By the Bankhead bill it is proposed to engage on a program which I believe will enable many more people to own their own farms. It is not proposed to take a citizen's land from the owner except where the owner for fair market value may desire to part with his title, but the program would be broad and permanent and cause a larger percent of our population to become farmers and home owners. Of necessity such a program must and, if the bill is enacted into law will be one covering a long period.

The program of rural rehabilitation as contemplated by this bill would, if it becomes a law, be carried on by a corporate agency to be established under the provisions of the measure. This agency would have power to acquire, by purchase, gift, or otherwise, farm lands and dispose of the land on a long-time plan to farmers who would occupy such farms. Preference would be given to applicants, the bill provides, with farming experience and who have dependent families. The bill further provides that no purchaser, so long as the purchase price is not paid in full, shall sell, lease, transfer, convey, or mortgage the property purchased. There is a provision in the measure which provides that this agency shall not in any manner dispose of any land acquired by it to any corporation or enter into any contract or agreement with any corporation with respect to the acquisition by it of any real property or interest therein, and shall not dispose of farm property to a person owning a farm of sufficient size and earning capacity to support the owner and family. The sole purpose of the bill is to enable persons who otherwise would not be able to do so to acquire small farms for homes where they can maintain themselves. This is the heart of the measure. With the objects and aims of the bill I am in hearty accord. The proper use of our land will always sustain us, and there is in the final analysis no other way by which we can maintain ourselves as a happy and reasonably prosperous people.

The Bankhead bill was debated on the floor of the United States Senate recently for several days when it was recommitted to the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry for the purpose of perfecting some of its provisions and with instructions that the committee again report the bill to the Senate not later than the 12th day of May. Doubtless, soon thereafter, the measure will again be before the Senate for consideration. It is a measure designed and intended to promote the welfare of persons with little or no means and its supporters in the Congress should receive the encouragement of our people in the efforts they are putting forth to enact it into law.

I am not discounting the value of other programs of the administration or of vocations in life other than farming, but in the brief period allotted to me for this broadcast it has been my purpose to emphasize the importance of rural rehabilitation and the basic industry of agriculture—the industry which is the sustaining bulwark of a stable democratic form of government.

I have purposely avoided on this occasion a discussion of the proposed amendments to the Agricultural Adjustment Act. They will receive due consideration by the legislative branch of the Government. Some of them should probably be adopted while others should, insofar as the study I have been able to give them would indicate, in my judgment should be rejected. One thing is certain; the basic program and the basic theories contained in the Agricultural Adjustment Act will not and should not at this time be abandoned or changed. Without that program I seriously question whether the farmers of the country could have survived during the past 2 years.

In closing I feel it my duty to say that those who howl regimentation, fascism, socialism, sovietism, or any similar fierce-sounding term are merely for selfish or political reasons endeavoring to becloud the issue. No program is being seriously considered, and no program is or has been in operation under the present administration, justifying anyone's fear. We have as President of the United States a true follower of Jefferson, a real friend of the average citizen of this country—regardless of what may be his or her pursuit in life. The welfare of the masses of our people is paramount in the Presidential mind. Under his leadership your rights and liberties as individual American citizens will be preserved to you and your descendants. In my judgment, under the policies of this administration we are moving toward ultimate recovery and normal times much more rapidly than we had a right to anticipate. Our President has a heart which beats in unison with the welfare and interests of the masses of our people, and his untiring efforts to save and economically rehabilitate a great Nation should not, must not, and shall not fail. Let us not be deterred in our loyalty by those who are undertaking to undermine and oppose his program. Their program is only one of criticisms and lamentations. More has been accomplished under the administration of President Roosevelt in behalf of the average citizen than has been accomplished for such citizens under any administration in recent times. It was given to him to take over the affairs of government when the financial structure of the Nation had collapsed and at the most trying period of any of our Presidents in a time of peace. The easiest role for one to assume is that of a critic. A constructive program of economic rehabilitation requires constructive statesmanship. The programs of rehabilitation of the Roosevelt administration have been outstanding in their accomplishments, and not even his critics would have them abolished.

REGULATION OF BANKS AND BANKING—ADDRESS BY SENATOR FLETCHER

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a radio colloquy between Hon. DUNCAN U. FLETCHER and Sherman Mittell in the broadcast, An American Fireside, April 28, 1935.

There being no objection, the colloquy was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

OPENING ANNOUNCEMENT

An American fireside. Our guest at an American fireside tonight is the Honorable DUNCAN U. FLETCHER, United States Senator from Florida and Chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, who will talk with Sherman Mittell, of the National Home Library Foundation. Mr. Hapgood is unable to be with us tonight but will be back again next Sunday.

Mr. Mittell has just greeted Senator FLETCHER and they are seated around the fireside.

Mr. Mittell is speaking.

Mr. MITTELL. A number of these half hours are given over to discussing the problems of democracy. Senator FLETCHER, more and more we begin to see that our national problems are tied up with correcting the errors of the past. While our frontier was open we could develop without worrying about consequences or the future. With a closed frontier and with a nation well knit, we begin to see more and more that our commercial and industrial activities affect the very foundations of our social well-being. The history of banking hasn't been any too fortunate for the American people and for some reason or other Americans have always felt, until recently, that it was a field beyond their common everyday knowledge and concern. Our last tragic experience, I believe, has opened the eyes of the people to the realization that without a sound banking system it cannot have a safe, economic, or secure social life.

Justice Brandeis has told us in that memorable book—Other People's Money and How the Bankers Use It—which was written 20 years ago and which today is a classic in democracy, how the control of the private bankers, particularly a handful of men, constituted a strangle hold on our industrial life. This book, as you know, was written immediately after the Pujo investigation in 1913. It is the opinion of many that had his advice been taken and his warnings heeded, we should not have been thrown into the tragic situation we experienced 20 years later, affecting disastrously millions of people.

For 2 years your committee, with you as its chairman, carried on an investigation of our banking practices that has already led to banking reform. Last year Senator CUTTING introduced an excellent bill that went a step farther, but, Senator FLETCHER, what is the most important piece of legislation on your committee's calendar at this time, and can you tell us something of that?

Senator FLETCHER. In my opinion, the proposed Banking Act of 1935 is, in all probability, the most important piece of banking and monetary policy legislation with which this or any other Congress has dealt. Hearings are now being held, and within a short time the committee will attempt to perfect this piece of legislation.

In connection with this bill, I think it is of interest to note that numbers of people misunderstand its purpose. Few of them have read the bill, due probably to the pressure of personal business.

Mr. MITTELL. Senator FLETCHER, I understand that the bill is, like all Gaul, divided into three parts; title I dealing with amendments to the deposit-insurance law, the main provision of which is that of establishing the maximum insurable deposit at $5,000.

Senator FLETCHER. That is correct.

Mr. MITTELL. And that title III carries a number of amendments to various banking provisions. I also understand that bankers, a number of bankers' associations, some economists, editors, and financial writers support these two titles. On the other hand, numbers of these people whom I have just mentioned are opposed to title II. If my statement is correct, Senator, I should think you would like to explain to us just why you think "the proposed Banking Act of 1935 is in all probability the most important piece of banking and monetary policy legislation with which this or any other Congress has dealt."

Senator FLETCHER. I base that statement upon the importance of title II alone; and it is title II of the bill which is bearing the brunt of almost all the opposition made to the entire piece of legislation.

The general public must not be misled. This legislation will serve a public purpose, and its enactment is essential to the establishment of the financial and economic security of this Nation's domestic enterprises.

Mr. MITTELL. Suppose you outline it more fully, Senator FLETCHER.

Senator FLETCHER. Title II deals almost wholly with the creation of machinery for the effective regulation of a definite monetary policy in accordance with the campaign promises of President Roosevelt. Those promises were based on the Democratic platform of 1932, which advocated "a sound currency to be preserved at all hazards" and proposed to put an end to "the indefensible expansion and contraction of credit for private profit at the expense of the public."

Moreover, it is a definite attempt to accomplish the ends which the President had in mind, when, on July 3, 1933, he stated to the American delegation to the London Economic Conference and again reaffirmed on October 22 in his address to the American people, in which he stated that:

"When we have restored the price level, we shall seek to establish and maintain a dollar which will not change its purchasing and debt-paying power during the succeeding generation. I said that in my message to the American delegation in July and I say it now once more."

May I point out that, with one or two exceptions, title II of the bill deals with the control over the monetary policy of this Nation. Such monetary-policy operations cannot and should not be merged with purely banking operations.

Mr. MITTELL. Pardon me, Senator, may I ask that you explain a little more fully your last statement to the effect that "monetary-policy operations cannot and should not be merged with purely banking operations"?

Senator FLETCHER. Certainly. The distinction must be kept clearly in mind.

The administration of a monetary policy has to do with the contraction and expansion of the credit and currency of the country and directly affects the purchasing power of money. This function transcends those of banking, farming, manufacturing, or that of any other business activity. It literally controls the economic and social welfare of the whole Nation. Traditionally, to be sure, this function has been turned over to banks and bankers who have operated it without direct responsibility to anyone. We propose to centralize the powers and responsibilities for the total expansion and contraction of currency and credit in the Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. MITTELL. Senator, what are those matters that have to do with purely banking operations?

Senator FLETCHER. Purely banking operations have to do with the direct lending of the bank's cash or credit to borrowers in which the major interests of the banker or bankers must always be concerned with the character of the borrower, security for the loan, and the uses to which the borrower is going to put the cash or credit he obtains from the bank.

A loan made by a bank is definitely an investment of the bank's cash or credit just as is the purchase of Government bonds, a mortgage, or any other type of paper representing either ownership in or obligations on a piece of property, are investments of a bank.

Such transactions as I have enumerated go to make up purely banking operations and to the extent that a banker engages in these transactions, he should be held strictly accountable for their soundness. And in order that we may be assured that bankers are conforming with the law and the rules and regulations made by the various examining agencies created by the Federal Government and the 48 State governments, bank examiners periodically examine the banks as to the soundness of their assets and the legality of their operations.

Mr. MITTELL. Senator FLETCHER, haven't we heretofore had bank examiners do the thing you are now asking should be done?

Senator FLETCHER. We have had bank examiners and expect to retain them. But bank examiners pass upon the soundness of an individual loan or investment of a bank, and finally upon the soundness of the bank as a whole. But the generative forces to which I refer are of such a nature as to affect the total volume of all loans, investments, and deposits of all banks at one and the same time, irrespective as to whether those loans, investments, and deposits are or are not sound. These forces are such as to increase that volume, or decrease that volume, irrespective of the soundness of the work done by bankers or by bank examiners.

May I stress the fact that even though bankers and bank examiners use the greatest amount of discretion in making and supervising the loans and the investment of the bank's funds, it is possible to undermine and even destroy all of their painstaking efforts by bringing about, through open-market operations, rediscount rates, and control over reserves, a contraction of the total volume of credit and currency outstanding.

Mr. MITTELL. Then you do not blame bankers as individuals for our difficulties?

Senator FLETCHER. No; of course not. There are literally thousands of bankers in this country whose heads are bowed in humiliation and shame. They are blamed for the vicious results, many of which they are not able to rationalize. They have had their lines of credit shut off, their reserves reduced, or have experienced the withdrawal of huge sums of money upon demand. In turn they have been forced to try to call in loans which they oftentimes have made with the greatest of caution and deserved confidence, to be peremptorily thrown without warning into the maelstrom of a financial panic, contraction, or depression.

Mr. MITTELL. Do you hold all bankers more or less blameless?

Senator FLETCHER. No. Among them there have been a few bankers "in the know" and also in a dominant position for laying down the rules for making money "tight" or "easy"—of literally determining the trend—yet the latter have not personally been singled out, nor can they, under our present system, be called to account for the disastrous results of their acts. It is my earnest desire that the fifteen or twenty thousand bewildered bankers, who have never known and cannot be expected to know why money is "tight" or "easy", demand that this great destabilizing and disturbing factor of monetary policy be separated from banking per se and placed in the hands of men who must and who shall be held responsible and accountable for their acts. Undoubtedly in this great Nation we can find at least five or eight men, depending upon the final provisions of the act, who know what it is all about and can be trusted to administer our monetary policy intelligently and with the greatest amount of integrity and respect for the people and to act for the public welfare.

Mr. MITTELL. Senator FLETCHER, I think I see your point, but I wonder if you can't explain to us somewhat more clearly the relative position of a banker or bankers to the expansion or contraction of the total volume of credit and currency?

Senator FLETCHER. Very well; I think that relationship should be explained very clearly.

In the first place, it should be explained that about 90 or 95 percent of our total money supply is in the form of bank credit. The remaining 5 or 10 percent is made up of legal-tender currency. For all normal business needs bank credit serves all of the functions of money. Hence, whenever bankers increase or decrease the total supply of bank credit, they are for all intents and purposes increasing or decreasing the supply of our money.

The total supply of bank credit outstanding at any particular time is expressed in terms of the total deposits of all banks. When bankers make loans they increase the total amount of bank credit outstanding by increasing the amount of their customers' deposits. Likewise, when loans are paid off or bankers call loans for payment, the total amount of bank credit is reduced.

Mr. MITTELL. Senator FLETCHER, are there any "rules of thumb", so to speak, which control the total expansion of contraction of bank credit during periods of normal business conditions?

Senator FLETCHER. In periods of normal business conditions bankers are permitted to have deposits outstanding in any amounts not to exceed the maximum permitted under either a banker's "rule of thumb" or a comparable statutory "rule of thumb." Either of these "rules of thumb", which I shall subsequently explain, afford us no ultimate protection against the overexpansion, even "inflation", of bank credit, as I shall point out. The first "rule of thumb" I wish to explain is that which the Comptroller of the Currency and bankers through long experience have been applying to the capital structure of a bank in comparison with its total outstanding deposits. It has received quite a bit of attention during the last 2 or 3 years on the part of the Comptroller in his attempt to bring the capital structure of a bank in line with its total deposits and has resulted in the sale of either the preferred stock or debentures of a bank to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, where private subscription could not be had. Under this rule, bankers are permitted to have deposits outstanding not to exceed 10 times their capital, surplus and undivided profits.

Mr. MITTELL. Can you express that rule in terms of figures for us, Senator FLETCHER?

Senator FLETCHER. That means that if the total capital, surplus, and undivided profits of all banks in the country is $5,000,000,000, then the banks of the country cannot have deposits outstanding in excess of $50,000,000,000.

To make it more concrete, may I remind you that on June 30, 1934, the total amount of capital, surplus and undivided profits was approximately seven and a half billion dollars. That would mean that the banks would be permitted under normal business conditions to expand their deposits in an amount not to exceed $75,000,000,000. On that date, however, the total of deposits stood at forty-six and one-half billions. If we considered only the 10-to-1 "rule of thumb", bankers would in the course of time be permitted to increase their deposits some $30,000,000,000. However, before they reach that maximum of $75,000,000,000 they will, of course, have to give immediate consideration to the building up of what is known as their reserves.

Mr. MITTELL. What is the evident weakness of such a 10-to-1 "rule of thumb"?

Senator FLETCHER. The weakness of the above 10-to-1 "rule of thumb" is that the limitation on the expansion of the total amount of bank credit outstanding is a fleeting fantasy, for the reason that bankers may and will increase their capital, surplus, and undivided profits solely in the interest of private profits. That power absolutely must be exercised and controlled in the public interest and not for private profit.

Under such a rule, the total of bank credit outstanding may range between two extremes where the upper limit is 10 times the variable factor of capital, surplus, and undivided profits; and the lower limit of contraction, destruction, and deflation of bank credit is an absolute zero.

Mr. MITTELL. It does not seem the 10-to-1 "rule of thumb" of the bankers and the Comptroller affords us much security.

Senator FLETCHER. That leads us to the consideration of a statutory "rule of thumb" incorporated in the Federal Reserve Act and subject to a comparable limitation from the point of view of safety, security, or protection of the public interest if the instruments, the power, and the responsibility for the administration of our monetary policy are not placed in a competent and responsible administrative body.

Mr. MITTELL. You mentioned reserves, Senator FLETCHER, and I recall there was some statutory provision in that connection. What has been the result of our experience under the statutory rule?

Senator FLETCHER. As a result of bitter experience, a fixed statutory rule has proven to be unsatisfactory. Under it in times of normal business conditions the total supply of bank credit outstanding at any particular time is determined by the volume of bank reserves and the required reserve ratio which is, roughly for all deposits, another 10-to-1 ratio; and is almost as unsatisfactory from the point of view of the public's security when left to the control of banks and bankers as has been demonstrated with the first "rule of thumb." The public's safety, security, and welfare are not adequately protected in this "rule of thumb" which is expressed in terms of an arbitrary ratio, yet variable item of "required reserves."

Mr. MITTELL. Why do you say bank reserves are a variable item, Senator FLETCHER?

Senator FLETCHER. Bank reserves are variable for the reason that they can be increased through gold imports, inflow of currency from circulation, or receipt of Federal Reserve funds. Hence the banking system as a whole will be able to increase the total volume of bank credit outstanding by approximately 10 times the amount of increased reserves. Inversely a loss of reserves has a tendency to result in a tenfold contraction of bank credit.

To make this observation more concrete, may I recall certain years of depression, when banks were suffering severe losses of deposits and reserves. The banks, in order to meet reserve deficiencies, were forced to curtail loans and investments, with the result that fully one-third of our supply of bank money was destroyed. Thus, at the very time when the rate of spending was declining, the volume of money available for spending was also being destroyed with disastrous effects on business activity, employment, and national income.

Mr. MITTELL. Senator FLETCHER, may I interrupt your discussion for the moment and ask as to how banks are situated with respect to required reserves?

Senator FLETCHER. At the present time the member banks alone hold approximately two billions of excess reserves, which would permit them to expand their deposits by approximately $20,000,000. Nonmember banks possess additional powers for the expansion of bank credit. Even thirty billions of expansion is not the maximum, for the reason that reserves are in turn built up through the sale or rediscounting of banker-created credit obligations to the banker-owned and banker-controlled Federal Reserve banks. It is evident that this situation has the possibilities of an unsound expansion of bank credit for private profit.

Mr. MITTELL. If I understand you correctly, it is possible to have a $30,000,000 inflation of bank credit?

Senator FLETCHER. Yes. At some time in the future they will at least have built up their deposits to a maximum of, we might say, sixty-five, seventy, or even seventy-five billions of dollars. This they can do only by literally creating credit money. Such a process of building up deposits is commonly termed "expansion of credit", and consists of the extension of loans by commercial banks to their customers by giving them credit on the books of the banks.

During a period of contraction the reverse takes place. What we have is an actual wiping out of, or the destruction of, these credits through the calling of loans and the refusal of banks to extend further credit where obligations have matured.

Mr. MITTELL. Just at that point, Senator FLETCHER, permit me to ask to what extent has the contraction or destruction of bank credit taken place since the collapse of 1929?

Senator FLETCHER. The destruction of bank credit alone amounted to over $20,000,000,000 between October 1929 and December 1933. This paralyzed all business. The cumulative results upon our national income have been likewise disastrous. At the darkest hour of this depression we were losing in excess of $4,000,000,000 monthly in national income. The total loss of national income during the 6 years of this depression will amount to probably $150,000,000,000. Such an amount is in addition to the physical suffering and mental anguish of millions of our unemployed and other millions dependent upon them.

The aim is to end this sort of thing.

Mr. MITTELL. Thank you, Senator. That answers my question. Please proceed with your general discussion of the expansion and contraction of bank credit.

Senator FLETCHER. The general policy of expansion of bank credit by all banks arises during a period of what is known as "easy money", and takes place after a definite easy-money trend is established. A reversal of the trend is referred to as money being "tight" and is accompanied by a contraction of loans and a reduction in the total of bank credit outstanding. The process of establishing these trends is the very heart of what has become known as "monetary policy operations." Such operations vitally affect the economic life of the Nation. The results of these operations have had ascribed to them the colorful names of periods of prosperity, booms, crises, panics, and depressions. Much more inclusive terms have been used, however, such as "periods of expansion" and "periods of contraction."

Mr. MITTELL. What part does the individual banker play in these periods of expansion and contraction, or of creating them?

Senator FLETCHER. Individually they have almost nothing to do with the creation of the up or down trend. After the up trend is established, however, bankers may or may not follow the trend by increasing their loans and coincidentally increasing their deposits at the same time that all other banks are expanding. On the other hand, when a period of contraction sets in, every banker must, in self-defense, not only refuse to extend further loans, but more often is forced of necessity to call loans and refuse to permit the extension of the life of loans which are at the time outstanding.

Mr. MITTELL. Then, Senator, you are not condemning bankers individually, but, on the other hand, are offering a defense of them, are you not?

Senator FLETCHER. That is correct, except to the extent they have failed to recognize the facts which I am now pointing out. It would seem that the American Bankers' Association and their connections might have—as a result of a thorough analysis of the facts—ameliorated, if not prevented, the paralyzing contraction of bank credit so disastrous to this Nation.

Mr. MITTELL. Who, then, is responsible; and at what forces is this bill directed?

Senator FLETCHER. Title II of the bill does not deal with banks or bankers individually. It deals with banking operations as a whole only to the extent of centralizing the responsibility for the exercise of the powers which control the establishment of these trends. The individual operations—such as lending, investing, etc.—of commercial banks are not contained in the subject matter of title II. However, the power to create or destroy the reserves of commercial banks, to raise or lower the rediscount rate, and other operations incidental to the effective regulation and control over the monetary policy of this Nation, constitute the sole subject matter of this portion of the bill.

The power to determine the trend is at the present time committed without definite responsibility to the Federal open market committee, the 12 Federal Reserve banks, and the Federal Reserve Board. They are unwilling, however, to assume the responsibilities for the disastrous results which have prostrated the Nation. Moreover, no adequate penalties can be ascribed. It is futile to attempt to continue under the present set-up. In conformity with that provision of the Constitution which declares the "Congress shall have the power to coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin", we propose to perform our legislative duty through the enactment of this bill.

Mr. MITTELL. Well said Senator. I am beginning to understand why you attach such vast importance to the bill.

Senator FLETCHER. The power to initiate open-market operations is now in the hands of the committee which consists of governors of the Federal Reserve banks. The Reserve banks individually, however, may or may not choose to cooperate. The choice depends upon the purely private interests and private profit motives of these banks. Public interest must not be compromised for private profits.

Mr. MITTELL. Well, what do you intend to do to protect the public's interest?

Senator FLETCHER. We propose to revert approximately to the original purpose of the Federal Reserve Act in which the executive head of the Reserve banks was designated as an agent of the Federal Reserve Board. Moreover, we shall both in spirit and in fact conform with the original provision of section 11 of that act, which states "The Federal Reserve Board shall be authorized and empowered. * * * (subsection j) to exercise general supervision over said Federal Reserve banks."

Mr. MITTELL. What effect will that have upon the regional operations of a Federal Reserve bank?

Senator FLETCHER. We are not destroying the purely regional banking operations of the 12 Federal Reserve banks. We are only restoring to the Federal Reserve Board powers which have been wrested from the Board by the governors of the Federal Reserve banks. Bankers, per se, will not be deprived of a single purely banking function. At the same time we expect to give to them that security which is absolutely essential to the protection of the economic and social life of this Nation.

Political control over the System is not our object, nor is it the issue. Again I say, "Do not be misled." The people of this Nation, through the Congress, are determined to "nail down" and fix the responsibility for the expansion and contraction of our credit and currency and concentrate those powers in the hands of men who must "do the job."

Mr. MITTELL. Thank you, Senator FLETCHER. I think your remarks tonight were of great educational importance to our people. It is my feeling that the public will support your efforts at banking reform if they receive adequate information.

Our problem today is to bring enlightenment on those social and economic questions that press for a solution and about which there are no adequate texts accessible to the millions. To meet this need we recently brought out inexpensive reprints of that great classic in democracy, Other People's Money, by Justice Brandeis, and have recently issued a new book, Money and Its Power, by Winslow and Brougham, which explains simply and comprehensively the questions and problems related to money, its uses, and power.

Senator FLETCHER. I have read both books. The first, of course, is a classic, and should be in every home. But Money and its Power I found particularly appropriate at this time. It is an excellent condensed discussion of the uses, characteristics, standards, inflation, foreign exchange, and related subjects. It contains much valuable information, well arranged, and expressed. I have recommended it to friends who are studying banking, currency, and monetary policy.

It is a very helpful and useful book.

Mr. MITTELL. Your comments make me very proud in view of the fact that we included a book entitled "Money and Its Power" in the National Home Library series. Hon. Robert L. Owen sent copies of the book to all Members of the Senate and Congress, and many of the replies he received would indicate that it has been of service.

Have you read the book Money and Its Power; and if so, what would you say about it?

Senator FLETCHER. Yes; I have read it carefully, most of it more than once. It is a very excellent, condensed discussion of money, its use and characteristics, standards, inflation, foreign exchange, and related subjects. It contains much valuable information, well arranged and expressed. I have recommended it to friends who are studying banking, currency, and monetary policy.

It is a very helpful and useful book.

PREVENTION OF LYNCHING

The Senate resumed the consideration of the motion of Mr. COSTIGAN that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 24) to assure to persons within the jurisdiction of every State the equal protection of the laws by discouraging, preventing, and punishing the crime of lynching.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] had the floor when the Senate took a recess yesterday afternoon, and the Chair thinks he should recognize the Senator from South Carolina to continue his address. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. BYRNES. I do not desire to consume any further time of the Senate on the particular motion which is pending, and, therefore, I yield the floor.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, an impressive telegram has reached me, which, unless there shall be objection, I should like to have read at the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

NEW YORK, N. Y., April 29, 1935.

Hon. EDWARD P. COSTIGAN,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

The Writers League Against Lynching, composed of writers, editors, and publishers throughout the Nation, urges strongly your resistance to filibuster against Costigan-Wagner bill. Needless to say, we are for the passage of that bill 100 percent.

The Writers League Against Lynching; Lewis S. Gannett, president; Suzanne La Follette, secretary; members: Louis Adamic, Gertrude Atherton, Faith Baldwin, Mary R. Beard, Robert Benchley, Stephen Vincent Benet, Bruce Bliven, Herschel Brickell, Vanwyck Brooks, Struthers Burt, Erskine Caldwell, Henry S. Canby, Marc Connelly, Countee Cullen, Babette Deutsch, James H. Dillar, Edward Donahoe, Theodore Dreiser, Abraham Epstein, Edna Ferber, Arthur Davison Ficke, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, E. Franklin Frazier, C. Hartley Grattan, Harold K. Guinzburg, Louis M. Hacker, Harry Hansen, Jessie Fauset Harris, Robert Herrick, Sheila Hibben, B. W. Huebsch, Inez Haynes Irwin, Georgia Douglas Johnson, James Weldon Johnson, Freda Kirchwey, Alfred A. Knopf, Joseph Wood Krutch, William Ellery Leonard, Sinclair Lewis, Alain Locke, Leonore Marshall, Annie Nathan Meyer, George Milburn, Edna St. Vincent Millay, Ruth Comfort Mitchell, Lewis Mumford, George Jean Nathan, Robert Nathan, W. W. Norton, Mary White Ovington, William Pickens, Ruth Pickering, A. S. Platt, Lorine Pruette, Elmer Rice, Lola Ridge, Gerold Tanquary Robinson, John William Rogers, Charles Edward Russell, George S. Schuyler, Evelyn Scott, Upton Sinclair, George Soule, Benjamin Stolberg, Phil Strong, Ruth Suckow, Carl Vandoren, Dorothy Vandoren, Mark Vandoren, Carl Van Vechten.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, for some time I have desired to make a statement on the subject of the authorship of the subsistence homestead law. I have not been willing, however, while the Senate had any serious business before it, to divert the attention of the Senate and take its time so long as we were moving along line of enacting legislation looking to the welfare of all the people of the country. I believe, therefore, before proceeding to discuss the pending motion, it would be appropriate to make the statement which I have heretofore desired to make.

It is possible that some of my colleagues in the Senate who have noticed my very great interest in agricultural legislation and my activities along that line may be laboring under the impression that I have not given serious attention to the unfortunate plight of many people in our industrial centers.

When I was elected to the Senate the depression had been under way for about a year. I had devoted my life to the practice of law, not to farming. I had been in large measure a corporation lawyer in the industrial section of my State and had been an industrialist, having opened and developed one of the very largest commercial mines in the State of Alabama. However, when many of us began to give serious consideration to the effort to diagnose the cause of the great depression and, if possible, to find a remedy for it, I made the best economic survey of which I was capable. It did not take me very long to arrive at the conclusion that it was necessary, in any fundamental program of recovery, to begin with agriculture. We found, day after day during that period, industries all over America either greatly reducing their operating time or closing down their plants. Why was that? They were not pursuing that course as a matter of convenience. They were forced to it because the consuming and buying power of their former customers had been so greatly decreased that operations in industry could not proceed on the former levels.

As industrial employees were removed from the pay rolls, in that same proportion the buying and consuming demand for industrial commodities was decreased. When we looked out across the vast expanse of this great country and viewed 30,000,000 people upon the farms of the United States, who had been applying their entire purchasing power to the continued operation of the industrial plants of the country, and found that their purchasing power had almost disappeared, when we took into consideration the fact that in addition to these 30,000,000 consumers upon the farms of America there was an equal if not larger number in the towns and cities of the country in the great agricultural areas who were dependent for their income and their support upon the purchasing power of the farmers in their trade areas, we quickly realized that approximately one-half, if not more, of the population of the entire country had lost their former purchasing power or that it had been so greatly reduced that the markets which industry had formerly enjoyed were disappearing or had in fact disappeared.

When we heard the complaint, the just complaint, about the loss of our foreign markets resulting from the nefarious tariff doctrine of the Republican Party, resulting from the Fordney-McCumber bill and the Smoot-Hawley bill, which precipitated a trade war with all the nations of the world and caused them to retaliate by raising their tariff rates, we regretted that some small proportion of the commodities of the industrial plants of this country had lost their markets.

But here at the very doors of the manufacturing institutions of the country was the farmer consuming public, consisting of approximately if not more than one-half of the American people who had lost their ability to buy the products of industry. Then it became perfectly clear that we could have no real substantial recovery in this country, that we could bring no relief to the millions of industrial employees, many of them concentrated upon the farms in industrial sections of America, unless we brought about some measure of rural rehabilitation.

Mr. President, my first thought upon the subject was to try to give relief to as large a number as practicable of those who had left the farms and gone into the industrial centers, lured there by the high tide of mass consumption, by the high wages being paid by industry, by the bright lights of the city, by the pleasures and comforts which the city people enjoy and of which the rural people are deprived. With that influx of people from the rural sections into the cities, we found an overbalanced population in the cities and the industrial sections.

When our financial troubles developed, when millions of employees were released from the pay rolls, something had to be done. We had an administration in power at that time which stubbornly resisted, as some of those who were here during that period stubbornly resisted, any direct Federal relief for the suffering and starving millions in the industrial sections who had lost their earning power and their employment. It is well known here that the doctrine was announced by the former President that he was willing to feed the cattle of the country but not to feed the human souls. So we had that distressing situation.

It seemed to me that the time and conditions required some effort in some way to aid many of the people who had no immediate prospect of reemployment in industry to get back to a little patch of ground somewhere in the country; so under Mr. Hoover's administration I began the program for the relief to that extent of the unemployed in the industrial sections of the country. In view of the way the subsistence homestead law was finally put upon the statute books, and the uncertainty regarding that measure and the unfamiliarity with it, I have decided to make a statement about its authorship and to give a brief history of the steps which were taken progressively to bring about that kind of relief to the distressed unemployed workmen in the industrial centers, and especially those who had previous farming experience.

In view of the fact that the subsistence homestead law was incorporated as an amendment to the National Industrial Recovery Act while that measure was pending before the Senate Finance Committee, there has been much uncertainty about the authorship of the amendment. For the benefit of those who are interested in the subject, I have decided that it would be well to let the RECORD show the facts.

I am the author of section 208 of the Industrial Recovery Act, the subsistence homestead law. In 1932 I made an effort in the Senate to secure the enactment of legislation having for its purpose Federal aid in the back-to-the-land movement. While the bill was pending enlarging the powers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and making additional sums available to it, I offered the following amendment:

All or any part of such grants may be disbursed in aid or furtherance of any program or programs of unemployment relief based on the location of those deemed entitled to relief on farm lands, either in such State or elsewhere, and either by direct expenditure or by loans to any approved agency or to groups or individuals.

On June 10, 1932, under Mr. Hoover's administration, I addressed the Senate in support of that amendment. My address will be found in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD at page 12531. I beg to quote extracts from that speech:

The plan proposed involves a reappraisement of social and economic conditions, and also planning for permanent relief for a large number of families who are now in the destitute class. I pretend no originality in conception of the suggested program. It has had wide consideration by students whose minds have tried to rebuild an enduring social and economic structure and who entertain no satisfactory reassurance that temporary aid for the unemployed will permanently solve the most important of all the problems confronting our country.

Food and shelter for all who are willing to work and for all who cannot secure gainful employment is the paramount slogan in the heart of every true American. I have no formula for a full and complete solution of our ills. The back-to-the-soil plan is tendered as a partial solution only, but one under which the credit extended will pro tanto permanently solve the problem of present peril for many people.

It is evident that our social and economic life is now in the process of readjustment. The machinery and gasoline age and the World War brought about a general shift in the affairs of men.

In former days there existed a balance between the number engaged in agriculture and industry. The necessities of the World War, followed by a period of excessive inflation, brought the era of mass production. A great draft of farmers and their sons to industry followed.

Inventive genius produced new machinery to displace man power. Production was thereby increased and gross earnings of the working class correspondingly decreased. Then came the crash of 1929, since which time the wheels of industry have constantly slowed down. The number of workers unemployed has constantly increased. With millions now unemployed and their accumulations exhausted, everyone is asking: "What can be done?" "When will business improve so that the unemployed can have work?"

It is likely that it will be too long to wait for a sufficient revival of business to engage all the men drawn into industry during the last decade. For some years we have had a degree of production and business activity never before witnessed. Can we reasonably expect an early return of such conditions and the early reemployment by industry of the great army of the unemployed? It takes great optimism to generate much confidence in such a happy result. Some people seem to think that it is the duty of the Government to provide employment for all who want to work. Without entering into a discussion of the principles of government involved, the suggestion may be disposed of now with the statement that under prevailing conditions it is impossible to carry out the suggestion. While it may not be the duty of the American Government to furnish employment, it has a direct responsibility for legislation and actions which result directly or indirectly in unemployment. As I am considering remedies for our unhappy plight, I shall not give expression to my views on unwise legislation during recent years which may be responsible for prevailing conditions.

Everyone with a normal heart is grieved when he witnesses distress being suffered by his fellow men. Generosity in helping the needy by those who have a surplus beyond their actual requirements stirs us with emotions higher than mere admiration. Much of that sort of helpfulness is now necessary, but, in my opinion, such aid hereafter will be entirely inadequate to care for the destitute.

This speech was made in 1932.

A large public-works program will, of course, be helpful. It is doubtful if such a plan, however, can be financed on a scale commensurate with the requirements of the unemployed in all sections of the country. Such public works must of necessity be carried on in selected spots. Additional employment will be provided in the fortunate localities. That will be helpful; but when the work shall be finished, what then will be the situation? Those furnished employment will again find themselves unemployed, and the program may not be repeated indefinitely. It seems to me that it would be wiser to devote some part of the available credit of the Government to some plan which looks to permanent rather than temporary relief if such a recourse may be found.

How many years lie ahead of us before industry can again employ all the idle workers? What is to be done before that time comes if it arrives during the present generation? Can a more evenly balanced coordination between the number engaged in industry and agriculture be reestablished? Can society be readjusted to normal conditions which prevailed before the orgy of industrial production held out false hope of permanent employment to so many who were otherwise employed and to so many farmers and sons of farmers?

When America was establishing itself on the firm basis of growth which brought it to the forefront of nations there were few industrial workers. An overwhelming proportion of our population tilled the soil or engaged in business directly related to agriculture. It can be done again. It seems inevitable that many who were raised upon the farm must return to the soil. If employment cannot be found in the cities and towns, a living can be dug out of the earth. Unfortunately for many people, prevailing conditions do not present a free choice of occupations. Dire necessity decrees for many, for a time at least, that any honorable work, urban or rural, should be accepted that will keep the family together and the wolf from the door until something more suitable can be found.

A picture of the shift from rural to urban population may be had by reviewing the census reports on rural and urban population. The last four census reports showed the percentage of rural population as follows:

	Percent
1900	60.0
1910	54.2
1920	48.6
1930	43.8

Towns with less than 2,500 population are counted as rural. Using 123,000,000 as the total population for 1930, it appears that if the same ratio had been maintained between rural and urban population, there are now in the cities 6,000,000 people who, under the 1920 ratio, would be in the rural classification. Based on the ratio of 1910, there are 12,500,000 people who would now be in the rural classification. Based on the ratio of 1900, there are 19,700,000 people now in the cities who would have been in the country. These figures present a startling shift from rural to city life. The census reports for 1920 and 1930 separate the rural population into rural farm and rural nonfarm population, thereby separating the population in the small towns and in the country not engaged in farming. In 1920 the rural farm population was 29.7 percent of the total. In 1930 it was 24.6 percent. It is significant that lacking only one-tenth of 1 percent the entire shift to urban from rural population from 1920 to 1930 was from the rural farm population, numbering 6,000,000 people, according to the ratios, if they had been maintained.

Mr. President, it may be suggested that there is now an overproduction of farm commodities. With staple cash products, such as cotton and wheat, that may be true from the standpoint of the ability of consumers to buy. The farmers' trouble is not the absence of home necessities. He has food and feeds in abundance. His problem is keeping the sheriff from his door because of debts incurred when 1 bale of cotton would pay as much on his debt as 4 bales will now pay, or 1 bushel of wheat would buy as much as 4 bushels will now buy.

Fortunately, of course, since the date when this speech was delivered the condition of the farmers has been very greatly improved. Prices are much better than those which prevailed at that time.

I continue reading from the speech:

If the average farmer could forget his old debts, he would not be prosperous but he would not be destitute.

The question arises, How can the unemployed go to the farm when he has no farm, no work stock or implements, no food and no feed?

If 1,000,000 men now unemployed could be financed under a back-to-the-soil program, an improvement in business conditions would more quickly afford work for others unemployed, and would remove several million people from the ranks of the very large number who are anxiously thinking of food for tomorrow.

Farm leaders for years have urged the establishment of a large fund to buy surplus commodities out of the market. For more logical and stronger economic and humane reasons a large fund to lift the surplus of unemployed workers out of the industrial market and from the domain of benevolence can be sustained.

If a fund of $1,000,000,000 should be applied to aiding unemployed who desire to return to the farm or to a subsistence home, it could probably be so used as to place 1,000,000 or more men with their families on productive land. It should not be forgotten that there are millions of acres of improved farm lands which under present conditions can be rented at small costs. With the acreage-reduction program under full swing, there will be more millions of acres of improved lands which could be rented. Work stock, farming tools, and supplies are cheaper than they have been for years. Many farms can be bought for a very small initial payment. Land can be bought for little more than current taxes.

Would this addition to the 11,000,000 men now engaged in agriculture aggravate their present plight? It will not if farmers become convinced that their main business should be producing a living at home and some cash commodity as a side line. They were in much better condition when a larger proportion of our population was rural.

The money furnished should not be a gift; it should be a loan with installment payments over a reasonable time, and secured by continuing liens on crops and stock and land. The difficulties of private capital doing the financing are recognized. Profits would be limited to interest, and there would be losses of invested capital. The attractions of industry lured countless thousands from the farms. The lure not being sustained, industry should support a program to help get them back to the farm. A large movement from congested urban centers to the vast spaces of rural opportunity would to that extent aid in readjusting an economic unbalance between workers and jobs in industry. Under this plan, decentralization would be and should be accelerated.

It should not be forgotten that rural life has in recent years been vastly changed. With good roads, rural mail delivery, improved school facilities, consolidated schools with free bus service, free transportation to high schools, rural telephones, and many other advantages, country life from a social standpoint is in large measure comparable to suburban opportunities.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum. I am sure Senators ought to hear the address now being delivered by the able and eloquent Senator from Alabama.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MINTON in the chair). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Connally	King	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Coolidge	La Follette	Robinson
Austin	Costigan	Lewis	Russell
Bachman	Couzens	Logan	Schall
Bailey	Dickinson	Lonergan	Schwellenbach
Bankhead	Dieterich	Long	Sheppard
Barbour	Donahey	McAdoo	Shipstead
Barkley	Duffy	McCarran	Smith
Bilbo	Fletcher	McGill	Steiwer
Black	Frazier	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	Gerry	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Borah	Gibson	Minton	Townsend
Brown	Glass	Moore	Trammell
Bulkley	Gore	Murphy	Truman
Bulow	Guffey	Murray	Tydings
Burke	Hale	Neely	Vandenberg
Byrd	Harrison	Norris	Van Nuys
Byrnes	Hastings	Nye	Wagner
Capper	Hatch	O'Mahoney	Walsh
Caraway	Hayden	Overton	Wheeler
Carey	Johnson	Pittman	White
Clark	Keyes	Pope

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-seven Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, I shall continue to read from the speech I made on June 10, 1932, on the subject of relief for the unemployed in the industrial centers:

A large back-to-the-farm revolving loan fund would be a source of relief to worthy, good citizens, farmers by training, who are anxious to engage in any honorable work that will preserve their home circle and provide a way for them to embark upon an enterprise which may be temporary or permanent according to the unfolding of the future for each individual.

If it may be a long time before all who have been engaged in industrial work can get work again in industry—white collars and overalls—why not bridge over the chasm, and help those who desire to do so to establish themselves in self-supporting work?

The immediate helpful effect of the expenditure of such a sum of money, distributed largely among farmers in the purchase of farming outfits, is a consideration not to be ignored.

To buy a million cows, a million mules and horses, a million sows and millions of pigs, a million broods of chickens, millions of bushels of corn and hay and potatoes, and all the other things necessary to establish a family on a farm, would put most of the money in circulation where it is sorely needed, and provide present farmers who sell to the new farmers additional debt-paying power. A new market would thus be provided where there is now no market. Farm prices would be stimulated, and land values made firmer. In the construction of many small homes the building trade would greatly benefit, and work would be afforded for many now unemployed.

The suggestion of aiding former ruralists to get back to the soil does not involve the idea of placing all of them in the business of farming, nor of the acquisition in all cases of large acreage. For those who now live in large industrial centers, and who prefer to remain in close proximity to openings for industrial employment, a few acres of land with a very modest home would serve the purpose. The principal object is to provide a place where with thrift, frugality, and industry they can work out from the soil a subsistence for themselves and their families, and as a side line find employment here and there, now and then, until a better day dawns.

Those who conceive that few would, in good faith, take advantage of a back-to-the-soil movement must not know the heartburns of millions now drifting without chart or compass and with hope fading away; they do not realize the ardent craving for some humble place to call home, where the family circle may be kept inviolate, and where there exists the assurance that nature, with the cooperation of the family, will furnish the necessities for actual subsistence.

Mr. President, there will be no paucity of applications if this Congress shall pass a bill providing financial aid for acquiring country homes by purchase or lease for those who formerly engaged in farming. The great problem will be taking care of the large number of jobless men, now walking the streets in despair and desperation, who want to return to nature's storehouse. With a cow and a sow, a hoe, a spade and a plow, and with food and feed supplies for a season, those who will can thereafter produce and preserve the food and feed necessities for the home, and be permanently removed from the large mass of the unemployed. Prospects for luxury? No; but removed from the bewildered and heart-bleeding mass of the unemployed, and with pride, confidence, and self-respect reasserted. Every one so removed from the ranks of the unemployed will not only lessen the requirements now resting so heavily upon State and city, and upon the charity of the public, but will also make room at the employment gate when industry can use more men.

On the same day I again spoke in support of the amendment. (See CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, p. 12540.) The amendment was defeated.

On June 23, 1932, I offered another amendment, which can be found in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on page 13782, and which is as follows:

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized to loan to limited-dividend corporations, authorized to make loans to unemployed persons who have heretofore worked on a farm and who desire to return to the farm. Said loans shall bear a rate of interest not to exceed 5 percent per annum, and to be secured by mortgages on the land and stock bought with the money borrowed.

Said loans may be made for a period of 20 years, and the first installment on the principal may be made due 3 years after the date of the loan.

The loan may include a sufficient amount necessary for food and feed until a crop can be harvested.

Loans shall be limited to $1,000 to individual borrowers.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized to make rules and regulations for making said individual loans, and unless borrowing limited-dividend corporations comply with the same the Reconstruction Finance Corporation shall not grant loans to such applicants.

I again addressed the Senate on the subject. The amendment was defeated.

In a conference with Mr. Roosevelt, prior to his nomination, I found that he was very greatly interested in the back-to-the-soil movement, and was then experimenting with it on a small scale in the State of New York. After Mr. Roosevelt's election and before his inauguration, I again discussed the subject with him and was informed by him that he was favorable to an appropriation by the Government to aid people who were stranded in industry and who had had previous farm experience to acquire small farms so located as to enable the homesteaders to secure part-time employment in industry. It was then agreed between us that I should introduce a bill on the subject.

On the 9th day of March 1933 I introduced bill S. 69. I ask unanimous consent to have the bill printed in the RECORD immediately following my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit A.)

Mr. BANKHEAD. I also ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD immediately following my remarks Senate bill 1503 introduced by me on April 17, 1933, the last bill being a revision of Senate bill 69.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit B.)

Mr. BANKHEAD. Before action could be secured on that bill the President sent for me and stated that, in view of the large appropriation being made for emergency relief, he believed that it would be best to reduce the proposed appropriation in my bill from $400,000,000 to $25,000,000, and with that sum we could experiment with the problem and demonstrate its value. He further suggested that the plan be couched in an amendment to be offered to the national industrial recovery bill, which was then pending before the Senate. In line with that suggestion I prepared an amendment and offered it in the Senate on May 15, 1933. It was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed. While the amendment was offered to S. 1712, the Finance Committee substituted H. R. 5755 for S. 1712, and that bill now is known as the "National Industrial Recovery Act." I ask unanimous consent to insert at this place in my remarks the amendment which I offered on May 15. After preparing the amendment I sent it to the President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment will be printed in the RECORD.

The amendment referred to is as follows:

[S. 1712. In the Senate of the United States. May 15 (calendar day, May 24), 1933. Referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed]

Amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. BANKHEAD to the bill (S. 1712) to encourage national industrial recovery, to foster fair competition, and to provide for the construction of certain useful public works, and for other purposes, viz: At the proper place insert the following:

"To provide for aiding the redistribution of the overbalance of population in industrial centers, $25,000,000 is hereby made available to the President, to be used by him through such agencies as he may establish and under such regulations as he may make, for making loans and otherwise aiding in the purchase of subsistence homesteads.

"The moneys collected under said loans shall constitute a revolving fund to be administered as directed by the President."

Mr. BANKHEAD. Through Mr. Lewis W. Douglas, Director of the Budget, the amendment was submitted to the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], Chairman of the Finance Committee, with the statement—

Which the President has asked to be added to the above-numbered bill.

The amendment was incorporated in the bill in the exact language prepared by me, and without any change or alteration was passed by both Houses of Congress and approved by the President.

There is a very wide-spread demand for the establishment of subsistence homestead settlements under this law. Applications for the location of such settlements from a very large number of communities have been received. The total amount applied for aggregates more than $4,000,000,000. These applications are based upon a general recognition of the fact that it may be a long time, if ever, before all the people in the industrial centers who are now unemployed may again find work in normal lines. It holds out a form of permanent relief to those who are aided in securing subsistence homesteads.

Nearly all of the other relief measures afford only temporary relief and require recurring appropriations. It is my judgment that this measure points the way to a new type of rural life. The old homestead law, with its large acreage, led to the settlement and development of very large areas of our country. Public lands are no longer available, and for the present it is not desirable to bring about a substantial increase in commercial farming. A small acreage involved in the subsistence homestead plan provides means of earning from the soil the necessities for keeping body and soul together and for retaining inviolate the family circle and for development of family spirit. Such a life instills self-respect, and with proper diligence gives assurance that hunger will not molest the family.

I have noted with a great deal of satisfaction the program of the Emergency Relief Administrator, Mr. Harry L. Hopkins, who is now making plans for the relief of many unemployed by aiding them to become located on a few acres of land along the lines contemplated by the subsistence homestead law.

Mr. President, having made that statement, I desire to proceed with a discussion of the pending measure. The bill in its legal aspects, in its construction, and in its operation has been discussed for some days with very great learning and ability and thoroughness. As the discussion has proceeded I have marveled that so few Members of the Senate have taken any real interest in the contents of the measure, in the question of whether or not it is permissible under our Constitution, and in developing some understanding of what the bill really means.

During the last 3 weeks and at other times I have heard, with respect to other measures, discussions which have held the attention of the large majority of the Members of the Senate and kept them on the floor; but here comes a measure which involves a complete change in American jurisprudence, which involves the projection of the fourteenth amendment into many new fields and many ramifications, a bill which no one has been able to assert upon this floor is required under prevailing conditions in this country; yet, with all these important aspects, we find the Senator from Colorado, a good man, and about one Republican on the other side of the Chamber—I am not speaking of the present time—standing on guard to help the Senator from Colorado, and we find none of the other supporters of this bill here with an open mind and willing to get any grasp at all of what is involved in this program.

Mr. President, that is an unusual situation, a most unusual one; it is new to me, at least, in my limited experience in the Senate. I dare say that not one-half the Members of the Senate who have been voting on the test votes understand what is contained in this bill or the effect of it, and they do not seem to care whether they know or not. That is an unfortunate phase of it to those of us who believe that we understand the serious import of this attempted legislation. What does it all mean? There is some reason for a situation of that kind. It is not normal; it is not usual; it is not customary. Able men, with earnestness and with zeal, are standing here day after day pointing out to the Senate and to the country the unconstitutionality of the bill, with no effort on the part of its proponents up to this time to make any serious defense of its constitutionality, although, for some reason, back home, I presume, because of some conditions in their home States, for some reason regardless of what is in the bill, it may, perhaps, be assumed that a majority of the Senators are going to support it. That may be the assumption, and it may be well founded; I do not know.

Nevertheless, with the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States which have been read, with men of great character, men of outstanding legal talent, men of resourcefulness, expressing themselves with fluency and force and logic upon the floor, the proponents of the measure sit quiet day after day, and undertake in no way to justify the legal monstrosity which is sought to be rammed down the throats of a minority of the Senate.

Senators who are supporting the authors of the bill seem to take the same attitude about it. They apparently rely upon the thought that it makes no difference what may be said, that no argument, however persuasive, no decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, however thoroughly in point, will divert a single supporter of the bill from casting his vote in favor of its passage.

I say that situation is not a normal one. I say it is founded upon conditions which ought not to exist in the Congress of the United States. It is my judgment, though others may think otherwise, that groups of voters back home, whose leaders conceive that this proposed legislation is for their interest, and who have other groups with them to go to the polls, ought not to call Senators to account because of their support of a measure of this kind, simply because it has the support of such groups of voters; but, at least, Members of the Senate ought to give careful and grave consideration to a bill which is charged by some of the ablest Members of the Senate with being a gross violation of the Constitution of the United States when this is asserted by those who know so much more about the conditions at which the bill is leveled and the section of the country at which it is leveled, at least those who want to go along with the program ought to remain in the Senate Chamber and hear the protests of serious, deadly earnest men. I am afraid the absent Senators are controlled by a thought which I can best express by relating an incident which occurred in Alabama.

In the early days there was an old hard-shell preacher in my section of the State of Alabama. Soon after the war he went to Baltimore on a visit. While he was there it was arranged that he should preach a sermon in the church of the family he was visiting. In accordance with the practice of hard-shell preachers he talked for about 2 hours.

When he got back home he was telling of his experience in preaching in Baltimore. He was asked how he got along and what the congregation thought of his sermon. He said, "I dunno. I caint exactly tell. After I'd been preachin' about 40 or 50 minutes a few of 'em begun to slip out. When I had preached more than an hour quite a lot of 'em were gone. When I got through my sermon there wasn't nobody left there but my relatives." He was asked, "How do you account for that?" He replied, "There ain't but one way to account for it, and that is that they caint stand sound doctrine." [Laughter.]

I think that is the reason why some of the advocates of the bill have been absenting themselves from the Chamber during the discussion of the measure. They cannot stand sound doctrine. They do not want to hear it. They have already heard the whisperings back home. They do not want to hear any further argument upon the bill.

Is there any politics behind the bill? Frankly, I say there is no party politics. The majority of the Democrats from the Northern States are for it and all the Republicans are for it. The Republicans started this program away back in 1921 and 1922 with the Dyer antilynching bill. They played with it for a year or two. I do not know whether or not they found out they were playing with a hot wire, but from the records I know they lost interest in it. They have never sought to follow it any further during the past 10 years. I imagine they found that the colored voters to whom they thought they were appealing were not interested in the program as they had understood they would be.

Those of us in the South who are associated with the colored people know they have no interest in a measure of this kind. I assert that those in the North who are expressing interest are merely the leaders who live upon the rank and file of the colored people. They take collections, contributions, donations, fees, and then, in order to justify their position of leadership, they must demonstrate some activity.

However, the Republicans dropped the bill in 1922. No one need think politics is involved, or, if any politics is involved, that it is party politics.

Then, lo and behold, after 10 years, when lynching has almost ceased in the United States, along come two Democrats, two northern Democrats, both of them good men, as I have said, one from New York, where there are millions of colored men and hundreds of thousands of southern white people, the other from the mountains of Colorado, where a great many people from my State and from other Southern States go in the summer to enjoy the cool breezes and western hospitality.

After the Republicans dropped the subject 10 years ago, here come my two good friends, one of them my desk mate, the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], as courteous a gentleman as I have ever been associated with, but as badly misled a man as I have ever met. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, this morning a labor delegation called to talk to me about the Wagner-Costigan labor-disputes bill. I will ask the Senator from Colorado if that is not the name of it?

Mr. COSTIGAN. My name is not on that bill.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Then I will say the "Wagner bill." I am sorry the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] is not here. He runs in, the debate gets a little hot, and he runs out.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will my colleague yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes.

Mr. BLACK. In view of the statement made by my colleague a few moments ago about partisanship, if any, in this question, I desire to call attention to the fact that even though certainly some of the Republican leaders have indicated a great and devoted championship of this cause, thinking to get some political advantage from it, at the present time there is only one Republican Senator in the Chamber, the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. KEYES].

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, that is generally true. The Senator from New Hampshire is a good, faithful Senator. I like him. I will say that frankly about him; but, of course, he does not know anything about this problem. He lives too far away from it. He could not know anything about it. At any other time when a check is made, unless, perhaps, late in the afternoon, it will be found that there is about 1 Republican on guard, taking no interest in the subject, merely a follower of 2 Democrats, the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] and the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN].

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MCKELLAR in the chair). Does the Senator from Alabama yield to his colleague?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I do.

Mr. BLACK. I desire to state that since my remark a moment ago another Republican Senator came through the Chamber—the junior Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG], whom, some persons have said, the lightning may strike in the Presidential campaign.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I imagine he thinks it will.

Mr. President, it is my judgment that the rule as to the presence of a quorum ought to be enforced. It is presumed that a majority of this body is present.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. GLASS. I make the point of no quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Connally	King	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Coolidge	La Follette	Robinson
Austin	Costigan	Lewis	Russell
Bachman	Couzens	Logan	Schall
Bailey	Dickinson	Lonergan	Schwellenbach
Bankhead	Dieterich	Long	Sheppard
Barbour	Donahey	McAdoo	Shipstead
Barkley	Duffy	McCarran	Smith
Bilbo	Fletcher	McGill	Steiwer
Black	Frazier	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	Gerry	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Borah	Gibson	Minton	Townsend
Brown	Glass	Moore	Trammell
Bulkley	Gore	Murphy	Truman
Bulow	Guffey	Murray	Tydings
Burke	Hale	Neely	Vandenberg
Byrd	Harrison	Norris	Van Nuys
Byrnes	Hastings	Nye	Wagner
Capper	Hatch	O'Mahoney	Walsh
Caraway	Hayden	Overton	Wheeler
Carey	Johnson	Pittman	White
Clark	Keyes	Pope

Mr. LEWIS. I desire to announce the absence of my colleague the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIETERICH], who is attending a meeting of a conference committee.

I ask that the announcement I made this morning as to the absence of certain Senators may be repeated and published in the RECORD and stand for the day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. POPE in the chair). Eighty-seven Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, when the quorum call came I was directing attention to the lack of interest in the bill we are discussing as demonstrated by the absence of Senators supporting it, and especially those on the Republican side. We have just had a quorum called, and yet when the result is announced we find five Republican Senators left in the Chamber—the junior Senator from Maine [Mr. WHITE], the senior Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH], the senior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. KEYES], the senior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. FRAZIER], and the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. GIBSON]. I do not know how long they will be here. Judging from the way the other Senators hastened into the Chamber, answered the roll call, and hurried out again for fear they might hear some good sound doctrine, I suspect that some of those now present may disappear before many minutes. It is, as I said before, a very remarkable commentary on the situation. Here we have a group claiming that as a party they are standing up for the colored brethren, and they will not stay here, while a number of Democrats who are standing up for the colored brethren are sitting over here. That is what confronts us.

Mr. GLASS. What is the Senator's definition of a Democrat?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I would not want to be offensive to some of my Democratic friends who affiliate with the Democratic Party, but my definition, for myself, is that a Democrat is one who votes in the Democratic primary and in the election for the Democratic nominees, from top to bottom.

Mr. GLASS. A man who does that is not always a Democrat. [Laughter.]

Mr. BANKHEAD. I would not associate with the Democratic Party if I did not have faith in its position, both in its platform and in the selection of its candidates.

Mr. GLASS rose.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I should be glad to have the Senator's definition.

Mr. GLASS. One definition of a Democrat I would give is that he is a man who believes in the rights of the States as guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. BANKHEAD. One reason why I affiliate with the Democratic Party is that it has always stood for the old fundamental doctrine of State sovereignty and State rights. When we destroy it, Mr. President, as this bill would tend to do, and is an entering wedge in doing, we will then come to an inglorious day in our great American Republic. When we come, under a permanent program, to centralization, with power in the Federal Government and the administration, and enforcement of all criminal laws in the Federal courts, I say again to those who, for some conceived appeal to a small group of voters in their States, who are really not interested, support such a bill as this, they will regret that they have gone to such an extreme in breaking down the old time-honored fundamental principle of the Democratic Party of State rights and decentralization.

To be frank, I do not know whether the Senator from Virginia asked me the question because he wanted to hear me answer, or whether he wanted to give me something to talk about. [Laughter.] Whichever way he intended it, it is always a pleasing question to me, because I have never made any concealment of the fact that personally I am a party man. I respect those who have different judgments and have reached different conclusions upon subjects, but, as for me, I have long since reached the conclusion that in this Government of 120,000,000 people, representing all the groups and classes of our citizenship, far-flung, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from Canada to the Gulf, living under different climatic conditions, having different soil conditions, different doctrines and beliefs, and different interests based upon geographical location, such as industrial or agricultural, there is but one intelligent way to get an expression of the people of the country as to its Government, and that is through responsible political party organizations. Whether we have two or have three or more parties is not important. That is the matter of the people grouping themselves into organizations which come nearer expressing their own convictions than other party organizations may do.

I say further, with perfect frankness, that when a citizen of this country finds himself entirely out of line with the fundamental conception of the party with which he is affiliated, when he loses confidence in the leaders of that party, in their good faith, both in securing legislation and in administering it, then courage and honor and manhood require him to affiliate himself with another political party.

Mr. GLASS. Suppose the other political party is just as bad as the one he proposes to leave. What is he to do?

Mr. BANKHEAD. My own view, I will say to the Senator from Virginia, and largely quoting a wise statement I heard him make here, is that the Democratic Party at its worst is better than any other party at its best.

Mr. GLASS. Yet, at the same time, there are Republicans better than some people who call themselves Democrats.

Mr. SMITH. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. GLASS. If the Senator will permit me, the finest vindication of the sovereign rights of the States of this Union that ever I heard fall from mortal lips, not surpassed by the declarations of Thomas Jefferson himself, was uttered by Calvin Coolidge at William and Mary College when he delivered an anniversary address there. He warned the States of the American Union that if they did not more vigorously assert their rights, the Federal Government would invade them and take them away; and that is what is happening every day of our existence.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I thank the Senator for his contribution.

Mr. GLASS. That statement consumed some time, did it not? [Laughter.]

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes; it did, and I hope the Senator will inject some more good wisdom. I rejoice when the Senator interrupts.

I am sure everyone understands that in my proclamation of party loyalty and allegiance I had no thought of drawing any invidious comparison with any person who belongs to another political party. I recognize fully the sincerity of the views of others. I recognize that most of us, to be frank about it, have our political party affiliations as a result of inheritance. I think few Senators upon this floor will dispute that statement.

There are some who have changed, probably because of their conviction that the crowd with which they were running were not the best kind, as my friend the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN] did. He got out of the Republican Party because their doctrines did not coincide with his, and I honor him for it, as I stated a while ago. It is fine. When a man's convictions incline him to dissociate himself with the party of his inherited views, I honor him for it.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, does the Senator think it is complimentary to the Democratic Party for the Senator from Colorado to quit the party to which he did belong and come and drag this miserable thing into our party?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Colorado has made a bad mistake in judgment. I think his heart is all right, but he has made a bad mistake in judgment. I think that if he counted the colored voters in his State, to whom this bill is directed, he would find a majority of them opposed to raising a race issue, to stirring up strife between the white people and the colored race. Why does the Senator from Colorado, a State where there are only a few thousand colored people, and the Senator from New York, whose life has largely been spent upon the bench removed from contacts with the colored people, undertake to diagnose from long distance a race situation? It cannot be done, either in the case of physical illness or in a political situation.

I desire to say that I am a friend of the colored man. I know I am a better friend of the colored man than are either the Senator from Colorado, the Senator from New York, or the Senators on the other side of the Chamber who are insistent upon projecting this bill upon the statute books, thereby stirring up ill will, strife, and hatred among the races.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. I have listened with much attention to the splendid argument of the Senator from Alabama. I listened yesterday to one of the outstanding speeches made on this subject, the speech of the learned senior Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK]. I come from a State where all the Negro votes could be put in a man's hat, and he would not have to wear a 10-gallon hat at that. I am supporting this bill, if I ever get a chance to support it, not because of any race controversy. The only time I have found the question of race raised has been when it was raised by the learned Senators from the South.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Will the Senator permit me to interrupt him right there?

Mr. McCARRAN. I shall be glad to have the Senator do so.

Mr. BANKHEAD. If the Senator will read the report on the pending bill submitted by the committee, of which I think he is a member——

Mr. McCARRAN. Yes; I was a member of the subcommittee.

Mr. BANKHEAD. If the Senator will examine the brief, which is the only brief filed by the committee in support of its report, I think he will change his idea. Permit me to read from the brief, because the matter I shall read relates directly to the statement which the Senator is making:

> This bill is especially limited by its own definitions to official action or nonaction resulting in the denial of due process or the equal protection of the laws. It applies only to persons injured or killed through mob violence on account of race, creed, or color.

What does the Senator have to say to that? The legal adviser of the committee makes that statement.

Mr. McCARRAN. I am glad to have the Senator propound that question, because, if the Senator will permit me to interrupt his speech—and I know he will be glad to have me do so——

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes; I am delighted to have the Senator interrupt me. The Senator can speak an hour if he so desires.

Mr. McCARRAN. This is one time when I may have my way. I have in mind a case of mob violence which was even more outstanding than anything that ever occurred in the South, a case where there was no color involved, and where the Governor of a sovereign State, following that mob violence, said he would pardon those who might be arrested for the violence. The Governor of a sovereign State, speaking for a sovereign people, dared to utter that statement to a sovereign people 130,000,000 in number.

The Negroes have very little voting strength in the State I in part represent. The Negroes have no great voting strength, perhaps, in the other State from which that utterance of the Governor came. Yet it came from the Governor of that State, and the Nation was greatly shocked, and the President of the United States denounced the utterance.

Mr. President, I am using the time of the Senator, and I know he is impatient to continue. [Laughter.]

Mr. BANKHEAD. Let not the Senator worry himself about that.

Mr. McCARRAN. I am using the Senator's time because I say there is no color or race involved in this question, as I view it, unless the lines of color and race are brought in, just as the lines of creed might be brought in, which I know will not be done.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, will the Senator from Alabama permit me to ask the Senator from Nevada a question?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I gladly yield for that purpose.

Mr. SMITH. Does the Senator from Nevada think he is justified in voting for a bill which would destroy the foundation of our dual form of government simply because in a certain State the Governor unfortunately, under provocation, prostituted his high office? Would the Senator here support a bill which, in the light of all the opinions of the Supreme Court, and in the opinion of as patriotic and unselfish Senators as ever sat on the floor of the Senate, is unconstitutional? Will the Senator vote to destroy the dual form of government, and do away with local self-government, because, perchance, here and there in a few States, or in all of them, there has been mob violence? Does the Senator think a commission appointed by the Federal Government is better qualified to decide the question of equity and righteousness than is a sovereign State, than are those who live in that State, and must live there? The Senator has reached the point where he is willing to burn down the house to get rid of a rat.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Alabama yield so that I may answer the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. In my humble way I will say, in answer to the Senator from South Carolina, that I would build up the organic law, because I find from press reports and from official reports that the great sovereign States of the South regret these incidents of mob violence just as much as does any other State, and the great sovereign States of the South have been trying for years to find a solution for the problem. If the Federal Government can come in and offer a solution through a law passed by Congress to aid the South itself, I am for that law.

Mr. SMITH. The Senator is begging the question because he knows nothing about the Gethsemane through which the South has passed. I am not blaming the colored race. I am blaming the carpetbaggers, the scalawags, and camp followers who, after the surrender at Appomattox, took charge of the finest civilization America ever saw. At that time the legislature of my State was composed wholly of ex-slaves, guarded by the bayonets of the Federal Government. No such prostitution of government in all civilization has ever been witnessed as that orgy of corruption of which my State was the victim. The Senator recks not of the horrors which confronted what was without doubt one of the most cultured, refined, progressive States of the Union. It was a part of that section which gave to this Nation those who laid the foundations of our splendid Government. The Senator knows nothing of the struggle of that poor, intellectually helpless crowd, fired by all that characterizes "the lesser breeds without the law" to adjust itself to its new conditions, nor what it meant for us to be subjected to it.

I say here today, all honor to the Southern States which received the baptism of fire, not during the Civil War, when blood flowed on the devoted hills of Virginia, but when the homes and firesides and the intimate civilization of my country were jeopardized. Be it said to the everlasting honor and glory of the Negroes and the whites that they found a modus vivendi, and have been solving their problem with mutual racial respect each for the other.

I desire to say now on this floor that since the Civil War the national Democratic Party was our "pillar of a cloud" by day and our "pillar of fire" by night—not alone, perhaps, but the really civilized and civilization loving of those amongst the Republican Party saw to it that the civilization of the South should not pass away in spite of the emancipation declaration, which those on the other side viewed as a weapon of war to defeat the South.

I could quote from Mr. Lincoln when he said, "If the emancipation of the blacks will preserve the Union, I will emancipate them." My section of the country has stood solid for two reasons, one of which I shall mention, and that is the determination that we, as sovereign States, will settle our social questions for ourselves. We were supported by the liberty-loving Republicans and the stanch Democrats; and never since the Civil War, except once, has the solid South ever been broken. We expected, however, from the other side gestures to be made; but, with all due respect and honor to them, they never intended that there should be enforcement. Today, however, in the home and citadel of what we know as the national Democratic Party, we of the South, who know the conditions there, are betrayed by the introduction of this bill. When shall I or you, the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], or you, the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK], stand on the hustings again and plead for State rights and our inherent and constitutional right to solve our problems as we are gloriously solving them? When shall you and I again, after the good year 1935, dare to raise our voices in behalf of the national Democratic Party when they have betrayed us in the midst of an overwhelming so-called "Democratic administration"?

I have heard it intimated that Members from certain States where the balance of power is held by the Negro race dare not vote against this bill for fear that the balance will be turned to the Republican Party. In other words, it is being here argued that we should go to the extent of disrupting the Constitution, make State rights a thing of the past and local self-government forgotten in order that some gentlemen may warm the leather in these chairs. God help us to get back to where men would rather do right than to be Senators! I, for one, here today declare that if this proposal, involving the destruction of State rights and the usurpation of local self-government, becomes a part and parcel of Democratic doctrine, I shall pay no further allegiance to such a party.

I know the problems we face; and I want to say in concluding my remarks—and I am trying to help my friend from Alabama out in his time; he has been making a glorious speech, and I think I am making a darned good one, too. [Laughter.]

Mr. BAILEY. The Senator never made a better one; let him go ahead.

Mr. SMITH. I want to state to the Senator from Nevada that the thing which did more to precipitate the Civil War than anything else was just such unwarranted interference with our affairs as is now proposed.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I wish to say——

Mr. SMITH. I do not want the Senator to break in as yet; I want to finish this sentence.

Mr. McCARRAN. I am not going to fight the Civil War all over again, anyway; there is no use talking about that.

Mr. SMITH. The Senator may have to do so, if he and his colleagues keep on with such measures as this. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, I can sympathize with the men who come from States which for years and years were Territories. They were so accustomed to looking to Washington for everything when they were territories that they cannot get over the habit. [Laughter.] They do not belong to that class of States which had their own sovereignty before ever the Federal Government was created. It always does my heart good to know that the powers delegated to the Federal Government are enumerated and defined and all the remaining powers are reserved to the States and the people. It was grudgingly that the States yielded even the grant of power that is contained in the different articles of the Constitution; but here we find members of the so-called "National Democratic Party", because, forsooth, the governor of a State, perhaps under a provocation that I know nothing of, issued an unfortunate statement about his treatment of those who participated in a mob killing, urging this iniquitous measure. The Federal Government is composed of whom? It is composed of the people of the United States; and yet some Senators would concentrate into the hands of a few philanthropists, God save the mark, the destiny of my State and every other State in the Union because some Governor made a mistake. Other Senators do not believe a word of that, and neither do I.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President——

Mr. SMITH. I exonerate the Senator from Nevada, in view of what he stated about his purpose, but if this argument is continued much longer some of us are going to tell the truth. [Laughter.] I mean "the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help us God."

Mr. McCARRAN. I would expect that to come from the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. SMITH. I thank the Senator from Nevada; he knows that I always tell the truth without fear or favor.

Mr. McCARRAN. Absolutely.

Mr. SMITH. And God let the number grow greater. [Laughter.]

I know, as every other Senator knows, and as every decent citizen of America knows, why this bill is here. It is not any use for us to beat about the bush. I know why the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] introduced it; I know why the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN] was a party to it; and at some time, unless this attempt is ended, as it ought to be by throwing this bill out the window, I am going to tell why.

Mr. President, I am much obliged to the Senator from Alabama for giving me the opportunity of getting this much out of my system.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I hope the Senator has some more like it in his system.

Mr. SMITH. Oh, enough for 2 or 3 hours. [Laughter.]

Mr. BANKHEAD. And then some more.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I do.

Mr. McCARRAN. I thank the Senator from Alabama. I wonder where I should start in to answer the question which the learned Senator from South Carolina said he wished to propound to me?

Mr. SMITH. The Senator can start in right by voting against this infamous bill.

Mr. McCARRAN. I wish to say to the Senator from South Carolina, in answer to one suggestion he made which might be construed as an expression against the State which I in part represent, that my State never asked for anything from the Federal Government. We always gave; we gave billions of dollars for the Federal Government, and we gave a higher percentage per capita than did any other State in the Union to save the Government in the World War. We have never asked for anything from the Federal Government. So, if the learned Senator from South Carolina meant to reflect on my State because at one time it was a Territory, he has made a mistake in that regard.

Mr. SMITH. O Mr. President, the Senator is mistaken. I will state what was the gist of my remarks. I do not know how much Nevada has given, and I do not know how much the Federal Government has given Nevada; that is not the point I made. The point I made was that Nevada was so long a Territory, governed from Washington, that Nevada does not have the same feeling about Washington as have the original States. Nevada was protected by the Federal Government while a Territory, and her Governors were appointed, until she got into the habit of sucking the Federal pap, and it seems that it is necessary to break her neck in order to make her quit it. [Laughter.]

Mr. McCARRAN. We never sucked that pap, and we always stood with the Government. We had only one Governor appointed as a Territorial Governor; then we came into the Union as a State, and we have been a State ever since we came in, which was in October 1864. We never asked for anything from the Federal Government; we poured billions—not millions—but billions out of the bowels of the earth to save the Government, and to maintain it, and we pay, perchance, a higher rate of taxes per capita than does any other State in the Union for State maintenance and otherwise. However, that is aside from the question.

What I should like to impress on the Senator from South Carolina—and then I am going to conclude, because I will have rested my friend from Alabama—is that I believe in State rights; that no one more ardently advocates the rights of the States in their sovereign capacity than do I; but I believe that much ballyhoo—and I use that expression advisedly—is being used against this bill because, under the doctrine of State rights, the States can prosecute such crimes as we have in mind, and the States want to prosecute them, but, because of certain conditions arising it is necessary for legislation of this kind to be enacted in order that the States themselves may awaken to their own conditions and responsibilities and prosecute crime.

I wish to say that I have followed the history of one case as I caught it from the columns of the press. That case arose in Alabama, right in the heart of Dixie, right in the heart of the South. That case has gone now twice to the Supreme Court of the United States. Ordinarily we might expect, in keeping with the doctrine that I hear coming from the South with reference to this bill, that the defendants in that case would have been taken out and lynched, but, let it be said to the credit of the South, they were not, but that time after time they were tried by a jury, then the case was taken to the Supreme Court of the United States; the defendants are going back again to be tried by a jury, and, whatever the justice of the case may be let them have it.

I only make mention of this incident with reference to Alabama with no idea of criticism, but rather with an idea of commendation, because the South can handle this situation, and the South is making too much out of this bill. It is bringing reflection on itself; that is all it is doing. If as a matter of fact the bill should come to a vote and should be passed and become a law, it would speak the voice of the South, for, first, it proposes to adhere to the principles of the organic law; second, it proposes to support and maintain individual human liberty; and third, it proposes to see that every man shall have his day in court.

Southern Senators are making too much of this measure, and I am sorry they are doing so. I would rather see the bill become a law and let the South support it, because the people of the South believe in the protection of individual life. I know they do.

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] during his interruption allowed by the courtesy of the Senator who has the floor, told me many things which I have read in the past. I would take nothing away from the chivalry of the South; I would take nothing away from her glorious history; I would take nothing away from her liberty-loving people and nothing from her views of State sovereignty; but they all come together into one idea that the South should support any measure which will lend a helping hand to the lowly and the humble and the unprotected. That is where Senators from the South seem to be making a mistake in this instance, and I am sorry.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will my colleague yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DUFFY in the chair). Does the Senator from Alabama yield to his colleague?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. I noted the statement that the South should help enact any law which would be of benefit to the lowly and the humble. I imagine there are none so lowly and humble usually as those who are arrested for crime.

I have here a copy of the Wickersham report relating to the brutality accorded prisoners in the United States. If there is any type of people the Government ought to try to protect it is its prisoners; and if we are going to depart from the idea of the States taking care of this matter, certainly the Government should protect its prisoners from the iniquitous third degree and from brutalities such as having their teeth knocked out, their bodies bruised and maimed by police officers and sheriffs. I think certainly we would all agree that is the type of people who should be helped.

I hold in my hand at the moment volume 1 of the Wickersham report on lawlessness in law enforcement. It should be very interesting to those who want to protect the weak and the humble to read this report.

I find, for instance, in appendix 4, that in the year 1930, out of a total of 1,235 cases, 289 defendants alleged they were beaten by police. For summary of these statistics see State of New York, chapter 2, section 3. This is the Wickersham report. Let us see what has been going on there. If we want to help the weak and the humble, let us help the people who need it most and in the greatest number.

Mr. McCARRAN. Let me say, if the Senator will pardon me, that I have read the report. I think I understand exactly the comment the Senator is going to make. I am very much in accord with the Senator's views regarding the report.

Mr. BLACK. The Senator, then, would believe it to be proper, if the bill were to be passed, to include an amendment to protect prisoners who are the victims of the third degree, who are kicked into insensibility, who are hit with blackjacks by the police, who are kicked and bruised and carried into police stations with their faces bleeding, their bodies maimed, their teeth knocked out, blackjacked and beaten with rubber hose, beaten, and kicked.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Where did that happen?

Mr. BLACK. In the city of New York in 1930. There were 289 such instances.

Mr. McCARRAN. If I may interrupt, I think it is not confined to the city of New York.

Mr. BLACK. No; it is not. This is simply an illustration. The Senator is correct. It is not limited to New York; certainly it is not. It is wide-spread over the country.

The point I make is that there were 8 lynchings year before last and 14 last year. I am referring to this report, which shows that 289 prisoners were bruised, maimed, kicked, and their teeth knocked out by officers of the law. Yet here we are talking about enacting a Federal statute to protect 8 to 14, the maximum in 2 years, when in one city 289 people have been beaten and bruised by the officers of the law.

Not only that, but the reason why we are asked to pass this bill is inconsistent, because it relates to a crime which has been decreasing in number. The Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN] has several times called attention to the fact that it is said there were 5,000 lynchings within the period referred to. I deny that. I do not deny the Senator has those figures given him from certain sources, but I deny the figures are correct. They are not in keeping with other figures which have been gathered.

However, even conceding his statement, in the year 1910 there were in the United States 26,000 prisoners convicted of crimes ranging through homicide, rape, robbery, assault, burglary, forgery, embezzlement, fraud, stolen property, sex offenses except rape, violating liquor laws, carrying concealed weapons, and so forth. By 1925 this number had grown from 26,000 to 35,000. In 1931 the number had increased to 68,000. These crimes were growing in number. Lynchings were decreasing in number. The people of the States were protecting themselves from the hideous crime of lynching. The people of the States found themselves unable to cope with this growing mountain of crime until the Chief Justice of the United States was impelled to make the statement that crime conditions in this country are a disgrace to any civilized nation.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, may I invite the Senator's attention to the fact that the city in which those 289 instances occurred is in the State from which comes one of the authors of this bill?

Mr. BLACK. Let me say to the Senator from South Carolina that, frankly, I do not think this situation is limited to New York City or to any other one city.

Mr. SMITH. No; but the point I make is that that situation existed right under the nose of one of the coauthors of the bill.

Mr. BLACK. I make the statement that if we have reached the stage in this country where the States cannot and will not enforce their laws with reference to one crime, the instances of which have been reduced in number to eight in 1 year, it would be nothing short of folly on the part of the Senate to ignore the fact that it is our duty to protect those who are in the hands of the custodians of the law from having the thumbscrews put on them, and otherwise given the third degree and tortured by those in whose charge they happen to be.

Mr. BANKHEAD. How many votes does that prisoner crowd have? Has the Senator thought about the difference in the number of votes?

Mr. BLACK. I do not know exactly how many votes they may have. I think it is probably true that this group, constituting probably the lowliest group in America, probably need help most, if anyone is going to have a helping hand extended. They are the unfortunates who are charged with crime, sometimes guilty, sometimes innocent; but what the Wickersham report shows is that before they were proven guilty, even when they were merely on the way to jail and frequently after they were in jail, they had their teeth knocked out, their bodies bruised, their mouths made to bleed by reason of injuries inflicted by the very officers and custodians of the law themselves.

Then, is it to be said that it is proper to enact a law dealing with the only crime in America which is being reduced and ignore these poor people who have the third degree inflicted on them in every city in the Nation?

If this bill ever shall reach a vote, I intend to see that those who claim they are for the weak and the lowly and the humble shall have a chance to prove it. I intend to let it be demonstrated whether or not they will vote at the same time to protect those to whom I have referred from the thuggery and the violence and the viciousness of the sworn officers of the law in the various cities of the country. If the Federal Government can stop one crime, let it stop the others. Certainly, in my judgment, there can be few crimes any more reprehensible than for a sworn officer of the law, sworn to obey it, to take advantage of the situation and maim and bruise people, as they sometimes have, according to these reports, until the victims carry the marks even to their graves.

At a later time I expect to ask the clerk to read into the RECORD a list of the indignities and assaults that were committed upon prisoners. I simply desired the Senator's permission at this time to say, if we wish to pass a Federal law to stop crime, let us pass a Federal law to stop the crimes being committed upon the poorest and weakest citizens of the Nation.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I do.

Mr. BYRNES. I make the point of no quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Connally	King	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Coolidge	La Follette	Robinson
Austin	Costigan	Lewis	Russell
Bachman	Couzens	Logan	Schall
Bailey	Dickinson	Lonergan	Schwellenbach
Bankhead	Dieterich	Long	Sheppard
Barbour	Donahey	McAdoo	Shipstead
Barkley	Duffy	McCarran	Smith
Bilbo	Fletcher	McGill	Steiwer
Black	Frazier	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	Gerry	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Borah	Gibson	Minton	Townsend
Brown	Glass	Moore	Trammell
Bulkley	Gore	Murphy	Truman
Bulow	Guffey	Murray	Tydings
Burke	Hale	Neely	Vandenberg
Byrd	Harrison	Norris	Van Nuys
Byrnes	Hastings	Nye	Wagner
Capper	Hatch	O'Mahoney	Walsh
Caraway	Hayden	Overton	Wheeler
Carey	Johnson	Pittman	White
Clark	Keyes	Pope

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-seven Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. SCHALL. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I do.

Mr. SCHALL. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an editorial from the Washington Spectator entitled "Dust."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I object to the editorial being printed in the RECORD without reading. I have no objection to its being read.

Mr. SCHALL. Very well; I ask to have it read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. COUZENS. As long as the Senator from Alabama holds the floor, I object to having the editorial read in his time.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. SCHALL. Is there objection to printing the editorial in the RECORD?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is objection both to printing the editorial without reading and to having it read.

Mr. BLACK. I understood that the Senator from Michigan [Mr. COUZENS] objected to having it read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection has been made. The Senator from Alabama has the floor.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, I regret that my congenial friend, the junior Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN] has found it necessary to leave the Chamber. During his interruption he emphasized the fact that there were practically no colored votes in his State, and apparently the reasoning behind that statement was that he was not influenced in any way by a group vote. I desire to call attention in his presence to the fact that within the past few days the senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG] has placed in nomination for the Presidency the junior Senator from Nevada; so that gives him an outlook on a great deal more territory than merely the little handful of people in his own State.

I do not, of course, charge that the junior Senator from Nevada has any improper motive. I merely make the suggestion of his broader candidacy in answer to his own suggestion of a limitation upon the number of voters involved in this program.

The junior Senator from Nevada made reference to what are commonly known as the "Scottsboro cases" in Alabama, which twice came to the Supreme Court of the United States. I submit that no stronger argument can be made that the Southern States have the lynching situation in hand, and are making remarkable progress in dealing with it, than the very illustration brought to the attention of the Senate by the junior Senator from Nevada.

There was an alleged occurrence—I seek in no way to pass upon the facts—a common belief, at least, prevailed that nine colored boys had assaulted two white girls. The colored boys were promptly arrested. The very recital of what took place in itself would naturally stir the blood and the heart of every man and every woman; and if it were possible by any state of facts to justify violence, that situation would have justified it. But, Mr. President, it is doubtless well known to the Senator from Nevada that the law-abiding people of the great State of Alabama, resisting with all the resources in their power, mob violence and lynch law, having turned their backs many years ago upon that form of violence, came to the rescue of those colored boys, protected them, and carried them to the courts, where due process of law could be had.

As a result of the appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States the rule has been established that colored jurors shall serve upon juries in the South. The accused were given due process of law and the equal protection of the laws. As has been brought out here, promptly, in compliance with the mandate of our Supreme Court, which all good Americans recognize as the last word in legal jurisprudence, our Governor, a Democrat of years and years of tradition, his ancestors former Governors of Alabama, with all the southern background behind him, living in the heart of what is known as the "Black Belt", where the colored people predominate, promptly sent out a letter to officials all over Alabama saying, "We are bound by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States. Take the names out of your jury boxes; rebuild your jury boxes, and comply in letter and in spirit with the declaration of the Supreme Court of the United States."

No dissent in that good old Democratic State has been raised anywhere, because our best people are opposed to lynch law. We have contended against it. We have preached against it. Wherever it was possible, we have given any defendant, with whatever offenses he may have been charged, the protection of law, where the officials could reach the scene in time. It is well known that in numerous cases of aggravated offenses our national guardsmen have been called to the rescue of defendants. So why now attempt to cast this imputation and reflection upon the section which, under great difficulties, is fighting, and winning, the battle? Why here attempt to enact a Federal law which would provide that certain sections of the country, without naming them, have broken down the effort to give to all citizens the protection guaranteed to them by the fourteenth amendment? Why cast that reflection, when we all know what is behind this program, and what it means?

Mr. President, I am a friend to the Negro, as I said before, and I do not use the word "Negro" in any opprobrious way. Most of our colored people call themselves Negroes, and are proud of their race, as has been stated here. I am a better friend of the colored man, the Negro, than either of the coauthors of the proposed legislation.

When my beloved father went out, under the colors of his State, as a mere youth, 19 years of age, as an officer in a Confederate company, there went with him a colored boy, a slave of the family. He went with my father throughout all the trying days, at times days almost of starvation, of those 4 long, cruel, and bitter years, and when the war was over, when conditions settled down, when reconstruction was in progress, and on down to the days of that colored man's death, he was a devoted friend of my father, and stayed with him as long as he lived. He had shelter, he had clothes, he had food, without distress, without anxiety. He had security all his days. That is the sort of relations which exist in the South in countless cases.

I say this to Senators, to show them my attitude toward the colored people. I am here pleading for the colored people, as their friend, as their neighbor, with knowledge of conditions. When the Ku-Klux Klan was in the zenith of its power and membership, when many of them were making an assault upon the Catholics, and the Jews, and the Negroes, when they held firm to the faith that white, native-born Americans and Christians should be given preference, I went out before the public and preached against religious prejudice and against prejudice based upon any creed, race, or religion.

I dare say there are Senators now here supporting this measure who kept deadly silent when the great gatherings of Ku-Klux members in their States were engaged in their anti-Negro, anti-Catholic, and anti-Jew campaigns. I went to the newspapers. I made no concealment of my stand, and when I was a candidate for the Senate, although there are about 3,000 Negro voters in Alabama, it is my judgment that every one of them voted for me, although I was the Democratic nominee. They know that I have no prejudice against them. They know that I want to be fair to them. That matter was put to the test.

Doubtless there are some here who stood silent when great groups of voters were parading, running the Negroes, denouncing the Catholics and the Jews; they stood silent then, but are here today trying to cast a reflection upon certain sections of this country because, forsooth, they say the law has broken down; that we are failing to give to a race that protection which the Constitution guarantees.

It has been said here that this is not a race question. Of course, on its face, it is not; but let us be frank with each other. Why try to deceive one another? Why try to deceive the country? If that question were not involved, how many would be here seeking to stretch the Federal jurisdiction over the police jurisdiction of all the States in this country in the way the bill proposes to do? As I pointed out when some Senators were out enjoying a nap, or eating luncheon, and not listening to the debate, here is the report on the bill submitted by the committee; here is a brief presented by the committee in support of the bill, which they put forward as a brief that is unanswerable, at least one entitled to great respect and support. They base their report as to the constitutionality of the bill upon a brief prepared by Mr. Tuttle, a New York lawyer.

I do not know whether or not Mr. Tuttle is a politician. I am sorry the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] is not here to inform me something about Mr. Tuttle. I am assuming, however, that in this matter Mr. Tuttle acted as a lawyer; that he spoke what was in his mind and in his heart, as is the duty of all lawyers when called upon to give a formal legal opinion.

I do not know whether or not Mr. Tuttle wrote the bill. Even the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN] is not here. We cannot keep either one of the proponents of this bill here. Six Republicans are now on the floor, one standing.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. COUZENS. A parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. COUZENS. Has any business been transacted since the last quorum call was made?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that no business has been transacted.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. A point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. A distinguished Senator offered for the RECORD an editorial, and permission was granted to have it read, but later objection was made, and the editorial was not read. I submit that that was the transaction of business and entitles me to suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. COUZENS. I remind the Senator from Oklahoma that consent was not given to have the editorial read, because when the request was made I myself objected, and I now raise the point of order that no business having been transacted since the last quorum call, another quorum call is not now in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. SMITH. Request was made that an editorial be read, and objection was made. Was that not the transaction of business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is of the opinion that it was not.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Appeal is taken from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, in view of the discussion which has taken place, and the ruling of the Chair, from which an appeal has been taken, I suggest that we had better have a quorum call.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I wish to have the pending question decided, because if what was done was not the transaction of business I am unable to say what it was. Compared with other things which have been done, it certainly was the transaction of business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate?

Mr. SMITH. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Connally	King	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Coolidge	La Follette	Robinson
Austin	Costigan	Lewis	Russell
Bachman	Couzens	Logan	Schall
Bailey	Dickinson	Lonergan	Schwellenbach
Bankhead	Dieterich	Long	Sheppard
Barbour	Donahey	McAdoo	Shipstead
Barkley	Duffy	McCarran	Smith
Bilbo	Fletcher	McGill	Steiwer
Black	Frazier	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	Gerry	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Borah	Gibson	Minton	Townsend
Brown	Glass	Moore	Trammell
Bulkley	Gore	Murphy	Truman
Bulow	Guffey	Murray	Tydings
Burke	Hale	Neely	Vandenberg
Byrd	Harrison	Norris	Van Nuys
Byrnes	Hastings	Nye	Wagner
Capper	Hatch	O'Mahoney	Walsh
Caraway	Hayden	Overton	Wheeler
Carey	Johnson	Pittman	White
Clark	Keyes	Pope

Mr. LEWIS. I announce the absence of Senators as announced by me on a previous roll call, and ask to have that announcement stand on this roll call.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-seven Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate?

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Chair a question. Is that question debatable?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is debatable.

Mr. SMITH. I think the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] desires to have something to say about the appeal.

Mr. BANKHEAD rose.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD]. The Chair is sure the Senate will be glad to hear from either of the Senators from Alabama.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, I understand there is an appeal pending from the decision of the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question before the Senate is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate? The Senator from Alabama is recognized to debate that question.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, what was the decision of the Chair?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes, Mr. President; I yield to the Senator from Virginia if he does not take me off the floor.

Mr. GLASS. The Senator must yield when a parliamentary inquiry is made. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Virginia will state it.

Mr. GLASS. I desire to know what was the decision of the Chair?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The decision of the Chair was that a roll call could not be had on the suggestion of the absence of a quorum because there had been no transaction of business by the Senate since the last quorum call was made.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, I should like to make a parliamentary inquiry, because the question may become important. I make it in good faith, not for the purpose of taking up time, because I have all evening on the floor. My parliamentary inquiry is, What constitutes the transaction of business of a character which would permit the suggestion of the absence of a quorum and a roll call?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is the Senator propounding a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Action by the Senate on resolutions, the introduction of bills, and so forth, are transactions of business. There are perhaps a hundred or two hundred matters which constitute the transaction of business by the Senate. The point made by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. COUZENS] was that there had been no transaction of business by the Senate since the last quorum call. The Chair sustained the point of order against the quorum call; therefore, there was no quorum call. From the decision of the Chair an appeal was taken. The question now is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate?

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. CONNALLY. I should like to propound an inquiry to the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. CONNALLY. Would the printing in the RECORD of any communication which requires the consent of the Senate that it be done be the transaction of business?

The VICE PRESIDENT. In the opinion of the Chair, that would be the transaction of business.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, that is what has happened.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is informed that objection was made to the printing in the RECORD and to having the communication read; so no business was transacted.

Mr. GLASS. Is not that the transaction of business?

Mr. CONNALLY. Was not that the transaction of business, I ask the Chair?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is informed that the request was made for the printing in the RECORD and objection was made, as objection was also made to reading of the communication; and, therefore, there was no transaction of business.

Mr. CONNALLY. But, Mr. President, if the request had been granted, it would have been the transaction of business. As it required consent or the nonconsent, why, if the Senate refused to consent, is not that the transaction of business?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is informed that the precedents of the Senate are as stated by the Chair.

SAFETY ON THE PUBLIC HIGHWAYS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator from Alabama yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. BANKHEAD. For what purpose?

Mr. KING. For the purpose of presenting a conference report.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the report will be submitted.

Mr. KING. I submit the conference report on Senate bill 408.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the report, as follows:

The Committee of Conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the Bill (S. 408) to promote safety on the public highways of the District of Columbia by providing for the financial responsibility of owners and operators of motor vehicles for damages caused by motor vehicles on the public highways in the District of Columbia; to prescribe penalties for the violation of the provisions of this Act, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its amendment.

WILLIAM H. KING,
ROYAL S. COPELAND,
ARTHUR CAPPER,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

VINCENT L. PALMISANO,
WRIGHT PATMAN,
ERNEST M. DIRKSEN,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. KING. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the conference report.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report.

Mr. KING. I move that the Senate agree to the conference report.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Utah that the Senate agree to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

PREVENTION OF LYNCHING

The Senate resumed the consideration of the motion of Mr. COSTIGAN that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 24) to assure to persons within the jurisdiction of every State the equal protection of the laws by discouraging, preventing, and punishing the crime of lynching.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, action on the conference report was intervening business, was it not?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The adoption of the conference report constituted the transaction of business.

Mr. BANKHEAD. So that a quorum call would now be permissible?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It would.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Byrnes	Glass	McCarran
Ashurst	Capper	Gore	McGill
Austin	Caraway	Guffey	McKellar
Bachman	Carey	Hale	McNary
Bailey	Clark	Harrison	Minton
Bankhead	Connally	Hastings	Moore
Barbour	Coolidge	Hatch	Murphy
Barkley	Costigan	Hayden	Murray
Bilbo	Couzens	Johnson	Neely
Black	Dickinson	Keyes	Norris
Bone	Dieterich	King	Nye
Borah	Donahey	La Follette	O'Mahoney
Brown	Duffy	Lewis	Overton
Bulkley	Fletcher	Logan	Pittman
Bulow	Frazier	Lonergan	Pope
Burke	Gerry	Long	Radcliffe
Byrd	Gibson	McAdoo	Robinson

Russell	Smith	Trammell	Wagner
Schall	Steiwer	Truman	Walsh
Schwellenbach	Thomas, Okla.	Tydings	Wheeler
Sheppard	Thomas, Utah	Vandenberg	White
Shipstead	Townsend	Van Nuys

Mr. LEWIS. I reannounce the absence of certain Senators and the reasons given therefor, and ask that they apply to the present roll call.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-seven Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, I express my regret that it seems impossible to discuss this bill with its authors. I had to make an argument here some time ago with both authors of the bill out for an hour or two, and I was unable to secure their attention. I really had been hopeful that they would be responsive to some of the suggestions and arguments I was submitting. Furthermore, I notice on the Republican side only seven or eight supporters of the bill are here immediately following a roll call. They just will not remain here. I have an idea that they are not greatly interested in this bill. That is the way they do, and it is regrettable that when some of us are deeply concerned about a proposal to change the whole jurisprudence of America, which a great majority of Senators over on the other side are supporting, they do not remain.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Delaware?

Mr. BANKHEAD. It depends on what the Senator wants. I do not desire to lose the floor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will not lose the floor if he yields for a question.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Very well.

Mr. HASTINGS. I wish to ask a question.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Very well, sir.

Mr. HASTINGS. I wish to inquire of the Senator what is the question before the Senate? Is it the merits of this bill or whether the Senate shall take it up?

Mr. BANKHEAD. If the Senator from Delaware would remain in the Chamber, he would know more about it.

Mr. HASTINGS. Not from the argument of the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. BANKHEAD. The Senator has absented himself practically throughout this whole debate and then comes here and wants me to give him information.

Mr. HASTINGS. Is it not true that the question before the Senate is whether we shall take up this bill?

Mr. BANKHEAD. If that is all the Senator knows about the status, there is no use in trying to inform him.

Mr. HASTINGS. Cannot the Senator answer the question?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I can say that it looks suspicious to me that certain members on the other side are either joining in a filibuster or trying to break a quorum; at any rate, we can not keep them here.

Mr. HASTINGS. The Senator does not accuse us over here of conducting a filibuster, does he?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I think I might do so when it is evident that we cannot keep Senators over there on the floor. It is in the nature of a filibuster when so many Senators are out all the time and we do not have a chance to discuss anything with them and have to keep calling the roll in order to try to get them back. It looks to me to be a very effective form of killing time.

Mr. HASTINGS. If the Senator will discuss the question before the Senate we will stay here and listen.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I do not believe a word of that, because Members of the Senate know that I have been discussing this measure for much of the day.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes; I yield to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator from Delaware said something about a filibuster.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. COUZENS. May the Senator from Alabama hold the floor while the Senator from Texas makes a speech?

The VICE PRESIDENT. He cannot, but he may yield for a question.

Mr. COUZENS. The Senator from Texas was not asking a question but was quoting the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. CONNALLY. I did not know that it was an offense in the Senate to quote the Senator from Delaware. [Laughter.] I do not know of any rule that says that another Senator may not quote the Senator from Delaware. I was undertaking to ask the Senator from Alabama if it is not a fact that the filibuster on the other side of the aisle is against bringing up the soldiers' bonus bill?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Of course, it has that effect. I am going to argue that point a little later. [Laughter.] I am going to invite the attention of the authors of this bill, before I conclude, to the fact that there are quite a number of measures on which the only chance in the world the Senator from Delaware and the Senator from Michigan and others will get a chance to vote on their final passage is by making an omnibus bill out of this one and letting this bill pull through with it some really helpful, remedial legislation for which some of the Senators on the other side will not vote in any other way.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Delaware?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I do.

Mr. HASTINGS. I should like to inquire if the reason for trying to prevent the bill coming before the Senate is because the Senator from Alabama feels that a majority of the Senate would be in favor of it?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I think if the Senator has any judgment at all he would know that.

Mr. HASTINGS. I thank the Senator.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will my colleague yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to his colleague?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Certainly.

Mr. BLACK. My colleague referred to the fact that there is evidently a filibuster in progress against the soldiers' bonus bill. Everyone here knowns that the effort to bring the antilynching bill before the Senate is going to prove futile. Everyone knows that it cannot be done. Everyone knows that if this matter were out of the way the soldiers' adjusted compensation bill would be brought before the Senate. Not only that, but we could then proceed to consideration of the Wagner labor-disputes bill; we could then take up the social-security legislation. Members of the Finance Committee would have time to proceed with its consideration.

It is a little strange that Senators on the other side of the Chamber who are the most vigorously opposed, judging by their record in the past, including the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS], to payment of the soldiers' adjusted compensation, those who are really opposed to the labor-disputes bill, those who are opposed to giving organized labor a decent chance, those who are opposed to the social-security measure, should be conducting a filibuster at this time in order to keep the Senate tied up on a measure which never will come to a vote in the Senate.

Mr. HASTINGS. Does either Senator from Alabama dispute that he is conducting a filibuster?

Mr. BLACK. I will state that the Senator from Delaware is doing that in joining with his colleagues to prevent the soldiers' bonus bill from being considered.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, a point of order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. COUZENS. Who has the floor?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] has the floor. The Chair is of the opinion that none of the Senators know what is before the Senate. The Chair will state for their information that the question is the appeal from the decision of the Chair, and whether the decision of the Chair shall stand as the judgment of the Senate. [Laughter.]

Mr. BLACK. I stated that a few moments ago. Therefore it is very pertinent to call the attention of the Senate to the filibuster which is being conducted by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS] and others against the soldiers' adjusted-compensation bill.

Mr. BANKHEAD. With very great frankness, I realize that we have before the Senate an appeal from the decision of the former occupant of the chair. I assume that in due course we will reach a vote upon that question.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. LEWIS. May I ask the Chair to state what is the status of the appeal?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The former occupant of the chair sustained the point of order made by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. COUZENS] that no business had been transacted by the Senate and that therefore no quorum call could be had. The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] appealed from the ruling of the Chair. That appeal is now pending before the Senate. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate?

Mr. LEWIS. Is it not true, sir, that a roll call has been had since and the presence of a quorum ascertained?

The VICE PRESIDENT. That does not change the status of the appeal from the decision of the Chair. That merely determined the presence of a quorum of the Senate.

Mr. LEWIS. I have no desire to question the view of the present occupant of the chair but am merely desirous of making clear the question which is now pending before the Senate.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, if I may interrupt, the question is merely academic now because there has been transacted certain business since the decision of the Chair and there has been a quorum called as well.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Nevertheless, the then occupant of the chair made the decision, and the Senator from South Carolina appealed from the decision. Therefore that appeal must be decided by the Senate as to whether the decision of the Chair shall stand as the judgment of the Senate.

Mr. GLASS. I insist the whole thing will be merely academic.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, if the Senator from Alabama will allow me——

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. SMITH. It is not academic because it involves a principle. We must determine whether, when a Senator submits a request to have an article read into the RECORD and objection is made, that objection under the rule of the Senate does not constitute the transaction of business which is authorized by the rule, whereas if no objection is made and the article goes into the RECORD, it is the transaction of business. It seems to me either action would constitute the transaction of business on the part of the Senate. I desire to make the point that it is not merely academic. It is a point which may govern us hereafter.

Mr. GLASS. It is academic because, since then, business has been transacted and there has been a quorum call. If the Senator from South Carolina wants a practical vote on the question, since there has been no transaction of business since the last quorum call, let him call now for a quorum and let the Senator from Michigan make his point of order and let the decision be made.

Mr. SMITH. But the question is still here. The question is still whether or not the attempt to read into the RECORD an article and the submission of an objection to that request constituted the transaction of business. The objection was made as provided by a rule of the Senate, and the objection is invoked as contradistinguished from acceptance of the offer. One is negative; the other is affirmative. If one constitutes business, necessarily the other constitutes business. I insist we ought to settle the question as to whether the offering to read into the RECORD of an article an objection being made thereto constitutes the transaction of business.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Is it not a fact that there are at this time three proposals pending before the Senate: First, an appeal from the decision of the Chair; second, a motion to strike from the original motion certain figures which identify the original so-called "antilynching bill" and substituting in place thereof figures identifying the so-called "bonus bill"; third, a motion to proceed to the consideration of the antilynching bill?

There are three distinct proposals standing before the Senate. My parliamentary inquiry is, How many questions can be before the Senate at one time?

Mr. SMITH. Let us debate them all. [Laughter.]

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will undertake to answer the Senator from Oklahoma. There can be but one proposal pending before the Senate at a time. The Senator is correct that the question before the Senate at the present time is whether the decision of the Chair shall stand as the judgment of the Senate. The second proposal mentioned by the Senator from Oklahoma was withdrawn by the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY]. The third proposal mentioned by the Senator from Oklahoma is the motion of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN] to proceed to the consideration of the so-called "antilynching bill." That covers the situation.

The Senator from Alabama may proceed.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, since apparently the Senator from Michigan [Mr. COUZENS] has started to police the rules of the Senate, I think the question has passed beyond the point of being academic and is now practical. I am now speaking on the appeal and not on the bill. I may by inference make some allusions or suggestions which might have some bearing on the bill. It is a very good idea to have time to think over and deliberate on the vote which may be taken on the appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will my colleague yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield for a question.

Mr. BLACK. I notice the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS] is leaving the Chamber.

Mr. BANKHEAD. We cannot keep him here.

Mr. BLACK. I desire to call the attention of my colleague to the fact that the Senator from Delaware asked a question as to what is pending before the Senate. I want to be courteous to the Senator from Delaware, and I should like to ascertain if he knows now what is before the Senate.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I think the Senator from Delaware is not concerned about what is before the Senate, so I am not going to follow up the matter with him.

Mr. President, as I said I think it is a good idea from the practical standpoint for us to have a little time to deliberate and find out where we stand and what we are after and how we are going to get it and what we are driving up to, and a number of other points, because they might have a bearing in the minds of some practical statesmen as to how they may vote on the appeal from the decision of the Chair, which seems to involve some dispute as to the facts.

Mr. President, I think it is pretty well understood, at least I have heard a good deal about it, though I do not charge it, but it is in the air, that there are certain Members of the Senate who are supporting the motion of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], who are bitterly opposed to legislation which is going to be brought before the Senate for consideration as soon as this matter shall be disposed of in some way. My colleague made a brief reference to some of those measures. We have had the bonus question before us for a long time. We have now for consideration, if we can ever get to it, that much debated question. The ex-service men are waiting for payment of the bonus and are hopeful that they may not have to go to the poorhouse before we get around to its payment. We have that problem before us, not only as to whether they shall be paid but when they shall be paid and how they shall be paid. While a great many of us desire to proceed to the consideration of that subject, we know that the Senator from Delaware, the Senator from Michigan, the Senator from Vermont, and other Senators who apparently are willing to have this bill stay here until doomsday are not interested in the payment of the soldiers' bonus in the way it seems as if it may be paid, and that is through the route of the Patman bill.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. Since the Senator has mentioned the opposition of certain Senators to the soldiers' bonus, I desire to call attention to another fact. I may be mistaken, but I am reasonably sure that in 1932 the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS] made a very vigorous attack, which is in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, against the payment of the soldiers' bonus, and, of course, those who are against the payment of the soldiers' bonus naturally will continue to filibuster to keep it from coming before this body.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes; and there are some other measures of vital importance which are threatening to come up, and will come up. If the friends of the soldiers wish to secure bonus legislation within a reasonable time, so as to provide relief for the soldiers, it strikes me they ought to offer the bonus bill as an amendment to this bill. There are numerous reasons why that should be done. In the first place, in that way we will get action on it as quickly as we will get action on anything else in the Senate if this bill stands as prior to everything else in the order of business.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I do.

Mr. LEWIS. Responding to the suggestion of the able Senator from Alabama that the bonus bill should be tendered as a substitute for, or amendment to, the present bill, I ask the Senator what is his judgment as to whether that proposal would receive the votes of those who are now supporting the present bill or of those who are opposing it?

Mr. BANKHEAD. My judgment is that if the bonus bill were put on this bill as an amendment, they would be afraid to vote against the bill. Of course they would go along and vote for it.

Mr. LEWIS. Whom does the Senator mean by "they"?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I mean some of the Senators on the other side to whom I have been referring, who apparently are so anxious to obstruct business here.

If they will bring up the bonus, and there is a majority of the Senate for it—we are the judges of its germaneness under the rules of the Senate—we can put the bonus on this bill, and we can put it on in the form which a majority of the Senate favor. We can put it on, if we have a majority of the votes, by the inflation route, paying the bonus through the issuance of additional currency.

I know there are many Members upon this floor who are in favor of the expansion of the currency. I know there are many who have no fear of the charge of fiat money so long as there is concealed in the vaults of the Treasury a sufficient quantity of gold to support, to the extent of 100 percent, all currency necessary to be issued in payment of the bonus. I should like to see the test made here. I should like to see what Senators will squirm and what Senators will turn their backs upon the pending program, if they come to the choice of voting for both this program and the payment of the bonus through an issuance of currency to cover the gold and silver in the Treasury.

We desire to deal with the bonus question after these long years of delay. I am sure a majority of the Senate does. Why do not the Senators on the other side who favor this bill, and who also favor the bonus, put the bonus bill on this program? It will make the present bill stronger to put it on. It will, as I have indicated, force Senators to vote for the passage of this bill who will not vote for the passage of a good bonus bill.

What about the 6-hour bill? Is not that measure being delayed by this insistence upon continuing before the Senate a bill which every sensible Member of the Senate knows can pass only when thirty-odd Senators have exhausted every possible resistance and exhausted physical endurance? I have been frank, as I said, from the beginning of this program. I am not going to submit, if I can help it, to the passage by Congress of a bill which bears an imputation and a reflection upon the people of my State, who are doing all in their power, everything they can do and everything that is being done in the other States, to prevent murder, to prevent lynching, to apprehend the guilty, to afford those accused of crime protection even through the use of the National Guard; who are using every resource available to them to give every citizen in their States, regardless of race, color, or previous condition of servitude, the equal protection of the laws, and due process of law under the fourteenth amendment.

Our people have been hounded for years on this question, beginning back with the soldiers at the polls following reconstruction, beginning back when the rights of States were challenged and denied and ignored, and elections were held with soldiers at the polls; a people who were threatened here with the passage of the force bill to control elections, a measure which tied up Congress for months and months and months as a direct assault upon the institutions of the South. Now we have as honest elections as are held anywhere in the world. We fought off, we fought down, we beat back this assault upon our section and upon our people and our institutions, and said, "Let us alone! We have a great problem, a complicated problem, a difficult problem, in dealing with a race of new freedmen, not prepared for the duties of intelligent citizenship, not fully prepared to understand their duty to obey all the laws of the country. We shall have to work along in the course of evolution and progress; but we in the South, with these people constituting almost half the population, have more interest, if possible, than people from a great distance in working out this problem, in adjusting it, in helping the new freedmen to develop as good citizens, and to take their place in the political and other organizations in accordance with the position they deserve."

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, I charged here some time ago—I did not, of course, intend to be in any way offensive about it; I thought I was stating the plain, unvarnished fact—that a certain group of Republicans on the other side of the Chamber—not the Progressives, but the old-line, stand-pat group of Republicans—were fighting off this bill so as to avoid coming to a vote on the cash payment of the bonus. Not a single voice was raised among that group of Senators then upon the floor to deny the charge. Not a single protest was made at the suggestion that they are filibustering, in a way, that they are purposely absenting themselves from the floor; and now only two Republicans are on the floor of the Senate—the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. COUZENS] and the senior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. KEYES]. We cannot keep the Republican Senators here. They are delaying the progress of the Senate through the necessity of having roll call after roll call while they quietly stay at their offices. Of course, the conclusion is almost inevitable that there is some motive, some reason somewhere for the protraction of this debate, for the delay in disposing of this bill.

While I think the Senators on the other side ought to stay here, while I think they ought to listen to sound doctrine, while I think they ought to take some interest in a measure with which they are willing to block the progress of the Senate, still they are unwilling to do it. That, of course, is their privilege.

Let me say to my Democratic friends who, with the others, are supporting this measure—and I say it to the two distinguished coauthors of the bill, who are at all times interested in remedial legislation, in humane legislation, in progressive legislation—they have fallen into a trap; other Senators, who are opposed to their views upon legislation which is yet to come before us, have, so to speak, put rings in their noses, and are leading them here day after day in the continuance of the debate on a measure which will never pass the Senate, at this session of Congress, at least.

Ah! it is pathetic to me to see a good many like my desk mate, the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], who is friendly at all times——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Will the Senator yield so the Senate may receive a message from the House of Representatives?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6223) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes; that the House had receded from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 3, and 38 to the bill and concurred therein, and that the House had receded from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 5 to the bill and concurred therein with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

PREVENTION OF LYNCHING

The Senate resumed the consideration of the motion of Mr. COSTIGAN that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 24) to assure to persons within the jurisdiction of every State the equal protection of the laws by discouraging, preventing, and punishing the crime of lynching.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, while this bill is confessedly a sectional bill, and so described in the report of the committee, the one disturbing thing is that it has passed out of the control and manipulation of the Republican Party, and now we find a majority of the Democrats in the Senate of the United States stepping up and taking out of the hands of the Republicans a sectional program dropped by the Republicans 10 years ago. We find two Democratic Senators, supported by a majority of the Democrats in this body, taking over control of an issue abandoned by the Republican Party.

Why is that, Mr. President? Ten years ago, when the Republican Party undertook the passage of the Dyer antilynching bill, I am sure, not from any statement made to me by any responsible Republican but from general knowledge of conditions and observation thereafter, they found there was no demand for such legislation among the responsible colored people of this country.

Why else did they drop it? They never sought to resurrect it. They did at last, upon the race question, obtain a ray of information and intelligence, and did succeed in submerging political party interests in order to help beat back the race issue. They found that the lynching problem was no longer a sectional problem, no longer a race problem. They found lynching occurring in New York and in other States. I do not know whether there was ever one in Colorado or not, but lynching has occurred in probably every other State. So the Republicans finally found, so far as they were concerned, that a race question was not involved, and so they abandoned such legislation. Now, they are trailing behind Democratic leadership, Democratic authors, a Democratic majority, in support of the measure; but it might as well be understood, in fairness to every Senator who has to go "on the spot" on this subject, that the effort to pass the bill is not a part of the Republican program. If it is anything, it is a part of the Democratic program, because it is sponsored by Democrats, and supported by a majority of the Democrats in the Senate.

Why do I say it is confessedly a race program regardless of the denial of the great Senator from Colorado? He says he does not see any race question in it. I assume it is also the view of the able Senator from New York that there is no race question in it.

I do not know who wrote the bill. I assume, of course, those Senators did. I know that the committee which reported it had the advice of an able lawyer, a constituent of the Senator from New York, a Republican, I assume, and a former Republican officeholder, but a man who I understand to be a good lawyer.

At any rate, the committee, after what they say was an exhaustive investigation of the briefs of the advocates of the bill, wrote the bill we are now discussing. There was no examination and report on the briefs of those who opposed it, no investigation of the great debates participated in by the eminent lawyers and statesmen upon the floor of the Senate and the House of Representatives 10 years ago on the constitutional phases of the bill. No; there was no investigation of that sort. The bill was reported by a committee which frankly says, "We looked into the authority to do this thing, but we ignored everything that was said against the authority to do it."

What does this lawyer say? Notwithstanding the expressed statement of the Senator from Colorado on the subject, I wish to talk plainly and without offense. I certainly do not want to offend anyone. I am doing my best to protect the Democrats who have gone astray on this matter. I do not want them to be hurt. I want them to come back to the Senate regardless of how they vote on this question, because, as I have said, the worst sort of a Democrat is better than the best sort of a Republican. [Laughter.]

I do not know whether or not Mr. Tuttle, the official lawyer, apparently, for the committee, was acting as amicus curiae; I do not know whether or not he got a fee; I do not know whether he was sent here by a group of sociologists of the type that has been in touch with the Senator from Colorado and the Senator from New York. They have not been in touch with the rank and file. They have been consulting sociologists, theorists, economists, highbrows among the colored race and the white race, not those who go down in the workshops and talk to the colored man, not those who have any knowledge of conditions in the section against which the bill is directed. No; they have no knowledge of those conditions. They are merely importuned by groups of sociologists and highbrow colored men who are living and holding their places out of the sweat and labor of the common colored man.

Oh, yes; they are the ones doing the agitating. We have not heard any word from men like those in the Tuskegee Institute, the Booker Washington type, and the Dr. Moton element in the South, that the South wants this bill or that the colored men want it.

Who knows what is best for the colored race? If you want to help the colored race, I shake hands with you, but for God's sake do not take your advice from those who know nothing about conditions. Do not do something which will stir up race feeling and race prejudice, as surely as we are living, and give to a low order of people the idea that the Government of the United States is going to protect them regardless of what sort of crime they may commit. Do not get that sort of idea into their heads. If you want to help the colored man, talk to the friends of the colored race, those who live among them and understand them. Talk with the men who have the confidence of the colored men in the South. Talk with the men who have so conducted themselves toward the colored race in every way as to command the confidence and respect of the great mass of colored people in the sections in which we live.

Oh, no; that is not the source of information which some people desire on this subject. In fact, from the attendance we now have in the Senate, I do not believe they desire any information at all.

Let us see what Mr. Tuttle had to say about the subject. He wrote a document for the committee. The committee thought so much of it, it appealed to them as so well and so truly expressing what is involved in this proposed legislation, that they picked out this opinion from all the legal documents available to them as giving true expression to the purpose and intent of the bill. Now, notwithstanding that has been done, we find a denial of what the opinion selected by them, and reported by them, says is the purpose of the bill.

Let me read to the Senate from this brief:

> This bill is expressly limited by its own definitions to official action or nonaction resulting in the denial of due process or the equal protection of the laws.

Now listen:

It applies only to persons injured or killed through mob violence on account of—race, creed, or color.

Listen—

Did Senators hear that? A committee brings the bill to the Senate with the statement connected with it that the bill applies only to those injured on account of race, creed, or color, yet we hear the statement made, "Oh, this is not a sectional matter; this is not a race matter. Why, there was a mob and a lynching in California. That makes it national. Oh, yes; this question is national."

Let us see what else the committee said. I desire to call the attention of the Senate—it was briefly mentioned yesterday—to an argument made by the committee in its report. It says:

In the committee's opinion, it is more than a coincidence that the practice of lynching is practically stopped when Federal legislation designed to curb this practice is pending in Congress. A continuation of the practice of lynching, coupled with a complete failure of the government of those States involved to apprehend and punish the participators of these crimes supports the need for Federal legislation. * * *

During the first week in June 1934 word was generally circulated that hope for the enactment of the proposed measure had been abandoned. On June 8 there was a lynching in Mississippi, followed—

By other lynchings.

Word circulated that a bill, the Costigan-Wagner anti-lynching bill, had been abandoned. Who authorized the statement that it had been abandoned? Was any such declaration ever made on the floor of the Senate or in the newspapers? Who circulated word all over America that a bill had been abandoned in Congress? I ask any lawyer, I ask any man of common judgment, if the abandonment of a bill in Congress would, anywhere in the South, stir up a mob to commit murder?

In the first place, there is no means for general whispering campaigns. In the second place, everyone knows that no mob, stirred to insane frenzy, composed usually of totally irresponsible people, is going to pay any attention to the law on the subject. Such people do not stop to ask whether there is a Federal law on the subject. They know there is a State law against murder and that it is punishable by death in my State. They know the law is there. Senators, in the high tides of passion, any aggregation of men, governed by mob psychology, led by some dangerous and irresponsible agitator and leader, does not resort to judgment and reason. Such men do not investigate what particular section of the law, whether State or Federal, governs the case. That is totally an afterthought.

Let us see if the committee was consistent in its statement. It said the word was spread around. I do not know whether that means that it was spread in churches or in Sunday schools or in lodge meetings. The Senators must have a very exaggerated idea of the general knowledge about the details of handling the bill of which they are authors if they imagine that the mere whispering somewhere by somebody that a bill had been temporarily laid aside was responsible for mob lynchings thereafter during the year. That is a far-fetched conclusion.

I call the attention of the Senators who appear to be, and who, I assume, are seriously supporting this drastic bill—this revolutionary bill, this bill destructive of State rights, this bill which will destroy existing peaceable race relations, which, in my judgment, will increase rather than reduce the number of cases of violence taking place thereafter—to the figures put into the RECORD a few days ago by the very able Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], figures furnished him by the outstanding Negro college in America, a colored institute with a research board, with a tremendous foundation fund, with all the financial backing it needs in order to operate in all reasonable lines of activity. With a research board, with a statistical board, with every available avenue and source of information, they have been collecting the statistics on this subject during the years. What do those statistics show? I am not bringing up this subject to repeat the figures.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to his colleague?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Coolidge	King	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Copeland	La Follette	Robinson
Austin	Costigan	Lewis	Russell
Bachman	Couzens	Logan	Schall
Bailey	Dickinson	Lonergan	Schwellenbach
Bankhead	Dieterich	Long	Sheppard
Barbour	Donahey	McAdoo	Shipstead
Barkley	Duffy	McCarran	Smith
Bilbo	Fletcher	McGill	Steiwer
Black	Frazier	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	Gerry	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Borah	Gibson	Minton	Townsend
Brown	Glass	Moore	Trammell
Bulkley	Gore	Murphy	Truman
Bulow	Guffey	Murray	Tydings
Burke	Hale	Neely	Vandenberg
Byrd	Harrison	Norris	Van Nuys
Byrnes	Hastings	Nye	Wagner
Capper	Hatch	O'Mahoney	Walsh
Caraway	Hayden	Overton	Wheeler
Carey	Johnson	Pittman	White
Clark	Keyes	Pope

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-seven Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The Senator from Alabama has the floor.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, will the able Senator from Alabama yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. COSTIGAN. A moment ago the Senator from Alabama made a statement with reference to Dr. Moton, of Tuskegee Institute. It is my recollection that reference was also made to Dr. Moton a day or two ago by the senior Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK].

I am advised that Dr. Moton is a vice president of the Interracial Commission, from which a telegram, subsequently placed in the RECORD, was received last Friday, and that Dr. Moton was an organizer and has actively participated in the activities of the Interracial Commission throughout its history.

Mr. BANKHEAD. There is no doubt about Dr. Moton being opposed to lynching. Dr. Moton has never read the bill and endorsed it. If he had, the Senator from Colorado would have so stated. I do not believe he would endorse the bill. I am sure there is no evidence that he has done so. The Senator from Colorado has no such evidence, or he would submit it.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. COSTIGAN. I think it is already of record that the Interracial Commission has endorsed legislation of the type of the proposed legislation.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will my colleague yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. I am not familiar with exactly the resolution adopted by the interracial group, but I did note an article in the New York Times of last Sunday, which perhaps the Senator from Colorado may have seen, an article written by Mr. Julian Harris, of Georgia. It is my recollection, though I would not be absolutely sure of my recollection, that the article stated that the group on interracial relations, while opposed to lynching, did not intend to endorse any particular bill. The article can be easily obtained. It was in last Sunday's New York Times.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, if the Senator from Alabama will yield further——

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. COSTIGAN. It should be said that the senior Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK] accurately states the position of the Interracial Commission, so far as I now recall it. That commission, which for a number of years has declined to endorse Federal legislation, recently endorsed antilynching legislation by the Congress, but did not, I believe, go so far as to endorse the particular measure now under discussion in the Senate.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, I have just stated that, in my judgment, Dr. Moton, who is the head of the greatest colored institution in this country, who understands the rapidly improving race conditions in the South, and is in large measure responsible for their improvement, who understands the diligent efforts made by the people of all the States in that section, including their law officers, to enforce all laws, regardless of race, creed, or color—Dr. Moton would not give his approval to this bill, which so many of us earnestly and sincerely believe will promote strife and discord and racial disturbances.

Why does the Senator from Colorado think he knows more about the race situation in the South than do those of us who live there? Does he impugn our sincerity in saying that we are friendly to the colored race; that we are opposed to mobs and to lynchings; that we are handling the situation; that we are making wonderful progress? Does he impugn our motives? He must recognize that we know more about the problem than does any man who lives a thousand miles away. He must know that those in direct contact with this situation better understand how to diagnose it, how to treat it, and how to bring health and security out of it, than does any Denver doctor a thousand miles away who has never seen the patient.

That is the situation. We are up against an absentee diagnostician, encouraged by sociologists, encouraged by professional groups, not encouraged by the great mass of colored people, not approved by the leaders of the colored people in that section.

Senators talk about lynching as a national menace. It is absurd. Any lynching, of course, is unfortunate.

Mr. President, in my own home county, in the period of more than 125 years since it was organized there has occurred only one lynching; and the man lynched was not a negro, but a white man. In many counties in my State there has never been a lynching in their whole history; and still we hear theoretical doctors of race relations tell the Senate and tell the world through the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and the news service, "Oh, we have a situation that is so horrible, so menacing, so distressing that we must strain the Constitution of the United States"—and they are bound to know they are straining it—"and extend it into fields it has never before sought to cover in order to deal with a terrible, disgraceful, menacing condition of lynching and mobbing."

Mr. President, I say there ought to be potent supporting facts of overwhelming force and convincing power to show that there is a menace to our institutions, to a group of our people, before we undertake to confer local police power upon the Federal courts of the country.

The Senator from Colorado seems to think that if participants in lynchings can be dragged into the Federal courts they will be punished. Why take them to the Federal courts? We have not the type of carpetbag judges we used to have. We have local men presiding over the Federal courts in our section. We have the same type of citizens serving upon the grand juries in the Federal courts that serve upon the grand juries in the local courts. We have the same type of trial jurors in the Federal courts that we have in our local courts. The Senator from Colorado, however, seems to have the idea that there is such a dread of a Federal judge, of a Federal court, constituted of our local people, that if Uncle Sam's name is put on it that is going to alarm and frighten everybody out of doing things that otherwise might be done.

So far as the actual effects of trials is concerned, I should have no serious objection to a Federal court trial; but I do denounce any effort to break down our dual system of government, our local courts. I do denounce any program to jerk citizens up and haul them away two or three or four hundred miles to the seat of some Federal court, as must be done in many States of the Union, with their broad areas, under the program sponsored here by the Senator from Colorado; and I do object, as a lawyer, as a practitioner, as an American citizen, to any program which seeks to place the Federal Government directly in control of the enforcement of the police laws within our States.

Some time ago we had pending before us a bill to extend the power of the Federal courts to the prosecution of one of the most heinous crimes in this country, namely, kidnaping. Shortly after the terrible tragedy in the Lindbergh home, which so deeply stirred the people of this country, which aroused such intense interest and sympathy, which evoked the indignation of every man and every woman in America, when the bill was pending here to give Federal control over the horrible crime of kidnaping, I note that neither the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN] nor the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] proposed to extend the scope of the bill to kidnaping within a State. They stood here with the same sort of indignation that all Americans had, with the same desire to stamp out and destroy the terrible crime of kidnaping, which at that time and for some months before that time had spread all over the country, and had gotten to be almost a daily occurrence. Great amounts of money were extorted. Men and women were taken into hiding, into seclusion, with their families, their husbands, their wives, their children, in suspense, in desperation. My God! What greater suffering could be brought to a family than the realization that one of its members is in the secret possession of bandits and outlaws and kidnapers and robbers? During the period of kidnapings we had more kidnapings than we had lynchings. If these Senators were so anxious to give the Federal Government power to bear down on a serious crime, I ask, in the name of common sense and decency, if they thought it was constitutional to do so, why they did not when they had the opportunity include in the Lindbergh kidnaping law the power of the Federal court to prosecute, just as they are trying in this bill to take jurisdiction away from the State courts and give it to the Federal courts.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MCGILL in the chair). Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Will the Senator from Alabama, in the course of his able discussion, be good enough to place in the RECORD a list of all the cases of kidnaping which were purely of an intrastate and not of an interstate character?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I think the Senator from Colorado is a better statistician than I am. He seems to be more concerned about great crimes than I have been. He seems to be the remedial agent here in Congress, and it certainly seems to me that if he is on the watch tower to detect epidemics of crime of these vile and vicious kinds, long ago he must have compiled the statistics upon this horrible subject of kidnaping.

We have before us the question of the power of Congress to deal with cases of murder, and lynching is nothing but murder. I do not care how able Senators may be in the preparation of a bill, how skillful in its drafting to undertake to evade the Constitution, I do not care how resourceful they are in the matter of defining in some technical way what constitutes a mob, I say to the Senator from Colorado as a lawyer that the same law which applies to three constituting a mob applies to an individual; and, as well pointed out by the Senator from Idaho, we cannot excuse one when we condemn three for the same offense.

It is nothing but a subterfuge to try to inject, by a definition of what constitutes a mob, a Federal power, or to bring a crime under the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution.

When we analyze it, murder is murder, whether it is committed by one or committed by a group. It is the same type of offense. Life is taken. The act is wrong, it is sinful, it is punishable. But in order to raise another Federal question, the Senator proceeds on the theory that three killing a man makes an offense different from one killing a man or two killing a man.

I should like to know why the authors of this bill decided to select the number three. All laws of conspiracy make a conspiracy as offensive, as punishable, whether participated in by two or a hundred. But in this effort to adopt some ingenious rule of construction, the Senators have taken the old Dyer antilynching bill, which originally in the House of Representatives specified five as constituting a mob. It is true that when that bill got to the Senate, in some way, for some reason, somehow, it was decided, "Well, there might not be as many as five in a mob", so the number was reduced in the Senate to three, and the Senators who are the authors of the bill we are discussing have followed on that subject the number contained in the Dyer measure.

I desire to have the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] sent for. I am about to take up a matter, the discussion of which I want the Senator to hear.

I started awhile ago, but I have not had time to finish, being sort of pressed for time, to discuss a phase of the report. I do not know whether the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN] wrote the report or not. I will ask him whether he wrote it, or who did write it? I refer to the committee report.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, I did not write it.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Does the Senator know who wrote it?

Mr. COSTIGAN. It was written no doubt at the request of the committee by its authorized representatives.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Does the Senator mean by members of the committee, or by somebody acting for the committee?

Mr. COSTIGAN. I prefer to have the chairman of the committee speak for the committee.

Mr. BANKHEAD. In other words, the Senator does not know or he is not willing to tell. Which is it?

Mr. COSTIGAN. I do not know exactly, and it is not my province to say who wrote the report in its entirety.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I would like to find out whether this is a report written by some professional, somebody not having a direct responsibility by a vote in the committee or in the Senate.

Mr. COSTIGAN. In response I will say to the able Senator that I am not a member of the Committee on the Judiciary, and the Senator must look elsewhere for an answer to his question.

May I state to the Senator from Alabama while I am on my feet that, according to Professor Chadbourn, the State statutes which deal with lynching have various numbers of persons specified as constituting a mob. In at least three States, including the State from which the Senator comes, also in Indiana and Arkansas, one person, it is reported, is sufficient legally for a lynching. In Kentucky the number constituting a mob for the purposes of the statute is three, and apparently in Illinois, New Jersey, and West Virginia the number chosen by the legislators is five.

Mr. BANKHEAD. In other words, it varies from one to five, as I get the point of the Senator.

Mr. COSTIGAN. That is my understanding of the statutory situation in the various States.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I am just wondering by what dogmatic process or arbitrary selection the authors of this bill select three as constituting a mob.

I requested that the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] be sent for, and he is now in the Chamber. I wish to discuss at this time, while the Senator is here, what I did not wish to take up in his absence, not because it is personal, because there is nothing personal in it, but for another reason. I will return to the other subject directly, if my time does not expire.

I have been discussing a few different subjects which ought to be included in this program. I have just read in the committee report from the statement by one of the Senator's constituents that the program under the pending bill—

> Applies only to persons injured or killed through mob violence on account of race, creed, or color.

There is a fact which all of us knew, but which this man was frank enough to admit.

The point I make is that while we are dealing with the race question we ought to deal with a good many aspects of it in this bill. If Senators hope to pass this bill, there is no reason on earth why its provisions should be limited solely to the colored race.

Mr. WAGNER. Are they so limited?

Mr. BANKHEAD. That is what the Senator's lawyer says. He did not write the bill, of course; but the statement appears in the committee report, whether or not it is written on the face of the bill. The lawyer who wrote the brief and presented the brief in support of the bill was frank enough to write into his brief that this bill is confined to those who are killed on account of race, color, or creed. I will say to the Senator that I do not think that language is found in the bill.

Mr. WAGNER. Very well. I am not responsible for any statement by another.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Of course, the man who had been selected by some colored group to prepare a bill on this question submitted an opinion which would be used as the basis and foundation of the legal authorization for the bill. He does not appear as a politician, not as one dependent in any way upon the will and suffrage of the people but he appears as a lawyer. I assume the Senator recognizes that he is a high-type lawyer, standing before the committee as a lawyer, speaking as a lawyer and as an advocate of the bill, in close touch and contact with the sponsors of the bill. I do not mean the authors of the bill. I do not know whether he was in contact with them or not; but he was in contact with all who are promoting this fight, this campaign, this bill. Here is their legal representative, with sufficient manhood and frankness and courage to speak out and put into the written opinion which the committee has adopted and sent to the Senate the statement that the bill is solely one applying to those killed because of race, color, or creed.

I notice that there is not a Republican Senator sitting on the other side of the Chamber—not a single one!

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to his colleague?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I do not see why we cannot keep in the Chamber Senators who are interested in the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum has been suggested. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Connally	King	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Coolidge	La Follette	Robinson
Austin	Costigan	Lewis	Russell
Bachman	Couzens	Logan	Schall
Bailey	Dickinson	Lonergan	Schwellenbach
Bankhead	Dieterich	Long	Sheppard
Barbour	Donahey	McAdoo	Shipstead
Barkley	Duffy	McCarran	Smith
Bilbo	Fletcher	McGill	Steiwer
Black	Frazier	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	Gerry	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Borah	Gibson	Minton	Townsend
Brown	Glass	Moore	Trammell
Bulkley	Gore	Murphy	Truman
Bulow	Guffey	Murray	Tydings
Burke	Hale	Neely	Vandenberg
Byrd	Harrison	Norris	Van Nuys
Byrnes	Hastings	Nye	Wagner
Capper	Hatch	O'Mahoney	Walsh
Caraway	Hayden	Overton	Wheeler
Carey	Johnson	Pittman	White
Clark	Keyes	Pope

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-seven Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, we have just completed a quorum call, and yet I note there are only two or three Republican Members present on the other side of the Chamber. It is difficult to get those Senators who are supporting the motion of the Senator from Colorado to remain in the Chamber and listen to the discussion. It shows great indifference on their part. I desire to discuss the matter at some length if I can have the time to present it fully.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Alabama yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Certainly.

Mr. ROBINSON. A number of Senators have represented to me that they have engagements which they find it necessary to fill. I therefore propose, with the permission of the Senator from Alabama, who has the floor, to ask for a short executive session and following that a recess.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Very well; I yield for that purpose.

EXHIBIT A

[S. 69, 73d Cong., 1st sess.]

A bill to provide for the redistribution of the overbalance of population in industrial centers by aiding in the purchase of subsistence farms, and for other purposes

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to establish in the Interior Department an agency for aiding as herein provided those who desire to acquire and live upon subsistence farms.

SEC. 2. Loans not to exceed $1,000 to any one person may be made under rules and regulations to be established by the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 3. Preference shall be given applicants for loans who are married or who have dependent families, and who have heretofore engaged in farming and who reside in cities or towns, or who have since January 1, 1931, moved back to a farm.

SEC. 4. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to appoint local committees to serve without compensation, or to use any agencies, Federal, State, or county, that he may designate to aid in locating suitable farm lands for applicants, and to appraise the value of the lands, to supervise the purchase of building material and the construction of dwellings and other necessary structures, and to supervise the purchase of livestock, farm implements, household equipment, and sufficient supplies to support the applicant and his family until a crop can be produced.

SEC. 5. Title to the land purchased may be taken in the United States, and when so taken the Secretary of the Interior may execute in the name of the United States contracts to convey the land and improvements thereon to the purchaser, his assignee or heirs, upon full compliance by the purchaser with all the requirements of said contract. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to make conveyance in the name of the United States when the contract has been fully performed as therein provided.

The Secretary of the Interior may, when the borrower so desires, take a mortgage on said land to secure the loan and interest thereon, and to satisfy the record thereof when the indebtedness secured by the mortgage has been paid in full.

SEC. 6. The Secretary of the Interior shall make rules and regulations for taking liens in favor of the United States upon livestock and farm implements acquired by the borrower and for releasing the same, and/or substituting other security for the loan.

SEC. 7. The interest rate upon said loans shall not exceed 4 percent per annum.

The principal shall be made payable in 20 annual installments beginning 3 years from the date the land is acquired.

SEC. 8. Loans may be made to cooperative associations or to nondividend corporations organized for the purpose of establishing colonies or groups, or individuals on farms, under regulations to be made by the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 9. Preference shall be given, in making loans, to the purchase of lands which have been in continuous actual cultivation and so as to avoid as far as practicable bringing additional lands into cultivation, or expanding agricultural marketable production.

SEC. 10. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to make regulations for carrying out the provisions and purposes of this act.

SEC. 11. All the agencies of the Government are authorized and directed to cooperate in carrying out the purposes of this act when requested to do so by the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 12. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized and directed to make available to the Secretary of the Interior out of the funds of the corporation, not to exceed $400,000,000, for carrying out the purposes of this act.

SEC. 13. The Secretary of the Interior is charged with the duty, under regulations to be made by him, with the collection of the loans made under the authority of this act, and shall pay to the Treasurer of the United States all moneys so collected by him.

(EXHIBIT B)

[S. 1503, 73d Cong., 1st sess.]

A bill to provide for the redistribution of the overbalance of population in industrial centers by aiding in the purchase of subsistence homesteads, and for other purposes

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to establish in the Interior Department an agency for aiding as herein provided those who desire to acquire and live upon subsistence farms.

SEC. 2. Loans not to exceed $1,500 to any one person may be made under rules and regulations to be established by the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 3. Preference shall be given applicants for loans who are married or who have dependent families, and who have heretofore engaged in farming and who reside in cities or towns, or who have since January 1, 1932, moved back to a farm, or who have lost their farms through mortgage foreclosure or inability to renew or continue their tenancy.

SEC. 4. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to appoint local committees to serve without compensation, or to use any agencies, Federal, State, or county, that he may designate to aid in locating suitable lands for applicants, and to appraise the value of the lands, to supervise the purchase of building material and the construction of dwellings and other necessary structures, and to supervise the purchase of livestock, farm implements, household equipment, and sufficient supplies to support the applicant and his family until a crop can be produced, and he is further authorized to employ competent and experienced persons to act as superintendents of colonies for the performance of such functions and duties as may be necessary to the establishment and successful operation of the said colonies.

SEC. 5. Land, other property, and any and all rights required in connection with the purposes authorized in this act, may be acquired by the United States through purchase, gift, assignment, or in any other manner, and when so acquired the Secretary of the Interior may execute in the name of the United States contracts to convey the land and improvements thereon to the purchaser, his assignee or heirs, upon full compliance by the purchaser with all the requirements of said contract. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to make conveyance in the name of the United States when the contract has been fully performed as therein provided, and he is authorized to provide in each of the said contracts for a conveyance of the land and improvements prior to the full payment of the amount due with respect thereto, on the execution of a mortgage thereon to secure the balance due the United States.

The Secretary of the Interior may, when the purchaser or borrower so desires, convey or cause to be conveyed the land to the borrower and take a mortgage on said land to secure the loan and interest thereon, and to satisfy the record thereof when the indebtedness secured by the mortgage has been paid in full.

SEC. 6. The Secretary of the Interior shall make rules and regulations for taking liens in favor of the United States upon livestock and farm implements acquired by the borrower and for releasing the same, and/or substituting other security for the loan.

SEC. 7. The interest rate upon said loans shall not exceed 4½ percent per annum.

The principal shall be made payable in 28 annual installments beginning 3 years from the date the land is acquired.

SEC. 8. Loans may be made to cooperative associations or to nondividend corporations organized for the purpose of establishing colonies or groups, or individuals on farms, under regulations to be made by the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 9. Special effort shall be made to avoid as far as practicable the expansion of agricultural marketability production of crops as to which there is an existing sufficient supply.

SEC. 10. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to make regulations for carrying out the provisions and purposes of this act.

SEC. 11. All the agencies of the Government are authorized and directed to cooperate in carrying out the purposes of this act when requested to do so by the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 12. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized and directed to make available to the Secretary of the Interior out of the funds of the Corporation, not to exceed $25,000,000 for carrying out the purposes of this act.

SEC. 13. The Secretary of the Interior is charged with the duty, under regulations to be made by him, with the collection of the loans made under the authority of this act, and shall pay to the Treasurer of the United States all moneys so collected by him.

SEC. 14. The President may transfer the administration of this act to any other department or agency of the Government.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF A COMMITTEE

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters, which were ordered to be placed on the Executive Calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state the first nomination in order on the calendar.

THE JUDICIARY

The legislative clerk read the nomination of John D. Martin, Sr., to be United States district judge, western district of Tennessee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed. That completes the calendar.

RECESS

Mr. ROBINSON. As in legislative session, I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.) the Senate, in legislative session, took a recess until tomorrow, Wednesday, May 1, 1935, at 12 o'clock meridian.

CONFIRMATION

Executive nomination confirmed by the Senate April 30 (legislative day of Apr. 15), 1935

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

John D. Martin, Sr., to be United States district judge for the western district of Tennessee.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

TUESDAY, APRIL 30, 1935

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, Nature is speaking today with an insistence that cannot be neglected, and we thank Thee for its promise and beauty that touch us to deeper thoughts and higher feelings. The Lord God is our salvation; we will trust and not be afraid. Blessed Master, enrich us with Thy redeeming and transforming power and direct our pride, our temper, and our ambition. Do Thou take any blindness out of our understanding, any hardness out of our hearts, and any paralysis out of our wills. Fostered by Thy succoring influence and teaching, may we give full proof of our devotion to the cause of good government, plainly manifested by our daily conduct and by our public acts. Thou art the God of our joys, of our sorrows, of our hopes, and a Father of infinite forgiveness that streams from Thy throne of mercy. In our Savior's name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

THREE HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE FOUNDING OF CONNECTICUT

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 94, establishing a commission for the participation of the United States in the observance of the three hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Colony of Connecticut, authorizing an appropriation to be utilized in connection with such observance, and for other purposes.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I think the gentleman should explain the bill before we let it be passed.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. Mr. Speaker, the State of Connecticut is now celebrating the three hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Colony of Connecticut. A commission of the State of Connecticut has been working on the matter. It is of national scope, yet we did not ask financial aid from the Government.

This resolution calls only for the appointment of a Federal commission composed of 5 Senators and 6 Representatives who are to serve without pay.

Mr. SNELL. It is expected, of course, that there will be more or less Federal expense connected with the Government's participation.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. To the extent of $10,000.

Mr. SNELL. Has this resolution been considered by any committee of the House?

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. It has been considered by the Senate, and passed that body unanimously.

Mr. SNELL. But has it been considered by any committee of the House?

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. No.

Mr. SNELL. I do not think it is proper practice to seek to pass under unanimous-consent requests resolutions that have not been referred to some committee. On the other hand, I think it is not only the opportunity of the majority but the responsibility of the majority if they let these resolutions go through in this way.

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. There is an abundance of precedent for this.

Mr. SNELL. I do not know of any precedent for it.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. Certainly.

Mr. RICH. The resolution authorizes the expenditure of Federal money. How much is that going to be?

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. Ten thousand dollars.

Mr. RICH. Why is not the amount specified in the resolution?

Mr. KOPPLEMANN. It is.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, if there is no one on the majority side to take the responsibility, I take the responsibility. Mr. Speaker, I object.

CALENDAR WEDNESDAY BUSINESS

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that business in order on Calendar Wednesday of this week may be dispensed with.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 10 minutes.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman inform us on what subject he wishes to address the House?

Mr. TREADWAY. I am seeking information on the reciprocal tariff.

Mr. KENNEY. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, does the gentleman intend to give us some information?

Mr. TREADWAY. My endeavor will be to secure some.

Mr. KENNEY. The gentleman does not intend to give us some?

Mr. TREADWAY. I think perhaps I can give Members on that side some information, including even the gentleman from New Jersey, but it will not be about a lottery.

Mr. KENNEY. We have the lottery information.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to propound a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BLANTON. In the RECORD this morning appear three and a half pages of petitions regarding a certain Member's bill for old-age pensions. For weeks the RECORD has been cluttered with these petitions, all mentioning the name of our good friend from Oklahoma [Mr. ROGERS], whom we all like, and against whom I cast no reflection in mentioning this matter. But printing these petitions in the RECORD is costing quite a large sum of money.

The administration's social-security bill has been passed by the House and is now before the Senate. It is a bill which embraces the administration's plan for old-age pensions and is the only kind of old-age-pension bill that will pass this Congress at this session. Hence wasting money printing these petitions incited by a propagandist calling himself "Dr. Pope" should now stop.

Why should the RECORD continue to be encumbered with such costly petitions when they can serve no useful purpose? No member of any committee ever will look at one of them. No one ever reads the notation of them in the RECORD. It is just a useless expense to the Government, and I was wondering whether or not the Committee on Printing could not control the situation and stop such petitions from being printed in the RECORD after a bill covering the subject matter has already been passed by the House when they can serve no useful purpose whatsoever, and are costing the people quite a lot of money.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I yield to my friend from Pennsylvania, who is a member of the Committee on Printing, and who usually watches such matters.

Mr. RICH. I took this matter up with the Chairman of the Committee on Printing [Mr. LAMBETH]. We have taken the matter of entering these petitions up with the Member to whom the gentleman refers, requesting they be kept out of the RECORD.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. ROGERS], whose bill these petitions are espousing, is a good friend of mine, and I would like to do anything I could to help him. I feel sure he has not realized just how much this is costing. I thought perhaps the Committee on Printing could advise him what they are costing and persuade him not to continue putting these petitions in the RECORD.

Mr. RICH. I may say to the gentleman from Texas that I took this matter up with the Committee on Printing, and it is my recollection that an understanding was reached that as soon as the security bill passed the gentleman would not then continue to insert these petitions in the RECORD. He has continued the practice, however. I do hope the gentleman from Oklahoma will discontinue the practice.

Mr. KNUTE HILL. Mr. Speaker, may I ask what it has cost the Government already to print these petitions?

Mr. RICH. I think it is in the neighborhood of $10,000; it is too great an amount. It should be stopped.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, the inquiry I wish to direct to the Chair is whether the Committee on Printing cannot control the matter of inserting such petitions in the RECORD, after a measure passes, when it is clearly apparent the petitions can accomplish no useful purpose?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman understands that the Chair has no right to judge of the sufficiency or propriety of petitions Members may insert in the RECORD; nor, in the opinion of the Chair, does the Committee on Printing have any jurisdiction in the matter. Appeal must be made to the individual Member concerned.

Mr. BLANTON. And control is not within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Printing.

The SPEAKER. No; the Chair just stated that the Committee on Printing does not have jurisdiction.

Paragraph 1, rule XXII, provides as follows:

> Members having petitions or memorials or bills of a private nature to present may deliver them to the Clerk, endorsing their names and the reference or disposition to be made thereof; and said petitions and memorials and bills of a private nature, except such as, in the judgment of the Speaker, are of an obscene or insulting character, shall be entered on the Journal, with the names of the Members presenting them, and the Clerk shall furnish a transcript of such entry to the official reporters of debates for publication in the RECORD.

Mr. BLANTON. If such printing would help our friend from Oklahoma [Mr. ROGERS] or any of his constituents, or the people of the United States, I would not raise my voice against it, but printing them now is so futile and purposeless and costs so much it should stop. It cannot possibly produce any good.

The SPEAKER. The Chair may say to the gentleman from Texas that as a matter of practice there is not the slightest objection to a Member lumping all of the petitions together. Then they would be in the RECORD. But that is up to the Member.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, the situation, as I understand it, is this, and I have talked to the members of the Printing Committee: A member files petitions at the desk. On the same day he may file 100 or 200 of them, reading, "The petitioner, John Jones, and others." Each one of those petitions is referred to in the Index. I think the desk itself at the close of the day might lump together the petitions of each Member as to the same subject. There would then be only one reference in the Index or in the RECORD, instead of sometimes 10 pages. I do not see why it cannot be done mechanically by the Clerk.

The SPEAKER. Under the rules no one at the desk has authority to lump the petitions together. It is a matter either for the House, under the rule which has just been read, or else an appeal must be made to the individual Member. No one at the desk has authority to combine them without the consent of the Member who introduces them. The House, of course, could control the matter.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, like the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON], I do not want to reflect on our colleague from Oklahoma. He is my friend, as well as the gentleman's friend, and I do not want to say anything against the cause he is advocating, but this man Pope who is securing these petitions is an unpardoned ex-convict. He has spent practically his whole adult life conducting rackets and in jail, and he is about 55 years of age. We had an investigation at one time in this House, which disclosed that this man started out when he was a very young man doing things he should not. He robbed the unemployed and the distressed home owners, and also widows and orphans, on fraudulent oil stocks and in other ways.

The Department of Justice has his picture down here with his convict number across his chest. He has been convicted on 15 or 20 charges of violating criminal laws and is not a stranger in a Federal prison.

Mr. BLANTON. And in some of them down in Texas.

Mr. PATMAN. He is not pardoned now. He is an unpardoned ex-convict. He is not a citizen and does not have the rights of a citizen. If he really wants an old-age-pension law enacted, why did he not appear before the Ways and Means Committee and testify in favor of such a law? He did not ever request an opportunity to testify before this committee.

Mr. BLANTON. Most of these petitions are incited by him on a printed form. I am getting lots of them on these printed forms gotten up by this so-called "Dr. Pope."

Mr. PATMAN. Further, may I say that I filed a complaint against him and went to the Post Office Department and prosecuted the complaint. He came in and admitted the charge and the Post Office Department did not take any further action against the man, because he promised to be good. He said he would not continue to violate the postal laws and regulations, that he would stop; but he turned right around and changed it into another system which is almost as bad, if not as bad, as the one he formerly had.

I say this not in disrespect to our colleague from Oklahoma, WILL ROGERS, or the cause he represents, because I am sure he is honest and sincere. I know he is a capable man. But this Dr. Pope is not a doctor at all and never was a doctor.

Mr. BLANTON. He is a chiropodist.

Mr. PATMAN. He is just one of these self-confessed doctors existing under the laws of Oklahoma where there are no laws in regard to chiropodists. It is just like being an admiral in the Nebraska navy.

The Committee on Labor conducted the Pope investigation. The hearings are printed. These hearings include copies of indictments against Pope, his conviction, and a full exposé of his criminal record.

Mr. BLANTON. I have raised the question, Mr. Speaker, hoping that the Committee on Printing will confer with our colleague from Oklahoma and maybe it will stop.

Mr. RICH. The only way that the Committee on Printing could eliminate this matter that has been criticized here this morning would be to have it considered bulk printing. May I say for the chairman, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. LAMBETH], that he is doing everything possible to keep the printing in the RECORD to the minimum. It is a question of changing the law unless the Chair, or someone else, could rule that this is bulk printing. Then we could eliminate it.

Mr. BLANTON. I believe our friend from Oklahoma will himself cause it to be stopped.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has no authority in the premise; neither has anyone at the desk. The House can amend the rules if it so desires.

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] is recognized for 10 minutes.

DEMOCRATIC STEAM ROLLER PREVENTS PUBLICATION OF ARTICLES TO BE AFFECTED BY TRADE TREATIES

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Democratic steam roller worked overtime, giving the most remarkable exhibition of inconsistent action I have ever seen in the House.

Mr. Speaker, about 2 months ago I introduced three privileged resolutions of inquiry to bring information to this body. Under the rules of the House if a committee sees fit to report adversely on any subject matter it can move to lay such a report on the table. The majority members on the Ways and Means Committee showed that they did not want the information themselves and did not want the House to have any information.

The resolutions which I introduced asked for information as follows: What articles are being considered by three departments of the Government in connection with reciprocal trade treaties? The gentleman representing the Ways and Means Committee moved to lay my resolutions on the table, thus cutting off all debate.

The fact that the Democrats as a body voted in favor of the motion to table these resolutions means that they not only are willing to have our domestic industries destroyed through reductions in our tariff rates but they are willing to do this without even giving the producers and workers affected a fair chance to defend their interests.

LETTER FROM SECRETARY HULL SUPPRESSED

During the meeting in executive session I asked the gentleman whether or not the report from Mr. Hull, Secretary of State, would be read. He said it would. It does not appear in the RECORD this morning and was not read in the House yesterday. That is the only basis on which they turned down the three resolutions which I introduced, and the letter was so weak that they did not even wish to have it read in the House. It did not say a blooming thing or give the least reason whatsoever why the information I asked for in the resolution should not be given to the Members of the House. Now, that is working your steam roller overtime.

The day is not far off when the American people will object to this sort of procedure on the part of their elected and chosen Representatives. It would have been a courtesy to a fellow committee member to have granted me an opportunity to say a few words on these resolutions. I knew perfectly well what the action of the majority would be, but I object most seriously to the manner which was followed.

Now, what explanation did this great Secretary of State make? He said that all the information was submitted in press releases. That is not true. They only give export and import figures. Look at the one that came to your attention this morning saying that the administration intends to negotiate a trade treaty with France. Those interested must submit statements in writing a week beforehand to a committee which has nothing to do with the actual negotiations. It is called the "reciprocal information committee." The actual negotiations are carried on by the committee on trade agreements, and the Secretary himself acknowledged that it was composed of different people at different times, none of whom was ever known to the public.

Is this any way for the representatives of business and industry in this country to have to submit to one committee, which then transmits such parts of this information as they may have a mind to submit to a hidden committee that nobody ever sees or reaches or has any access to whatsoever?

SECRET PROCEEDINGS

They say that I called this a star-chamber procedure. It is worse than that. Not only is it star chamber, absolutely secret, and held behind closed doors, but you do not know who your judges are. The only thing you know is what the verdict is going to be, and that it is going to be in favor of foreign countries. Why should these foreigners have more right to sit around a counsel table and make laws than our own people?

Why should these foreign countries say, "The findings must be submitted to our legislative body before they become operative", while here in this country we are downtrodden by Democratic dictation and have no say as to the rate or anything else that are to be written into a law under which we are to be governed?

FOREIGNERS HELP WRITE OUR TARIFF LAWS

What would our forefathers have said? Your great Secretary of Agriculture, this man from Iowa, who cannot run his own business successfully, although he inherited a profitable publication, went down to New England and called our people fledglings and weaklings. What would our ancestors who wrote the Declaration of Independence say if today they knew that we simply act here as rubber stamps and have given authority to foreigners to write our laws for us. To throw off the yoke of foreign oppression was the cause of the Declaration of Independence and the writing of the Constitution. We set up a free and independent government here, but 150 years afterward we pass up our rights and privileges to enact our own laws and allow these foreign representatives the right to sit around the table and do this for us.

Mr. Speaker, I commend to the gentlemen on the Democratic side who do not want information to continue this procedure as long as they wish and the American people will resent it in the very near future. "Truth crushed to earth shall rise again", and I will keep repeating these references to star-chamber procedure until it gets home to the people and they realize what mistakes they have made in electing Representatives who do not know their own minds.

Let the Members of this House read the temperate and very argumentative letters submitted by the Senator from Oregon last Friday, describing the methods that these committees pursue. I cannot speak as temperately as he did. I am too impetuous. I want to drive home to the people the mistakes this Congress is making and particularly the mistake it made in enacting this reciprocal-tariff bill, and the need of taking this law off the statute books by repealing it at the very first opportunity.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

NO OPEN AGREEMENTS OPENLY ARRIVED AT

Mr. KNUTSON. Is the gentleman referring to open agreements openly arrived at?

Mr. TREADWAY. In contrast, that is as far from this method of procedure as black is from white or light from darkness.

Mr. KNUTSON. I thought that was one of the principles of the Democratic Party, laid down by that great Democrat, Woodrow Wilson.

Mr. TREADWAY. Oh, that was many years ago, and this is an entirely new type of democracy.

Mr. KNUTSON. How about Tom Jefferson?

Mr. TREADWAY. I did not vote for Woodrow Wilson, but his policies and methods were far superior to those of the present Democratic administration. Today the Democrats are only a little cog in a great big wheel.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield.

Mr. RICH. Does not the gentleman believe that the industry of this country and the labor of this country, who are employed in industry, should know what merchandise we are going to permit to come into this country that will put them out of business?

Mr. TREADWAY. Of course we should, and all we can do is to hear about it afterward. How many thousand articles do you suppose are imported from France? Any man making an article in this country in competition with a similar article that is made in France today must be prepared to submit the whole program to this set-up which is meeting in a dark, secret committee room.

PURPOSE OF RESOLUTIONS

My purpose in introducing these resolutions of inquiry was to enable the Congress, and the industries and workers concerned in the negotiation of these foreign-trade agreements, to know just what tariff items were going to be dealt with. Thus far trade agreements have been entered into with Cuba, Belgium, Brazil, and Haiti, under which our tariff rates have been reduced on many items without definite prior notice to the domestic industries engaged in their production.

DUTIES ALREADY REDUCED ON MANY IMPORTANT ARTICLES

Under the Cuban agreement this country granted rate reductions of up to 50 percent on Cuban sugar, potatoes, lima beans, tomatoes, tobacco, honey, corn, grapefruit, and many other agricultural and industrial commodities. These reductions, under the treaty with Cuba entered into in 1903, were not extended to any other country.

Under the Belgian, Brazilian, and Haitian agreements we have reduced our rates on other commodities, and these reductions have been extended to all other countries without the receipt of any concessions in return. In other words, the reductions made under these latter agreements, and those to be made under future agreements, are in effect general tariff reductions.

In the long list of items on which tariff duties have been reduced are such commodities as cement, plate glass, iron and steel products, canned peas, flax, cordage, linen fabrics, photographic paper, asbestos shingles, laces, manganese, and rum. Many other important products could be mentioned.

Negotiations are now being carried on with some 14 additional countries with a view to making further reciprocal reductions. Included among these 14 countries are such large competing nations as Canada, Italy, France, Switzerland, Finland, the Netherlands, and Spain.

PRODUCERS CONCERNED OVER TREATIES NOW BEING NEGOTIATED

The American farmer, the industrialist, and the worker, all are wondering to what extent their livelihood will be jeopardized as a result of these pending negotiations. They would like to know whether the duties on the products which they are engaged in producing will likely be reduced and the domestic market flooded with competing foreign products.

They would like to know whether, in accordance with the suggestion of Secretary Wallace to the New England textile producers, they will have to take up some other line of endeavor. This anxiety is not confined to any one area or section of the country, or to any one group. The dairy farmer, the wheat farmer, the fisherman, and the lumber producer, among others are concerned about the pending Canadian agreement. The watch manufacturers, the textile manufacturers, and others are concerned about the Swiss agreement, and so on down the line.

PEOPLE HAVE RIGHT TO KNOW WHAT ITEMS ARE UNDER CONSIDERATION

Mr. Speaker, our citizens certainly are entitled to this information, and my resolutions proposed to give it to them. At the present time, they are unable to obtain any inkling as to what is going to happen, until a trade agreement has been signed and put into effect. Then it is too late to do anything about it. The time may come when some item will be covered in a trade agreement which a large majority of the Members of Congress would oppose if they had an opportunity, but if the information is not available until a treaty has been signed and put into effect, even the Congress would be powerless to take any steps to prevent such action.

INDUSTRIES MUST EXIST IN CONSTANT FEAR

Every domestic industry which is dependent upon tariff protection—agricultural as well as manufacturing—must exist in constant fear that it will be annihilated as a result of one of these trade agreements. As long as the present program is continued, this fear will necessarily continue to exist. Perhaps in many cases it is unjustified, but as long as it exists industries are not going to make any future commitments.

If they could know definitely that they were not going to be affected by negotiations with a given country, it would be very helpful to them and to business in general. On the other hand, if an industry knew definitely that it was threatened with extinction, it could take steps to protect its interests.

STAR-CHAMBER METHODS OF NEGOTIATION

When I characterized the negotiation of these trade agreements as star-chamber proceedings, I thought I was using a pretty strong term, but it now develops that it was a little too mild, the views of the gentleman from North Carolina notwithstanding. A gentleman who has had some experience with the Committee on Reciprocity Information, which was set up by the President to hear the complaints of American producers, wrote me the other day that the methods used are actually "worse than star-chamber proceedings." Here is what he had to say:

> The Committee on Reciprocity Information is only a buffer. It merely hears the testimony of interested parties and turns it over to the Interdepartmental Committee on Trade Agreements without recommendation and without making any findings of fact.
>
> The Committee on Trade Agreements actually decides the amount and extent of the concessions made to foreign countries, but the industry under fire never has the opportunity to directly face these persons who sit as judges in the matter.
>
> In this respect the proceedings are worse than star-chamber proceedings, for in the latter case the accused at least has an opportunity to face his accusers, even though they be prosecutor, judge, and jury combined.

That is a pretty strong indictment, especially coming from a private citizen.

PERSONNEL OF TRADE AGREEMENTS COMMITTEE SECRET

Not only is it impossible for domestic producers to make any direct contact with the body which actually carries on the negotiations but they cannot even find out who make up the Committee on Trade Agreements. Their personnel is absolutely secret.

Under date of April 8, 1935, the junior Senator from Oregon [Mr. STEIWER] wrote to the Secretary of State to find out the names of the members of this committee, but he was informed by the Secretary that the "personnel of the group participating in the actual negotiations varies for each agreement." The Senator's letter and the Secretary's reply may be found on page 6466 of the RECORD for April 26.

POWERS OF CONGRESS ABDICATED

When this Government was formed, the people gave to Congress the power to impose tariff duties and to regulate commerce with foreign countries. They have never rescinded that authority, nor have they given permission for it to be delegated to any other body or person. In spite of this fact, this secret and everchanging committee in the State Department, composed of anonymous individuals who are not responsible in any way to the people, has almost complete authority in determining which industries in this country shall continue to exist and which shall be sacrificed to foreign competition in order to obtain some illusory benefit for some domestic export industry. Such a concentration of power is not at all in keeping with the principles upon which this Government was founded. Rather, it is suggestive of certain foreign countries which I could name.

It is hard to believe that constitutional government has so far degenerated in this country that such a secret and irresponsible group should have more power than the Congress of the United States over a matter which is within the sole and exclusive jurisdiction of Congress.

By virtue of the terms of the Reciprocal Tariff Act, Congress does not even have the right to ratify or reject these treaties negotiated by this secret group. No matter how adversely the reductions in duty may affect the interests of our people, neither the House of Representatives nor the Senate has any veto power over them.

While at the President's request the Democratic majority surrendered the power of Congress over the tariff, it is humiliating to note that although the Brazilian and Haitian trade treaties are already effective so far as this country is concerned, they do not become operative until they are ratified by the respective legislative bodies of these countries. As the Representative of one segment of the American people, I am not content to take a back seat in favor of the Brazilian, Haitian, or any other foreign legislative body.

MORE OPPORTUNITY FOR GRAFT AND INFLUENCE UNDER PRESENT SYSTEM

It has been alleged by Democratic speakers, including the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DOUGHTON] that the old method of writing tariff laws which has prevailed since the beginning of this Government is conducive to graft and influence. That I most strongly deny. In any event, it occurs to me that so far as these factors are concerned, there is far more opportunity for them under the present system, where tariff making is left in the hands of the secret committee in the State Department to which I have referred, whose work is carried on behind closed doors in company with the representatives of foreign countries anxious to gain a larger foothold in the rich domestic market.

PEOPLE CAN TRUST THEIR ELECTED REPRESENTATIVES

I am sure that the people of this country can safely trust their welfare to their elected Representatives, who are directly responsible to them. We here in Congress have the interests of our people more at heart than the economists, professors, and so-called "experts" who probably make up the Committee on Trade Agreements. Their only interest is to seize every opportunity to put into effect their impractical and idealistic theories, and they regard the people in general in much the same light that a scientist regards a guinea pig.

PRESIDENT DOES NOT EXERCISE HIS AUTHORITY HIMSELF

The answer is always made that the power nominally is in the hands of the President, and that he can be trusted to act for the benefit of the people as a whole. If the President conducted the actual negotiations, that might be a good argument, but he has delegated his authority to the Secretary of State, and the Secretary of State has delegated it to this ever-changing secret committee. The committee, as I have pointed out, exercises the real authority, and the President and the Secretary of State can only give their proposals a very cursory examination. However well-intentioned and theoretically expedient the committee's proposals may appear to be, they may have very serious and far-reaching consequences to American agriculture and industry.

PROPOSED MODIFICATIONS IN PROCEDURE

I have already referred to the fact that on April 26 the Senator from Oregon [Mr. STEIWER] made a very interesting and able address to the other body with reference to the manner in which the trade agreements with foreign countries are negotiated. His remarks are worthy of the careful consideration of every Member of this body. Included therein is a letter which the Senator addressed to the President making certain recommendations respecting proposed changes in the method of negotiating the trade agreements. Among other things the Senator pointed out that the foreign governments have a distinct advantage, in that their representatives are able to deal directly with the group conducting the actual negotiations, whereas domestic producers must deal with a buffer agency.

In substance the Senator proposed the following changes:

First. That interested producers be given access to the agencies which negotiate the foreign-trade agreements in order that they may be on a parity with foreign competitors.

Second. That domestic groups be fully informed concerning the commodities which may be affected.

Third. That they be advised concerning the theories of economic reasoning entertained in the committee on foreign-trade agreements so that they may have an opportunity to show that such theories do not justify a reduction in duties.

Fourth. That domestic producers be given reasonable opportunity to comment upon the evidence in the hands of the committee on foreign-trade agreements on the score of its sufficiency to justify a reduction in duty.

Fifth. That the commodities upon which duties are reduced shall be confined to those included in the lists submitted to American producers.

These suggestions, to my mind, are very commendable. The second, of course, is in harmony with the spirit of the resolutions which I introduced, on which the House voted yesterday. All were flatly rejected by the President in his reply to the Senator from Oregon. The President seemed content to carry on with the present star-chamber methods.

FOUGHT ENACTMENT OF RECIPROCAL-TARIFF LAW

I fought the enactment of the reciprocal-tariff law, under which these trade agreements are being negotiated, even before the original bill was introduced in Congress. I opposed it in the Ways and Means Committee and I opposed it on the floor. Knowing that the overwhelming Democratic majority in the House would grant the President the authority which he asked, I sought to so amend the bill as to protect the interests of our people. I endeavored, without success, to provide that no rate should be reduced below the difference in foreign and domestic costs of production. I endeavored, without success, to provide that full and complete hearings should be held on all proposed agreements. I endeavored, without success, to require that the trade agreements, when negotiated, should not become operative until approved by the Senate and House of Representatives. The Democratic majority mowed down all these amendments, and completely surrendered the power of Congress over the tariff to the President, who has, in turn, surrendered it to others.

DEMOCRATS MUST TAKE THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR REFUSING INFORMATION

If I could have my way—and in this respect I am sure I speak the sentiments of virtually every Republican, and possibly many Democrats—I would repeal the reciprocal-tariff law altogether. I have introduced a bill for that purpose, but with a Democratic President in the White House it could never be enacted into law. Failing in that, I would like to see the present star-chamber method of negotiating these agreements radically changed. However, as even this seems impossible to obtain, in view of the expressed satisfaction of the President and the Secretary of State with the present system, it seemed to me that the next best thing to do was to try and get as much information as possible with respect to items being dealt with. Now that even this proposal has been turned down, the only recourse for the people is through the polls.

In view of the fact that all power under the Constitution in relation to the tariff and foreign commerce resides in the Congress, the House certainly should have felt itself entitled to know how these trade agreements are being negotiated and what items are being dealt with. Moreover, since these trade agreements in the very nature of things affect the livelihood of large groups of our people and the economic welfare of the whole country, the House should have felt duty bound to seek this information and make it public.

The home market is the birthright of our own people. They are entitled to the first chance to produce the goods consumed in that market. Their birthright should not be bargained away by secret, star-chamber negotiations with foreign countries. The Democratic Party is going to have to shoulder the full responsibility not only for the enactment of this nefarious law but for the way it is being administered and for refusing to make the details of the negotiations a matter of public record.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for not to exceed 10 minutes to reply to the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I think it would be a good thing if the gentleman would wait until tomorrow to make his reply.

Mr. TREADWAY. Oh, I hope my friend will not object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has the right to submit his request now. It is a matter that is up to the gentleman from Arkansas. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

Mr. RICH. I shall not object.

There was no objection.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, the procedure yesterday on the resolution offered by my colleague the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. COOPER] was in the regular ordinary course. It was contemplated that the report of the Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, would be printed in the RECORD, but inasmuch as it was inadvertently omitted by the Clerk, I am sure unanimous consent will be obtained to include it in today's RECORD.

My distinguished friend and colleague on the Ways and Means Committee the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr.

TREADWAY] sought to gain political advantage and have an opportunity to make a tariff speech. For many years the tariff has been the dividing line between the Democrats and Republicans, but we hear very little of it today and will hear less in the future. Although we Democrats have had an overwhelming majority in Congress for the last 2 years we have not attempted to change this tariff law for the reason it would do no good under existing conditions.

In 1929 we witnessed the most prosperous year America has ever known. In the spring of that same year, at a special session of Congress, an overwhelmingly Republican majority passed the most damnable, outrageous, and high protective tariff the world has ever known. [Applause.]

During the consideration of that measure 48 of the greatest nations of the world protested against the passage of such a law, and declared if it were enacted they would retaliate, and after its enactment and in retaliation every one of those nations passed a high protective tariff against American products, even higher than we had ever considered in this country. In addition thereto, they allowed American products a quota and placed an embargo against our agricultural products. In other language, they passed tariff and other laws which had the force and effect of barring our goods in foreign ports.

The farmers of America produce a great surplus and it is necessary that this surplus must be sold on foreign soil in order to obtain a decent livable price for the products consumed in America. Being unable to sell in foreign markets, the surplus products accumulated in this country and sold for less than cost of production. The farmer had no money to pay taxes or interest or to buy the necessities of life. They could not buy from the retail merchants, the retail merchants could not buy from the wholesalers, the wholesalers could not buy from the manufacturers, and the manufacturers were forced to close their doors. As a result, bankruptcy stared the Nation in the face, industry closed its doors and turned its men out of employment, banks failed, stocks and bonds were reduced to practically no value, wiping out the fortunes and savings of millions of Americans, thus bread and soup lines were formed in all the great cities of this Nation. All of this occurred in less than a year, due to the enactment of the Smoot-Grundy high protective-tariff law, and brought starvation, suffering, and distress to the American people and bankruptcy to industry. This Republican high protective tariff which was sought for the protection of the few big moneyed interests, as against the welfare of the American citizens, was the moving cause, and did more to bring about the panic through which we are passing than all the other causes combined. [Applause.]

I am surprised that any Republican would have the affront in the American Congress to defend or advocate this tariff law.

Since its enactment the Tariff Commission has been given authority to raise or lower the tariff on any article 50 percent, but that has done us no good because the nations of the world still have their hands raised against us and are still seeking to punish us as a retaliation for the way we sought to treat them by this high tariff.

Since the Democrats have been in control of Congress we passed a law, which the gentleman from Massachusetts is now complaining about, which gave to the Secretary of State the right to negotiate reciprocal-tariff treaties with foreign nations with a view that the foreign nation would reduce its tariff, eliminate its embargo and quota and allow great quantities of American farm products to be sold in the markets of that nation. We have no foreign ports where we can sell our surplus farm products, and we are simply endeavoring to deal, in a friendly way, with these foreign nations who are commercially our enemies. We do not dare to pass a reduced-tariff law because the foreign nations would dump their goods in this country and at the same time refuse our products and goods in their ports. All that we can possibly do is to work through a Federal agency, such as we are doing through the Secretary of State, with a view of entering into friendly agreements with the various nations by treaties, more or less in a secret way, whereby they will permit us to sell our goods and products in their country.

Two years ago when American wheat was selling from 19 to 30 cents per bushel in this country, wheat was selling in France for $1.54 per bushel. We could have shipped our wheat to France, paid their high tariff, disposed of our surplus wheat crop, and received a high price, but we were stopped because of a quota applied to our American farm products, because of an embargo against our goods, and because France, like other nations of the world, had made up their minds that they would teach the American people that they could not bar all the products of other nations in this country and at the same time sell their products and goods in an open port in foreign countries. Prior to the passage of this tariff law in 1929 England was a free-trade country, and we shipped our goods to English ports without paying a tariff, but England, like France and other nations, in retaliation, has practically barred our products from that country. America is the greatest creditor nation in the world, and it is a well-known fact that we cannot live unto ourselves. At the same time it is generally conceded by all Americans that we should have a reasonable tariff on foreign goods to equalize the difference in labor.

It appears to me it comes with poor grace for the distinguished ranking Republican on the Ways and Means Committee to chastize the Democrats or to even raise his voice in approval of this unreasonable tariff which has been the prime factor in bringing about this financial panic and depression. [Applause.] For the first time in the history of the country, due to Republican misrule and high tariff laws, thousands upon thousands of men, women, and children have been fed from the Public Treasury, and when we seek a cause of what brought about this debaucle, this destruction of American industry, this prostration of agriculture, and the sufferings and hunger of the American people, we find the prime cause to be this Republican tariff, of which my Massachusetts friend is so fond. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

DISTINGUISHED SOUTHERNERS

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an address delivered by Mr. John E. Edgerton, at the Southern States Industrial Council, yesterday evening, in the city of Washington.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD in the manner indicated. Is there objection?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. If the Democratic Members of the House feel that all these speeches should go into the RECORD, I do not feel that we should continue to object to them.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following opening address of President John E. Edgerton at dinner to distinguished southerners by Southern States Industrial Council, New Willard Hotel, Washington, D. C., Monday evening, April 29, 1935:

Distinguished guests and fellow southerners, if there be detected in this rather stereotyped salutation, or in my subsequent words of welcome, any lack of the usual southern warmth, I beg you to attribute it to my cautious avoidance of an indiscretion like that for which a stern judge once rebuked a clever lawyer. Arising to make his plea, and observing that the jury was composed of both sexes and were predominantly of his own religious faith, the lawyer fervently addressed them as, "My dearly beloved brothers and sisters of the righteous and mighty jury." Whereupon, of course, the presiding jurist warned him not to try so obviously to tamper with the jury's affections.

In one of his proverbs, as recorded in the book of all the ages and the "best seller" of the entire Christian era, King Solomon beautifully says that "words fitly spoken are like apples of gold in pictures of silver." Having in his own household 700 major and 300 minor competitors in the use of words, that kingly gentleman of wide experience ought to have known what he was talking about. Never, I think, have I presided over a gathering of any sort which so much as this inspired my aspirations to the perfection of speech indicated in the quoted proverb. Yet I realize that should I speak with such eloquence as to even suggest the shining qualities of gold and silver, I would probably be criticized by some radically conservative liberal reactionary for the injudicious raising of the monetary issue on a social occasion. These are cynical times, indeed. He is heedless of all portents and indifferent to all hazards who now pronounces a eulogy except over the dead, or passes a compliment except upon the generous hand that feeds him. On the other hand, criticism and counsel, particularly from the best qualified sources, are only the illegitimate offspring of unenlightened selfishness, and all men are hypocrites except the judge and those who share his views. It is now largely a battle of epithets, and he who can call the other fellow the most charmingly ugly names without reference to the soundness, sense, or sequence of his arguments emerges the hero of the conflict. Let him who courts the applause of the rabble learn only how to impart with his voice or pen the highest degree of repulsiveness to such terms as "propagandist", "special interest", "radical", or "conservative" and he will not go unrewarded. It is not difficult, therefore, to understand the fears of the timid, who shrink from the suggested temptations of unaccustomed association and flee from contacts and information which might embarrass their predetermined courses.

But my proudly cordial nature compels me to risk the bold assurance to you, our esteemed guests of honor, that the Southern States Industrial Council feels genuinely grateful to the genius of your understanding for the high privilege of voluntarily and cheerfully sharing with you the wealth of our undisguised but innocuous hospitality and good fellowship. Recognizing this to be a wealth-sharing age, from the exactions of which none can escape, we are to the extent at least of the cost of this philanthropic gesture reducing the burden of legislative responsibility. Lest, however, our very unselfishness be misunderstood, or mistaken for a sort of uncanny prescience, I want now, with all the constitutional authority of my position, strictly interpreted, to exempt our guests from every unholy obligation that may seem to be suggested by our self-sacrificing exercise of the human right to a few hours of harmless association with a distinguished group of our own public employees. I solemnly promise that no sense of mastership which may have been left to us shall be permitted to disturb the fraternal spirit of this coming together of Jeffersonian equals. If our congressional employees who are present should wish to take advantage of this occasion and of section 7 (a) to bargain with us collectively for higher wages and shorter hours, they may feel perfectly free to do so without reference to either their or our understanding of the section by which such right is vouchsafed. Our only condition is that if you thus approach us collectively, you must be looking for a bargain and not for the opportunity or privilege of doing more for what you are getting or of getting less for what you are doing; for such radical departure from custom would probably get both you and us "fired" for heresy from the lodge of the Mystic Knights of the Sea.

In other words, fellow Americans from south of that line which Bob Taylor called "the imaginary line between cold light bread and hot biscuits", we want every male guest present to feel like he is a king. I know, of course, all about the democratic aversion to titles of nobility. But that was when we had no great emergency to justify such idiosyncrasies. Furthermore, we might as well begin now practicing the feeling of kingship which promises soon to be a permanent actuality. Certainly our distinguished lady guests, already queens, require no wand of graciousness to induce the regal sense. But let me admonish you kings that even a queen may not have for her companion in sovereignty more than one king.

Perhaps it has already become apparent to you that by these preliminary remarks I am trying primarily to clear the way for others more able than I to satisfy your intellectual appetites. It seems to me, therefore, that because of the rather unusual character of this occasion some additional assurances are required for your complete understanding and ease. However strong suspicions to the contrary may be, this dinner to our southern compatriots is an enterprise of good will. It was conceived in the spirit of the largest helpfulness and born of an unpretentious desire to further the ends of constructive endeavor. It is meant to promote a broader and clearer mutual understanding of the problems which belong to our entire citizenship, and even more particularly to reenergize the genius of enlightened cooperation among those who have the largest responsibility for the proper solution of these problems. It happens that in this period of national emergency the South again occupies a peculiar position of responsibility. To those of us in whom religious instincts and the pride of ancestry cooperate with the faculties of understanding it appears providential that during every great period of national emergency throughout American history a man or a few men born of the womb of the South and steeped in its traditions have been in the positions of leadership which dominated our common destiny.

The initial emergency linked with our national history was that of wresting our liberties from the tyrannical hand of a German King occupying an English throne. The genius and patriot who led in that bloody but successful enterprise was a southerner, George Washington. The next great emergency was that of building out of the wreckage of a revolutionary war the American Union and of trying to make forever secure against the aggressions of tyranny the blood-bought liberties for which our fathers had laid down their lives. Over the extraordinary assemblage of master minds which came together in the City of Brotherly Love for the purpose of writing an instrument of government that would stand through all the ages against the recurring tides of economic change and popular passion the same peerless southerner, George Washington, presided. That was the first, and undoubtedly the greatest, "brain trust" that ever came together on this continent for any purpose. That occasion also witnessed the silencing of, perhaps, the only unalloyed politician in the Constitutional Convention, who, by the way, appears also to have been the only Socialist present. When he suggested at a point in the proceedings that something be put in the Constitution that would particularly appeal to popular sentiment, the statesman, Washington, answered quite extemporaneously from the chair, "If to please the people we offer what we ourselves disapprove, how can we afterward defend our work? Let us raise standards to which the wise and honest can repair; the event is in the hand of God."

Obedient to the guiding spirit of the God upon whom those matchless nation builders daily called, those standards were raised, and to them the wise and honest ever since have been repairing for their inspiration and political guidance. It is a matter of common knowledge that although Thomas Jefferson was not present on that historical occasion it was largely his political genius working through the sympathetic, capable hand of Madison that dominated its incomparable outcome. Thus, to the leadership of the three most revered of southerners—Washington, Jefferson, Madison—does the Nation owe not only its life but the principles of government which have so far been sufficient for all of the emergencies to which its erring citizens have fallen unhappy heir.

Then, I need only to remind you that through the emergency of 1812 to 1815 it was the same southerner—James Madison—who was at the helm of state; and who, supported by that dauntless other southerner—Andrew Jackson—saved again our threatened liberties; and through those emergency periods of 1829 to 1837 and from 1849 to 1853 we came triumphantly over all military and economic difficulties under the leadership of Jackson and Polk. But the most serious of the emergencies since the birth of the Nation came in the early sixties when the Union itself was standing its severest tests, brought on chiefly by agitators of the type now observed in ominous numbers throughout the country, including the District of Columbia. I have always thought that God Almighty particularly saw to it that a man of southern birth, breeding, and habits of mind and soul was in the White House during those dreadful years of fratricidal strife to so overbalance the forces of conflict as to save to Christian civilization its greatest asset—the American Union. Following this devastating emergency was that of the reconstruction period, from which the Nation would have recovered more quickly, perhaps, if that other great southerner—Andrew Johnson—could have been supplemented in his efforts by other southerners, and if less energy and money could have been expended on reform and more on recovery.

As a result of this misguided policy of trying, through political castigations, to anticipate the natural laws of reform and progress, the prostrate South required the rest of the century to scramble to its feet. How much wiser it would seem to have been to restore the patient first so that he could help in reforming himself! But there were academicians and agitators in those days which made such employment of common sense and practical experience apparently impossible.

The next national emergency was world-wide in its scope. Before it had run its bloody course, it had removed from the productive processes of society approximately 50,000,000 of human lives and had destroyed something like $400,000,000,000 of property. During that period of 5 years the steady hand and courageous heart of another great southerner of treasured memory, Woodrow Wilson, guided our ship of state successfully through the turbulent waters of an unprecedented deluge of trouble. As a matter of fact, our Nation was born in an emergency, and through these 140 years of its youthful indiscretions, it has been largely nurtured by emergencies. So, there is little that is either new or strange in the one with which we are now at grips. But this is the only one of appreciable proportions for which the South did not supply the redeemer. However, it should be noted that when our present dynamic leader became fully conscious of his impending responsibilities, being a well-informed student of history, he immediately established residence in a Southern State, and has often admitted himself that he always feels stronger for his tasks when he returns from even a short visit to his home among the Georgia pines and "crackers." But even if Providence, in our latest emergency, turned elsewhere than to the South for the chief burden-bearer of executive leadership, He appears to have recognized that the task of lifting our Nation out of the present slough of economic despond and restoring it to what Harding called "normalcy" was going to require on Capitol Hill a legislative leadership equally as capable, courageous, and strong as that which characterizes the executive end of Pennsylvania Avenue.

Not only was such leadership provided out of southern materials in the persons of Garner, Byrns, Robinson, Bankhead, and others too numerous to mention in a crowded program, but to further fortify our Government, our liberties, and our Christian civilization against the incursions of hostile forces not indigenous to our soil, the South was called upon to send to the battle front its Hull, its Roper, and its Swanson; a couple of its stalwart Davises, its Jones, its Tate, its Webb, its Clay Williams, its own Mrs. McMillin, and a host of others of its great. Then by sheer force of good habit Virginia sent along from its own famous cupboard its very finest Glass. And what a debt the Nation in general, and the South in particular, owe to Virginia for its superlative contributions of dependable statesmanship throughout our history, and particularly during the great emergencies.

So, my friends, we of the home guard have come all the way to Washington to tell you that the South is proud of you, her own. We do not come as "pink tea lobbyists" or as propagandists of "special interests." It is true that we have a special interest, and at this time that special interest is to help you in every reasonable, practical, patriotic way to do your full duty to our common country, and we conceive that you can do that in no better way than by upholding the traditions of our section for its unswerving devotion to American principles and institutions. We do not come in any arrogant, sectional spirit, to boast of our virtues, or to embarrass you with any requests for special favors.

We do not come to instruct you how you shall vote on any measure, nor as to the position you shall take on any question. We have no threats of reprisal to make. We come as friends, as joint heirs of common traditions and responsibilities, and as fellow citizens seeking the best welfare of our country. If there be criticism, advice, suggestion, or disappointing references during our contact with you on this occasion, none of it will be invidious or intended as other than constructive. God forbid that the time shall ever come when decent Americans of whatever class or group may not sit down together, in public or in private, and discuss any matter they wish without being held up to public scorn by demagogs, charlatans, or marplots. We feel that it is not only our right but our duty to give our representatives in government any information or opinion which we think will be helpful to them in the discharge of their obligations. These are the reasons, and the only reasons, why we are here, and we are glad to believe that we are understood by you.

Among your hosts of the Southern States Industrial Council, there are perhaps as many different shades of political thought and opinion as to what our country's present plight calls for as there are in Congress itself outside any in that body who are more devoted to the philosophies and doctrines of Karl Marx, Lenin, and their apostles, than they are to those of Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Jackson, and others of similar mind and character whose names adorn American history. But it is the question of fundamentals about which we have a common concern—and at this point there should not be any irreconcilable differences among good Americans.

We of the rank and file in the South do not believe that there is anything of such unusual character in this latest emergency as to justify or call for deliberate contraventions or circumventions of the American Constitution or other radical departures from established customs in treating extraordinary conditions. We cannot reconcile so-called "planned economies" to our peculiar system of government. In the first place, we don't know what a "planned economy" is, and nobody has explained it. We recognize it to be an academic term that seems to imply a mysterious program, entrancing in its suggestions, but which is to reveal its full meaning as it unfolds in execution. It has a sort of foreign suggestion that does not appeal naturally to most Anglo-Saxon minds. It seems to suggest that citizens cannot safely or wisely plan for themselves, and that their Government must lift the burden from their shoulders. It appears to connote more bureaus, more dipping into private affairs by Government, and more regulation of the individual lives of citizens by experts even after all emergencies have passed. No one has more convincingly pointed out the dangers in a so-called "planned economy" than did Mr. Roosevelt when he was Governor of New York.

In a very remarkable address delivered on March 2, 1930, on the subject of States Rights, Governor Roosevelt used this striking language: "The doctrine of regulation and legislation by 'master minds' in whose judgment and will all the people may gladly and quietly acquiesce, has been too glaringly apparent at Washington during these last 10 years. Were it possible to find 'master minds' so unselfish, so willing to decide unhesitatingly against their own personal interests or private prejudices, men almost godlike in their ability to hold the scales of justice with an even hand—such a government might be to the interests of the country. But there are none such on our political horizon, and we cannot expect a complete reversal of all the teachings of history."

Wise words, indeed, and are undoubtedly as true now as they were just 5 years ago after our economic tailspin had started. In fact, I have never read a more excellent enunciation and defense of the fundamental principles of our Government, particularly those touching self-government for States, minority rights, home rule, and Federal power, than are contained in this notable address. If I were a Member of Congress, I believe I should want to saturate myself with its superb thought and use it as a guide in the determination of my attitude on the questions presented.

But there are one or two other vital questions about which the South is particularly concerned in these troublous times. Our section constitutes the largest area within the borders of the United States in which practically all of the people are of one blood, of one language, of one God, and of one basic philosophy of life. Whether ours is the best blood, the best language, the only God, and the soundest basic philosophy is a matter which others have a granted right to and may dispute. We think they are, and so strongly do we think it that we are not willing to trade any of them. That does not mean that we will not at all times welcome into our midst any others of whatever race or creed who come with peace in their hearts and high purpose in their souls to help us with the self-compensating tasks that belong to a free and progressive people. We are not willing, however, to trade moral and spiritual values for mere economics. If relatively lower economic standards, with which we are now so often twitted, are ever to be made higher at the price of lower moral and spiritual standards or ideals of loyalty to distinctly American institutions, then we spurn the trade. Actually we have been reminded so often that we are a sort of wayward, uncultivated, and undernourished child who needs a guardian and ought to be adopted as a ward by the Government, that many of us have gotten to believing it and are joining in the chorus. Missionaries of communistic and socialistic philosophy have been sent to us from Russia and even from the most alien parts of our own country to tell us how unprogressive we are. In the lexicon of these emissaries of class hatred, whom we are asked to recognize as the authoritative medium of contact with our own employees, all employees are bourbons, slave drivers, and exploiters; while the only friends of the workingman are those who would teach him the methods of the mob. Social experts have swarmed in upon us to tell us how backward we are and how old-fashioned and out-of-date it is to be drinking water, going to church, working, praying, and actually liking anybody who has more than we have.

Stories of starving millions, of ignorance, penury, and squalor have been brought to Washington and published abroad as justification for the application of new and strange remedies. Flying squadrons of discord bearing torches of hate and distrust have come among us while some of our own executive authorities have sat spineless and acquiescent in planned procedures of lawlessness wherein the right of free men to work for their living has been effectively challenged. These are some of the things to which the best intelligence and the heart of the South do not and will never assent. The overwhelming masses of both the employing and employed elements of our people are of one mind and spirit on these vital questions. They are friends and want to remain friends. They recoil from suggestions of any sort of so-called "standardization or regimentation" which does or would substitute hate for love, animosity for amity, distrust for trust, war for peace. If I know, as I believe I do, the blood, the spirit, and the temper of these homogeneous, peace-loving Americans, they will never consciously sell their birthright for a mess of any kind of pottage.

And we don't want to be anybody's ward or pet. We don't want an advantage of any sort to which our natural conditions and endowments do not entitle us. If we are to be reformed, we want the reformers to be first informed. We also suggest conformity with the sound Jeffersonian principle of "equal and exact justice to all and special privileges to none." At another place in that admirable address of Mr. Roosevelt, to which I have previously referred, he said: "Let us remember that from the very beginning, differences in climate, soil, conditions, habits, and modes of living in States separated by thousands of miles rendered it necessary to give the fullest individual latitude to the individual States." We insist now that when any program of standardization or system of codification be undertaken through any sort of legislation or Executive action, this fact be not only remembered but that it be intelligently and fairly observed. In peculiar ways, as I have tried to suggest, the young industrial South is patently "on the spot."

The most vital of all the questions with which the leadership of our section is confronted today are: Shall it abandon its dreams of an industrial development commensurate with its extraordinary possibilities and resign itself to a relapse into a predominantly agricultural status? If so, then what are the crops suitable to our soil which are to quickly take the place of its present major production, premiership in the cultivation and manufacture or which appears to be passing so rapidly to other nations? If not, then is the leadership in our industrial development to be political in character and under the control of the Government or under private leadership and with private capital appropriately encouraged and supervised by Government? Regardless of all statistical indications of a refreshing revival in business now apparent, and of all optimistic forecasts based upon these reports, charts, and tables, these and corollary questions of a fundamental character will have to be answered quite definitely, in our opinion, before industrial production in the South or elsewhere can confidently and profitably proceed. And if it doesn't proceed profitably, it will not proceed long. We would say, if we were asked, that such questions cannot be correctly or wisely answered in hasty obedience to threats from any source. They cannot be answered at all by political profiteers in social discontent. Strongly organized minorities seeking through processes of intimidation and bluster to further their own diabolical ends cannot even contribute appreciably to rational answers. Such questions are only for cool-headed, clear-headed, patient, courageous statesmen who know the difference between facts and fancies, between sound and substance; who are ever willing to stake their political fortunes upon the conscientious performance of their constitutional functions; and who think always in terms of the greatest good to the largest number of all the people.

Clearly the legislative end of this gigantic responsibility rests largely upon the sturdy shoulders of our southern representation in the Congress. Certainly no shoulders ever carried a heavier burden, and it is one that obviously cannot be honorably transferred to other shoulders. The South looks particularly to you, our distinguished servants in Government, not only to uphold the traditions of your section for wise and courageous leadership on occasions of emergency and to protect it from forces that would destroy its peaceful relationships, but to supply the Nation with new and more stimulating evidences of constructive thought and action. We are a people of much faith—in God, in the church, in our American Constitution, and in you, our own flesh and blood. We have come here to tell you so. We have good reason to believe that in all that we have said or will say we speak the thought and the feelings of the overwhelming masses of our people in the South. And in praying the blessings of Almighty God upon you in the faithful, happy performance of your respective duties, we are asking Him to help you not to let the American taxpayer become the most forgotten of men.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by including therein a speech delivered this morning before the United States Chamber of Commerce by Mr. Forney Johnston, one of the greatest Democrats of the South.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a speech delivered by Mr. Forney Johnston. Is there objection?

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. An agreement was entered into at the beginning of this session that these things should not go into the RECORD and cumber it up. For the present I object.

Mr. KNUTSON. Why did not the gentleman object to the request made by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAY]?

Mr. BULWINKLE. It was up to the gentlemen on the Republican side to do that.

Mr. KNUTSON. We thank the gentleman for his unbiased attitude and his nonpartisanship.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I object.

CONFERENCE REPORT—INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL, 1936

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report upon the bill (H. R. 6223) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present. Evidently there is not a quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count.

Mr. KNUTSON. You are not going to do much business today.

The SPEAKER (after counting). One hundred and sixty-five Members are present. Not a quorum.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 63]

Bankhead	Doutrich	Lesinski	Schulte
Beam	Ellenbogen	Lewis, Md.	Shannon
Berlin	Fernandez	McLeod	Sisson
Bland	Fulmer	McReynolds	Smith, Wash.
Bolton	Gambrill	McSwain	Snyder
Brown, Mich.	Gasque	Marcantonio	Somers, N. Y.
Caldwell	Gehrmann	Martin, Mass.	Starnes
Cannon, Wis.	Gingery	Meeks	Sumners, Tex.
Carden	Goodwin	Montague	Sweeney
Cartwright	Granfield	O'Malley	Thomas
Casey	Griswold	Palmisano	Thurston
Chapman	Guyer	Parks	Tobey
Christianson	Hartley	Patton	Tolan
Clark, Idaho	Higgins, Conn.	Peyser	Underwood
Cochran	Higgins, Mass.	Quinn	Wadsworth
Cole, Md.	Imhoff	Rogers, N. H.	Weaver
Connery	Kennedy, Md.	Ryan	Wilson, La.
Cooley	Kennedy, N. Y.	Sabath	Wilson, Pa.
Cravens	Kerr	Sanders, Tex.	Withrow
Culkin	Lamneck	Sandlin	Wolfenden
DeRouen	Lee, Okla.	Schuetz	Woodruff

The SPEAKER. Three hundred and forty-seven Members have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move that further proceedings under the call be dispensed with.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I do not think there is a quorum present. There is important business before the House, and I make the point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER. There has just been a roll call.

Mr. KNUTSON. But there is no quorum present, and I want the RECORD to show it.

The SPEAKER. The roll call developed 347 Members present. A quorum is present.

CONFERENCE REPORT—INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL, 1936

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I call up a conference report on the bill (H. R. 6223) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes, and I ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6223) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 18, 23, 43, 46, 48, 51, 53, 58, 60, 62, and 63.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 2, 4, 8, 9, 10, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 19, 20, 21, 22, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 39, 40, 41, 52, 54, 55, 56, 57, 59, 61, 64, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, and 71, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 6: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 6, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "219,000, of which $50,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 7: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert: "$65,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 11: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 11, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$471,910"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 12: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 12, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$144,200"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 42: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 42, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$70,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 44: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 44, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$650,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 45: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 45, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$458,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 47: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 47, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$2,285,560"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 49: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 49, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$632,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 50: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 50, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$185,400"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 65: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 65, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,970,311"; and the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference report in disagreement amendments numbered 1, 3, 5, and 38.

EDWARD T. TAYLOR,
B. M. JACOBSEN,
JED JOHNSON,
M. A. ZIONCHECK,
J. G. SCRUGHAM,
W. P. LAMBERTSON,
R. B. WIGGLESWORTH,
Managers on the part of the House.

CARL HAYDEN,
KENNETH MCKELLAR,
ELMER THOMAS,
FREDERICK STEIWER,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6223) "making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes", submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference as to each of such amendments, namely:

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY

On amendments nos. 2 and 4: Provides for a First Assistant Secretary and an Assistant Secretary, as proposed by the Senate, instead of two Assistant Secretaries, as proposed by the House.

On amendments nos. 6 and 7, relating to printing and binding: Appropriates $50,000 for the National Park Service, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $35,000, as proposed by the House, and appropriates $65,000 for the Bureau of Mines instead of $45,000, as proposed by the House, and $85,000, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment no. 8: Makes immediately available $20,000 of the appropriation for the Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission, as proposed by the Senate.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE

On amendment no. 9: Appropriates $700,000 for surveying public lands, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $470,000, as proposed by the House.

On amendment no. 10: Appropriates $80,000 for salaries and commissions of registers of land offices, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $73,000, as proposed by the House.

BUREAU OF INDIAN AFFAIRS

On amendment no. 11: Appropriates $471,910 for salaries in the office of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, instead of $474,790, as proposed by the Senate, and $470,290, as proposed by the House, the increase over the House figure being for one additional stenographer at $1,620.

On amendment no. 12: Appropriates $144,200 for agency buildings, instead of $140,400, as proposed by the House, and $145,000, as proposed by the Senate, in providing a new position of mechanical engineer at $3,800.

On amendment no. 13: Appropriates $150,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $100,000, as proposed by the House, for the expenses of organizing Indian-chartered corporations.

On amendments nos. 14 and 15: Authorizes the expenditure of $290,000 of applicable appropriations, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $275,000, as proposed by the House, for the maintenance and operation of motor- and horse-drawn vehicles; and authorizes the expenditure of $160,000 of applicable appropriations, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $150,000, as proposed by the House, for the purchase of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles.

On amendment no. 16: Provides, as proposed by the Senate, that the unexpended balances of tribal funds being continued available for various purposes for the Tesuque Pueblo shall be available also for the purchase of equipment.

On amendments nos. 17, 18, and 19, relating to the purchase of land for Indians under the Wheeler-Howard Act: Appropriates $1,000,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $500,000, as proposed by the House; makes $15,000 of this sum available for personal services in the District of Columbia, as proposed by the House, in lieu of $22,500, as proposed by the Senate; and prohibits the expenditure of any part of the appropriation for the acquisition of lands outside the boundaries of existing Indian reservations in the States of Arizona and Wyoming, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment no. 20: Appropriates from tribal funds $9,153.20 for payment to the Sac and Fox Tribe of Indians of Missouri, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments nos. 21 and 22: Appropriates $170,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $150,000, as proposed by the House, for expenses incidental to the sale of timber, and makes $20,000 available for such purpose during the fiscal year 1935, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment no. 23: Appropriates $15,000, as proposed by the House, in lieu of $20,000, as proposed by the Senate, for the suppression or emergency prevention of forest fires.

On amendment no. 24: Appropriates $116,000 from the funds of several tribes of Indians, as proposed by the Senate, for the construction of homes, purchase of seed, etc., for such Indians.

On amendment no. 25: Appropriates $311,452, as proposed by the Senate, for final payment of the Indians' share of the cost of the Middle Rio Grande Conservancy District's irrigation, drainage, and flood-control project.

On amendments nos. 26 and 27: Appropriates $24,000, as proposed by the Senate, for enlarging the hospital (including the purchase of equipment) at the Sequoyah Orphan Training School near Tahlequah, Okla.

On amendment no. 28, relating to the Chemawa School, Salem, Oreg.: Consolidates the item for general repairs and improvements into one sum ($60,000) and makes such sum available for improvements to the heating system and shop facilities, as proposed by the Senate, instead of requiring that $40,000 of such sum be available only for improvements to the heating system, as proposed by the House.

On amendment no. 29: Corrects a total.

On amendments nos. 30, 31, and 32, relating to appropriations from tribal funds for the support of Indians in the State of Arizona: Appropriates $50,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $24,000, as proposed by the House, for the Fort Apache Indians; appropriates $55,800 for the San Carlos Indians, as proposed by the Senate, in lieu of $65,800, as proposed by the House; and corrects the total of the sum which is appropriated for such Indians.

On amendment no. 33: Appropriates from tribal funds $61,500 for the Keshena Indians, of Wisconsin, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $60,000, as proposed by the House.

On amendment no. 34: Corrects a total.

On amendment no. 35: Provides for salaries of the governor and mining trustee as heretofore paid, in connection with expenses of tribal officers of the Five Civilized Tribes, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments nos. 36 and 37, relating to traveling and other expenses of tribal councils: Appropriates from tribal funds $50,000, of which amount $10,000 is made immediately available, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $25,000, as proposed by the House; and limits the per diem to a maximum of $6 and for a period not longer than 30 days unless otherwise approved by the Secretary of the Interior, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment no. 39: Corrects a date.

BUREAU OF RECLAMATION

On amendment no. 40: Inserts the word "and", as proposed by the Senate, in lieu of the phrase "and/or", as proposed by the House.

GEOLOGICAL SURVEY

On amendment no. 41: Appropriates $450,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $335,000, as proposed by the House, for geologic surveys.

On amendments nos. 42 and 43: Appropriates $70,000 for continuation of the investigation of the mineral resources of Alaska, in lieu of $100,000, as proposed by the Senate, and $40,000, as proposed by the House; and limits the sum available for personal services in the District of Columbia to $20,000, as proposed by the House, instead of $40,000, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments nos. 44 and 45: Appropriates $650,000 for gaging streams, in lieu of $617,000, as proposed by the House, and $767,000, as proposed by the Senate; and makes available for cooperative work with the States or municipalities $458,000, in lieu of $425,000, as proposed by the House, and $575,000, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment no. 46: Appropriates $200,000, as proposed by the House, instead of $225,000, as proposed by the Senate, for the enforcement of the provisions of certain mineral leasing acts.

On amendment no. 47: Corrects a total.

BUREAU OF MINES

On amendments nos. 48 and 49: Appropriates $632,000 for operating mine rescue cars and stations and investigation of mine accidents, in lieu of $499,000, as proposed by the House, and $669,000, as proposed by the Senate, the reduction of $37,000 in the Senate figure being accounted for by the elimination of $27,000 for repair and operation of two mine-rescue cars and $10,000 for mine accident statistics. Eighty thousand dollars is made available for personal services in the District of Columbia, in lieu of $100,000, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments nos. 50 and 51: Appropriates $185,400 for testing fuel, instead of $210,400, as proposed by the Senate, and $110,400, as proposed by the House, the reduction of $25,000 in the Senate figure being applied to a proposed increase of $50,000 for research in connection with the composition and properties of American coals. For personal services in the District of Columbia, $27,600 is made available, as proposed by the House, instead of $32,600, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments nos. 52, 53, and 54: Appropriates $288,860 for mineral mining investigations, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $128,860, as proposed by the House; makes $18,800 available for personal services in the District of Columbia, as proposed by the House, in lieu of $23,800, as proposed by the Senate; and not to exceed $12,000 is made available for the purchase, operation, and repair of passenger-carrying automobiles, as proposed by the Senate, in lieu of $2,500, as proposed by the House.

On amendments nos. 55, 56, 57, and 58, relating to oil and gas investigations: Appropriates $237,866, as proposed by the Senate, in lieu of $122,866, as proposed by the House; provides $6,000 for the purchase, repair, and operation of automobiles, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $3,000, as proposed by the House; makes $40,000 of the appropriation immediately available, as proposed by the Senate; and provides that not to exceed $17,500 may be expended for personal services in the District of Columbia, as proposed by the House, instead of $22,500, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments nos. 59 and 60, relating to mining experiment stations: Appropriates $195,450, as proposed by the Senate, in lieu of $145,450, as proposed by the House; and provides that not to exceed $13,140 may be available for personal services in the District of Columbia, in lieu of $16,500, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment no. 61: Appropriates $87,690, as proposed by the Senate, for care and maintenance of buildings and grounds at Pittsburgh and Bruceton, Pa., in lieu of $67,690, as proposed by the House.

On amendments nos. 62 and 63, relating to the economics of mineral industries: Appropriates $262,855, as proposed by the House, instead of $275,855, as proposed by the Senate; and provides that not to exceed $210,000 may be expended for personal services in the District of Columbia, instead of $233,000, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment no. 64: Inserts the word "and", as proposed by the Senate, in lieu of the phrase "and/or", as proposed by the House.

On amendment no. 65: Corrects a total.

NATIONAL PARK SERVICE

On amendment no. 66: Appropriates $62,600, of which $5,000 shall be immediately available, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $57,600, as proposed by the House, for the Crater Lake National Park.

On amendment no. 67: Appropriates $500 for the erection of a marker to commemorate the battle at Big Dry Wash, Ariz., during the Indian wars, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment no. 68: Appropriates $432,900, as proposed by the Senate, for salaries and general expenses, public buildings and grounds in the District of Columbia, for the fiscal year 1935.

On amendment no. 69: Appropriates $47,000, as proposed by the Senate, for salaries and expenses, public buildings outside the District of Columbia, for the fiscal year 1935.

TERRITORY OF ALASKA

On amendments nos. 70 and 71: Appropriates $50,000, as proposed by the Senate, for the establishment and maintenance of public schools, instead of $4,000, as proposed by the House.

The committee of conference report in disagreement the following amendments of the Senate:

Amendments nos. 1 and 3: Providing for the establishment of the position of Under Secretary of the Interior at $10,000 per annum.

Amendment no. 5: Relating to the appropriations for the Division of Grazing Control.

Amendment no. 38: Relating to an audit of the tribal funds of the Menominee Indians.

EDWARD T. TAYLOR,
B. M. JACOBSEN,
JED JOHNSON,
M. A. ZIONCHECK,
J. G. SCRUGHAM,
W. P. LAMBERTSON,
R. B. WIGGLESWORTH,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move the adoption of the report.

The question was taken; and there were on a division (demanded by Mr. KNUTSON)—ayes 145, noes 26.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that there is not a quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I call attention to the fact that some Members did not rise at all on the last vote, and the Chair is entitled to count.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is counting. [After counting.] One hundred and ninety-seven Members are present; not a quorum. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 273, nays 67, answered "present" 1, not voting 90, as follows:

[Roll No. 64]

YEAS—273

Adair	Clark, Idaho	Duffy, N. Y.	Greever
Arnold	Coffee	Duncan	Gregory
Ashbrook	Colden	Dunn, Miss.	Hamlin
Ayers	Colmer	Dunn, Pa.	Hancock, N. C.
Bacharach	Cooper, Tenn.	Eagle	Harlan
Barden	Corning	Eckert	Hart
Beiter	Costello	Edmiston	Harter
Bell	Cox	Eicher	Healey
Biermann	Crosby	Evans	Hennings
Binderup	Cross, Tex.	Faddis	Hildebrandt
Bland	Crosser, Ohio	Farley	Hill, Ala.
Blanton	Crowe	Ferguson	Hill, Knute
Boehne	Cullen	Fiesinger	Hill, Samuel B.
Boileau	Cummings	Fitzpatrick	Hobbs
Boland	Daly	Flannagan	Hoeppel
Boylan	Darden	Fletcher	Hope
Brennan	Dear	Ford, Calif.	Houston
Brewster	Deen	Ford, Miss.	Huddleston
Brown, Ga.	Delaney	Fuller	Igoe
Brunner	Dempsey	Fulmer	Jacobsen
Buchanan	Dickstein	Gasque	Jenckes, Ind.
Buck	Dies	Gassaway	Johnson, Okla.
Buckler, Minn.	Dietrich	Gavagan	Johnson, Tex.
Burnham	Dingell	Gehrmann	Johnson, W. Va.
Caldwell	Disney	Gifford	Jones
Carpenter	Ditter	Gilchrist	Kee
Carter	Dobbins	Gildea	Keller
Cary	Dockweiler	Gillette	Kelly
Castellow	Dorsey	Goldsborough	Kenney
Celler	Doughton	Gray, Ind.	Kerr
Chandler	Doxey	Gray, Pa.	Kleberg
Chapman	Driscoll	Green	Kloeb
Citron	Driver	Greenway	Kniffin
Claiborne	Duffey, Ohio	Greenwood	Knutson
Kocialkowski	Merritt, N. Y.	Rayburn	Sumners, Tex.
Kopplemann	Mitchell, Ill.	Reece	Sutphin
Kramer	Mitchell, Tenn.	Richards	Sweeney
Kvale	Monaghan	Richardson	Tarver
Lambertson	Montet	Robertson	Taylor, Colo.
Lambeth	Moran	Robinson, Utah	Taylor, S. C.
Lanham	Moritz	Romjue	Taylor, Tenn.
Larrabee	Mott	Rudd	Terry
Lea, Calif.	Murdock	Russell	Thom
Lemke	Nelson	Sadowski	Thompson
Lewis, Colo.	Nichols	Sanders, La.	Tonry
Lloyd	Norton	Sanders, Tex.	Truax
Luckey	O'Brien	Sandlin	Turner
Ludlow	O'Connell	Sauthoff	Umstead
Lundeen	O'Connor	Schaefer	Utterback
McAndrews	O'Day	Schulte	Vinson, Ga.
McClellan	O'Leary	Scott	Vinson, Ky.
McCormack	Oliver	Scrugham	Wallgren
McFarlane	O'Neal	Sears	Walter
McGehee	Owen	Secrest	Warren
McGrath	Parks	Shanley	Wearin
McGroarty	Parsons	Sirovich	Welch
McKeough	Patman	Smith, Conn.	Werner
McLaughlin	Patterson	Smith, Va.	Whelchel
McMillan	Pearson	Smith, Wash.	White
Mahon	Peterson, Fla.	Smith, W. Va.	Whittington
Maloney	Peterson, Ga.	Snyder	Wigglesworth
Mansfield	Pettengill	South	Wilcox
Martin, Colo.	Pfeifer	Spence	Williams
Mason	Pierce	Stack	Wolverton
Massingale	Rabaut	Steagall	Wood
Maverick	Ramsay	Stefan	Woodrum
May	Ramspeck	Stubbs	Young
Mead	Randolph	Sullivan	Zioncheck
Meeks

NAYS—67

Allen	Dirksen	Kahn	Reed, Ill.
Andresen	Dondero	Kimball	Reed, N. Y.
Andrew, Mass.	Eaton	Kinzer	Rich
Andrews, N. Y.	Ekwall	Lehlbach	Robsion, Ky.
Arends	Engel	Lord	Rogers, Mass.
Bacon	Fenerty	McLean	Seger
Blackney	Focht	McLeod	Short
Bolton	Gearhart	Maas	Snell
Buckbee	Gwynne	Mapes	Stewart
Cavicchia	Halleck	Marshall	Taber
Church	Hancock, N. Y.	Merritt, Conn.	Tinkham
Cole, N. Y.	Hess	Michener	Treadway
Collins	Hoffman	Millard	Turpin
Cooper, Ohio	Hollister	Pittenger	Wilson, Pa.
Cravens	Holmes	Plumley	Wolcott
Crowther	Hull	Powers	Wolfenden
Darrow	Jenkins, Ohio	Ransley

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1

Amlie

NOT VOTING—90

Bankhead	Crawford	Kennedy, N. Y.	Ryan
Beam	Culkin	Lamneck	Sabath
Berlin	DeRouen	Lee, Okla.	Schneider
Bloom	Doutrich	Lesinski	Schuetz
Brooks	Drewry	Lewis, Md.	Shannon
Brown, Mich.	Ellenbogen	Lucas	Sisson
Buckley, N. Y.	Englebright	McReynolds	Somers, N. Y.
Bulwinkle	Fernandez	McSwain	Starnes
Burch	Fish	Marcantonio	Thomas
Burdick	Frey	Martin, Mass.	Thomason
Cannon, Mo.	Gambrill	Miller	Thurston
Cannon, Wis.	Gingery	Montague	Tobey
Carden	Goodwin	O'Malley	Tolan
Carlson	Granfield	Palmisano	Underwood
Carmichael	Griswold	Patton	Wadsworth
Cartwright	Guyer	Perkins	Weaver
Casey	Haines	Peyser	West
Christianson	Hartley	Polk	Wilson, La.
Clark, N. C.	Higgins, Conn.	Quinn	Withrow
Cochran	Higgins, Mass.	Rankin	Woodruff
Cole, Md.	Hook	Reilly	Zimmerman
Connery	Imhoff	Rogers, N. H.
Cooley	Kennedy, Md.	Rogers, Okla.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

Until further notice:

Mr. Cartwright with Mr. Martin of Massachusetts.
Mr. Granfield with Mr. Wadsworth.
Mr. Rankin with Mr. Guyer.
Mr. Bankhead with Mr. Culkin.
Mr. Lamneck with Mr. Doutrich.
Mr. Bloom with Mr. Goodwin.
Mr. Bulwinkle with Mr. Perkins.
Mr. McReynolds with Mr. Thomas.
Mr. Cannon of Missouri with Mr. Christianson.
Mr. McSwain with Mr. Burdick.
Mr. Cochran with Mr. Fish.
Mr. Montague with Mr. Hartley.
Mr. Connery with Mr. Englebright.
Mr. Palmisano with Mr. Carlson.
Mr. Miller with Mr. Higgins of Connecticut.
Mr. Drewry with Mr. Thurston.
Mr. Griswold with Mr. Woodruff.
Mr. Kennedy of New York with Mr. Tobey.
Mr. Hancock of North Carolina with Mr. Withrow.
Mr. Wilson of Louisiana with Mr. Crawford.

Mr. Sabath with Mr. Church.
Mr. Cole of Maryland with Mr. Schneider.
Mr. Somers of New York with Mr. Marcantonio.
Mr. Beam with Mr. Carden.
Mr. Clark of North Carolina with Mr. O'Malley.
Mr. Patton with Mr. Frey.
Mr. Berlin with Mr. Reilly.
Mr. Quinn with Mr. DeRouen.
Mr. Brooks with Mr. Gambrill.
Mr. Buckley of New York with Mr. Brown of Michigan.
Mr. Lesinski with Mr. Ellenbogen.
Mr. Burch with Mr. Schuetz.
Mr. Fernandez with Mr. Sisson.
Mr. Starnes with Mr. Gingery.
Mr. Imhoff with Mr. Hook.
Mr. Thomason with Mr. Tolan.
Mr. Weaver with Mr. Kennedy of Maryland.
Mr. Rogers of New Hampshire with Mr. Underwood.
Mr. West with Mr. Polk.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The doors were opened.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the first amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Under Secretary (which position is hereby established in the Department of the Interior, with compensation at the rate of $10,000 per annum and with appointment thereto by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate).

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that amendments no. 1 and no. 3 may be considered together, as they relate to the same matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report Senate amendment no. 3.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment no. 3: Strike out "$421,590" and insert in lieu thereof "$431,590."

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede from its disagreement to Senate amendments no. 1 and no. 3 and concur in the same.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is this the amendment creating the office of Under Secretary of the Interior?

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Yes.

Mr. KNUTSON. Can we afford it at this time?

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I think we should have an explanation of these amendments before we act on them.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WIGGLESWORTH], a member of the subcommittee.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, is not the majority leader going to make a statement in support of his motion?

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. I can do that, Mr. Speaker, but I extended the courtesy first of yielding time to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. SNELL. I think it would be better if the gentleman from Colorado first gave us an explanation of the item.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, Senate amendments nos. 1 and 3 provide for the creation of the office of Under Secretary of the Interior Department, at a salary of $10,000 a year. It is legislation on an appropriation bill and for this reason requires a vote of the House. We have four Under Secretaryships in other departments at the present time—in the Department of Agriculture, created last year; in the Department of State, created in 1920; in the Department of the Treasury, created in 1921; and in the Department of War, created in 1920. In the latter case the office is under another name, but it carries the same salary and the duties of an Under Secretary. The first three of those Under Secretaryships were created in exactly the same method we are pursuing in the present instance, by amendments on appropriation bills. In the War Department the office was established by the act of June 4, 1920 (U. S. C., tile 5, sec. 182). So there is nothing out of the ordinary procedure of the House, or of Congress in creating this office in this way. This provision was recommended by the Budget, it was approved by the President, it was regularly sent to Congress and was included in this appropriation bill by this subcommittee and approved by the main committee, and reported to the House.

When the item was reached for consideration on the floor of the House, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WIGGLESWORTH] made a point of order against the amendment on the ground that it was legislation on an appropriation bill. I conceded the point of order, and it necessarily went out of the bill. When the bill went to the Senate, that body inserted and adopted this provision by a vote showing a substantial majority, and it now comes back to us in this form.

Under the question raised by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM], I stated to the House that the House would be given an opportunity to vote upon this amendment when the conference report was brought up, and that is what is before us at the present time.

The reason the President, the Bureau of the Budget, the Interior Department, the Appropriations Committees of both the Senate and the House, and the Senate itself, have all approved of the creation of this Under Secretaryship is because of the enormous amount of work that has been heaped upon the Secretary of the Interior, especially during the past 2 years. Within that time something like 30 major activities have been added to the Interior Department. If you will pardon a personal reference, I have for many years before and ever since I came to Congress had personal knowledge of the activities of the Department of the Interior, and during the past 15 years that I have been a member of the Appropriations Committee I have been quite familiar with the work of all the various departments of the Government. I say to you deliberately that I believe no department of our Government needs an Under Secretaryship as much as the Interior Department. This has been true for many years, but within the past 2 years so many new activities have been added to that Department that it has become imperatively necessary that the Secretary of the Interior have an additional assistant. I will mention some of them.

The Bureau of Mines was taken away from the Department of Commerce and put under the Department of the Interior. The Federal Board for Vocational Education has recently been added to the Interior Department.

The administration of the grazing upon the public domain, designated the "Taylor Grazing Act", is put under the control of this Department. That law will have a far-reaching effect upon the conservation and orderly use ultimately of about 175,000,000 acres of land. The President has added to the Interior Department the administration of practically nearly all of the public buildings and grounds in the District of Columbia, which in itself entails an enormous amount of work, as you all know. The Executive has added to this Department the administration of a very large number of public buildings and grounds throughout the entire country, other than the District of Columbia. The Division of Territories and Insular Possessions, including Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and the other insular possessions of our country; 11 national military parks; 2 new national parks; also 10 battlefield sites of the United States and transferred for administration from the War Department to the Interior Department. As I say, all these activities have been taken from other departments and transferred to the Interior Department during the past 2 years. Ten national monuments have been added, 11 miscellaneous memorials, and 11 national cemeteries, including Gettysburg, and many others transferred from the War Department or other departments and their administration put upon the Secretary of the Interior.

The national monuments have been taken from the Agricultural Department.

Mr. Speaker, this marvelously large number of very important activities has been recently transferred from the control of the War Department, the Navy Department, the Department of Commerce, the Department of Agriculture, and other departments, and put under the supervision of the Interior Department. We Members from the West believe they have been transferred to this Department for more coordinated and better administration than they had under the other departments. I may mention many others, such as the George Rogers Clark Sesquicentennial Commission, the Commission of Fine Arts, the Mount Rushmore Memorial Commission, the United States Geographic Board, the Subsistence Homesteads, and various other things.

Mr. Speaker, aside from the President of the United States, the Secretary of the Interior is today the hardest worked public official under the American flag. The present Secretary of the Interior works nights, holidays, and Sundays. He has had no vacation since he took office. He goes to his office at 8 o'clock in the morning and stays there until 6 or half after in the evening; goes home to dinner and goes back to his office at 8 o'clock and works until 11 o'clock at night. Aside from the President, there is no other official under our flag who has as great responsibilities heaped upon him as the Secretary of the Interior. This tremendous amount of imperative work of the highest importance makes it absolutely necessary to give him this additional assistant. It is necessary in fairness to him and in the interest of efficient work. It is physically impossible for him and his present assistants to carry on all that work as fully and carefully as it should be. The Secretary is also the Administrator of Public Works and also Petroleum Administrator.

My colleagues, why is it President Roosevelt assigns all of these gigantic responsibilities to Harold L. Ickes? It is because he knows and the American people know that this Secretary of the Interior is honest. They know he has the ability, the courage, and the energy to splendidly manage all these monumental tasks.

Secretary Ickes has spent $2,000,000,000 during the past 2 years, and not a single dollar of it was ever misapplied by him, and he will expend $4,000,000,000 during the next 2 years, and not a dollar of it will ever be misapplied by him.

In the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of January 23 of this year I referred to the work of Secretary Ickes at some length. He has a record that every American ought to be proud of. Every loyal son and daughter of Uncle Sam feels that our country is the greatest nation on this planet. We all believe that the entire world is every day looking toward our country to see what we are doing. Considering the tragically unsettled and ominous conditions of nearly all the other countries, we firmly believe that our country is not only the leading nation, but that our country is the hope of the human race on this planet. If our ship of state weathers the present financial storm, the others may survive. Our country has the greatest task before it that we have had since the Civil War. The destiny of the United States depends very largely upon the work of this Congress and the way the laws we pass are administered and the way the money we appropriate is expended, and, aside from the President, Harold L. Ickes will probably have more to do with the success or failure of that historic and monumental task than any other human being.

For that reason I feel that Congress, the board of directors of this Government, should, as I know you will, gladly uphold his hands. I have not the slightest idea who will be appointed Under Secretary. But, whoever he is, he will have to be the caliber of individual to be approved by the Senate. He has to be affirmed by the United States Senate. I feel we can trust the Senate to see that there is a suitable person appointed to fill this position.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time and now yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WIGGLESWORTH].

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I realize in view of the thousands, if not hundreds of thousands, of new Federal positions that have been created in the past 26 months, that from one point of view the addition of one more office may not appear to be a very important matter. It does seem to me, however, that when it comes to a question of providing for a new Under Secretary in one of the great departments of this Government, with higher standing and greater remuneration than any Assistant Secretary in the Government, the matter is of sufficient importance to warrant a thorough investigation into the facts, preferably by a legislative committee of this House, before we are called upon to approve such a request as is before us at this time.

What are the facts? There has been practically no evidence at all submitted, either to the House committee or the Senate committee, to justify the creation of this office. You will find the testimony before the House committee comprised in a single page of the hearings. At the time we endeavored to get more information with reference to the assignment of duties under the present set-up, as well as those contemplated under the new set-up. We were advised by letter from the Department that it was not in a position to give us this information. The testimony before the Senate committee is about two pages in length. I believe there was not a single word of discussion on the floor of the Senate when the amendment providing for the new office was adopted.

The sum and substance of the justification submitted is embodied in two short paragraphs in the statement of Secretary Ickes to the Senate committee. In those paragraphs he states two things: First, as the chairman of the subcommittee, Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado, has just pointed out, that certain new activities have been turned over to the Department of the Interior; and second, that he has been a very busy man lately, that he has given up Saturday afternoons and holidays and that he would be glad to have additional help.

What are the additional activities referred to? The chairman of the subcommittee has mentioned a few of them. The Bureau of Mines has been returned to the Department where it used to be. Puerto Rico has been added to the Territories supervised by the Department. A small administrative organization has been set up under the Taylor grazing-control bill. Most of the so-called "additional activities", however, seem to be represented in the maintenance and upkeep of Federal buildings in the District and elsewhere, of national monuments, cemeteries, and parks which have been grouped together and placed in the Department of the Interior. You will find the list in the Senate hearings. No mention is made of those activities which have been taken away from this Department and placed elsewhere, such as the Pension Bureau, formerly a tremendously important activity in the Interior Department, now under the jurisdiction of the Veterans' Administration.

Secretary Ickes has been, of course, an extremely busy man. We all appreciate this fact. He has had his work as P. W. A. Administrator; he has had his work as Oil Administrator. A recent newspaper states that he has had no less than 12 separate titles under the present administration. Much of his time has necessarily been devoted to duties outside the Interior Department. This statement goes also, I am told, for one of the Assistant Secretaries in the Interior Department. Perhaps additional help is needed in his emergency activities. I should suppose the new organization under the work-relief bill would be helpful. I find nothing, however, in the evidence submitted to the House or Senate which establishes, to my mind, in and of itself the need of an Under Secretary in the Interior Department.

I realize fully the importance of the work of this Department. I should be the last to wish to handicap that work in any way. The Interior Department, however, is not one of the larger departments in this Government. If you measure it in terms of annual appropriation, if you measure it in terms of the number of workers on the rolls of the several departments, you will find that in each case the Department of the Interior stands no. 6 in the list of the 10 departments of this Government.

As compared with the Interior Department, with a personnel of less than 33,000 and an appropriation of some $61,000,000, the Navy Department, second on the list of departments, to take one example, has a personnel of over 150,000 and an appropriation of over $450,000,000. Instead of an Under Secretary, a First Assistant Secretary, and an Assistant Secretary, the Navy Department operates with a single Assistant Secretary.

Until about a year ago, Mr. Speaker, we have never had an Under Secretary in any department of the Government except two. We have had one for years in the State Department, the work of which touches every important center on the face of the globe.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. We have had one for years in the Treasury Department, the work of which vitally affects everyone in the Nation. We have never had any other Under Secretary in any department until about a year ago when a third Under Secretary was provided for in the Department of Agriculture after considerable controversy at the other end of the Capitol, the position being created in order to give increased recognition and increased remuneration to the present Under Secretary of Agriculture, Professor Tugwell.

It seems to me that before we go ahead and create another position of this importance, the matter ought to be gone into thoroughly. It ought to be gone into not only from the point of view of the needs of the Interior Department, but from the point of view of the precedent it will create with respect to other departments, from the point of view of fairness to those departments and to other assistant secretaries in the departments.

For these reasons, in the light of the existing evidence or lack of it, I shall vote in opposition to the motion of the gentleman from Colorado to recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. I yield.

Mr. KNUTSON. The gentleman should call the attention of the House to the fact that the Pension Bureau, which is probably as large as all of these other bureaus that have been placed in the Interior Department in the last 2 years, has been taken away from that Department and transferred to the Veterans' Administration.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. I have endeavored to emphasize that fact. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. DEMPSEY].

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to address myself for a few minutes to the work of the Department of the Interior and the record that it is making under the capable direction of Secretary Harold L. Ickes.

In the 2 years since he has been a member of the Cabinet, Secretary Ickes, through hard work, boundless energy, and courageous and intelligent leadership has wrought a miracle in this once too easy-going Department of the Government. By industry and perseverance, two of his outstanding qualities, Secretary Ickes has reorganized and revitalized the Department of the Interior so that today it really has come into its own.

It is true that Secretary Ickes has been subjected to criticism. Name me a man in public life who is worth his salt who has not been unjustly arraigned for doing his plain duty. Name me a man who in the past 2 years could have carried the heavy burdens and who could have tackled the multitudinous and complex problems with more ability, distinction, and devotion to public service than Secretary Ickes. If he exists, I do not know him.

With the many regular and emergency duties that have devolved upon the present Secretary of the Interior, he is, without doubt, the busiest and hardest-working official in Washington. He is up with the sun and toils far into the night. He loves work and seems to thrive on it, and yet there is a limit to human endurance. The Secretary himself does not complain, but in all fairness we should provide him with an Under Secretary to afford him some small measure of relief from the arduous labors that now encompass him.

The Department of the Interior has grown with the country. Its various bureaus and divisions are among the most important in the Federal structure. Not content to operate his Department in mere routine fashion, the present Secretary has taken on more and more work—work which he knows, and we know, should have been done in the past.

Secretary Ickes stands as a giant at the head of the conservation movement in this country. He hates extravagance and waste. His every act since assuming office has been in the interest of protecting the vast natural resources of our Nation. He believes that the real wealth of America is something more than dollars. He knows that the real wealth of this country is its soil, its water, forests, and minerals. He has devoted his Department to the furtherance of that program.

Let me recount a few of the accomplishments of Secretary Ickes in this direction. Appalled by the ever-recurring loss of good topsoil in the western country, he organized and put into operation the Soil Erosion Service. He also has set up within the Department of the Interior a Division of Grazing as a first step toward saving the rapidly disappearing public range. As Oil Administrator he has fought with vigor and, I might add, some success against the shameful waste of an irreplaceable commodity. As Chairman of the National Resources Board, he has formulated a long-range plan for the orderly development of all natural resources for the benefit of the many rather than for the few.

Secretary Ickes' record as Public Works Administrator has been no less notable. Without an organization and without precedent to guide him, he tackled the biggest peace-time spending job in the history of the world. This, gentlemen, was a thankless task and one bound to bring him grief. But to his everlasting credit let it be said that he has not deviated one whit from the course upon which he set out. Sometime early in his life he learned the meaning of the word "no." That he has not forgotten, and I, for one, hope he never forgets.

Secretary Ickes' loyalty to the administration cannot be questioned. No matter what others may say, he enjoys the full confidence of the President of the United States. Only last week President Roosevelt again demonstrated his good sense by selecting the Secretary as chairman of the works-allotment committee to advise with the President as to allocation of funds under the works-relief resolution we passed.

Mr. Ickes is a strong man. He is a real asset to this administration. Let us give him this Under Secretary. I know of no Cabinet officer more in need of one. [Applause.]

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, when I came to Washington the major activity of the Interior Department was the Pension Bureau. The Pension Bureau involved an expenditure at that time of something like $330,000,000 or $340,000,000, if I remember correctly. If my recollection is correct, at that time there was one Assistant Secretary. Subsequently, and before the advent of the Veterans' Administration, an additional Assistant Secretary was provided. When the activities of the Department were cut down more than one-half, the additional Assistant Secretary was not taken away.

Two Assistant Secretaries should easily be able to take care of all the activities that are crowded into this Department. Every single one of the activities that has been turned over to this Department is headed by an experienced manager who has had charge of such activities for years or who has been trained in such matters for years. They were more or less minor activities in the departments or bureaus in which they were stationed.

It is true that these other matters have been put under the Secretary. It is true that, perhaps, there are more activities there than when he took it over, but not more than the burden which a Secretary and two assistants should carry. There is not half the burden there was when the Pension Bureau was in the Department, with a tremendous number of appeals going to the Assistant Secretaries and to the Secretary, just as they go now to the head of the Veterans' Administration. Of course, there were more pensions at that time, because we had a tremendous number of Civil War veterans living.

There is nothing in the hearings in connection with this item that would justify it. Secretary Ickes did say that he loved his work and that he got there early and worked late. I believe he told the truth, but he does not tell us out and out that in order to do his work and do it right he must have this Under Secretary. Why should we give a man something that he does not justify? Why should we go ahead and establish more jobs at this time when no real reason is presented to us why we should do it? If the work of the Interior Department is to be turned over to an Assistant Secretary and Mr. Ickes is going to deal himself entirely with out-Department activities, this is not a reason why we should have an Under Secretary, but a reason why we should have a different Secretary. Mr. Ickes should be put at the head of these out-Department activities. It does not go well at all to come here and create another new and permanent position, from which we will never get away, in order to provide just one more great, big job.

I hope the Congress will consider this matter on its merits and will vote against the establishment of the office of Under Secretary of the Interior.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BUCHANAN].

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Speaker, no doubt most of my colleagues know that I do not favor the creation of new positions and I never favor them unless I think they are absolutely essential in the efficient administration of the public service.

This is one instance where I think an Under Secretary is essential for the efficient administration of the Interior Department and the allied duties conferred upon the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCHANAN. Yes.

Mr. SWEENEY. Why does the American Congress persist in calling this position Under Secretary, a distinctly British term?

Mr. BUCHANAN. The office of Under Secretary has been created and is supposed to have a little greater authority than an Assistant Secretary and to compensate for this authority a greater salary is provided. The salary is $10,000, whereas the Assistant Secretaries receive from $8,000 to $9,000.

Let me go into the merits of this case. I endorse what the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. TAYLOR] has said, and I endorse what the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. DEMPSEY] has said, but I want to make this further statement. At this time it is absolutely essential to create this position if we are to have an efficient administration. Listen to me a minute. The Secretary of the Interior is charged with the duty, under this $4,000,000,000 measure, of making loans of every character, as well as the investigation of such loans, to States, municipalities, and public bodies. He is now charged with this duty and you may say it is outside of the Secretary's office. Maybe so, but he is charged with the duty and he has got to give it most scrupulous attention and investigation. In addition to this he has been made the Chairman of the Board of Allotment, upon whose shoulders fall the allotment of every cent of the $4,000,000,000 appropriation for works relief.

Can you expect him, can you expect any man, no matter how great or how strong he may be, to stand up under all these duties and perform them efficiently? Therefore I think it is absolutely essential that he should have an Under Secretary.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCHANAN. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Do we have Under Secretaries in other departments?

Mr. BUCHANAN. We have an Under Secretary in the Department of Agriculture, created by Congress just as this is created. We have an Under Secretary in the State Department, created by Congress just as this is being created.

The State Department is far smaller than the Department of the Interior and has a smaller appropriation. The State Department has an appropriation of $14,000,000, and this Department has an appropriation of sixty-one or sixty-two million.

The Treasury Department has an Under Secretary, the War Department has an Under Secretary.

Mr. TRUAX. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCHANAN. I yield.

Mr. TRUAX. Did not the gentleman from Texas assure us at one time that Mr. Ickes would have nothing to do with the $4,000,000,000 that we have lately appropriated?

Mr. BUCHANAN. I did not; I assured the Congress, and I still assure it, that Mr. Ickes would not act on the final allotment of the $4,000,000,000 appropriation, that in every instance the President of the United States would do it. [Applause.]

Mr. TRUAX. That may be, but does not the gentleman think that Mr. Ickes should devote all of his time to his duties and not so much to ascertaining men who favor the share-the-wealth proposition?

Mr. BUCHANAN. That is for the gentleman himself to answer in his own time; I am on the other side of the fence.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCHANAN. Yes.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. The statement has been made that the War Department has an Under Secretary. In the interest of accuracy, is it not a fact that while he has a salary of $10,000 he is an Assistant Secretary, and that we have no Under Secretary in the War Department?

Mr. BUCHANAN. It is just a difference in name. The Assistant Secretary of War performs the same duties as an Under Secretary and gets the salary of an Under Secretary. What is in the name?

Now, in conclusion, let me say this. You may not agree with me, but some time ago I did not think so much of Mr. Ickes, but since then I have made a careful investigation of his duties and the amount of work that he is doing. I now say that I have every confidence in his sincerity and integrity. He has administered the appropriation of $3,000,000,000, and no man that I have ever heard has ever charged one word against his integrity or his honesty or his sincerity in doing everything for the best interest of the people of the United States. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. REED].

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, the Commission of Fine Arts has been placed under the jurisdiction of the Interior Department. I do not know whether any of you Members have noticed what is going on in the beautiful park, the historic park west of the Capitol.

If you will take the time to go out on the plaza of the Capitol and look toward the Washington Monument you will see that a beautiful park has been converted into almost a barren waste. That park contained trees that have stood there for three-quarters of a century, some of them for a century. Many of the trees destroyed were the rarest specimens to be found in any capital city in the world. Trees stood there under which Lincoln and other notable statesmen have walked. That park has been the joy and inspiration of literally countless millions of people who have come here, and yet the Fine Arts Commission, I understand, has been responsible for cutting down these beautiful trees, rooting them out, and sawing them into cordwood. I feel it is an indefensible act, and that Congress ought to have prevented it. Most of the damage has been done. How many more trees the Commission plans to take out of the Botanic Garden or to take out even of the Capitol Park no one knows. I think this House should take an interest in the situation and not allow the Commission to run riot and destroy what it has taken nature a century or more to produce.

That is all I want to say on the subject. I rose to bring the matter to the attention of the House, because it is a piece of vandalism that is absolutely inexcusable. As I say, they have made a beautiful spot into almost a barren waste. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DOUGHTON].

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report presented by the distinguished gentleman from Colorado [Mr. TAYLOR]. I believe my colleagues who have served with me for a number of years cannot find anything in my record to justify the conclusion that I am in favor of extravagance or waste of public money. I am sure that this proposition should not be settled along partisan lines, although it sometimes appears that nothing can be offered by this administration which will suit some gentlemen on the opposite side of the Chamber. Of course, however, they are entitled to their opinion.

So far as the Secretary of the Interior is concerned, he is a man of outstanding ability, and is capable of holding the very responsible position the duties of which have been intrusted to him. No man in the Government today has greater responsibility, save and except only the President of the United States, than has Secretary Ickes. In addition to all his vast, multitudinous duties which he had prior to the time Congress authorized the expenditure of $4,880,000,000 for relief, he has had additional duties assigned to him and is to a large extent responsible for the expenditure of this large amount of money. No one knows better, in fact no one knows as well, what he needs in the way of assistants to help him carry these tremendous burdens than does the Secretary himself. I feel that after we have authorized the expenditure of this colossal sum of money it would be a very narrow policy, very unwise for us to cripple the man responsible for the expenditure of that money and not give him the assistance he needs for the efficient discharge of his public duties. I trust, my friends, especially on the majority side of the House, have enough confidence in this administration and in the Secretary of the Interior to take his word for his needs with respect to the discharge of his public responsibilities, and I think nothing could be more short-sighted, nothing could be more unjustified than to say that Secretary Ickes is not capable of and cannot be trusted to say what assistance he needs in carrying these tremendous burdens. When this amendment comes to a vote, I hope those on the majority side, and also on the minority side, will show their confidence in the man at the head of this great Department and give him the facilities that he says are essential to faithfully and efficiently discharge his duties in a way that will be satisfactory to all. [Applause.]

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOYLAN].

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, in the short time allotted to me I shall endeavor to answer my good friend from New York [Mr. REED]. He complains about the trees being destroyed and about the condition of the land at the foot of Capitol Park, about its being all torn up, and so forth. To those Members who have just come to Congress I would call attention to the fact that for many years we had the choicest collection of dumps on the north side of Pennsylvania Avenue that the world has ever known. We had fortune tellers, gypsy headquarters, crystal-gazers, one-arm lunch rooms, and various other decorative and artistic establishments. When a visitor came to the city of Washington, if he had any esthetic sense at all, he was humiliated to think that in the Nation's Capital we should have such an aggregation of eyesores.

What has been done? A broad, comprehensive plan to rearrange the entire lay-out of streets and roads at the foot of the Capitol has been adopted. An extension of the park so that it will be practically coterminous with what were the boundaries of the old Botanic Garden is provided for. No one loves trees more than I do, or regretted to see their passing more than I did, yet I know that in order to make a more beautiful Washington we must make some temporary sacrifices.

Let me say again to the House that when all this plan is complete we will have there an improvement that will far outshadow the old conditions that existed prior to this rearrangement.

Now, about this question of the appointment of an Under Secretary to the Secretary of the Interior: We all know that it is not a question of the $10,000 involved in the creation of a new place. That is not the issue. None of us can be camouflaged by that. In fact, the time consumed in discussing this conference report and the printing of the RECORD may cost as much as the salary we are going to allot to this new officer. That is not the question. The question is whether or not you are going to stand behind your President. You have just voted him an appropriation of approximately $5,000,000,000 to break the distress jam in which we find ourselves. Now you are told to tie his hands so that he cannot carry out and distribute that vast appropriation that is going to result in the uptrend of affairs in our country and to bring us back again from out of the depths of despair to the bright land of hope and prosperity.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOYLAN] has expired.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman from New York 2 additional minutes.

Mr. BOYLAN. Now, if you engage a carpenter to do a job, you are going to give him the tools with which to do the work. You are not going to tie his hands and say, "Go ahead and do it without tools." If the President is going to do a good job he needs the right kind of tools. He needs the right kind of help and assistance. This is one of the things he wants. As has been explained here today, he alone will have the final say in the allotment of this vast fund, but he must have intelligent and understanding help and cooperation or he will fail. Our dear friends on the Republican side would like to tie the hands of the President. They are peering cautiously out of their cyclone cellars to see if the storm has passed. Many of you perhaps did not get approval of all the projects that you favored. I did not myself, but I yield any personal animus I might have for the good of the country, for the good of all. You took an oath to support the Constitution and not to work for your own State alone but for the entire country. The President wants this help and this assistance this appointment will give him. He needs it. You have given him the money. Now give him the tools to satisfactorily discharge the heavy responsibility and obligation that you have placed upon his shoulders. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York has again expired.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON].

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I recall very well when I first came to Washington each side of Pennsylvania Avenue was filled with crystal-gazers, but there are no more crystal-gazers down there now. They have all been taken over by the new deal. [Laughter.]

Mr. McLEAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KNUTSON. I yield.

Mr. McLEAN. Does the gentleman recall the time when there was a sign extended out in front of one of those buildings on one side of which it read, "First chance" and on the other side, "Last chance"?

Mr. KNUTSON. Yes. That is now the slogan of the new deal.

Now, the gentleman has dwelt eloquently upon the need for this new position. When I first came here we only had one Assistant Secretary of the Interior. Now there are two, and you want to create a third one. You call him "Under Secretary", I suppose, so that it will not hurt the feelings of the taxpayers so much; but whether you call him "Under Secretary" or "Assistant Secretary", he is a superfluity. I can assure you there are no more crystal-gazers available for this position if you create it, because you now have them all on the Government pay roll. [Laughter.]

The money that is carried in this bill does not become available until July 1, 1936, and we have been assured by "grand headquarters" that the $5,000,000,000 we recently appropriated will be spent before that time. Of course, we naturally expect it will be spent before the next election.

Mr. OLIVER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KNUTSON. Yes; I yield.

Mr. OLIVER. This money becomes available the 1st of July 1935.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON] has expired.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FADDIS].

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Speaker, I am not at all concerned about this Assistant Secretary of the Interior from the viewpoint of the crystal-gazers or the parks in Washington. I am concerned about the necessary help from the Secretary of the Interior for the good that he may do for the United States as a whole. I am concerned about the internal affairs of this Nation and the welfare of our citizens.

The distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WIGGLESWORTH] dwelt at length on the lack of testimony showing the necessity of a position of this kind. I would like to call the attention of the gentleman and his colleagues to the fact that it is almost impossible to pick up a newspaper today which does not testify to the necessity for help in the Department of the Interior. Nature has taken a hand in this game and has brought to us a serious internal problem which we must not ignore. I have a picture here handed to me by my colleague from Kansas [Mr. HOUSTON] which shows a dust storm in the Southwest. This picture bears witness to the necessity for more help in the Department of the Interior. A large area of our Nation is being devastated, and to prevent the destruction is a problem of the Department of the Interior. Crops are being ruined, homes are being lost, farms are being blown away and means of livelihood are being taken from farmers.

Mr. TABER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FADDIS. No. I do not have time just now.

We are soon to be faced with the proposition of protecting our territory in the Southwest from becoming a barren desert. You Members who live in that section of the country should take that matter into consideration when you cast your vote upon this question. Soon the functions of the Department of the Interior will touch your constituents more closely than ever.

In this Nation we have the bituminous-coal-mining industry. The deplorable and chaotic condition of that industry all over the United States for the past 30 years bears witness to the necessity for more help in the Department of the Interior. Here we have an industry that is overmanned 50 percent, and we are face to face with the necessity of regulating that industry in order that the people who are employed in it may be able to have a living wage and live under decent living conditions, as other people throughout the United States live. It is one of the basic industries of this Nation, one in which 65 percent of the cost of production goes to labor. It has been productive of more industrial strife than has any other industry. We cannot permit it to continue unregulated. The Guffey coal bill is designed to stabilize this industry, and I hope will soon be passed, in order that it can extend relief to the most shamefully exploited class of workers in this Nation. Its administration will be under the Department of the Interior. The problems of the Department of the Interior will multiply with every year of our national existence.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FADDIS. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that this report is exactly $1,663,489 under the Budget estimate.

Mr. FADDIS. I thank the gentleman for his contribution, and I think we can afford this additional $10,000 position for the services we will receive.

Mr. TABER. If the gentleman will yield, it is about $15,000,000 above the appropriations for this Department last year.

Mr. SNELL. They did not tell us that.

Mr. FADDIS. You should also state that there has recently been 15 or more agencies added to the Department of the Interior, making the appropriation necessary.

Mr. HOUSTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FADDIS. I yield.

Mr. HOUSTON. The distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] said a while ago that no evidence has been presented to show the necessity for creating this office, that Mr. Ickes himself had not appeared before the committee, broken down, and confessed he needed it. If there were no necessity for creating this office, Mr. Ickes himself would have come down and told us that he did not want it.

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Ickes is too busy attending to his duties to come begging for help. Why work a willing horse to death? Mr. Ickes and the Nation needs this assistant. I think the best piece of evidence in support of this proposition is the picture handed me a short time ago by the gentleman from Kansas showing this dust storm. We must bear in mind these dust storms in the southwestern portion of the United States and the conditions they have brought upon that section of the country. They make this position a necessity, because they affect the welfare of the entire Nation.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. KELLER].

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, I have known Harold L. Ickes for 25 years. He has always been known as a progressive. He is an honest man, an able man, a man of excellent judgment and sense, a man of the highest courage. Every man who has known him for any length of time knows that what I am saying is literally true; and those who have studied his work here, or elsewhere, will come to exactly the same conclusion reached by the Chairman of the great Committee on Appropriations, and that is that whatever might have been his opinion of him heretofore, it now is that Harold L. Ickes is the best man we could get for this place and is doing his job as no other man could do it.

I want to close by saying that his character is such that if he did not need this assistant he would be the last man under the sun to ask for the creation of the position of Under Secretary. When he asks for it, it ought to be granted to him, because of his numerous activities, and because of new work that is being piled on him all the time. It seems to me that we ought to awake to the fact that criticism, unless justified, ought not to be accepted; and in not a single instance has criticism of Harold L. Ickes been justified. I am glad of the opportunity of saying this word about a fellow Illinoisan, Harold L. Ickes, our great Secretary of the Interior. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to recede and concur in Senate amendments nos. 1 and 3.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, on that I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I join in this request.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 243, nays 92, answered "present" 1, not voting 95, as follows:

[Roll No. 65]

YEAS—243

Adair	Buck	Colmer	Dickstein
Andrew, Mass.	Buckler, Minn.	Connery	Dies
Arnold	Bulwinkle	Cooper, Tenn.	Dietrich
Ayers	Burch	Costello	Dingell
Barden	Caldwell	Cox	Dobbins
Beiter	Cannon, Mo.	Cravens	Dockweiler
Bell	Carmichael	Crosby	Dorsey
Biermann	Cary	Cross, Tex.	Doughton
Binderup	Castellow	Crosser, Ohio	Doxey
Blanton	Celler	Crowe	Drewry
Boileau	Chandler	Cullen	Driscoll
Boylan	Chapman	Cummings	Driver
Brennan	Church	Daly	Duffey, Ohio
Brewster	Citron	Darden	Duffy, N. Y.
Brooks	Claiborne	Dear	Duncan
Brown, Ga.	Clark, N. C.	Deen	Dunn, Pa.
Brunner	Coffee	Delaney	Eagle
Buchanan	Colden	Dempsey	Eckert

Edmiston	Jones	Montet	Scott
Eicher	Kee	Moran	Scrugham
Evans	Keller	Moritz	Sears
Faddis	Kelly	Murdock	Secrest
Farley	Kenney	Nelson	Shanley
Ferguson	Kerr	Nichols	Sirovich
Fiesinger	Kleberg	Norton	Smith, Conn.
Fitzpatrick	Kloeb	O'Brien	Smith, Va.
Flannagan	Kniffin	O'Connell	Smith, W. Va.
Fletcher	Kocialkowski	O'Connor	Snyder
Fuller	Kramer	O'Day	South
Fulmer	Kvale	O'Leary	Spence
Gassaway	Lambertson	Oliver	Stack
Gearhart	Lambeth	O'Neal	Steagall
Gildea	Larrabee	Parks	Stubbs
Gillette	Lea, Calif.	Parsons	Sutphin
Gingery	Lesinski	Patman	Taylor, Colo.
Goldsborough	Lewis, Colo.	Patton	Taylor, Tenn.
Gray, Pa.	Lloyd	Pearson	Terry
Green	Lucas	Peterson, Fla.	Thom
Greenwood	Luckey	Peterson, Ga.	Thomason
Greever	Lundeen	Pettengill	Thompson
Gregory	McAndrews	Pierce	Tonry
Hamlin	McClellan	Polk	Umstead
Hancock, N. C.	McCormack	Rabaut	Utterback
Hart	McGehee	Ramsay	Wallgren
Harter	McGrath	Randolph	Walter
Healey	McGroarty	Rankin	Warren
Hennings	McKeough	Reece	Weaver
Hildebrandt	McLaughlin	Richards	Welch
Hill, Ala.	Mahon	Richardson	Werner
Hill, Knute	Maloney	Robertson	West
Hill, Samuel B.	Mansfield	Robinson, Utah	Whelchel
Hobbs	Martin, Colo.	Rogers, Okla.	White
Hoeppel	Mason	Romjue	Whittington
Houston	Massingale	Russell	Wilcox
Huddleston	Maverick	Sadowski	Williams
Igoe	May	Sanders, La.	Wilson, La.
Jacobsen	Mead	Sanders, Tex.	Wolverton
Jenckes, Ind.	Meeks	Sandlin	Wood
Johnson, Okla.	Merritt, N. Y.	Sauthoff	Young
Johnson, Tex.	Mitchell, Ill.	Schaefer	Zioncheck
Johnson, W. Va.	Monaghan	Schulte

NAYS—92

Allen	Eaton	Knutson	Reed, N. Y.
Amlie	Ekwall	Lehlbach	Rich
Andresen	Engel	Lemke	Robsion, Ky.
Andrews, N. Y.	Fenerty	Lord	Rogers, Mass.
Arends	Fish	Ludlow	Seger
Bacharach	Focht	McLean	Short
Bacon	Ford, Miss.	McLeod	Snell
Blackney	Gifford	Maas	Stefan
Bolton	Gilchrist	Mapes	Stewart
Buckbee	Goodwin	Marshall	Sweeney
Burdick	Gray, Ind.	Merritt, Conn.	Taber
Carlson	Gwynne	Michener	Tarver
Cavicchia	Halleck	Millard	Taylor, S. C.
Cole, N. Y.	Hancock, N. Y.	Mitchell, Tenn.	Thurston
Collins	Hess	Mott	Tinkham
Cooper, Ohio	Hoffman	Owen	Treadway
Crawford	Hollister	Patterson	Truax
Crowther	Holmes	Pittenger	Turner
Darrow	Hope	Plumley	Turpin
Dirksen	Hull	Powers	Wearin
Dondero	Jenkins, Ohio	Ramspeck	Wigglesworth
Doutrich	Kimball	Ransley	Wolcott
Dunn, Miss.	Kinzer	Reed, Ill.	Wolfenden

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1

Woodrum

NOT VOTING—95

Ashbrook	DeRouen	Kennedy, Md.	Rudd
Bankhead	Disney	Kennedy, N. Y.	Ryan
Beam	Ditter	Kopplemann	Sabath
Berlin	Ellenbogen	Lamneck	Schneider
Bland	Englebright	Lanham	Schuetz
Bloom	Fernandez	Lee, Okla.	Shannon
Boehne	Ford, Calif.	Lewis, Md.	Sisson
Boland	Frey	McFarlane	Smith, Wash.
Brown, Mich.	Gambrill	McMillan	Somers, N. Y.
Buckley, N. Y.	Gasque	McReynolds	Starnes
Burnham	Gavagan	McSwain	Sullivan
Cannon, Wis.	Gehrmann	Marcantonio	Sumners, Tex.
Carden	Granfield	Martin, Mass.	Thomas
Carpenter	Greenway	Miller	Tobey
Carter	Griswold	Montague	Tolan
Cartwright	Guyer	O'Malley	Underwood
Casey	Haines	Palmisano	Vinson, Ga.
Christianson	Harlan	Perkins	Vinson, Ky.
Clark, Idaho	Hartley	Peyser	Wadsworth
Cochran	Higgins, Conn.	Pfeifer	Wilson, Pa.
Cole, Md.	Higgins, Mass.	Quinn	Withrow
Cooley	Hook	Rayburn	Woodruff
Corning	Imhoff	Reilly	Zimmerman
Culkin	Kahn	Rogers, N. H.

So the motion was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Harlan (for) with Mr. Martin of Massachusetts (against).
Mr. Gehrmann (for) with Mr. Higgins of Connecticut (against).
Mr. Cartwright (for) with Mr. Tobey (against).
Mr. Bland (for) with Mr. Thomas (against).
Mr. Withrow (for) with Mr. Ditter (against).
Mr. McMillan (for) with Mr. Culkin (against).
Mr. Ashbrook (for) with Mr. Wadsworth (against).
Mr. Granfield (for) with Mr. Perkins (against).
Mr. Schuetz (for) with Mr. Wilson of Pennsylvania (against).
Mr. Bloom (for) with Mr. Woodruff (against).
Mr. Haines (for) with Mr. Hartley (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. McReynolds with Mr. Christianson.
Mr. Bankhead with Mr. Guyer.
Mr. McSwain with Mrs. Kahn.
Mr. Cochran with Mr. Englebright.
Mr. Boehne with Mr. Marcantonio.
Mr. Disney with Mr. Schneider.
Mr. Vinson of Kentucky with Mr. Carter.
Mr. Vinson of Georgia with Mr. Burnham.
Mr. Corning with Mr. Berlin.
Mr. Miller with Mr. Cooley.
Mr. Rudd with Mr. Lamneck.
Mr. McFarlane with Mr. Clark of Idaho.
Mr. Boland with Mr. Pfeifer.
Mr. Rayburn with Mr. Frey.
Mr. Somers of New York with Mrs. Greenway.
Mr. Fernandez with Mr. Tolan.
Mr. Kennedy of Maryland with Mr. Ryan.
Mr. Underwood with Mr. Zimmerman.
Mr. Kennedy of New York with Mr. Hook.
Mr. Ford of California with Mr. Casey.
Mr. Sabath with Mr. DeRouen.
Mr. Carden with Mr. Sullivan.
Mr. Griswold with Mr. Imhoff.
Mr. Sisson with Mr. Higgins of Massachusetts.
Mr. Smith of Washington with Mr. Gavagan.
Mr. Rogers of New Hampshire with Mr. Ellenbogen.
Mr. Reilly with Mr. Montague.
Mr. Carpenter with Mr. Quinn.
Mr. Palmisano with Mr. Buckley of New York.
Mr. Kopplemann with Mr. Cole of Maryland.
Mr. Brown of Michigan with Mr. Beam.
Mr. Cannon of Wisconsin with Mr. Lanham.
Mr. Gambrill with Mr. Peyser.

Mr. ANDREWS of New York changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

Mr. MEAD changed his vote from "nay" to "yea."

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, my colleague the gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. HIGGINS, is absent on account of important business. If present, he would vote "yea."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment no. 5: Strike out "$250,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$150,000."

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede from its disagreement to Senate amendment no. 5 and agree to the same with an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado moves that the House recede from its disagreement to Senate amendment no. 5, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert the following: "$150,000 for payment of subsistence and expenses of advisory committee of local stockmen, $100,000; in all, $250,000."

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Colorado.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment no. 38:

"Audit of the tribal funds of the Menominee Indians: For the purpose of making an audit of the tribal funds of the Menominee Indians, including, without limitation, an engineering audit of the timber operations on the Menominee Reservation in Wisconsin, to be immediately available, $20,000, payable from funds on deposit to the credit of said Menominee Indians: Provided, That to accomplish said audit the tribal council or business committee of said Menominee Indians may enter into a contract or contracts, to be approved by the Secretary of the Interior, with a firm of certified public accountants, and, with a timber engineer: Provided further, That this appropriation shall be available for related investigations, for services, travel, and other expenses necessary to a complete engineering and general audit, expenditures for such purposes to be paid upon presentation by attorneys acting for said Menominee Indians of itemized vouchers approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs."

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede from its disagreement to Senate amendment no. 38 and concur in the same.

The motion was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado, a motion to reconsider the various votes on the Senate amendments in disagreement was laid on the table.

THE SOUTH AND THE NEW DEAL KISS OF DEATH

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and include therein an address delivered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH].

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following speech of Representative HAMILTON FISH, Jr., at a Republican banquet at Woodstock, Va., Thursday evening, April 25, 1935:

I am as eager for the welfare and prosperity of the South as I am for my own State of New York. The "new dealers", in order to save their faces, persist in driving the Southern textile and cotton States into a crisis more serious than the Civil War. Already cotton States have lost over 50 percent of their export trade to foreign nations, and another 2 years of the fantastic destruction of crops and the pegging of cotton at 12 cents, far above the world price, will bring desolation to the South and great financial losses to the entire Nation. Governor Talmadge, of Georgia, and Senators Byrd and Glass, of Virginia, see the handwriting on the wall that spells the word "ruin" in unmistakable letters. The loss of the world markets for the surplus cotton crops of the South means inevitable economic disaster and financial ruin. For the sake of temporary profit to the cotton growers and in order to pursue nebulous mirages under an Alice in Wonderland theory of reduction of crops—the more reduction the more wealth—the whole economic future of the South is being sacrificed on an altar of new-deal expedients and experiments.

The situation is far too serious to ignore any longer, and is attributable to the socialistic new-deal policies which have increased unemployment in the South and brought ruin and misery to the tenant farmers and share-croppers. There is less cotton being exported than at any time since the Civil War, due to the kiss of death from the Wallaces, Tugwells, and Ezekiels, and, as a result of the loss of our cotton exports, hundreds of thousands of southerners engaged in planting, harvesting, ginning, compressing, transporting, shipping, and in warehouses and mills have lost their jobs. The A. A. A. program of reduction of cotton crops by 25 percent may have benefited temporarily some producers, but there are millions of people in the South who are being adversely affected, as are all consumers. The southern shipping ports of Norfolk, Charleston, and Savannah are suffering from the rapidly vanishing cotton export trade.

The wand wavers and magic performers at Washington, in addition to condemning the principles of Jeffersonian democracy, will, by their costly blunders and crazy-quilt experiments, wreck the economic stability of the South. Even the Democrats of the South do not propose to commit economic suicide for the benefit of the "new dealers" and Secretary of State Cordell Hull, a free trader and internationalist. It must be self-evident that the American mill workers in the South cannot compete with skilled Japanese textile labor paid 20 cents a day. However, Secretary Hull, true to his free-trade principles and long-distance economic policies which will take effect after the southern mills have been destroyed and their employees ruined, is deaf, dumb, and blind to the interests of the American textile industry, our second largest industry, which employs 400,000 industrious and loyal American citizens. I charge the visionary free-trade policies of Secretary Hull with wrecking the textile industry of the South, one of its greatest sources of wealth and employment.

Just as sure as fate, if President Roosevelt is renominated by the Democrats, a constitutional and Jeffersonian Democratic Party will spring up in the Southern States, and I predict that in 1936 Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, and Florida will be found in the Republican column.

Let me point out that it is not the Republicans who are criticizing the administration in the severest manner and in the bitterest terms. What about the two United States Senators from the State of Virginia, who have repeatedly denounced the A. A. A. and the N. R. A.? They have attacked them more vigorously and far more bitterly than any Republican has ever dared to denounce them. I refer to the radio speech a few nights ago by Senator BYRD against the A. A. A. and the recent speech of Senator GLASS against the N. R. A. The distinguished Senator from Maryland, Senator TYDINGS, has the courage of his convictions as to the N. R. A. and the A. A. A., and stated within the last week that they were the greatest monstrosities ever imposed upon the American people.

Governor Talmadge, of the great State of Georgia, almost the adopted State of the President, issued a statement only a day or two ago that it would be the greatest calamity to the country if the President is renominated by the Democratic Party. I will not refer to Senator LONG, for he has a habit of speaking for himself. Add to these prominent Democrats Alfred E. Smith and John W. Davis, both candidates of their party for President, and Bainbridge Colby and Newton D. Baker, both former Democratic Cabinet officers, who have swelled the chorus of criticism and denunication of the unsound, unworkable new-deal measures. Every argument advanced by the defenders of the new deal in its destruction of Jeffersonian principles and of our American system for a regimented form of State socialism can be answered by the bitter outbursts of leading Democrats.

Let me say as one Republican, and I think speaking for all, that we have no apology to offer for opposing the administration's new-deal policies where they have failed, for exposing them, for criticizing them, and for condemning them. We believe it is not only our right but our duty to show to the American people the failure and break-down of these unsound, unworkable, and socialistic policies.

For 2 years we have been in the midst of Government by propaganda and ballyhoo, with hundreds of paid publicity agents, paid out of the Treasury of the United States, getting out news every hour of the day, making up news in defense of the new-deal administration, and getting it over the radio to the people back home, swamping them with misinformation and propaganda and trying to make them believe that Roosevelt and recovery are synonymous. And what do we find? We find a million and a half more unemployed today than there were a year ago, we find the breakdown of both the A. A. A. and the N. R. A., we find the people are impoverished, we find destruction of business confidence, and no consistent economic policy except to pile debt upon debt and borrow billions, more billions, and still more billions without regard to the day of reckoning and of the inevitable inflation, chaos, ruin, and bankruptcy.

The "new dealers" admit that they do not know where we are going. That is apparent, of course, by this time to the American people. No Democrat knows where we are going, but they say, "We are not going back." We are not going back to what? To 1926? The main policy of the Democratic Party, as enunciated by the "new dealers", time after time, has been to get back to the price levels of 1926, under the Calvin Coolidge administration. Between 1921 and 1929 what happened? Under the sound policies of the Republican Party business confidence was restored, American labor was employed, employed at the highest standard of wages and living ever known in this country, or in any country in the history of the world. Why? Because of the sound policies of the Republican Party. Because the Budget was balanced, the national debt reduced, national economy practiced, because business men knew what money was worth, and as a result confidence pervaded the land from one end of the country to the other, which put American labor to work, and the Lord knows there is not a thinking man or woman in America today who would not like to go back to the prosperous times of 1926 when American labor was employed and received wages such as were paid at no other time or in no other nation in history. What is lacking today is confidence, without which there can be no employment of labor or business profits or return to prosperous times. The main issue before the American people is the reemployment of 11,000,000 loyal American citizens who are now walking the streets and looking for jobs. It is beginning to be more and more apparent that there will be no permanent jobs and no real prosperity until the sound policies of the Republican Party and a Republican administration is restored to power to uphold our American system, and the imported state socialism of the "new dealers" is repudiated and discarded.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, in order to expedite the business of the House, I renew my request for unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein remarks made to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States this morning by Mr. Johnston.

Mr. WOODRUM. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the speech introduced in the RECORD by the gentleman from Kentucky should have been objected to. It was not a proper document to put in the RECORD. It has been repeatedly stated here by both the majority and minority that it is not good practice and certainly not economical government for Members to insert other speeches than their own in the RECORD. However, may I say, with all deference to my distinguished and beloved colleague from Kentucky, who I see is on his feet ready to get into an argument——

Mr. MAY. I do not wish to engage in any argument with the distinguished gentleman from Virginia; but the principal reason why I inserted that speech in the RECORD this morning was that it paid a great tribute to George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, and the State of Virginia. I am just wondering if the gentleman from Virginia objects to such a speech?

Mr. WOODRUM. I do not object to the part of the speech that pays tribute to George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, or the State of Virginia; but I do object to the part of the speech which I heard, and it was very cynical, very caustic, and generally critical of the efforts of our Chief Executive who is at this time trying to save the Nation.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, if I had known that criticism was in the speech I would have objected. I slipped up by not objecting to an outsider's speech being put in the RECORD; however, if I had known that it criticised the President of the United States I would have objected. I am surprised a Democrat would put it in the RECORD.

Mr. MAY. May I say to the gentleman from Virginia that I listened intently to the speech and heard every word of it. If I understand anything about the meaning of the English language, the speech read as a whole does not contain a single sentence, word, or intimation anywhere in the way of criticism of the President of the United States. On the other hand, it pays tribute to him and compares him with Jefferson, Washington, Madison, and Monroe, and even says he is such a great Democrat he went as far south as Georgia to select a new home in order that he may be another great southerner.

Mr. WOODRUM. Mr. Speaker, I have no criticism to make of the speech which the gentleman had inserted in the RECORD as a speech, and it was not my purpose to bring that matter up at this time. But to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON] who is now asking unanimous consent to insert a speech in the RECORD may I say that the gentleman has consumed 2 hours of the Nation's time today in forcing two unnecessary roll calls because a Member objected to his introduction of the speech in the RECORD. Now, the gentleman prefaces his request by saying, "In order to expedite business", and proceeds to ask unanimous consent, thereby inferring if he does not get the consent he will demand a roll call.

Mr. KNUTSON. The gentleman must be a mind reader.

Mr. WOODRUM. I did not yield to the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, that is not the right attitude to take. Important business is before the Congress. The people of this country want the Congress to do business and not fritter away time. If the gentleman and his side want to take the responsibility, they can do so, because I object.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I object too.

A POLICY OF REGULATION OR A POLICY OF RUIN?

Mr. EDMISTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a speech made by the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. RANDOLPH] last Thursday over the radio.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. EDMISTON. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following address by Representative JENNINGS RANDOLPH, of West Virginia, over the blue network of the National Broadcasting Co. on Thursday night, April 25, at 9:45 o'clock, from Washington, D. C.:

When you turned the radio on tonight, you summoned to your command the services of the light and power industry. You do the same thing every time you switch on the lights, or use a washing machine, or a curling iron, or an electric refrigerator, or a toaster, or a vacuum cleaner. It is, perhaps, the industry that enters into our day's work and play most intimately and most frequently.

I feel, therefore, that I am under a special obligation to call to your attention the fact that this industry faces a very serious danger. There is before Congress a measure, known as the "public-utilities bill", which calls for the destruction of the utility holding company, and which puts the operating company under a kind of Government management.

You may be one of the 10,000,000 individuals who have put their savings in a few shares of public-utility securities. It is my duty to tell you that this bill will impair the value of your investment. Whether you are an investor or not, you are, I know, a member of the 21,000,000 families who use electric current, and I feel that it is equally my duty to say to you that this bill will impair the service which you are receiving.

I am telling you this tonight because I want to give you my frank and honest opinion before any vote is taken on this measure in the House of Representatives. No one knows what will happen in the tomorrow. But tonight I am anxious to make clear to the American people the issues which are involved in this extraordinary legislative proposal.

Now, in the mad days of 1929 there was wild speculation in the securities of public utilities, as in other industries, and in certain companies unsound financial structures developed. In the crash that followed many innocent people suffered, and there has been a tendency ever since to blame the entire public-utility industry for the errors of a few companies that sinned. It was because we wanted to prevent that situation from recurring that we in Congress passed the Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934, designed to protect the investor in the flotation and sale of securities.

If these acts do not effectively achieve that purpose—if they are not adequate to prevent a return of the inflationary and highly speculative stock-market situation of 1929—then they should be strengthened. If there are other abuses which have crept into the relationship between utility holding companies and operating companies, these should be corrected by regulation.

I am impressed by the fact that the utility companies themselves are in favor of reasonable regulation. They have said so publicly, and they have made specific proposals to the House committee which has been holding hearings on this bill.

But the trouble is that this bill does not regulate—it destroys! Under the terms of this bill the holding company must be abolished within 5 years.

In recent months an impression has been circulated that the holding company is some kind of a newly developed and complicated device with a rather bad reputation. The impression is entirely wrong. A holding company is simply a company that owns stock in other companies. It has existed for over a hundred years. It has two principal purposes:

First. To offer centralized, skilled management to small, isolated companies so that each can draw upon the experience and skill of the system as a whole; and Second. To provide adequate financial support so that the local unit, which would not be able to borrow money or sell securities itself, need not lack funds for its extensions and improvements.

You will remember that more than a century and a half ago, when Benjamin Franklin was urging the Thirteen Independent Colonies to join together if they wanted to present a strong front against the demands of George III of England, he took a stick in his hands, for illustration, and broke it; then he tied 13 sticks together, and although each one could have been broken separately, together they were strong.

That is the principle behind the holding company. It exists in every major industry, in automobiles, foods, oil and gas, merchandise of all kinds, newspapers, meats, cigarettes, and so on. Most of the companies which stand highest in American industry today are holding companies. More than that—and this is a very strange thing in the light of this present bill—the United States Government itself apparently has given its approval to the holding company. By Executive order of the President of the United States issued December 19, 1933, the Tennessee Valley Authority has formed a holding company, under the laws of the State of Delaware. One of the directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority, and formerly a member of the Wisconsin Public Service Commission, is Mr. David E. Lilienthal. In 1929 he made this statement, which is a significant tribute to the contribution which the holding company has made to electrical America:

"Since the pioneer public-utility acts of New York and Wisconsin were enacted 2 decades ago, a new figure, the holding and management company, has come upon the field, demonstrated its prowess, and in a relatively few years changed the entire economic nature of the public-utility industry. Isolated plants have given way to great systems, whose lines span several States and serve hundreds of communities, all operated under unified managerial and financial supervision. The spread of rural electrification, the amazing advances in telephony, the rise of superpower systems—these and many other technological developments so intimately related to the public welfare are directly attributable to the efforts of the holding company. Perhaps most important of all, to the holding company must go the credit for the unprecedented flow of capital into the public-utility industry making possible extensions and improvements of service."

What does all this mean to you as an individual?

Well, first of all, it means stable and certain service. Many of you will remember the days when electric service was frequently interrupted or cut off or when there was a flicker in the light. Those days are past. By making it possible for the small plant to finance continued improvements and expansions, the holding company has assured us of an uninterrupted supply of electricity. More than that, it has made it possible to provide that service at a lower cost. Rates for electricity have, of course, steadily declined in the last 50 years. The cost of living, for example, is 39 percent higher now than in the period 1910–14. The cost of residence electricity is 41 percent lower.

But the important thing, from the standpoint of this holding-company question, is that rates are lower under holding-company control than where the companies are independent. I have a list of 140 independent companies located in small towns in all sections of the United States. I also have a list of 140 companies under holding-company control located in the same geographical areas and in towns of comparable size. The cost of electricity was less in the towns supplied by the holding-company affiliates in every case except two.

I was also interested to discover what happened to the rates of an operating company immediately before and after it was acquired by a holding company. In a study of 417 cities and towns the cost to the domestic consumer ranged from 28 percent less to 43 percent less shortly after acquisition.

On the basis of these facts, does it seem wise to ruin the holding company? And when this destruction takes place, what is going to happen to the investor?

There are, I repeat, more than 10,000,000 individual holders of public-utility securities in the United States. About 5,000,000 of them own the securities of holding companies. If you are one of these people, your investment is in grave danger.

This is what would happen if the holding company is dissolved: The assets of a holding company are the common stocks of the operating companies which it owns. The holding company has issued, let us say, bonds, preferred stocks, and common stocks. It must first pay off its bonds and preferred stock in cash. To raise the money for this it must sell its assets—its operating-company stocks—in a market in which all the other holding companies are dumping their operating-company securities. It would be a forced sale. Nobody wants to buy something that everybody is selling. Maybe there would be enough buyers of the holding-company assets to pay off the holding-company bonds. It might even be able to pay something on its preferred stock, if it was lucky. Certainly its common-stock holders would have their investment entirely destroyed.

Some of the Government proponents of this bill have suggested various elaborate methods, like trusteeships, or certificates of interest, and so on, whereby they have tried to minimize the losses which would result from dissolution. I do not have time to discuss these methods in detail. I can only say to you that there is no possible way whereby the holding-company investment can be protected if the holding company itself is destroyed.

I submit that to you as a reasonable proposition. The assets of a holding company, I say again, are the common stocks of its operating companies. If all over the country these operating-company common stocks must be sold in order that the holding company can retire its own securities and dissolve, who is going to buy, and what kind of a price can the seller obtain?

At the hearings before the House committee, in addition to the public-utility executives themselves, business men, bankers, economists, and investors testified as to the ruinous effects which the bill would have upon investments. The President of a life-insurance company pointed out that it would "destroy the investments made in good faith by this company." The president of the American Federation of Utility Investors cried out in protest that this bill would destroy the hard-earned savings of millions of American people.

That is why the enormous amount of mail arriving in Washington when Congress is in session has become larger than ever in recent weeks. Hundreds of thousands of letters have been received by Congressmen and Senators protesting against the enactment of this bill. These letters are a product of fear. They come, in many instances, from lonely and despairing people who see their last dollar being taken away from them by Government fiat.

I realize very well that some of the Government proponents of this bill have criticized these letters as "propaganda" stirred up by the utility interests. I do not believe that. No industrial group could possibly organize a personal, spontaneous, and sometimes heart-breaking protest of this kind. And I want to say to you that this expression of your opinion is your unquestioned right. I want to say to you that I believe it is the duty of the Members of Congress in a democracy such as ours to listen to what the people have to say. I for one will oppose to the last breath the effort on the part of anyone to curtail the right of the citizen of the United States to send letters to his Government representatives in regard to legislation which affects the way he lives.

Now, I think it must have occurred to you, as it has occurred to me, that there is another way—a more American way—whereby we can handle the utilities problem; and that is the way of regulation rather than the way of ruin. Let us consider these abuses carefully and find out which ones still exist. Let us then propose the necessary legislation to make sure that these abuses cannot reoccur. Then, under a system of fair regulation, the public utilities, with their large potential purchasing power and their vital contribution to industrial life, can continue to function. Let us give them a chance to lead the way to economic recovery, which is just as important to you and to me as economic reform.

POST OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL OF 1936

Mr. MEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on the Treasury and Post Office Departments appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. Speaker, I would like to call attention to several amendments to the Post Office appropriation bill for the next fiscal year which will benefit the postal employees and result in improved mail service throughout the country.

CLERKS AND CARRIERS

Before the bill passed the House the appropriations for clerical hire in first- and second-class post offices and for city delivery service were increased by a million dollars each. These additional allotments, approved by the Senate and written into the permanent bill, will permit the Department to fill existing vacancies by the promotion of approximately 1,300 substitutes to the position of regular clerks and carriers, will provide additional funds for the hiring of substitutes to augment the regular force, and will result in speeding up delivery of the mail.

RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE

The House also approved an increase of $900,000 in the appropriation for travel allowance to railway postal clerks. The amount provided in the bill was insufficient to pay the basic travel allowance of $3 per day, which becomes effective on July 1, 1935, when present provisions of the economy legislation automatically expire. The amendment merely corrects an obvious injustice to a most efficient and deserving class of Government employees by restoring the basic rate of travel allowance for railway postal clerks and substitute railway postal clerks, as provided in the act of February 28, 1925.

This allowance, which was cut to $2 per day under the Economy Act, is to cover actual expenses of railway postal clerks while on duty away from home and does not commence until after the clerk has been on duty 10 hours.

The allowance is divided into four items—one lodging and three meals. Only such items as are necessary and are actually used are allowed, and only after the first 10 hours have been disregarded. It is perfectly obvious to anyone that it is impossible to obtain suitable lodging in any city for 50 cents, nor is 50 cents a very large sum with which to buy a meal in the average restaurant such as will sustain a man at manual labor through the night on a moving train.

The Senate approved the increase of $900,000 for travel allowance, and added $100,000 to the salary appropriation for the Railway Mail Service, to which the House agreed.

SALARY RESTORATION

The Congress previously voted for restoration of the basic rate of pay for Federal employees, and the salary appropriations contained in the Post Office appropriation bill provide for full restoration of pay to all postal employees.

POST-OFFICE INSPECTORS

The force of post-office inspectors will be increased from 525 to 540, in addition to the 15 inspectors in charge. The post-office inspection force is the oldest investigative force of the Government, dating back to colonial days. Although but 25 percent of the work of this branch of the Department is in apprehending criminals and bringing them to trial, its work compares favorably with that of any other Government organization, and it holds the unusual record of having brought about convictions in 98 percent of its criminal cases.

Inspectors are select men, selected from within the Postal Service for their experience and outstanding ability. Some of the prominent men in our Nation's history have been post-office inspectors at some time in their career.

This division saves the Government millions of dollars and has brought to justice criminals whose acts have emblazoned the front pages of our newspapers and terrified the country. Our post-office inspectors work quietly, but efficiently; they track down the train robbers, mail-truck bandits, safe crackers, post-office burglars, kidnapers, and all sorts of dangerous criminals who prey upon the Postal Service; and they have a record of which they can be justly proud.

IMPROVED MAIL SERVICE

In addition to the increased allowances for clerk and carrier hire, which will assist materially in improving the handling of the mails and their speedy transportation, the appropriation for unusual conditions at post offices was increased from $65,000 to $75,000 by the Senate and concurred in by the House.

This appropriation will take care of unusual conditions which cannot be met by the existing postal facilities. For instance, an oil or a land boom in any community will quickly affect the population and give the post office more work than can be handled satisfactorily without additional help. The holiday seasons also impose added burdens upon the Postal Service and make it necessary to put on more help to meet the emergency.

The additional allowance for this cause is to meet the estimated demands upon the Service and to place the Department in a position to meet these demands as they occur and to satisfy the postal patrons.

The Department is also planning to extend and improve the Rural Route Service.

RURAL DELIVERY SERVICE

A committee amendment on the floor of the House added $300,000 to the $94,000,000 appropriation for Rural Route Service, in order to permit the Post Office Department to put into effect its entire program, covering approximately 200 new routes and nearly 5,500 extensions. This will mean improved mail service throughout the entire Rural Delivery Service and the extension of the benefits of this Service to more than 42,000 families who are now without such service.

FOREIGN AIR MAIL

In the Senate an amendment was inserted in the bill providing an additional $2,000,000 for air mail service across the Pacific. The successful flight of the Pan American Airways within the last 10 days has aroused keen interest in spanning the Pacific and bringing us in quicker communication with China and the islands in between. Although this amendment was defeated in the House, it was only with the understanding that it would be favorably considered in connection with the next deficiency appropriation bill.

In 1928 Congress enacted legislation to permit the Post Office Department to enter into contracts for the transportation of mail by air to foreign countries and insular possessions of the United States, and in 1929 Congress enlarged the provisions of that act to meet further demands for this rapid means of transportation.

From a small ferry service in 1927, between Key West and Cuba, our foreign air mail service has spread out to Central and South America, and now it is trying its wings all the way to China. The flight just the other day of one of the master clipper ships of Pan American Air Lines from Alameda, Calif., to Honolulu, a distance of approximately 2,400 miles, in less than 18 hours, was the inaugural flight in our effort to establish an air trade route to the Orient. All the nations of the world are competing with each other in the race for trade, and all countries are spreading out and seeking new fields. If we are not prompt in acquiring rights in foreign countries, we will find our competitors there ahead of us and the market closed to us. Our aviators have the genius, the skill, and the daring to fly the Pacific; it is up to us to match their courage by our willingness and zeal in backing their exploits and cooperating with them in carrying America's good will to foreign ports.

THE BANKING ACT OF 1935

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 7617) to provide for the sound, effective, and uninterrupted operation of the banking system, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. STEAGALL].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. KNUTSON) there were—ayes 172, noes 6.

The SPEAKER (while the House was dividing). The Chair will take cognizance of the fact that five Republicans left the Hall when the Chair began to count.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that there is no quorum.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Two hundred and twenty-five Members are present, a quorum.

So the motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 7617, with Mr. WOODRUM in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 40 additional minutes.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman yield for questions if he is given this additional time?

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I have never refused to yield to a Member of this House at any time since I have been a Member of this body when I obtained time to speak, either by unanimous consent or in my own right. I hope the gentleman will not undertake to require me to make a promise in order to obtain consent at this time.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, since I am interested in section 2, and that is the part of the bill which the gentleman proposes to discuss, I would like to have assurance he will answer some questions which I desire to propound in this 40 minutes' time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, may I ask the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. STEAGALL] if he is going to allow those of us who have requested time, not members of the committee, to have an opportunity to speak in the general discussion of this bill?

Mr. STEAGALL. I may say to the gentleman that I am endeavoring to obtain an extension of the time for general debate on this bill. I hope the matter may be arranged. However, it does not rest upon any decision of my own. If additional time is granted, there will be no difficulty in affording reasonable opportunity to every Member of the House who has up to this hour submitted a request for time. Unless the time of the general debate is extended, I shall be obliged to consider first applications for time on the part of members of the Committee on the majority side of the House, and I have not had an opportunity up to this time to estimate the time that will be required to accommodate members of the Committee.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I highly regard the gentleman from Alabama. I dislike very much to object, but unless I can at least get assurance from the gentleman that he will answer two or three or four questions that I would like to ask him, or that I can get at least a few minutes' time, I think I should object.

Mr. STEAGALL. I will repeat that I have never declined to yield.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I demand the regular order.

Mr. McFARLANE. I object.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, do we understand that objection was made to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

Mr. McFARLANE. Yes; I objected. The gentleman would not give me any time.

Mr. COX. Then I renew the request, Mr. Chairman, that the gentleman from Alabama have unanimous consent to yield to himself 40 additional minutes, and I hope the gentleman from Texas will not object.

Mr. McFARLANE. I object.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 hour to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH].

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, in this discussion it will be necessary to refer to bankers and to refer to banks, and at times it may seem that there is a degree of personal hostility to banks and bankers. The speaker wants to emphasize the fact that he has no personal hostility to bankers or to banks. As a matter of fact, I have been a director in two banks for over 30 years and the attorney for several banks for fully that length of time. I understand thoroughly the tremendous problems they have to solve, the difficulties in which they find themselves in serving their communities, and the very high standard of energy and intelligence most of them use. Any criticism offered is of our banking system and not of the individual bankers or of the individual banks.

There has been a great deal of discussion in the newspapers of title II of this bill. In my opinion, it is not worth while to take the time of the Committee to discuss title I or title III. The material that goes to make up both of these titles is almost entirely of a perfecting nature, and the controversy here is over title II insofar as there is a legitimate controversy.

The changes made by title II in the original philosophy of the Federal Reserve Act are very, very slight. The Federal Reserve Act has been perverted to the use of the banking system, and the thing which this bill undertakes to do in a mandatory way is to restore the philosophy that was intended to be incorporated in the act as it was originally passed. Some years ago, when Mark Twain was in good health, the newspapers reported his death, and he sent out a telegram to the effect that the reports of his death had been greatly exaggerated, and I assure you that the reports of the changes created by this bill in the basic philosophy of our central banking system have been grossly exaggerated and grossly misstated by that part of society that has interested itself to keep control not only of a banking system, to which we do not object, but to keep absolute control of the people's money; that is, the people's medium of exchange.

In order to understand fully just what the endeavor is in this bill it is, in my opinion, necessary to discuss the history of attempted monetary legislation in the American Congress.

You all know that the Constitution of the United States contemplates that the American Congress shall coin the money of the country—that is, the medium of exchange, whatever it may be—to coin that thing that people use to exchange their goods and services; and that the Constitution also contemplates that the American Congress shall regulate the value of that medium of exchange. Obviously the American Congress cannot physically do this. A body of 435 cannot do this; but the American Congress can state the policy which it desires pursued in order that the people may have the best possible medium of exchange and delegate the administration somewhere else, and they can do this under the Constitution. But up until this minute, Mr. Chairman, the American Congress has never had the hardihood to coin money and regulate its value. It has never had the hardihood to exercise this great duty imposed upon it by our fathers. It has never had the hardihood to take from the banking class the power to issue and to control the people's medium of exchange and to place it under a mandate into hands whose only interest it would be only to exercise it for the benefit of all the people.

Mr. KENNEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I yield.

Mr. KENNEY. If that be so, that the people's interest should be paramount, does not the gentleman feel that the merchants of this country, representing agriculture, industry, and commerce would be best fitted to operate and conduct the banks under the laws to be prescribed by Congress rather than have the private bankers control them or even have the Government itself exercise control; and I have in mind, if the gentleman please, the Bank of England and the history of the conduct of that institution?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I may say, in answer to the gentleman, the business of banking is a business of lending money and collecting money. A bank is a lending institution.

As far as I am concerned, an institution of that kind should have no more governmental control than any other private business.

The difficulty in this country with banking, as such, is minor. The chief function exercised by the banks is the control of the medium of exchange, which is not a banking function at all, but a function for society to exercise for the benefit of all the people.

Up to this hour we have never had the exercise of that function by society. It is a strange thing to me, it is a great mystery, why the section of the Constitution which imposes on Congress the duty to issue money, to regulate its value, is the only section which has been utterly and entirely disregarded.

Mr. KENNEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Yes.

Mr. KENNEY. Under title II there is no provision for banking balances to be placed in any central or single bank so that the central bank, and only the central bank, can know at a given time what the bank balances are.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. There is no special machinery set up in title II. The gentleman is right.

Mr. KENNEY. Is it not necessary for proper control of credit that bank balances should be known at all times and the knowledge of the balances lodged exclusively in the controlling power?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. The bank balances are known 15 minutes after the bank closes.

Mr. KENNEY. Is it not true that it takes a week?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I do not believe that criticism is justified. Now, if Members will permit me to finish without interruption, I will be glad to answer questions afterward.

The history of attempted legislation to get the people's medium of exchange away from the banks and into the hands of society as is specifically required under the Constitution—so far as I know, begins in 1922, when a bill was introduced providing for the variation of the gold content of the dollar for the purpose of maintaining a stable purchasing power for the dollar.

Extensive hearings were held on that bill in the Sixty-seventh Congress, and also in the Sixty-eighth Congress.

In 1926, some of the Republican Members became interested in the same subject. At that time the Democrats were in the minority. The leadership of the movement was turned over to the Republicans.

Extensive hearings were held in 1926 and in 1927.

When the Democratic Party came into control of the House in 1932, a bill was introduced which undertook to lay a mandate on the Federal Reserve System and the Secretary of the Treasury to raise the general-commodity price level to the average existing between 1921 and 1929 and then maintain it at that point by the control of the credit and currency.

The bill was reported favorably by the Committee on Banking and Currency and passed the House by a vote of 289 to 60.

When the bill got into the Senate an amendment was offered striking out the title and inserting what was then known as the Glass amendment, and which of course, as it was intended to do, rendered the bill absolutely useless for the purpose for which it was introduced.

By this time the people of the country had become very greatly interested in the subject of the stabilization of the currency, and in the question as to how the currency could be so handled as to furnish a maximum amount of efficiency to all branches of society. In 1934 a bill providing for an independent monetary authority was introduced in this House. Extensive hearings covering several weeks were held upon the bill by a subcommittee of seven, which subcommittee reported unanimously favorably to the full committee on the bill. The matter was taken up by the full committee with the administration and it was decided that the time was not ripe for serious consideration in this body of that proposed legislation; but in 1935 we find the basic principles contemplated by the monetary authority bill of 1934 embodied in the so-called "Banking Act of 1935." Instead of providing for an independent monetary authority, the so-called "Banking Act of 1935" provides that the Federal Reserve Board shall act as a monetary authority. What can they do? They can control the rediscount rates in their dealings with member banks. They can raise or lower the reserve requirements of member banks. They have complete control—after consultation with five governors of the Reserve banks—of the open-market operations of the Federal Reserve banks.

This bill provides for pensions for members of the Federal Reserve Board who have retired. If they have served 12 years they will get a salary of $12,000 a year after they retire. If they have served 10 years, they will get a salary of $10,000. If they have served 5 years, they will get a salary of $5,000, but if they have served less than 5 years they will not get anything. They are appointed for 12 years. They can be removed only for cause. We changed the recommendation of the administration that when a man was appointed governor and was removed by the Executive as governor, he should cease to be a member of the Federal Reserve Board. Under the bill as reported he does not cease to be a member of the Board under those circumstances, after he is removed as governor.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Yes.

Mr. COX. Is not the provision of the bill putting this power in the Federal Reserve Board rather than setting up a monetary authority in line with what evidently is the intent and purpose of the act, which is the concentration of authority and responsibility in one agency representing the national interest. In other words, under the law as it is, is there not such diffusion of authority as to render impossible quick and direct action in case of emergency?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. The gentleman has stated with a rare degree of accuracy the purpose of the part of the bill which he speaks. At this time the banks themselves practically control the monetary policy of the country, and this changes all that. That is what this racket is about, that is why the subsidized press tells us that there is something wrong with the bill. They call it a political bill. They say that we are setting up a political board.

It is exactly the opposite. These men are appointed for 12 years, but if they have served for 5 years they are pensioned after they retire. They cannot be removed at the whim of a President. What more independent board can you imagine than that? Now it is the Governors of the Federal Reserve banks who control the open-market policies of the Federal Reserve banks. This bill places their open-market policies under the control of an independent board, the Federal Reserve Board, which is not dependent at all upon the banks.

Mr. COX. One representing a special group of special interests, while the other represents society as a whole.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. That is correct.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Yes.

Mr. SWEENEY. I think the gentleman is one of the finest students of the monetary question and probably has done as much as any man in this House in that direction. I supported his bill last year. It was a bill in the direction of reform in banking. That bill was defeated in the Senate by sources over which we had no control. I want to ask the gentleman a sincere and candid question. Is not the solution of our problem this: That this Congress ought to take its rights into its own hands and coin money and regulate the value thereof, and create a central bank and insist upon 100-percent reserves behind demand deposits? Is not that the solution?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. If I have time, I am going to refer to all of the matters of which the gentleman has spoken, but I am not ready to do it right now.

The American Bankers Association submitted a printed memorial to the Committee on Banking and Currency of the House. A special committee of the American Bankers' Association, consisting of R. S. Hecht, chairman of the board of the Hibernia National Bank in New Orleans; Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank, Washington, D. C.; Tom K. Smith, president of the Boatmen's National Bank of St. Louis; Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank of the city of New York; Ronald Ransom, executive vice president of the Fulton National Bank of Atlanta, Ga.

When the distinguished ranking member of the minority on the committee was speaking yesterday he criticized this proposed legislation on the ground that the Federal Reserve banks were private institutions, and that under this legislation they could be required by the Federal Reserve Board to so conduct their open-market operations as to be compelled to either buy or sell bonds, whether they wanted to or not. Now, let us see whether the American Bankers Association had the hardihood to make any such criticism. Private banks? Of course, the member banks were private banks; but member banks and the Federal Reserve banks have been in control of the people's medium of exchange, and when they began to close, because of the financial condition of the country, we set up the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to put them on their feet. They did not claim that they were immune to help at that time. They did not say, "We are private institutions and therefore we cannot take your money." They said, "We exercise a public function. It is our obligation to furnish the people the money whereby they can transact the business of the country, and therefore we must be protected by the public, and the Treasury of the United States must be open to us."

That is what they said then. The Treasury of the United States was open to them, and for several years the stock of the banks of the country has been purchased by the people's money, furnished by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in order to keep them from closing. Why? Because they exercise a public function. They should not exercise it. That is what has destroyed the country. That is the thing that has created this depression; but they do exercise it. Therefore they cannot come here and say that the Congress of the United States shall not so control them as to safeguard the people's money from undue expansion and contraction. There is not a word in that memorial of the American Bankers Association to the Committee on Banking and Currency that criticizes such a policy.

Mr. COX. I wonder if the gentleman would yield to me for the purpose of quoting from the testimony of Mr. Eccles in the hearings on this bill, who himself was quoting another, and one for whom I confess I never had any great affection, but for whom justice rings tribute that he is possibly the greatest brain of the twentieth century, our great war President, Woodrow Wilson, who said in a message to the joint session of Congress in 1913:

> The control of the system of banking and of issue must be vested in the Government itself, so that the banks may be the instruments, not the masters, of business and of individual enterprise and initiative.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I thank the gentleman for his illuminating contribution.

Half of my time is gone. If it can be avoided, I would appreciate it if gentlemen withhold their interruptions and let me complete my statement.

Under the head of "Open Market Operations", this is what the American Bankers Association said to us:

> Neither the original text of section 205, providing for the open-market committee of three members of the Federal Reserve Board and two governors of the Federal reserve banks, nor the subsequent suggestion which has been made that authority over the open-market operations be vested in the Federal Reserve Board, which would be required to consult with a committee of 5 governors selected by the 12 governors before adopting an open-market policy, a change in discount rates or a change in member bank reserve requirements seems to constitute a satisfactory solution of the open-market problem.

Then, further:

> Our suggestion is that the open-market committee shall consist of the entire Federal Reserve Board (reduced to 5 members) and 4 governors of the Federal Reserve banks, selected by the governors of the 12 Federal Reserve banks annually, each member of the open-market committee having a vote in the deliberations of the committee on the three subjects to be intrusted to it—i. e., open-market policy, change in discount rates, or change in member-bank reserve requirements.

You will see that while the American Bankers' Association suggests that the banks be represented on the open-market committee, they do not have the hardihood to say that the Government of the United States has no right to set up an open-market committee which shall control the purchase and sale of Government bonds.

Now, Mr. Chairman, in this country we are blessed, apparently, with what is known as a "Committee of Sixty." We had one member of this committee before the Committee on Banking and Currency. His name is Prof. Walter E. Sparr. He is apparently professor of economics in the University of New York. I find he is secretary-treasurer of the Economist National Committee on Monetary Policies. This will be interesting to you. The president of that organization is Edwin W. Kemmerer, professor of economics at Princeton University.

On the executive committee is Dr. H. Parker Willis, who is professor of banking at Columbia University and who was the adviser of the House Committee on Banking and Currency when the Federal Reserve Act was written, and who was Senator GLASS' adviser when the 1933 act was written.

Professor Spahr came before our committee and stated that in his judgment this committee of 60 knew more about the subject of money than anybody in the world. That was his opinion. We asked him what he would do about existing conditions. Oh, he would not do anything now; he would have a committee appointed to study the question and report in about a year; and that is as far as he got with constructive suggestions.

We then thought we would like to find out the opinion of the learned gentleman. We ascertained that he knew the Constitution of the United States stated that Congress had the duty imposed upon it to issue money and regulate its value, but when we pressed him he said that if they did issue money and regulate its value they would be guilty of forgery. That is his exact language, that if the Congress did what the Constitution of the United States stated it should do, it would be guilty of forgery; and he said it in half a dozen different ways, so that the wayfaring man, though he were a fool, could read and understand.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I yield.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I do not believe the gentleman from Maryland wanted to quote Professor Spahr incorrectly.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I could not do that; he went too far.

Mr. HOLLISTER. What Professor Spahr said was that when Congress issued money which had absolutely nothing behind it that then it was committing a forgery, because one of the definitions of forgery is the signing of a name to a valueless piece of paper.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Congress could not issue money with nothing behind it, because every sovereign power that issues money has behind it the wealth of every individual in the country. [Applause.] But he said in a half dozen different ways that unless Congress got its money by borrowing from some bank or by taxation—if it got its money in any way other than these two—it was guilty of forgery. That is what that statesman said.

Let us now see what this other apologist of the banking system said about the banks in a recent book that he published. I have the book in my office; I got it from the Library of Congress.

[From the New York American, Wednesday, Mar. 20, 1935]

DESTRUCTIVE POLITICS

By Robert H. Hemphill, financial authority

The introduction to H. Parker Willis' comprehensive new book, The Banking Situation, contains statements from this eminent authority of such vital significance that the high lights at least should be most widely published.

No one in the United States is more competent than Dr. Willis to speak upon these subjects. He has long been recognized as the leading financial authority sympathetic with, if not representative of, international banking sentiment of Wall Street.

His tutorship of and close association with the Honorable CARTER GLASS, formerly Chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee of the House and later of the Senate, who more than anyone else of recent years has dominated the progress of financial legislation in the United States, enables Dr. Willis to speak with certainty of the political manipulation by which fundamental improvements in the banking-monetary system have been consistently prevented.

Dr. Willis says:

"For the past several years it has been evident, even to the casual students of banking and of the general industrial situation in the United States, that a fundamental reform or reorganization was inevitably necessary. The inadequacy of the American banking system to provide for the requirements of business has long been evident.

"The measures which were taken during the years 1931 and 1932, for the improvement of banking conditions, were entirely of the sort classified as 'relief', and in no case partook of reconstruction, reform, or improvement.

"The state of things revealed by the break-down of 1933 has shown that there is need for complete rectification and reconstruction even of the very foundations upon which the present-day banking system of the United States rests.

"BANKERS LACK VISION

"To those who recognize any measure of truth in the general indictment of the situation thus outlined, the question must naturally occur: Why is it that the United States, perhaps the wealthiest country in the world, perhaps also that country in which the widest distribution of income has taken place, should have suffered particularly from such adverse conditions?

"In most countries legislation on the subject of banking originates in one of two ways. It may, first of all, be proposed by the Administration of the country.

"In some other countries the banking community itself succeeds in exercising a general jurisdiction over the conditions that surround its own operations and has the wisdom from time to time to acquiesce in changes designed to give the public what changes are demanded by circumstance even though such changes might not appear advantageous to the members of the banking community itself.

"In the United States we have not been willing to assent to either of these methods. American bankers have practically never been willing to agree among themselves about changes in banking laws.

"The American Bankers' Association has seldom, if ever, taken any position with regard to banking laws except to oppose or antagonize what was being proposed.

"MONEY TRUST REIGNS

"In other cases it has been obliged to admit the existence of a very representative minority, whose view was far from coinciding with that of the larger body of members.

"There is probably no country in the world in which there is a greater approach to the real existence of a so-called 'money trust' than in the United States. Nor is there any country in which there is less assurance of nonpartisanship and fairness in the extension of credit in banks to individuals or corporations.

"It is seldom that there can be any actually frank congressional debate about currency or banking questions. Most such discussions have been largely personal recrimination or an appeal to prejudice based on 'antitrust' and other allied ideas or an effort to stir up popular prejudice or imaginary fears of one sort or another.

"For many years it was the practice of the banking community to secure the 'pigeonholing' or ignoring of new legislation by the familiar methods of legislative obstruction and control.

"LEGISLATION IN CONGRESS

"When these forms of opposition lost their force or were unsuccessful, proposed changes of law were often either referred to committees around which special interests clustered, or they were made by legislators who were determined to prevent any further growth or development of arguments of the kind thus contemplated. In other cases such legislation was allowed to reach a fairly advanced stage, and then was called up for 'hearing' before some committee, at which time a joint onslaught by banking interests developed for the purpose not of improving or strengthening the legislation, but merely of rendering it ridiculous or at any rate unpopular, and of relegating it to the background."

Professor Willis' exposé is timely. Important banking legislation is now before the Banking and Currency Committees of both the House and the Senate. On its disposition hinges our hope of recovery and may hinge the fate of our Democracy.

That is what this gentleman who is now apologizing for the state of the banking system, who says that we are all wrong in what we are trying to do, thought of the banks when he wrote his book.

Now, let us see what Professor Kemmerer, who is the president of this organization, thought of what we were trying to do a few years ago. In December of 1927 Professor Kemmerer, who for years had been professor of economics at Princeton University, made this statement:

The world sooner or later must either learn how to stabilize the gold standard or devise some other monetary standard to take its place. There is probably no defect in this economic organization today more serious than the fact that we use as our unit of value not a thing with a fixed value, but a fixed weight of gold with a widely varying value. In a little less than a half a century here in the United States we have seen our yardstick of value, namely, the value of a gold dollar, exhibit the following gyrations: From 1879 to 1896 it rose 27 percent; from 1896 to 1920 it fell 70 percent; from 1920 to September 1927 it rose 56 percent. If, figuratively speaking, we say that the yardstick value was 36 inches long in 1879, when the United States returned to the gold standard, then it was 46 inches long in 1896, 13½ inches long in 1920, and is 21 inches long today.

That is what Professor Kemmerer thought of our monetary system controlled by the banks in 1927; but now he has become 1 of the 60, one of the anointed who are going to have a commission appointed to report a year from now on what may be done. Every day my mail is filled with letters from business houses, from people who evidently know nothing about the subject but who have been told by their bankers to follow the advice of Professor Kemmerer and write to their Congressmen that they want a nice little commission appointed to report on this subject 1 year from now.

Mr. Chairman, it is impossible in the time allotted to me, and properly allotted, because there are other members on the committee who can throw great light on this question, to cover the points I would like to. I do want to call attention to an amendment which I shall introduce when the proper point in the bill is reached. The amendment reads as follows:

On page 51, after line 10, insert a new paragraph, as follows:

"(c) Section 11 of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof a new subsection as follows:

"'It is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States that the average purchasing power of the dollar, as ascertained by the Department of Labor in the wholesale commodity markets for the period covering the years 1921 to 1929, inclusive, shall be promptly restored; and that after such restoration shall have been achieved the purchasing power of the dollar shall be maintained substantially stable in relation to a suitable index of basic commodity prices which the Federal Reserve Board shall cause to be compiled and published in complete detail at weekly intervals.

"'The Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Reserve banks, and the Secretary of the Treasury are hereby charged with the duty of making effective this policy. To this end it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to establish or cause to be established in the United States a free and open market in which gold and silver may be bought and sold for use, investment, or trade, and to determine, without limitations, and with the advice of the Federal Reserve Board, the amounts and the prices at which the Treasury shall buy and sell gold and silver.

"'Acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the terms of this subsection are hereby repealed.'"

Mr. FIESINGER. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, what does the committee think of his amendment?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. The gentleman means the Committee on Banking and Currency?

Mr. FIESINGER. Yes.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I cannot say; I do not know. I was not able to secure a majority vote, but whether or not a majority thought it was a good amendment is a very different proposition.

Mr. FIESINGER. I had in mind to ask the gentleman a question or two, but I did not want to interrupt him. Now that he has read this amendment, I want to tell him what I have in mind. The gentleman spoke about the stabilization of our money. Does not the gentleman mean, in fact, the stabilization of the price level of commodities?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I have no objection to that statement; I think it is correct and means the same thing as my statement.

Mr. FIESINGER. If this be the purpose and object, then we are going to leave that question up to the Advisory Board, are we not? They are the manipulators of the stability of the money and the purchasing power of money and of commodities.

If we do that, what assurance have we that they, being between the conflict of money and property and the producers of commodities, will take the side of producers of commodities against money and property? The gentleman is trying to cure that by this amendment, and that is the reason I asked the question whether the committee was in favor of the amendment.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I can only guess. If I was guessing, I would say the majority was in favor of it, but I do not know that definitely, and they have not said so to me.

Mr. FIESINGER. Why was that not put in the bill then?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. There are practical men on the committee, and their judgment might be better than mine.

Mr. FIESINGER. I do not know much about this amendment, but I repeat the question, What assurance have we, if this bill is passed, that those in control of the Federal Reserve System will not manipulate things in the interest of the purchasing power of money as against the purchasing power of commodities?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Does the gentleman mean without some mandate?

Mr. FIESINGER. Without some mandate. Will they not look at it from the interest and standpoint of the bankers, because all of them are bankers?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I think this amendment will control the situation.

Mr. FIESINGER. I think the gentleman and I are agreed on one thing, and that is if we are going to pay our debts contracted when commodities were a great deal higher than they are now, we will have to have a higher price level.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. WOLCOTT. This is a very important question, in view of the gentleman's statement and the amendment which he is going to offer. I understood the gentleman was attacking Professor Kemmerer and his theory we ought to have a gold base for our currency?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. No; I was not.

Mr. WOLCOTT. At the same time the gentleman's amendment, as I understand it, creates a free and open market for the purchase and sale of gold and silver. What affiliation is there between the gold standard and the purchase and sale of gold in a free market under the gentleman's amendment?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. After the 1921–29 level is restored, then the index number shall be fixed at that point, solely in reference to basic commodity prices as they exist at that time. The international medium of exchange up to this time has been gold, and as long as it is gold, these basic commodities enter into international trade and the raising or lowering of the price of gold will raise or lower the price of these commodities. Reason not only tells me that, but I can prove it mathematically if given the time. I could demonstrate that that has been the course of the prices of basic commodities.

Mr. WOLCOTT. How does the gentleman's amendment differ from the policy which we have already established of giving the President the power to devaluate the gold and raise or lower the value of a dollar to the point where the commodity price index will be at the 1926 level. It will be stabilized.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. There are two answers to the gentleman's question. One is that the President has adopted the policy of fixing the price of gold and not allowing it to raise or lower in a free market. The other answer is that that legislation was purely emergency legislation, while this amendment undertakes to write permanent law.

Mr. WOLCOTT. The gentleman will realize that I have been sympathetic with the program and I am asking these questions merely to draw out the differences that might be in the minds of some of the Members.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Chairman, I will list the basic commodities I have in mind: Hides, rubber, linseed oil, turpentine, petroleum, copper, lead, zinc, tin, silver, cotton, print cloth, wool, silk, burlap, sugar, coffee, cocoa, eggs, butter, cheese, flour, beef, pork, lard, wheat, corn, oats, rye, and barley. That list, of course, is subject to variation but it is substantially what would compose a basic commodity index.

May I call the attention of the distinguished gentleman from Michigan to the fact the latter part of this amendment states that with the advice of the Federal Reserve Board the Secretary of the Treasury can determine without limitation the amount and price at which the Treasury shall buy and sell gold. In other words, while gold will be on a free market generally, if it became necessary either to raise or lower the index number, the Secretary of the Treasury would have authority to go into the market and buy gold in order to raise the price of gold and so raise the price of the basic commodities, or to sell gold in order to lower the price.

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. Has the gentleman defined the exact policy and course of operations that is to be binding upon this Federal Reserve Board? I just ask the gentleman that question; and if so, where?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. May I say that I have found in an experience of some few years I cannot get everything I want. Very often I cannot even approximate it. The amendment which I am offering is the composite judgment of several groups. It is the very best we can get, and we feel it is immeasurably better than anything we now have, and I am very hopeful we can secure the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. I am sorry, but that is not the question. I want to know if the gentleman or the committee has defined the exact policy and course of operations that is to be binding upon the Federal Reserve Board; and if so, where is it included in the bill? If it is not, just say so. I do not ask the gentleman to create anything. Is it there or is it not there?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. The gentleman means in the bill or in the amendment?

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. In your bill, if it is there, or assuming it is there, have you provided any mandates to compel the enforcement or observance of that polar-star gold, or have you provided any restraints or restrictions or any prohibitions against this Board doing something it should not do; and if so, where is it in the bill?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I have attempted, as I said before, to draw an amendment which would constitute a mandate. There is, however, a statement on page 51 of the bill which says:

(o) It shall be the duty of the Federal Reserve Board to exercise such powers as it possesses in such manner as to promote conditions conducive to business stability and to mitigate by its influence unstabilizing fluctuations in the general level of production, trade, prices, and employment, so far as may be possible within the scope of monetary action and credit administration.

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. Will the gentleman explain wherein that clause defines any policy or provides for any mandate or provides for any prohibition that would in any way control or direct the Federal Reserve Board or change the course of the Federal Reserve Board in the future from what it has observed in the past? Show me any word or any line or any provision anywhere in the bill. I cannot find it myself, but I may be wrong.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. It is intended, I may say to the gentleman from Indiana, to do this——

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. I am not talking about what is intended. I want to know what is in the bill and where it is in the bill.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I have read it to the gentleman and I am going to tell you what the purpose is. The purpose of the language is to direct the attention of the Federal Reserve Board to the fact that under this bill it is given practical control of the monetary affairs of this country, and that being so, they must exercise it in the interest of the public and not in the interest of the banks.

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. Just one more question. Where in the bill is there provided any assurance that the Federal Reserve Board you are appointing will do what is necessary to be done?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I do not know whether we will have angels on the Federal Reserve Board or not. If we do, they will be an entirely different class of people from those we have anywhere else.

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. We have had all other kinds, and it is time we were having some angels.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Yes.

Mr. ENGEL. Did I understand the gentleman correctly to state that this bill provides that the members of the Board, after they have served for 12 years at $12,000 a year, receiving a total of $144,000, are to be pensioned for the rest of their lives at $12,000 a year?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Yes; that is correct; and I may say, furthermore, if they do what they should do they will be worth hundreds of millions of dollars to the struggling masses of the people of this country every year they work. [Applause.]

Mr. ENGEL. How about after they quit working?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. The idea is this: If you put a man of middle age on this Board and keep him there for 12 years or more and he devotes his entire time to it, when he leaves the Board he simply cannot get a job, that is all; and if he is going to do his work right, he ought to know he is not going to go on the bread line when he leaves.

Mr. ENGEL. I was thinking about the $15 a month that we are giving other people on the other end of the line.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I did not come here to make a demagogic speech.

Mr. ENGEL. Neither did I.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Or to answer demagogic questions.

Mr. ENGEL. But I did make a statement that is pertinent.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I do not consider that a proper question to inject into this discussion, and therefore I shall not answer it.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I yield.

Mr. PATMAN. I believe my friend will agree with me that the Federal Reserve agent under the present set-up is the most important official connected with a Federal Reserve bank and that this Federal Reserve agent can call up the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and get money printed, and so forth. Under this bill the Federal Reserve agent's title is changed to that of governor. Under existing law the Federal Reserve Board can appoint this individual, but under this proposed bill the Federal Reserve banks' directors will appoint him. Does not the gentleman think that should be changed, putting it back to where it is now, so that the Federal Reserve Board can appoint the man who will have charge of the Federal Reserve bank?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. It is not intended that the governor of the Federal Reserve bank shall be the Federal Reserve agent.

Mr. PATMAN. The Federal Reserve agent is abolished under this law; that is, the title of "Federal Reserve agent" is abolished.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I understand that, but it is not intended that the governor of the Federal Reserve bank shall take over the duties of the Federal Reserve agent.

Mr. PATMAN. Is the gentleman sure about that?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Oh, yes; I am absolutely certain about it.

Mr. PATMAN. Who is going to perform those duties?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. They can appoint anybody to do that; and let me tell the gentleman the history involved.

I started out by saying in my opening remarks that the banks had perverted the Federal Reserve System.

Mr. PATMAN. And I agree with the gentleman.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. All right. There is not a word in the Federal Reserve Act that provides for a governor of a Federal Reserve bank.

Mr. PATMAN. That is true; but listen——

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Just a minute. There is a provision that the Federal Reserve Board shall appoint a chairman of the board of each Federal Reserve bank. The banks simply went to work and they practically abolished the chairman of the board, who does have a place in the law, and appointed a governor themselves, without the slightest justification in the world for it.

Mr. PATMAN. It is a violation of the law, I agree.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Of course it is a violation of the law.

Mr. PATMAN. Then why should we condone it by enacting into law something that is absolutely wrong? We do, in this law, what the gentleman says the bank itself should not do.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. No; they can elect their own governor under this act, but he has to be approved by the Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. PATMAN. I understand that, but the banks will not submit a name that is not satisfactory to the banks and the Federal Reserve Board only has veto power, and, surely, the banks will select the one they want for that place and have charge of the matter.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I do not think so at all. As a matter of fact, I will say to the gentleman from Texas, while this legislation, of course, theoretically speaking, could be improved upon, if we are able to pass this bill through the House and through the Senate, in my opinion, it will be the greatest advance in economic legislation that has ever taken place in the history of the world.

Mr. PATMAN. I agree with my friend, but let me ask one other question about the open-market operations.

I thought the Federal Reserve Board, under this bill, would appoint the committee and control the open-market operations, but I notice from this report that the governors of these banks will appoint that committee, and the governors of the banks are selected by the directors.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. The gentleman is wrong about that. The Federal Reserve Board is the open-market committee, and they are only required to consult with the committee of five appointed by the banks themselves.

Mr. PATMAN. That is an advisory committee?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Certainly. [Applause.]

Mr. PATMAN. Well, that is all right.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. BURDICK].

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Chairman, the most important question that will ever come before this or any other Congress is a question that is involved in this bill. That question is, Shall the Government of the United States control the money and credit of the Government, or shall the private banking interests control the Government? While the present bill does not present the question squarely on all fours, yet, in discussing this bill, we cannot avoid discussing this real issue.

We can appropriate money in billion for relief, we can pass moratoriums, we can defer tax deeds, we can refinance every class in the United States; and yet, if we fail to restore this Government to the people who compose it; if we fail to take possession of our own money and our own credit; if we fail to say to private banking interests you must now surrender the stranglehold you now have on the people of this country in unconscionable interest rates, and withdrawn credit; if we fail to drive those private banking interests out of the control of the Government itself, we shall have failed in our duty to the American people.

Gentlemen of this House, this is not a political question. The power of private banking interests is not to be measured by party lines. The bond which through the years were formed by the association and combination of private banking interests is stronger than party; it is the strongest tie every developed on this continent. I have heretofore shown that in the great Northwest the people have been and now are at the mercy of an unscrupulous banking system, organized under the banner of the Northwest Bancorporation and the First Bank Stock Corporation. These two holding companies have gained control of the best financial institutions of Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Michigan, parts of Wisconsin and Iowa. With an investment of $1,000 the Northwest Bancorporation sold $50,000,000 in stock to the people of the Northwest, and through this spurious and worthless stock financed the purchase of the best banks in the States named. Not content with that, this institution, together with its criminal sister, the First Bank Stock Corporation, has gained control of every Government finance agency located in the Northwest for the relief of the people financially.

Today, in the Twin Cities, they control the Federal land bank, the intermediate credit bank, the Federal Reserve bank, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and every other Government institution intended to grant financial relief to the people. Who controls these institutions? Can the Democratic administration control them? Who does control them? The answer is that private banking interests are powerful enough to keep control. They gained control through the administrations of Harding, Coolidge, and Hoover, and the Democratic administration bureau chief keeps the same men in control.

We hear great alarms being sounded by the private bankers to this effect, "Don't let the banks be politically controlled." No; they would have you leave control where it is—in the hands of the "money power." Why do they want to control these institutions? Simply because they want to use them. I have shown in former speeches to the Congress how they are using the institutions of the Government for their own private interests.

When the Federal Reserve Act was introduced in Congress, it was intended and designed to break the power of the private bankers, who were able to create a "money panic" any time they desired one. I hold in my hand a copy of the original Federal Reserve Act, which I shall designate as exhibit 1; I hold in my other hand the act as it came from the committee of the private bankers of America, which I will designate as exhibit 2. Examining exhibit 2 you will notice the bill has many provisions which have been stricken out; you will also notice it has many new provisions written in in red ink. That was done by the private bankers. I now pick up the law as passed, known as the "Federal Reserve Act", which I will designate as exhibit 3. Now compare these documents. What law was passed? The law as introduced or the law the private bankers wrote? Look at exhibit 2—the private bankers' changed bill—and you will see that it is the act that was passed with very few minor changes.

This completes the argument and proof that the Federal Reserve Act intended to control the power of private bankers to initiate panics, was, after all, left in control of the very men against whom it was intended as a check. What other proof do we have—worlds of it—on the advisory council were 12 men, one appointed by each of the 12 Reserve banks. J. P. Morgan represented the New York district, district no. 2, and when the councilmen met in Washington in October 1914, J. P. Morgan was elected chairman of the advisory committee of the Federal Reserve System. In other words, the whole policy of the system was placed in the hands of the "private bankers" before a single bank was opened. It is, in fact, the same old private system operating under a semi-Government endorsement, to take away the curse of private control, which had become obnoxious to the American people.

Can this famed Federal Reserve System bring on panics? Decidedly yes. It did this very thing. The present depression in this country was precipitated by the Federal Reserve Board at the meeting in Washington on May 18, 1920. We were at peace with the world—there were no internal strikes or disorders. Everything was moving ahead orderly. This Board deliberately and criminally determined to put a stop to orderly business. The credit that had been extended they demanded to be paid. Credit was withdrawn, and in order to pay, our grain, our cotton, our corn, our tobacco, our lands were sacrificed. As soon as the great agricultural population were left moneyless, there ceased to be a buying factor in our national business. When this buying power was destroyed, the manufacturing centers lost their customers and, having lost an outlet for their goods, they were forced to shut their plants down, and it was then that the millions went out of employment. It should be self-evident that this Reserve System, when it was most needed, failed to function for the American people.

How does the system work? It is a private system. The Government does not own a dollar of the stock of the Federal Reserve banks. The Government makes nothing, and can make nothing, until such time as the banks are liquidated. The profits now go into buildings (capital investments), salaries, and reserves. The surplus and profits will not come into the Government control under the law until a bank is liquidated. Annually the member banks get their dividends. Salaries which are unconscionable are paid to officers.

But what do these banks get from the Government in return for actually nothing. They get the use of Government cash and Government credit for nothing and loan that money out, and 10 times that amount, and draw interest on the whole credit system. They also draw interest on the bonds placed with the Government as security for currency. The Federal Reserve Board has issued approximately $4,000,000,000 in Government currency for which the Government is paid no interest. What is behind this issue? Mostly the Government's own bonds, drawing interest at 3½ percent. The private system, therefore, collects the interest on the bonds deposited and on 10 times the amount of the cash received from the Government. This system buys the Government bonds and pays the Government how? They give the United States Government a credit on the banks' books, and the Government is permitted to draw checks on a fund created by the Government's own money and credit. The Government pays 3½-percent interest on its own money handed over to the private-bankers system to use.

It is comparatively simple to see this operation. Those who desire to continue this system always say, "Now, this money question is a very deep and complicated matter, and only a few men understand it." As a matter of fact, it is not deep, and it is not complicated, if we will only stop to dissect it and bring the inner contents to the light of day.

Mr. PATMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield.

Mr. PATMAN. There has been a great deal of talk about the Government in private business. Does not the gentleman think we should take the bankers out of Government business?

Mr. BURDICK. If we are to continue as the greatest nation in the world it should be done at once.

Is there any Member in the House who, with logic, can say that we should continue a system by which this Government pays interest on its own money and credit? Is there any just reason why the United States should not finance itself instead of financing the private banking racketeers of the country? Is there any reason why the private banking interests of the country should control the destiny of the American people? Is there any just reason why these private banking interests should control our Government? It would be a grand experiment to let the people have just one opportunity to operate their Government. There would not be such a demand that the Government be destroyed and a new one set up if we would give the people, for once, a chance to see how their own Government would work in their own hands. In my judgment, we have the best form of Government ever set up on this earth, and to destroy it would be to lose our fight for freedom for a thousand years. We know how powerful the money interests have become; we know they should not control this Government; we know we should control it; and the one and only way to control it is to drive those private interests, who control it financially, out of the councils of our Government.

When we say "establish a bank of the United States" immediately goes out the false statements that we tried that twice—once in 1790 and again in 1816. I submit that we never had a Bank of the United States. We had institutions called that, but the Government never owned or controlled the stock and never controlled the banks. In the first bank the capital stock was ten million and the Government subscribed two million, and the rest was private. In the second bank the capital stock was thirty-five million and seven million subscribed by the United States. The balance was private. In both cases private interest managed and controlled the banks. They were nothing more, or very little more, than our present Reserve System. We at least had some stock in them then. But those banks, managed by the "money crowd" started panics and manipulated stock sales and threatened the stability of the country's business. It took a great patriot like Andrew Jackson to smash their system and drive them out of control of the destiny of the American people. We can never pay to Andrew Jackson the tribute that is due him for smashing this system.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I do not understand the purport of the gentleman's argument. I understood the gentleman to be arguing for the Government to take over this system, and the thing that Andrew Jackson objected to was the Government control of the banking system. The gentleman is blowing hot and blowing cold.

Mr. BURDICK. So far as I am concerned, I am blowing hot. [Laughter.] The reason why Jackson drove the money changers out of the temple was because the speculators in the bank were destroying the credit structure of the Nation. Private interests owned and controlled the bank. The Government only had seven million of the thirty-five million stock.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Andrew Jackson objected to the Government controlling the banking situation.

Mr. BURDICK. I would like to conform to the gentleman's view, but I cannot change history. We need another Andrew Jackson now.

Mr. McFARLANE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. Yes.

Mr. McFARLANE. I think the gentleman is actually correct in his matter of history.

Mr. BURDICK. We need another Andrew Jackson now. We need to smash the Federal Reserve System. We need to build a bank of the United States, owned and all by the United States, operated by the United States for the people of the United States. Why should we bankrupt this Government paying interest on bonds of the Government, when we do not need bonds? Issue new money by the new bank under the power granted to Congress by the Constitution, pay off these bonds, and stop this contribution to private bankers that has actually bankrupted the Nation and everyone in it. Today we owe, public and private, over $290,000,000,000, and all of our property in existence is not worth 50 percent of what we owe. This annual interest charge is more than the combined income for agriculture and labor (1933–34).

Mr. FIESINGER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. FIESINGER. I understood the gentleman to say that one of the objectionable things the Federal Board did to the farmers in 1920 was when they contracted the currency.

Mr. BURDICK. Yes.

Mr. FIESINGER. What is there in this bill that would prevent a similar occurrence? Can the gentleman point it out specifically?

Mr. BURDICK. I think if the gentleman will reserve that question until I get through, the question will be answered. If I have time, I will answer it, but maybe I shall cover the question. I have no intention of trying to avoid the answer to any question that I can answer.

Mr. PATMAN. Is the gentleman supporting the bill as it is?

Mr. BURDICK. The same reply applies to the gentleman's question as to the question of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FIESINGER]. If the gentleman will wait a moment, he will see what I think of the bill.

Mr. PATMAN. Does the gentleman think it is a good step in the right direction—a good, long one?

Mr. BURDICK. Yes. I am satisfied that the Democratic administration is not powerful enough to remove the Coolidge-Hoover operators of the Government finance institutions. I am satisfied that the "private money group" of the Nation is now stronger than the Democratic administration and that the administration will have to sit idly by and see Republicans operate these institutions. The whole system must be smashed and the private banking interests driven out of the councils of this Government if this Government is to endure. As a patriotic American citizen, I believe in defending this country; I believe in driving its enemies out—and the greatest, the most deadly enemy this country has today is the private control of Government money and Government credit. Restore this power to the people; remove this unbearable interest burden which is making our citizens despondent; restore to Congress its power to issue money; and let us, in the name of Jefferson, Lincoln, and Jackson, restore this great Government to the people, where it belongs.

The present bill is a step in the right direction—it does not go far enough. But in the absence of an opportunity to vote for the immediate dissolution of the Federal Reserve System I will support the bill.

Mr. KENNEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURDICK. Yes.

Mr. KENNEY. The gentleman referred in his address to banks to be operated for the people by the Government. Would there be any objection on the gentleman's part to having the people themselves through their merchants operate the banks of the country? I might say in that connection that in Italy the banks are governmentally controlled, and in Germany we have the same thing, but, as I understand it, in France and England there are banks that are controlled not by the private bankers, as in this country, but by the people through their merchants. I wonder if the gentleman has considered these different phases of the situation?

Mr. BURDICK. I am in favor of any system whatever that will give the people a chance to run the finance business of the country. We have delayed that too long.

I ask unanimous consent to insert as a part of my remarks a table prepared by the Secretary of the Treasury showing just what money is in circulation, what kind of money, and the bonds and fractional currency.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the table will be incorporated as a part of the gentleman's remarks.

There was no objection.

The table I referred to, Mr. Chairman, is as follows:

Circulation statement of United States money, Oct. 31, 1933

Kind of money	Total amount	Money held in the Treasury					Money outside of the Treasury				Population of continental United States (estimated)
		Total	Amount held in trust against gold and silver certificates (and Treasury notes of 1890)	Reserve against United States notes (and Treasury notes of 1890)	Held for Federal Reserve banks and agents	All other money	Total	Held by Federal Reserve banks and agents [1]	In circulation [2]
									Amount	Per capita
Gold coin and bullion	[3] $4,323,136,335	$3,197,292,684	$1,177,069,999	$156,039,088	$1,787,342,966	$76,840,631	$1,125,843,651	$813,889,365	$311,954,286	$2.48
Gold certificates	[4] (1,177,069,999)						1,177,069,999	952,444,120	224,625,879	1.78
Standard silver dollars	540,007,398	506,961,702	478,260,122			28,701,580	33,045,696	4,511,932	28,533,764	.23
Silver certificates	[4] (477,063,498)						477,063,498	89,723,679	387,339,819	3.07
Treasury notes of 1890	[4] (1,196,624)						1,196,624		1,196,624	.01
Subsidiary silver	299,110,936	10,262,876				10,262,876	288,848,060	21,462,708	267,385,352	2.12
Minor coin	126,761,246	5,478,139				5,478,139	121,283,107	5,632,488	115,650,619	.92
United States notes	346,681,016	3,595,897				3,595,897	343,085,119	66,456,950	276,628,169	2.20
Federal Reserve notes	3,225,890,600	17,566,885				17,566,885	3,208,323,715	278,177,680	2,930,146,035	23.26
Federal Reserve bank notes	219,970,233	1,557,125				1,557,125	218,413,103	29,887,120	188,525,988	1.50
National-bank notes	961,548,135	21,305,383				21,305,383	940,242,752	37,626,144	902,616,608	7.16
Total Oct. 31, 1933	10,043,105,899	[5] 53,764,020,691	1,655,330,121	156,039,088	1,787,342,966	[6] 165,308,516	7,934,415,329	2,299,812,186	5,634,603,143	44.73	125,983,000
Comparative totals:
Sept. 30, 1933	10,024,117,386	[5] 3,761,497,337	1,657,060,825	156,039,088	1,783,383,616	165,013,808	7,919,680,874	2,269,766,758	5,649,914,116	44.87	125,911,000
Oct. 31, 1932	9,367,601,015	[5] 3,595,167,544	1,834,576,689	156,039,088	1,471,387,067	133,164,700	7,607,010,160	1,979,428,886	5,627,581,274	44.98	[7] 125,112,000
Oct. 31, 1920	8,479,620,824	[5] 2,436,864,530	718,674,378	152,979,026	1,212,360,791	352,850,336	6,761,430,672	1,063,216,060	5,698,214,612	53.21	107,096,005
Mar. 31, 1917	5,396,596,677	[5] 2,952,020,313	2,681,691,072	152,979,026		117,350,216	5,126,267,436	953,321,522	4,172,945,914	40.23	103,716,000
June 30, 1914	3,797,825,099	[5] 1,845,569,804	1,507,178,879	150,000,000		188,390,925	3,459,434,174		3,459,434,174	34.93	99,027,000
Jan. 1, 1879	1,007,084,483	[4] 212,420,402	21,602,640	100,000,000		90,817,762	816,266,721		816,266,721	16.92	48,231,000

[1] Includes money held by the Cuban agency of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta.

[2] The money in circulation includes any paper currency held outside the continental limits of the United States.

[3] Does not include gold bullion or foreign coin other than that held by the Treasury, Federal Reserve banks, and Federal Reserve agents. Gold held by Federal Reserve banks under earmark for foreign account is excluded, and gold held abroad for Federal Reserve banks is included.

[4] These amounts are not included in the total since the money held in trust against gold and silver certificates and Treasury notes of 1890 is included under gold coin and bullion and standard silver dollars, respectively.

[5] The amount of money held in trust against gold and silver certificates and Treasury notes of 1890 should be deducted from this total before combining it with total money outside of the Treasury to arrive at the stock of money in the United States.

[6] This total includes $37,312,767 gold deposited for the redemption of Federal Reserve notes ($1,315,640 in process of redemption), $39,074,679 lawful money deposited for the redemption of national bank notes ($21,234,387 in process of redemption, including notes chargeable to the retirement fund), $11,699,650 lawful money deposited for the redemption of Federal Reserve bank notes ($1,557,122 in process of redemption, including notes chargeable to the retirement fund); $1,350 lawful money deposited for the retirement of additional circulation (act of May 30, 1908), and $59,295,582 lawful money deposited as a reserve for Postal Savings deposits.

[7] Revised figures.

NOTE.—Gold certificates are secured dollar for dollar by gold held in the Treasury for their redemption; silver certificates are secured dollar for dollar by standard silver dollars held in the Treasury for their redemption; United States notes are secured by a gold reserve of $156,039,088 held in the Treasury. This reserve fund may also be used for the redemption of Treasury notes of 1890, which are also secured dollar for dollar by standard silver dollars held in the Treasury; these notes are being canceled and retired on receipt. Federal Reserve notes are obligations of the United States and a first lien on all the assets of the issuing Federal Reserve bank. Federal Reserve notes are secured by the deposit with Federal Reserve agents of a like amount of gold or of gold and such discounted or purchased paper as is eligible under the terms of the Federal Reserve Act, or, until Mar. 3, 1934, of direct obligations of the United States if so authorized by a majority vote of the Federal Reserve Board. Federal Reserve banks must maintain a gold reserve of at least 40 percent, including the gold redemption fund which must be deposited with the United States Treasurer, against Federal Reserve notes in actual circulation. Federal Reserve bank notes are secured by direct obligations of the United States or commercial paper, except where lawful money has been deposited with the Treasurer of the United States for their retirement. National-bank notes are secured by United States bonds except where lawful money has been deposited with the Treasurer of the United States for their retirement. A 5-percent fund is also maintained in lawful money with the Treasurer of the United States for the redemption of national-bank notes secured by Government bonds.

Mr. PATMAN. The statement the gentleman has presumes that all the money ever issued is outstanding and in circulation today?

Mr. BURDICK. Yes. It included all. Almost half a billion dollars has been sunk in the ocean, burned up in buildings, but still they say it is in circulation. If you need any of it, you have got to dive to the bottom of the ocean to get it.

Mr. PATMAN. I suppose the gentleman is aware that more than $262,000,000 of the old bills, the large bills, remain in circulation today?

Mr. BURDICK. Yes.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and Mr. O'CONNOR having assumed the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. WOODRUM, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 7617, and had come to no resolution thereon.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. ASHBROOK, for 2 days, on account of death in family.

THE FEDERAL LAND BANK OF ST. PAUL, MINN., UNDER THE INFLUENCE AND CONTROL OF OFFICERS FAVORABLE TO THE TWIN CITY BANK HOLDING COMPANIES, HAS BEEN MISMANAGED—A FULL INVESTIGATION SHOULD BE IMMEDIATELY MADE

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection?

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, on March 18 I set forth in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD the names of the present officers of the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul, including their political affiliation and prior banking record. In my speech before this House on March 14 I fully set forth the connection of the officers of the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul with the Twin City banks, operated under the holding companies known as the "Northwest Bancorporation" and the "First Bank Stock Corporation." In all of these speeches, covering the period from March 14 to March 20, inclusive, I presented proof of the fact that all Government set-ups intended for the financial relief of the Northwest were now, and had been from the very beginning, under the control of officers connected with or formerly connected with these holding companies.

I further showed that in many cases, and particularly in the case of the War Finance Corporation, these same men, who for years have directed the affairs of these Government finance agencies, used these agencies for the private benefit of the institutions with which they were or had been connected. At that time I did not have complete evidence of mismanagement. Since I delivered those speeches referred to, evidence of mismanagement has been trickling through to me from individuals now on the inside of those institutions but whose names I cannot divulge. Should I here publish the source of my information, two things would happen: First, I would get no further information; second, these individuals would be summarily dismissed from their present positions.

I had hoped that the Democratic administration would act upon the information which I have heretofore presented and that many of the officers in charge of these Government finance institutions would be removed. I had hoped that when I had shown, for example, that Roy A. Nelson, president of the Federal land bank in St. Paul, had formerly been associated with the Northwestern National Bank of Minneapolis, and the Northwest Bancorporation was a Republican and former receiver of the Southern Minnesota Joint Stock Land Bank, that the administration might see its way clear to change officers. Nothing of the sort happened, and, as far as I know, Roy A. Nelson is still the president of the Federal land bank.

The point has now been reached where I ask more than the removal of this officer—I now ask for an immediate investigation into the affairs of the bank to find out in just what way Nelson and his financial friends in the Twin Cities have personally profited by his conduct of the bank. That he has profited by his conduct of the bank, I now charge; but to what extent and to what extent others have become involved, I do not know. The following facts are certain:

At the time of Roy A. Nelson's appointment as president of the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul he was receiver of the Southern Minnesota Joint Stock Land Bank. His appointment as the bank president was approved by Henry Morgenthau, then Governor of the Farm Credit Administration. Morgenthau must have been fully aware of Nelson's former connection with the Twin Cities bank gang. But, of course, there are no political considerations among the "money fraternity." Nelson was satisfactory to the "money crowd" and evidently that satisfied Morgenthau, who was personally on the ground when the appointment was approved.

The Southern Minnesota Joint Stock Land Bank had, while a going concern, executed a bond issue and which issue evidently was sold to various persons in and around the Twin Cities. When this institution went into receivership, the bonds were reduced in value. Nelson and his financial friends bought up as many of these bonds as could be purchased and obtained them at a price as low as 7 cents on the dollar. While still owning these bonds, Nelson was appointed president of the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul.

The next move was to have Perry Johnson, formerly connected with the Minnesota Loan & Trust Co., dominated by the Northwestern National Bank of Minneapolis, named as assistant to Roy A. Nelson.

Nelson then appointed a special loan committee to handle applications coming in for loans on lands which were then held by the Southern Minnesota Joint-Stock Land Bank. Title was secured by foreclosure, and Nelson, as receiver, had been in charge of those lands.

This committee time after time approved loans on lands held by the joint-stock land bank in amounts in excess of the value of the lands offered as security, and such loans were actually made. Not only were these loans made, but the applications were signed by men who were at the time renters and never had made any claim to the lands until after the loans were approved.

As the money started coming in from these loans approved by Nelson on lands over which Nelson had been receiver and in which he was then interested by holding bonds against said defunct corporation, the value of the bonds increased. Nelson and his friends began selling their 7-cent bonds for as much as 28 to 35 cents, and at some stage of the proceedings the receiver of the joint-stock land bank declared a dividend of 35 percent. This information must have reached Washington, for the evidence discloses that Nelson sold all of his interests—that is, his visible interests—in the bonds of the joint-stock land bank.

I give here just a few of the cases indicating mismanagement. After being informed of the nature of this mismanagement, I had the matter fully investigated on my own accord, and from the report, which agrees with the records, I find the following facts:

A loan was made to one Amelsburg on 160 acres for the amount of $5,400. The land at the time the loan was approved was carried among the assets of the joint-stock land bank under a foreclosure for $4,850. At the time the loan was made Amelsburg was a renter on that farm. The loan was dated December 4, 1934, but the deed from the joint-stock land bank to Amelsburg was not executed until February 27, 1935. The consideration in this deed was $4,850 and taxes. It is evident that the loan on this land was approved by Nelson for the full if not more than the full value of the land.

Another loan was made under similar circumstances to another renter named Bahr for the sum of $8,200 on 480 acres of land in Stevens County. This land was owned by the joint-stock bank through foreclosure and carried with a value of $7,600. The applications for the loans were dated June 1, 1934. The loan was divided, as in the Amelsburg case, as follows: Land bank, $4,500; Commissioner's loan, $3,700. Bahr never received a deed from the joint-stock land bank until September 18, 1934.

Fred Seamans owned a farm 1 mile south of the two farms mentioned. He had lived on his land there for 40 years. This farm consisted of 160 acres, on which he had an indebtedness of $4,200. Seamans applied to the Federal land bank for a loan to save his home. He offered the same kind of security as that offered by the renter, Amelsburg, who had received a loan of $5,400. But the land bank refused to make any kind of loan to Mr. Seamans and as far as the record speaks Seamans has lost his land.

I have further cases, but these three examples will be sufficient to show that Nelson and his Federal land bank committee approved loans, and excessive loans, on land in which the joint-stock land bank was interested and whose stock Nelson and his friends bought, while a legitimate farmer and actual owner was turned away from the bank as an undesirable and was told that the Government could not aid him in his hour of distress.

As a part of this speech, I desire to attach the report which I have had checked with the records in support of the statements herein made.

There is no question, in my mind, but what the Farm Credit Administration has had some knowledge of this matter, but they have retained Nelson. They have full information now as to the personal use which the officers of that bank are making of a Government finance institution, intended and presumed to be an instrument through which farmers may save their homes. How much more proof will the Farm Credit Administration demand before they dismiss Nelson and cause a complete investigation to be made of the affairs of the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul. This information does not startle me in the least for I am convinced, beyond any reasonable doubt, that these Government finance agencies have not been cornered and controlled by the Twin City Bank gang for nothing. They have used them, they are using them, they will continue to use them for their own personal benefit and for the benefit of the institutions with which they are or have been connected. It is the same old story as is told by their operation of the War Finance Corporation, the Federal Reserve bank, or any other institution with which they have had any connection.

Just how long will the Democratic administration continue the deal? Is the "money crowd" so entrenched that no party can get rid of them? Are the bureau chiefs here at Washington a part of the same "money fraternity"? Is there a comradeship through the association of men in the high-standard banking profession that is strong enough to ride through all administrations, and defy Republicans and Democrats alike? These same men are the ones who shout in their newspapers, "You never want to let politics enter into the control of our finances." It would be a godsend to the American people if politics did enter and drive these conniving money changers out of the people's own institutions.

If neither major party has the power to eliminate these financial leeches from our Government-owned finance institutions, can either party complain if the mass of the American people repudiate both parties and go to the polls at the next election under a new banner? If the Democrats will render unselfish service to the American people—if they, with a golden opportunity, will only listen to petitions of the common people and make a stand with them against the selfish and money-mad money changers who have bored into Government institutions and who now exercise the power to issue money, which the Constitution reserves alone to Congress—they may expect the further support of the loyal American people. If the Democrats fail to do this, the Democratic Party will be repudiated as was the Hoover administration. The American people can see no ray of hope in turning to the Republican Party unless its leadership shows more progressive signs than it did when it refused to let the farmers in the convention at Kansas City. Mr. Speaker, let me venture this prediction: This fight to drive the money changers out and let the people in the Government is going on until we can honestly assert that this is a government of the people, by the people, and for the people. If neither old party is capable of leading the way, a new way will be found. You can dam up a stream, but you cannot stop its flow.

SOUTHWEST QUARTER OF SECTION 12, TOWNSHIP 125, RANGE 43, STEVENS COUNTY, MINN.

The Southern Minnesota Joint Stock Land Bank acquired title to this land by foreclosure of a mortgage given by Katherine Spooner Barrett. In 1928 the Southern Minnesota Joint Stock Land Bank leased the farm to Ben Amelsberg, the lease being on file in the register of deeds' office, Stevens County, Minn.

On June 1, 1933, a new lease between Roy Nelson, receiver of the Southern Minnesota Joint Stock Land Bank, and Ben Amelsberg was made covering the year 1933. Then on March 5, 1934, a new lease was made between the same parties for the 1934 season, ending October 15, 1934. Both of these leases are on file in the register of deeds office for Stevens County, Minn.

December 4, 1934, at 9 a. m. a mortgage executed by Benhart Amelsberg and wife to the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul, dated August 1, 1934, against the above-described land in the amount of $2,000 was recorded in book 70 of mortgages, on page 217, in the office of the register of deeds in and for Stevens County, Minn. This mortgage was rerecorded in book 71 of mortgages, on page 579.

On December 4, 1934, at 10 a. m. a mortgage executed by the Amelsbergs to the land-bank commissioner in the amount of $3,400 was recorded in book 71, on page 507, which mortgage was also rerecorded in book 71 of mortgages, on page 519.

The payments provided for in the $2,000 mortgage, running 36 years, are $60 and $93.05 for the final payment. In the commissioner mortgage there are 40 payments at $85 each.

February 27, 1935, at 9 a. m. the receiver's authority to sell, dated October 27, 1934, was recorded in book 33 of deeds on page 411. This authority authorizes E. J. Friede, receiver, to sell the southwest quarter of section 12, township 125, range 43, for the sum of $4,850. On the same day the receiver's deed was recorded in book 33 of deeds on page 412, the deed bearing date of November 2, 1934, from E. J. Friede to Bernhart Amelsberg for the sum of $4,850, subject to the 1934 taxes. It is very evident from this record that at the time Mr. Amelsberg made application for this loan he owned no interest whatsoever in the farm; was only a tenant. The only thing he had was the agreement and authorization on the part of the Federal Land Bank Commission to the receiver of the Southern Minnesota Joint Stock Land Bank to sell this farm for $4850, subject to the 1934 taxes, which become due in 1935.

It is also evident that a mortgage was made for considerably more than enough to pay the entire price the Southern Minnesota Joint Stock Land Bank was receiving for this farm. All of which was a violation of the act of Congress authorizing the making of farm loans and certainly contrary to the policies claimed by the officials of the St. Paul Land Bank.

SOUTHEAST QUARTER AND SOUTH HALF OF THE NORTHEAST QUARTER, SECTION 12, TOWNSHIP 125, RANGE 43, STEVENS COUNTY, MINN.

This land was also acquired by the Southern Minnesota Joint Stock Land Bank under foreclosure of a mortgage executed by Katherine Spooner Barrett. The records in the register of deeds office, Stevens County, Minn., show that February 21, 1933, Roy Nelson, as receiver of the Southern Minnesota Joint Stock Land Bank, leased this farm to Edward H. Bahr for the period beginning February 4, 1933, and ending October 15, 1933, and that on February 2, 1934, he again leased this land to Edward H. Bahr for the year beginning February 15, 1934, and ending October 15, 1934. Both leases being on file in the office of the register of deeds.

The records further show that on June 1, 1934, at 2 p. m. a mortgage signed by Edward H. Bahr and wife, running to the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul, dated June 1, 1934, in the amount of $4,500, running for a 36-year period, with semiannual payments of $135 and final payment of $209.51, was recorded in book 70 of mortgages on page 129. This mortgage was rerecorded on the 18th day of August 1934 at 10 a. m. in book 70 of mortgages on page 165.

The records further show that on June 16, 1934, at 3 p. m. a mortgage running to the land-bank commissioner, executed by the same parties, dated June 1, 1934, for the sum of $3,700, with 40 semiannual payments of $67.61, was recorded in book 71 of mortgages, on page 320, which mortgage was re-recorded in book 71 of mortgages, on page 354, on the 18th day of August 1934.

The records further show that on the 18th day of September 1934, at 9 a. m., receivers' authority to sell the above-described land for the sum of $7,600, subject to the 1934 taxes, dated June 30, 1934, was recorded in book 33 of deeds, on page 308, and that on the same date the receivers' deed to Edward H. Bahr, dated July 10, 1934, was recorded in book 33 of the deeds, on page 309, in the amount of $7,600, subject to the 1934 taxes.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED

A joint resolution of the Senate of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rules, referred as follows:

S. J. Res. 94. Joint resolution establishing a commission for the participation of the United States in the observance of the three hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Colony of Connecticut, authorizing an appropriation to be utilized in connection with such observance, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Library.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 56 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Wednesday, May 1, 1935, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES

(Wednesday, May 1, 10 a. m.)

Will continue hearings on bill (H. R. 7521) pertaining to merchant marine subsidy.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

314. Under clause 2 of rule XXIV a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, dated April 29, 1935, submitting a report, together with accompanying papers and illustrations, on a preliminary examination of Mokelumne River and its tributaries below Woodbridge, Calif., with a view to the control of floods, authorized by act of Congress approved January 31, 1931, was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to the Committee on Flood Control.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. JONES: Committee on Agriculture. H. R. 7713. A bill to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 808). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. JONES: Committee on Agriculture. H. R. 1419. A bill to provide for an investigation and report of losses resulting from the campaign for the eradication of the Mediterranean fruit fly by the Department of Agriculture; with amendment (Rept. No. 809). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

Under clause 2 of rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of the following bills, which were referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 1776) for the relief of Herluf F. J. Ravn; Committee on Claims discharged, and referred to the Committee on War Claims.

A bill (H. R. 7700) to reimburse the Soldiers Tubercular Sanitarium of Sulphur, Okla., for unauthorized emergency treatment and hospitalization of service-connected World War veterans given prior to July 1, 1930; Committee on Claims discharged, and referred to the Committee on War Claims.

A bill (H. R. 7753) granting an increase of pension to Addie L. Wright; Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 7722) for the relief of Robert Wolfe; Committee on Naval Affairs discharged, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. GAMBRILL: A bill (H. R. 7804) authorizing the George Washington-Wakefield Memorial Bridge, Inc., a corporation, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Potomac River at or near Dahlgren, Va.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. BUCHANAN: A bill (H. R. 7805) to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to make surveys of representative farm areas each year in each State for the purpose of obtaining and publishing information upon the economic condition of agriculture throughout the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. MASSINGALE: A bill (H. R. 7806) to extend the public-land laws of the United States to certain lands, consisting of islands, situated in the Red River in Oklahoma; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. RAMSAY: A bill (H. R. 7807) authorizing the Brookewell Bridge Co., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Ohio River at or near Wellsburg, W. Va.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. THOMASON: A bill (H. R. 7808) for the relief of certain military personnel; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LEMKE: A bill (H. R. 7809) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of certain bridges across the Red River between Moorhead, Minn., and Fargo, N. Dak.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. WOOD: A bill (H. R. 7810) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and all acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BLAND: A bill (H. R. 7811) to provide for compensation for overtime services of local inspectors of steam vessels, United States shipping commissioners and their deputies, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7812) to reduce the number and to increase the qualifications of supervising inspectors of vessels; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. DOBBINS: A bill (H. R. 7813) to amend the Revenue Act of 1932, by imposing an excise tax on molasses not produced in continental United States, to be used for distillation purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ENGLEBRIGHT: A bill (H. R. 7814) to authorize the Secretary of Commerce to grant to the State of California an easement over certain land of the United States in Tehama County, Calif., for highway purposes; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. VINSON of Georgia: Resolution (H. Res. 210) for the consideration of H. R. 6512; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. AMLIE: Resolution (H. Res. 211) directing the Secretary of Agriculture to furnish the House of Representatives with certain information concerning the administration of the cotton crop-reduction law; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. ENGEL: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 268) directing the President of the United States of America to proclaim October 11, 1935, General Pulaski's Memorial Day for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DISNEY: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 269) authorizing the President to invite the States of the Union and foreign countries to participate in the International Petroleum Exposition at Tulsa, Okla., to be held May 16 to May 23, 1936, inclusive; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. AMLIE: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 270) authorizing the appointment of a committee to investigate living and working conditions among share-tenants, share-croppers, and agricultural laborers; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. STEAGALL: Concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 20) authorizing the Committee on Banking and Currency of the House of Representatives to have printed for its use additional copies of the hearings on the Banking Act of 1935; to the Committee on Printing.

MEMORIALS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, memorials were presented and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Texas, regarding the appointment of a committee to study the cotton situation; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Illinois, urging Congress to reduce the Federal tax on beer; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, requesting funds to make a survey to determine the feasibility of bringing water from the north coast valleys of Molokai to the southerly side of the island for use on Hawaiian Homes Commission lands; to the Committee on the Territories.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, urging Congress to pass an enabling act authorizing the people of the Territory of Hawaii to form a constitution and State government to be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States; to the Committee on the Territories.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Florida, supporting Senate bill 212 and House bill 2066; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Florida, requesting the sum of $355,241.74 to reimburse Okaloosa County for the construction of roads and bridges within the boundaries of the Choctawhatchee National Forest; to the Committee on Roads.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Florida, regarding the navigability of the Ocklawaha River; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Florida, supporting Senate bill 1220; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of California, urging the inclusion of the Central Valley project in the national program of work relief; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Oklahoma, supporting the Frazier-Lemke loan-refinancing bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred, as follows:

By Mr. DALY: A bill (H. R. 7815) for the relief of Alex Taylor; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. EKWALL: A bill (H. R. 7816) for the relief of Joseph Michael Merz; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FERGUSON: A bill (H. R. 7817) granting a pension to Walter Connolly; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. FITZPATRICK: A bill (H. R. 7818) for the relief of Caroline M. Hyde; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. JOHNSON of West Virginia: A bill (H. R. 7819) for the relief of Walter C. Price and Joseph C. Lesage; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KEE: A bill (H. R. 7820) for the relief of the United Pocahontas Coal Co., Crumpler, W. Va.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: A bill (H. R. 7821) for the relief of the estate of Benjamin A. Pillsbury (William J. Pillsbury, executor); to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7822) for the relief of Lucretia Norris; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. LESINSKI: A bill (H. R. 7823) for the relief of Joseph Zebelian; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts: A bill (H. R. 7824) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to award a Distinguished Service Medal to John Moran; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. MERRITT of Connecticut: A bill (H. R. 7825) for the relief of Michael Stodolnik; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. MOTT: A bill (H. R. 7826) granting a pension to Marion Van Natta; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. O'BRIEN: A bill (H. R. 7827) for the relief of Isadore Lupu; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 7828) granting a pension to Nancy M. Pierce; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts: A bill (H. R. 7829) granting a pension to Hattie G. Badger; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SCHNEIDER: A bill (H. R. 7830) for the relief of Edwin Eliason; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SMITH of Virginia: A bill (H. R. 7831) authorizing the President to appoint Henry Beckwith Taliaferro, formerly an ensign, United States Navy, to his former rank as ensign, United States Navy; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. THOMASON: A bill (H. R. 7832) granting a pension to Anna Reynolds; to the Committee on Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

8012. By Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma: Petition headed by John Watkins, of Dunbar, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8013. Also, petition headed by Charles Lennox, of Coyle, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8014. Also, petition headed by Ollie Tuck, of Ringold, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8015. Also, petition headed by George Hopkins, of Idabel, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8016. Also, petition headed by J. I. Jarvis, of Kiowa, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8017. Also, petition headed by George Hynes, of Castle, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8018. Also, petition headed by M. B. Russell, of Altus, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8019. Also, petition headed by P. B. Burse, of Castle, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8020. Also, petition headed by John T. Blagg, of Millcreek, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8021. Also, petition headed by E. D. Roody, of Elmore City, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8022. Also, petition headed by A. R. Wilson, of Dewey, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8023. Also, petition headed by E. Washington, of Idabel, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8024. Also, petition headed by B. Nobles, of Nashoba, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the

Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8025. Also, petition headed by Gus Hankin, of Oktaha, Okla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8026. Also, petition headed by M. B. Dykes, of Brilliant, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8027. Also, petition headed by Ollie Shull, of Cloverdale, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8028. Also, petition headed by Howard Martin, of Brookhaven, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8029. Also, petition headed by H. J. Fluke, of Langdon, Kans., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8030. Also, petition headed by G. R. Pace, of Marietta, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8031. Also, petition headed by Hubert Robertson, of Conyers, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8032. Also, petition headed by L. Smith, of Conyers, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8033. Also, petition headed by Earnest Findley, of Dora, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8034. Also, petition headed by K. Hall, of East St. Louis, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8035. Also, petition headed by R. Barton, of Danville, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8036. Also, petition headed by George Higgins, of Russellville, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8037. Also, petition headed by A. Marshall, of Magnolia, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8038. Also, petition headed by K. Moses, of McComb, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8039. Also, petition headed by P. Sackelford, of Wiville, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8040. Also, petition headed by Luciano Rodrigez, of Penasco, N. Mex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8041. Also, petition headed by Manuel Romero, of Dixon, N. Mex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8042. Also, petition headed by D. Garcia, of Chilili, N. Mex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8043. Also, petition headed by N. Thomas, of Bristol, Va., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8044. Also, petition headed by S. W. Green, of Ellenboro, N. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8045. Also, petition headed by Solomon Perea, of Flagstaff, Ariz., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8046. Also, petition headed by Luis Martinez, of Vallecitos, N. Mex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8047. Also, petition headed by Ben Foster, of Vincent, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8048. Also, petition headed by D. Garrett, of Vincent, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8049. Also, petition headed by Willie Easton, of New Orleans, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8050. Also, petition headed by Monroe Mackey, of Formosa, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8051. Also, petition headed by Patrocinio G. Costillo, of Flagstaff, Ariz., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8052. Also, petition headed by G. R. Dutton, of Anniston, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8053. Also, petition headed by Joseph Watson, of Elva, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8054. Also, petition headed by William Mangum, of Magee, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8055. Also, petition headed by M. Ladner, of Poplarville, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8056. Also, petition headed by M. B. Bentt, of Houston, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8057. Also, petition headed by E. Smith, of Pensacola, Fla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8058. Also, petition headed by M. M. Miller, of Fair Bluff, N. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8059. Also, petition headed by Edward Wiggins, of North Little Rock, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8060. Also, petition headed by G. R. Cason, of Clewiston, Fla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8061. Also, petition headed by J. E. Lawrence, of Conroe, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8062. Also, petition headed by M. Barnett, of Atlanta, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8063. Also, petition headed by George Mullins, of Clanton, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 per month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8064. Also, petition headed by A. E. Hayes, of Cherryville, N. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 per month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8065. Also, petition headed by Henry Smith, of Church Hill, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 per month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8066. Also, petition headed by W. P. Cunningham, of Northport, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8067. Also, petition headed by E. Sensley, of New Orleans, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8068. Also, petition headed by R. C. Maxey, of New Albany, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8069. Also, petition headed by Willie Walton, of Spring Hill, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8070. Also, petition headed by M. Falk, of Drewry, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8071. Also, petition headed by M. McKinney, of Whiteville, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8072. Also, petition headed by Taylor Arnett, of Florence, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8073. Also, petition headed by W. R. Grissom, of Florence, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8074. Also, petition headed by J. W. Johnson, of Tamms, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8075. Also, petition headed by S. E. Curry, of Wheatcroft, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8076. Also, petition headed by Homer W. Ford, of Calvert City, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8077. Also, petition headed by C. C. Pool, of Plain Dealing, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8078. Also, petition headed by J. K. Kinney, of Wolf Lake, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8079. Also, petition headed by Willis Leek, of Melber, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8080. Also, petition headed by Will Longmire, of Indianola, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8081. Also, petition headed by M. Oliver, of Pelham, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8082. Also, petition headed by G. W. Reed, of Canton, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8083. Also, petition headed by F. Hurdle, of Vivian, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8084. Also, petition headed by A. J. Stewart, of Trinity, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8085. Also, petition headed by Dave Clark, of Arcadia, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8086. Also, petition headed by M. Davis, of Greenville, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8087. Also, petition headed by W. R. Vickery, of Greenville, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8088. Also, petition headed by Rev. G. W. Stovall, of Hamilton, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8089. Also, petition headed by Sam Underwood, of Bunney, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8090. Also, petition headed by W. M. Ford, of Guild, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8091. Also, petition headed by A. Thomas, of Greenwood, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8092. Also, petition headed by Ben Days, of St. Gabriel, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8093. Also, petition headed by A. Abernathy, of Leighton, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8094. Also, petition headed by George Catlett, of Hopkinsville, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8095. Also, petition headed by John H. Jones, of Osceola, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8096. Also, petition headed by M. Thomas, of Yazoo City, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8097. Also, petition headed by E. Richardson, of Solgohachia, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8098. Also, petition headed by L. B. Sims, of Lake Como, Miss., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROG-

ERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8099. Also, petition headed by F. M. Brazzell, of Kuttawa, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8100. Also, petition headed by John H. Smith, of Danville, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8101. Also, petition headed by A. Taylor, of Mobile, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8102. Also, petition headed by C. S. Andrews, of Cincinnati, Iowa, favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8103. Also, petition headed by L. U. Payne, of Alto, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8104. Also, petition headed by S. Thomas, of Louisville, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8105. Also, petition headed by Sam Woody, of Elbridge, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8106. Also, petition headed by Conrado Encinios, of Flagstaff, Ariz., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8107. Also, petition headed by Jackson Eagle, of Supply, N. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8108. Also, petition headed by Jackson Wirt, of Somerville, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8109. Also, petition headed by D. A. Hewett, of Supply, N. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8110. Also, petition headed by M. N. Egger, of Sulligent, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8111. Also, petition headed by J. B. Bradley, of Ringgold, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8112. Also, petition headed by B. T. Samuel, of Keatchie, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8113. Also, petition headed by E. Davis, of Hoopeston, Ill., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8114. Also, petition headed by J. W. Stones, of Vincent, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8115. Also, petition headed by A. Kidd, of Vincent, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8116. Also, petition headed by I. Hughes, of Columbiana, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8117. Also, petition headed by R. P. Payne, of Tuckerman, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8118. Also, petition headed by Perry Crowley, of Salitpa, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8119. Also, petition headed by Ben Holbert, of Baxter Springs, Kans., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8120. Also, petition headed by L. Meredith, of Baxter Springs, Kans., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8121. Also, petition headed by N. McDonald, of Union City, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8122. Also, petition headed by J. J. Crow, of Oxford, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8123. Also, petition headed by Edwin George Smith, of North Chattanooga, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8124. Also, petition headed by M. E. Price, of Rochelle, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8125. Also, petition headed by A. D. Guillotte, of Rochelle, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8126. Also, petition headed by P. Thompson, of Winfield, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8127. Also, petition headed by William Johnson, of Miccosukee, Fla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8128. Also, petition headed by J. V. Whitlock, of Commerce, Ga., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8129. Also, petition headed by Octave Morris, of New Orleans, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8130. Also, petition headed by M. J. Walker, of Jacksonville, Fla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8131. Also, petition headed by R. E. Hearn, of Winchester, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8132. Also, petition headed by H. C. Gregg, of Samantha, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8133. Also, petition headed by W. M. Arnold, of Sylacauga, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8134. Also, petition headed by Joseph Harris, of Waldo, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8135. Also, petition headed by Grant White, of Memphis, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROG-

ERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8136. Also, petition headed by S. J. Etheredge, of Town Creek, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8137. Also, petition headed by O. Prestley, of Asheville, N. C., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8138. Also, petition headed by C. C. Calloway, of Waverly, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8139. Also, petition headed by William Young, of Tenaha, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8140. Also, petition headed by N. Babcock, of Ottawa, Kans., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8141. Also, petition headed by M. Rickman, of Selmer, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8142. Also, petition headed by R. Green, of North Little Rock, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8143. Also, petition headed by Andy R. Bishop, of Phil Campbell, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8144. Also, petition headed by John Harris, of Snow Lake, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8145. Also, petition headed by Henry Hohnson, of Glenwood, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8146. Also, petition headed by J. J. Stancil, of Altoona, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8147. Also, petition headed by Harmon Smith, of Peach Orchard, Ark., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8148. Also, petition headed by E. Davis, of Caryville, Fla., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8149. Also, petition headed by Bill Jones, of Columbia, Tenn., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8150. Also, petition headed by B. B. Burge, of Mayfield, Ky., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8151. Also, petition headed by George Barber, of Mansfield, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8152. Also, petition headed by Butch Ward, of DeKalb, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8153. Also, petition headed by Clarence Turner, of Billingsley, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8154. Also, petition headed by J. D. Baker, of Nacogdoches, Tex., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8155. Also, petition headed by Charley White, of Maringouin, La., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8156. Also petition headed by D. Rush, of Jasper, Ala., favoring House bill 2856, by Congressman WILL ROGERS, the Pope plan for direct Federal old-age pensions of $30 to $50 a month; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8157. By Mr. ANDREW of Massachusetts: Petition of the German Methodist Episcopal Church, Lawrence, Mass., urging repeal of the cotton-processing tax; to the Committee on Agriculture.

8158. By Mr. BEITER: Petition of 783 members of the Erie County Farm Bureau, Buffalo, N. Y., urging favorable consideration of the Goldsborough amendment to the Banking Act of 1935; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

8159. By Mr. BOYLAN: Resolution, unanimously adopted at a meeting of the board of directors of the National Association of Manufacturers of New York City, urging that a joint commission be appointed by Congress to investigate oriental competition and its effect upon American industries; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8160. Also, resolution, adopted at the regular meeting of the Allied Printing Trades Council of Greater New York, representing 40,000 organized printing-trades workers in New York City, favoring the passage of House bill 7442, to prevent inferior substitute printing processes and to enlarge the field of employment, etc.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

8161. By Mr. CARTER of California: Memorial of the State of California, Senate Joint Resolution No. 14, petitioning the President and the Congress to include the Central Valley project in the national program of work relief; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

8162. By Mr. ENGLEBRIGHT: Petition of the Senate Legislative Department, State of California, Senate Joint Resolution No. 6, by Senator McGovern; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

8163. By Mr. FOCHT: Resolution of silk and rayon manufacturers, to extend the functions of the Cabinet committee appointed to study the cotton-textile industry to include a similar study of the problems existing in the silk- and rayon-textile industry; to the Committee on Agriculture.

8164. By Mr. JOHNSON of Texas: Petition of John O. Chumney, of Irene, and Clyde Tomlinson, secretary of Smith & Tomlinson, Hillsboro, Tex., opposing the Wagner labor bill (S. 1958); to the Committee on Labor.

8165. Also, petition of George A. Adams, of Bryan, Tex., favoring House bill 6452; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

8166. By Mr. KING: Petition of the Eighteenth Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, memorializing Congress to provide funds for making a survey to determine the feasibility of bringing water from the north coast valleys of Molokai to the southerly side of the island for use on Hawaiian Homes Commission lands; to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation.

8167. By Mr. KVALE: Petition of the Chamber of Commerce of Willmar, Minn., urging repeal of the long- and short-haul clause of the fourth section of the Interstate Commerce Act; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

8168. Also, petition of the Kiwanis Club of Morris, Minn., urging repeal of the long- and short-haul clause of the fourth section of the Interstate Commerce Act; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

8169. By Mr. LESINSKI: Petition of St. Joseph's Lodge, No. 1, S. C. U., Calumet, Mich., urging continuation of tariff on copper; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8170. Also, petition of the United Action Committee, composed of 21 Czech and Slovak Societies of Detroit, Mich., urging the support of the Lundeen workers' unemployment old-age and social-insurance bill (H. R. 2827); to the Committee on Labor.

8171. Also, resolution of Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, Gogebic Range Post, No. 1823, Ironwood, Mich., petitioning the President of the United States and Congress to authorize and appropriate sufficient moneys to build a Veterans' Administration hospital of 500-bed capacity in the Detroit area; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

8172. Also, resolution of Joint Council of Women's Auxiliaries, organization composed of women relatives of members of the trade unions in St. Louis, Mo., urging support of the Wagner-Connery labor relations bill and also the Black-Connery 30-hour-week bill; to the Committee on Labor.

8173. By Mr. MERRITT of New York: Petition of the Customs Tailoring Workers' Independent Union of New York, condemning the proposed sedition laws of the McCormack-Dickstein congressional committee; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

8174. Also, resolution passed by the Executive Council of the United States Cavalry Association, protesting against proposed legislation for Air Corps officers, before the Military Affairs Committee, as being unjust to officers of other arms and services, etc.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

8175. Also, resolution of the members of the board of the National Federation of Textiles, Inc., respectfully requesting that the President of the United States extend the functions of the Cabinet committee appointed to study the cotton-textile industry to include a similar study of the problems existing in the silk- and rayon-textile industry; to the Committee on Agriculture.

8176. By Mr. MILLARD: Petition of Ossining Aerie, No. 1545, Fraternal Order of Eagles, supporting the social-security bill (S. 1130); to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8177. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the Allied Printing Trades Council of Greater New York, concerning the Gray bill (H. R. 7442); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

8178. Also, petition of the New York Typographical Union, No. 6, New York City, concerning Senate bill 1629, providing for the regulation of transportation by motor carriers; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

8179. By Mr. RABAUT: Resolution of the Gogebic Range Post, No. 1823, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, of Ironwood, Mich., signed by Joseph Ebli, commander, and Leo Vigue, adjutant, petitioning the President of the United States and the Congress of the United States to authorize and appropriate sufficient money to build a Veterans' Administration hospital of 500-bed capacity in or near Detroit; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

8180. Also, resolution of St. Joseph's Lodge, No. 1, S. C. U., a fraternal society composed of copper miners, signed by John Somrack, president, Peter Pasich, secretary, and John Ilenick, treasurer, favoring the enactment of such legislation as will effectively prohibit the importation of foreign copper in the future; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8181. By Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts: Petition of the City Council of the City of Lowell, Mass., urging the elimination of the processing tax on textiles; to the Committee on Agriculture.

8182. By Mr. RUDD: Petition of Allied Printing Trades Council of Greater New York, concerning House bill 7442, introduced by Mr. GRAY of Pennsylvania; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

8183. Also, petition of the New York Typographical Union, No. 6, New York City, concerning Senate bill 1629, for the regulation of transportation by motor carriers; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

8184. Also, petition of the Transport Workers Union, New York City, concerning the Lundeen bill (H. R. 2827); to the Committee on Labor.

8185. By Mr. SADOWSKI: Petition of the United Action Committee, composed of 21 Czech and Slovak societies of Detroit, Mich., endorsing House bill 2827; to the Committee on Labor.

8186. By Mr. SHANLEY: Petition signed by Chairman P. Dunlay, of the United Spanish War Veterans; to the Committee on Pensions.

8187. Also, petition of the State of Connecticut, regarding United States Veterans' Hospital at Newington; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

8188. By Mr. SMITH of Connecticut: Resolution of the General Assembly of the State of Connecticut, urging Congress to appropriate the necessary funds for the completion of veterans' hospital at Newington; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

8189. By Mr. TREADWAY: Resolutions adopted by Celtic Social Club, of Holyoke, Mass., urging the issuance of a special commemorative postage stamp in honor of Commodore Barry and the designation of Barry Memorial Day; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

8190. By Mr. TRUAX: Petition of the Toledo Typographical Union, of Toledo, Ohio, by their secretary, Roy G. Woolford, requesting the support of House bill 7172, known as the "Mead substitute bill", and also the support of House bill 6990, which provides for a 40-hour week for all postal employees; to the Committee on Labor.

8191. Also, petition of the Toledo Typographical Union, of Toledo, Ohio, by their secretary, Roy G. Woolford, requesting the support of the Wagner labor-disputes bill; to the Committee on Labor.

8192. Also, petition of the Joint Council of Women's Auxiliaries of St. Louis, Mo., by their secretary, Mrs. R. E. McClanahan, requesting support of the Wagner-Connery labor-relations bill and the Black-Connery 30-hour-week bill; to the Committee on Labor.

8193. Also, petition of David H. March and numerous other citizens of Beverly Hills, Calif., requesting favorable action on House bill 6628, to provide employment for the blind; to the Committee on Labor.

8194. Also, petition of the United Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steam Fitters, Local No. 268, of St. Louis, Mo., by their secretary, G. A. Richards, requesting the passage of the Wagner-Connery labor-relations bill and the Black-Connery 30-hour-week bill, because they feel sure if these bills are passed they will be a great help in securing employment; to the Committee on Labor.

8195. By the SPEAKER: Petition of the Columbia Lodge, No. 85, I. B. P. O. E. W.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SENATE

WEDNESDAY, MAY 1, 1935

(Legislative day of Monday, Apr. 15, 1935)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. ROBINSON, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar days Monday, April 29, and Tuesday, April 30, 1935, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. ROBINSON. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Capper	Gore	McKellar
Ashurst	Caraway	Guffey	McNary
Austin	Carey	Hale	Minton
Bachman	Clark	Harrison	Moore
Bailey	Connally	Hastings	Murphy
Bankhead	Coolidge	Hatch	Murray
Barbour	Copeland	Hayden	Neely
Barkley	Costigan	Johnson	Norris
Bilbo	Couzens	Keyes	Nye
Black	Dickinson	King	O'Mahoney
Bone	Dieterich	La Follette	Overton
Borah	Donahey	Lewis	Pittman
Brown	Duffy	Logan	Pope
Bulkley	Fletcher	Lonergan	Radcliffe
Bulow	Frazier	Long	Robinson
Burke	Gerry	McAdoo	Russell
Byrd	Gibson	McCarran	Schall
Byrnes	Glass	McGill	Schwellenbach

Sheppard	Thomas, Okla.	Truman	Wagner
Shipstead	Thomas, Utah	Tydings	Walsh
Smith	Townsend	Vandenberg	Wheeler
Steiwer	Trammell	Van Nuys	White

Mr. LEWIS. I announce that the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MALONEY] is absent because of illness, and that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] and the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] are unavoidably detained from the Senate. I ask that this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK] is necessarily absent and that the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF] is absent in connection with a committee of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-eight Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of California, favoring the inclusion of the Central Valley project in the national program of work relief, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

(See joint resolution printed in full when presented by Mr. JOHNSON on Apr. 29, 1935, p. 6507, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.)

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the petition of Mrs. Sote Mitchell, of Otter Pond, Ky., praying for the enactment of old-age pension legislation, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also laid before the Senate the petition of W. A. Neilson, of Northampton, Mass., praying for an investigation of charges filed by the Women's Committee of Louisiana relative to the qualifications of the Senators from Louisiana [Mr. LONG and Mr. OVERTON], which was referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

He also laid before the Senate telegrams in the nature of petitions from the student body of Christiansburg Institute, of Christiansburg, Va., and sundry students of the West Virginia State College, of Institute, W. Va., praying for the enactment of the so-called "Costigan-Wagner antilynching bill", which were ordered to lie on the table.

REPORT OF THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

Mr. ASHURST, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (S. 317) to provide for the appointment of two additional judges of the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of California, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 561) thereon.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. TRUMAN:

A bill (S. 2720) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of the estate of C. D. Matthews; to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (S. 2721) granting a pension to Anna Hindman; and

A bill (S. 2722) granting a pension to Dixie Louise Shane (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. McGILL:

A bill (S. 2723) granting an increase of pension to Fanny Cunningham; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MINTON:

A bill (S. 2724) granting a pension to Charles F. Williams; and

A bill (S. 2725) granting a pension to Fannie R. Sperzel (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WHEELER:

A bill (S. 2726) to prevent cruelty to animals during their transportation in interstate commerce, and to repeal the act of Congress approved June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. 607; U. S. C. title 45, secs. 71–74; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

A bill (S. 2727) to authorize the acquisition of land for military purposes in Bexar County, Tex., for use as an addition to Kelly Field Military Reservation, and to settle certain claims in connection therewith; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma:

A bill (S. 2728) authorizing an appropriation for payment to the Sac and Fox Tribe of Indians in the State of Oklahoma; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. HATCH:

A bill (S. 2729) for the relief of Rhuea Pearce; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WHEELER:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 112) extending the effective period of the Emergency Railroad Transportation Act, 1933; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

WELFARE OF INDIANS OF OKLAHOMA—AMENDMENT

Mr. GORE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2047) to promote the general welfare of the Indians of the State of Oklahoma, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS—EUGENE J. PETTUS

On motion of Mr. WHEELER, it was—

Ordered, That the papers filed with the bill (S. 3207) for the relief of Eugene J. Pettus (73d Cong., 1st sess.) be withdrawn from the files of the Senate, no adverse report having been made thereon.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. HAYDEN. I submit the conference report on the Interior Department appropriation bill, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the conference report.

The Chief Clerk read the conference report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6223) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 18, 23, 43, 46, 48, 51, 53, 58, 60, 62, and 63.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 2, 4, 8, 9, 10, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 19, 20, 21, 22, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 39, 40, 41, 52, 54, 55, 56, 57, 59, 61, 64, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, and 71, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 6: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 6, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "$219,000, of which $50,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 7: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$65,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 11: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 11, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$471,910"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 12: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 12, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert: "$144,200"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 42: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 42, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$70,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 44: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 44, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$650,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 45: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 45, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$458,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 47: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 47, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed, insert: "$2,285,560"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 49: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 49, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$632,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 50: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 50, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed, insert: "$185,400"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 65: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 65, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed, insert: "$1,970,311"; and the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference report in disagreement amendments numbered 1, 3, 5, and 38.

CARL HAYDEN,
KENNETH MCKELLAR,
ELMER THOMAS,
FREDERICK STEIWER,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

EDWARD T. TAYLOR,
B. M. JACOBSEN,
JED JOHNSON,
M. A. ZIONCHECK,
J. G. SCRUGHAM,
W. P. LAMBERTSON,
R. B. WIGGLESWORTH,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. HAYDEN. I move that the report be agreed to; and later I will move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 5.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I should like to have the amendment read. I do not understand what "amendment numbered 5" is.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Arizona that the report be agreed to.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, before that is done, I should like to have the report read in connection with the amendments that were offered, and an explanation by the Senator from Arizona. As the conference report is read, I should like also to have read the part of the bill affected, so that we may know what change has been made.

The VICE PRESIDENT. In the opinion of the Chair that would have to be done by unanimous consent, because the conference report is in itself complete. If the Senator from Arizona desires to explain the situation to the Senator from Alabama, in the meantime, if the Senator from Alabama desires, the Chair will have the record examined.

Mr. BLACK. It is absolutely impossible for anyone hearing the conference report read to know what it is about. It is impossible to understand what it is about when the statement is simply read that in lieu of other matter there is inserted $65,000. I do not think any Senator can intelligently vote upon the conference report on any such statement as that.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Alabama asks to have read the portions of the bill with which the conference report proposes to deal, as the Chair understands?

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, it is quite evident that the simplest way to obtain the information with respect to the bill, if the Senator so desires, is to read the conference report which was submitted. I have just submitted it; it has not been printed; and for the moment I ask to withdraw the request for the consideration of the conference report.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The request is withdrawn.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE—ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its reading clerks, announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the enrolled bill (S. 408) to promote safety on the public highways of the District of Columbia by providing for the financial responsibility of owners and operators of motor vehicles for damages caused by motor vehicles on the public highways in the District of Columbia, to prescribe penalties for the violation of the provisions of this act, and for other purposes, and it was signed by the Vice President.

PREVENTION OF LYNCHING

The Senate resumed the consideration of the motion of Mr. COSTIGAN that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 24) to assure to persons within the jurisdiction of every State the equal protection of the laws by discouraging, preventing, and punishing the crime of lynching.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, yesterday when the recess was taken, I was inviting the attention of the Senate to the report made on this bill by the committee.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will my colleague yield at that point for a question?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to his colleague?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Certainly.

Mr. BLACK. Yesterday afternoon some questions were asked with reference to the report on the bill. I note there is a very material change in the measure as it was reported this year from the form in which it was reported last year. It, therefore, becomes important, in my judgment, to know how such change resulted and who drafted it. I say that with full recognition of the fact that frequently Senators who introduce a bill are not responsible for the complete draft of the bill. However, there is what I consider to be a vital change in the bill as it was reported this year from the form in which it was reported last year, a change which, if it had not been made, would not have made necessary a great many of the criticisms which have been brought out on the floor of the Senate.

If the Senator would pursue the inquiry further I should be glad if he would ascertain, if possible, who drafted the original bill outside of the Senate, whether or not it was anyone who worked for a salary or wages for any association or group of any kind, whether or not the person who works for such salary or wages solicits funds from various people over the Nation to carry on his work and to pay his salary or wages.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, I think the inquiry of my colleague is highly important. In fact, there are two features of the matter as to which I believe the Senate should be enlightened—not only the inquiry presented by my colleague but the question of who prepared the committee report. I think we ought to have information as to both of them. There are statements contained in the committee report which, to my mind, indicate clearly that the committee did not prepare it, and it is doubtful if any member of the committee prepared it. I want to find out, and I think it is proper and appropriate that other Members of the Senate should know, who, aside from the regularly elected Members of the Senate and those constituting the committee which considered the bill, if anybody—I do not charge that anybody did, but I want to find out—who on the outside, as intimated in the question of my colleague, has been working on the program relating to this bill.

I now ask the Senator from Colorado—I do not do it in an objectionable sense, as I am sure he understands—who wrote the bill?

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, answering the earlier question first, may I say that last evening I communicated with the chairman of the subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee, advising him that during his absence from the floor a question had arisen as to the report of the subcommittee. He stated that he himself would be glad to respond on that question.

With respect to the drafting of the bill, at this moment it should suffice, in my judgment, to say to the able and courteous Senator from Alabama that to my best recollection original steps were taken by me on the framing of the measure, starting with the consideration of past efforts to draft and have enacted Federal antilynching legislation. My recollection is that my first conference on the subject was had with the head of the Legislative Reference Bureau, Mr. Boots, who is well known to many Members of the Senate as an able and efficient legislative draftsman.

My recollection also is that a year ago last January, on my return to Washington for the opening of the session of Congress which began at that time, I conferred with Mr. Boots on some of the earlier drafts and upon certain possible amendments which would strengthen those drafts, in view of recent tragic California events with which the people of the Nation are familiar; and that subsequently from time to time I conferred with the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], with various members of the bar, and with representatives of different groups of citizens who have been actively interested in this type of legislation for many years.

Accordingly a particular measure was jointly presented to the Senate by the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] and myself and was referred to the Judiciary Committee. Since that time on various occasions I have conferred with many citizens and with Members of this body with respect to the desirability of further amending, more certainly to assure the most effective constitutional safeguards for the bill which was originally introduced.

I trust that this statement in a broad way will bring to the attention of the Senator from Alabama and to his colleague from the same State desired information with reference to the bill.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will my colleague yield further?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. I note the statement "conference with various groups of citizens." I believe the Senate would be interested in having information, and I am sure the Senator from Colorado would not object to giving information, as to whether conferences with those groups were with employees of those groups who depend for their salary or their wages upon collections made from various groups of citizens. I am particularly interested to know whether or not a man by the name of White, whose first name I do not know, is associated with any group of citizens and conferred in connection with this bill and aided in drafting it.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, answering the last question of the senior Senator from Alabama, I wish to say that I have conferred on numerous occasions with Mr. Walter White, the unusually capable secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. The organization for which Mr. White acts as secretary has an office at No. 69 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Its present president, according to my information, is a prominent New York lawyer, Mr. J. E. Spingarn, of the New York Bar. The treasurer is Mary White Ovington. Mr. Roy Wilkins is assistant secretary.

The board of directors of this association includes many prominent Americans. One of them is a distinguished Member of the United States Senate, Hon. ARTHUR CAPPER, the senior Senator from Kansas. Other members of the board are the following:

Mr. Carl Murphy, of Baltimore; Mr. Joseph Prince Loud, of Boston; Prof. Manley O. Hudson, the eminent authority on international law, a member of the Harvard law faculty, residing at Cambridge, Mass.; Mr. T. G. Nutter, of Charleston, W. Va.; Miss Jane Addams, the noted well-loved humanitarian who is being honored in the city of Washington this week for disinterested services which have brought her national and international fame; Mr. Clarence Darrow, the widely known attorney, who, as is true of Miss Addams, is a resident of Chicago; Hon. Harry E. Davis, of Cleveland; Hon. Ira W. Jayne, of Detroit; Hon. Frank Murphy, Governor General of the Philippine Islands, former mayor of Detroit; the famous American writer, my long-time friend, William Allen White of Emporia, Kans.

The following board members are residents of New York City:

Lillian A. Alexander; Rev. Hutchens C. Bishop; Marion Cuthbert; Hubert T. Delany; Rachel Davis Du Bois; Lewis S. Gannett; Rev. John Haynes Holmes, one of the outstanding pulpit orators and divines of this generation; Rev. William Lloyd Imes; James Weldon Johnson; Hon. Herbert H. Lehman, the present able Democratic Governor of the State of New York; James Marshall; Lucy R. Mason; Mary White Ovington; Rev. A. Clayton Powell; Arthur B. Spingarn; J. E. Spingarn, president of the association as already stated; Charles H. Studin; Hon. Charles E. Toney; William English Walling, author; Frances Williams; and Dr. Louis T. Wright.

At Northampton, Mass., resides another member, Dr. William Allen Neilson, nationally known president of Smith College, one of this country's famous women's universities.

At Philadelphia resides Isadore Martin, another member of the board of directors.

In the city of Washington are the following directors: I have already given the name of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. CAPPER], a resident of Topeka, Kans. In the city of Washington are Sterling A. Brown; Nannie H. Burroughs; Judge James A. Cobb, this city's present judge of the municipal court; Abram L. Harris; and another writer of distinction, Charles Edward Russell.

With various members of this board of directors I have conferred from time to time on the proposed legislation. I have also discussed it with numerous journalists and authors, such as the justly noted former editor and owner of the New York Nation, Oswald Garrison Villard.

If the Senator from Alabama desires me to particularize further, I shall be glad to do so.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will my colleague yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes.

Mr. BLACK. Then I understand from the statement of the Senator from Colorado that he did confer on the original draft of this bill, before it was drafted, with Mr. Walter White, and that he did aid in drafting the measure.

Mr. COSTIGAN. My recollection is that Mr. White did not personally assist in drafting the measure. From time to time, however, after I became interested in this type of legislation, I referred to him legal and constitutional questions which appeared to me to call for discussion, and asked him to confer with members of the association which he represents with a view to advice as to the best methods of fortifying further the legal and constitutional features of the measure.

Mr. BLACK. Did he have anything to do with this change in the bill from the bill which was reported last year?

Mr. COSTIGAN. So far as I recall, he did not.

Mr. BLACK. May I ask if Mr. Charles H. Tuttle aided in drawing the bill?

Mr. COSTIGAN. I have never conferred with Mr. Tuttle in person. It might assist me if the Senator will be good enough to read into the RECORD, or give to the Senate, the particular language about which he is now expressing concern.

Mr. BLACK. It is the part of the first paragraph to which I referred in my remarks. There is a very great change. May I ask if the Senator knows whether or not Mr. Tuttle is connected with any law firm in New York which represents any of the Morgan interests, any of the interests of the National City Bank, or the Chase National Bank, through associates, affiliates, or subsidiaries?

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, I have no knowledge on that subject; but in making that answer, I do not wish to be understood as suggesting that such information is not easily available. I assume it would be available through Who's Who, and certainly upon inquiry addressed to Mr. Tuttle.

Mr. BLACK. I may state to the Senator that I have Who's Who, and I could not find Mr. Tuttle in it.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Then, of course, there are other methods. I am sure Mr. Tuttle, if he is connected with any of the business firms to which the able Senator from Alabama refers, would be glad himself to provide the information.

Mr. BLACK. I have Martindale's Law Directory, which gives the name of his firm; but may I ask if the Senator knows whether or not he did have anything to do with, and was paid anything by the association for, writing the brief or for aiding in any changes in the bill?

Mr. COSTIGAN. The Senator refers to Mr. Tuttle?

Mr. BLACK. I refer now to Mr. Tuttle.

Mr. COSTIGAN. I have no information on that subject. As I have stated to the Senator from Alabama, I have never conferred with Mr. Tuttle, and the introduction of his brief at the hearing of the committee and in the report of the committee was independently brought about so far as I am concerned. It was, of course, in harmony with several briefs which at prior public hearings were incorporated in the record, in support of the constitutionality of the proposed legislation. My information about Mr. Tuttle has come through biographical articles referring to him, and I have been informed that he is an exceptionally prominent member of the New York bar.

Mr. BLACK. Is he the same man who ran for Governor on the Republican ticket and was defeated?

Mr. COSTIGAN. That fact, if a fact, is unknown to me. I have, I believe, heard it stated that he was at one time a district attorney in the State of New York.

Mr. BLACK. The Senator asked as to the differences between this bill and the other, which I think is a very pertinent question. I have before me now Senate bill 1978, which was reported January 4, 1934. Paragraph 1 of that bill is composed of eight lines. Paragraph 1 of Senate bill 24 of this session is composed of 12 lines.

Mr. COSTIGAN. I may say to the able Senator that of course I am familiar with the differences in the two measures.

Mr. BLACK. I thought the Senator desired me to place in the RECORD a statement of the differences.

Mr. COSTIGAN. What I requested was specific reference to the newly inserted language with which the learned Senator from Alabama is most concerned.

Mr. BLACK. The chief part of it is in paragraph 1. In the bill as originally reported last year it provided that a mob should mean—

An assemblage composed of three or more persons acting in concert, without authority of law, to kill or injure any person in the custody of any peace officer, with the purpose or consequence of depriving such person of due process of law or the equal protection of the laws.

The present bill is written in such a way, in my judgment, as completely to change the effect of that measure.

It is my judgment that the first bill, as written, was limited, as appeared therein, to what might generally be known as a "lynching." This bill, however, goes further and says—

Without authority of law, for the purpose of killing or injuring any person in the custody of any peace officer or suspected of, charged with, or convicted of the commission of any crime, with the purpose or consequence of preventing the apprehension and/or trial and/or punishment by law of such person—or otherwise.

Now note—

Which, as I see it, is wholly disconnected from the apprehension of the criminal.

Mr. COSTIGAN. None the less, it is a very familiar expression in statutory language.

Mr. BLACK. Certainly—

Or otherwise of depriving such person of due process of law or the equal protection of the laws.

I found in the brief of Mr. Tuttle that he carefully distinguished between these two features. As I tried to present the matter a few days ago, it is my judgment that that particular clause completely removes the scope and effect of this bill from injuries or assaults on individuals who have committed a crime or who are thought to have committed a crime, and brings within its protection corporations, which are not individuals, for injuries to their property; and not only corporations for injuries to their property, but persons who are deprived of due process of law, even though they are not accused of any crime, and have never been charged with any crime.

It is my judgment that that change, in connection with other changes in the bill, wrought an entirely different bill, and that is the reason why I was making the inquiry as to Mr. Tuttle, whom I do not know.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Perhaps I should add, Mr. President, with the courteous consent of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], that at no time have I met with any selected group of representatives of any particular interest, such, for example, as the directors of this association, speaking officially for such a group.

The original basis of this proposed legislation was, of course, found in earlier legislative attempts to deal with what we consider a national evil. From time to time it has been necessary to examine certain legal doubts which are unavoidable, I think, for any careful lawyer or legislator in drafting any equally important legislation. As these doubts developed I, myself, made amendments, and I conferred with such trained lawyers as the legislative draftsmen, who are frequently here in the Senate conferring with Senators.

Also, because of the special concern of members of their race over this sort of legislation, I took occasion to confer with Judge Cobb, who has devoted much time and thought to American constitutional principles and precedents as they apply to this sort of enactment, and with Dean Houston, who is at the head of the Howard University Law School in this city.

I should say that the persons whom I have just named are those who have most actively conferred with me about the particular language in the present draft.

Mr. BLACK. May I ask the Senator whether he recalls now who is responsible for or who suggested or brought about the change between paragraph 1 in last year's bill and paragraph 1 in this year's bill?

Mr. COSTIGAN. At this moment I am unable to answer specifically, but in going over the bill from time to time different questions have been raised, and the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] and I have referred them to invite expressions of views to the persons named, with a view to getting their best judgment on them.

Since this debate began, as an illustration, one question discussed has been what, if any, definition is to be given to lynching. That question had earlier consideration by the Senator from New York and myself. I have recently again examined the question whether there is any necessity for the incorporation of a special definition of lynching in this particular measure. Questions of that sort are necessarily from time to time raised and discussed among those who are interested in this type of legislation.

Mr. BLACK. I have noted that Mr. Tuttle filed a brief on the old bill, and filed a brief on this bill. I am really interested in obtaining information as to the evolution of section 1, because I think a vital change has been made, though I may be wrong. I wonder whether there is any way by which we could ascertain who drafted the change in paragraph 1.

Mr. COSTIGAN. My best judgment on that subject would be that this relates to one of the questions which was raised in the minds of some of us, and which was answered by this particular language, that I made some draft upon the subject, and that others made drafts, and that I took these various drafts, and they were finally merged.

Mr. BLACK. Does the Senator remember who else made a draft of that?

Mr. COSTIGAN. I do not, but I do know that from time to time I have conferred, directly or indirectly, with Mr. Spingarn, who was a witness at one of the hearings here, and with whom some weeks ago I discussed the general subject in New York City.

Mr. BLACK. I understand that from time to time the matter was referred to the secretary of the association, and he would come back with suggestions.

Mr. COSTIGAN. He was aware of this general situation; also, as a matter of fact, from time to time letters have been received from people particularly interested in civil liberties and constitutional questions offering suggestions.

For example, the other day one suggestion which reached me was that the title of the bill should be amended. It is my judgment, after close scrutiny of our Federal practice, that the objection rose from a consideration of State constitutional provisions, which sometimes limit the body of a bill to the title, a rule which does not control in our Federal practice.

Mr. BLACK. The Senator recognizes, then—and that is one of the points I debated a few days ago—that if our Constitution provided that we must give notice of all of the contents of a bill it would be absolutely essential to change the title of this bill?

Mr. COSTIGAN. For State legislative purposes, but not for Federal.

Mr. BLACK. The only reason why it would be necessary is, as I understand it, that State constitutions in the main provide that accurate notice must be given in the title of all the subjects covered, and the title of this bill does not do that.

Mr. COSTIGAN. State constitutions frequently provide that a particular bill shall embrace only one subject, which shall be clearly expressed in the title, and I assume the able Senator from Alabama, who is a skilled member of the bar, is referring to that type of provision in State constitutions. My understanding is that that rule does not hold with respect to Federal legislation.

Mr. BLACK. I thank the Senator very much.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the junior Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] yield to me to ask a question of the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. I was very much interested in the statements of the Senator from Colorado as to the conferences he had had with various persons with reference to the constitutionality of the bill. I am wondering whether the Senator ascertained, in his investigation, that in 1922 a bill practically on all fours with the bill we are discussing was before the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, and that informally the Senate Committee on the Judiciary came to the conclusion, unanimously with the exception of Senator Sterling, of South Dakota, who reserved the right to determine the question later, that the bill was unconstitutional and that the Congress had no power to enact it.

My authority for making this statement is a newspaper report in the Washington Post which I read some 2 or 3 weeks ago, an article written by Mr. Elliott Thurston, a very capable and a very reliable correspondent, the Washington Post being, of course, a well-known Republican newspaper.

Mr. Thurston in this article made the explicit statement that in 1922, when a bill similar to this one was before the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, that committee came to the informal conclusion, with the exception of the vote of Senator Sterling, that the bill was absolutely unconstitutional and without the jurisdiction of the Congress, but that subsequently, because of some political pressure from sources very close to the parties named by the Senator from Colorado as those with whom he has been conferring, the committee did make some sort of a report to the Senate on the measure, actuated purely by political pressure.

I do not make these statements of my own knowledge; I make them on the authority of a newspaper article signed by Mr. Elliot Thurston, of the Washington Post, of this city.

I wonder whether the Senator discovered that fact in his investigations of the constitutionality of the proposed measure, and I am wondering whether he conferred with any of those who were members of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate at the time referred to in the article, and got their counsel and their advice, rather than the advice of the municipal judge in Washington here—Judge Cobb.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, if the Senator from Alabama will permit me to answer, the facts as stated by the able Senator from Texas are not known to me. They may or may not be true. I do know Mr. Thurston; I know that he is a correspondent of ability and character.

Whether those facts be true or not, they would not affect my judgment with respect to the constitutionality of the measure we are discussing, because that has been formed upon a full and prolonged consideration, whether I am right or wrong, of the authorities and the proposed statutory language.

I notice that the eminent senior Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] is standing, and I wish to say that I am aware that in earlier discussions of this question the Senator from Idaho indicated that he entertained doubts about the constitutionality of the proposed type of legislation, as he has entertained doubts in regard to many congressional enactments. I understand that on one occasion a prominent member of the bar submitted to the Senator from Idaho an elaborate brief in which he dealt with his views of the constitutional questions here involved.

Also, in the course of my investigation of this subject I, of course, carefully examined a report of a former Judiciary Committee of the Senate, filed in the Senate on the so-called "Dyer bill" by Senator Shortridge, of California, who is no longer a Member of this body. In that report, as in many briefs submitted on this question, strong arguments in behalf of the constitutionality of this type of legislation were carefully presented.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the question has been raised as to what took place when the Dyer antilynching bill was before the Congress. In the interest of correct statement I wish to say that when the Dyer antilynching bill passed the House it came over to the Senate, of course, for consideration. At that time former Senator Nelson, of Minnesota, was Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary. He asked me to take the chairmanship of the subcommittee which was to pass upon the question of the constitutionality of the bill. I expressed reluctance to do so for the reason that I had followed the debate in the House very closely, and advised him that I had reached a definite conclusion, and that my mind was not really open upon the subject. He urged, nevertheless, that I take the chairmanship of the subcommittee, and I did so.

We spent some time in going over the question, studying it with care. Former Senator Sterling was on the subcommittee with me. I have forgotten who the other member of the subcommittee was. We made a report to the full committee. It was an oral report. It consisted of discussion and reference to opinions and decisions. There was a full consideration in the committee. The opinion of the committee was that the bill was unconstitutional.

Former Senator Sterling reserved the right, however, to vote for the measure if it came to the floor, contending that he thought it ought to go to the Supreme Court for a definite decision on the specific question presented by that bill; that while he himself did not contend that it was constitutional, he thought there was sufficient doubt in regard to it to justify the matter going to the Supreme Court and having the question settled once and for all. But the matter was submitted to the Judiciary Committee, and the Judiciary Committee overwhelmingly, and as I recall, unanimously, with the exception of two or three who made certain reservations—that is, reserving the right to express themselves upon the floor—was of the opinion that the bill was unconstitutional.

The Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] has referred to some parliamentary maneuvers thereafter. I do not know that they are greatly important, but they would seem to have some importance due to the fact that notwithstanding the committee was practically unanimously opposed to the measure on the ground of the constitutional principle, that nevertheless it was afterward reported out. It was reported out. Six members of the committee changed their positions, but stated that they were changing their positions to enable the matter to come to the floor for full discussion, that they had not changed their opinion, however, as to the unconstitutionality of the measure, but in view of the situation it was thought proper to bring it to the floor for full consideration. That is the reason why notwithstanding the fact that the committee thought the bill was unconstitutional, nevertheless, the committee reported it out.

We all know what happened. It was before the Senate for 2 or 3 days on two or three occasions, and then the leader of the Republicans, the majority leader, withdrew the measure from further consideration. The move after the first vote of the committee on the constitutionality of the measure was purely political.

I do not, of course, recall with complete accuracy as to how the vote stood in the committee. I know that it was overwhelmingly of the opinion that the measure was unconstitutional. My remembrance or recollection is that there were only two or three Members, at most, who reserved any views to be expressed upon the floor. I, myself, had no doubt the bill was not constitutional. I never have had since.

I believe in the objective which these able Senators have in view. I believe in what they would like to to accomplish. I have a profound respect for the high motives which moved them. No one can believe in lynching. It is the most cowardly and brutal crime of which human beings can be guilty. But, as to the constitutional question, I have not changed my mind in regard to it. Neither am I convinced that it is a sound policy to remove responsibility from the different local governments of the communities for the enforcement of law. In the long run that results in breaking down all sense of duty upon the part of the citizen.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Alabama yield to me so that I may answer the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. COSTIGAN. May I ask the Senator from Idaho, whose views on constitutional questions always command closest attention and impress Members of this body, whether it was at about that time that he received a brief from Mr. Herbert K. Stockton, an attorney, of New York City, in which Mr. Stockton at some length, and with the substantial citation of pertinent authorities, endeavored to persuade the able Senator from Idaho that this sort of legislation is constitutional? The brief is dated June 5, 1922.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I could not recall the name of the individual to whom the Senator refers. I do know that we received briefs, and I am perfectly sure that there were no authorities cited which were not examined by the committee. We were not so crowded for time in those days as we are now, and we took ample time to study the question.

As I said a moment ago, I entered upon the investigation really with the view that the measure was unconstitutional, but that fact rather imposed upon me the necessity of a closer reexamination. We had on the Committee on the Judiciary at that time such men as ex-Senator Walsh, of Montana, and I remember very distinctly the views which he expressed in the full committee. The matter was thoroughly canvassed and thoroughly discussed.

So far as the Dyer antilynching bill was concerned there was practically no difference of opinion in regard to it. I cannot recall the particular name which the Senator from Colorado mentioned. I would not want to be regarded as speaking as to all details.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, no one in this body respects more consistently and highly than I do the eloquence and authority of the Senator from Idaho, but I do venture to suggest that at times it has been the experience of the Senator from Idaho to find the constitutionality of measures he has challenged before they were passed by the Congress subsequently upheld by the Supreme Court of the United States. In making this remark I have particularly in mind at the instant the views expressed by him with great ability some years ago with respect to the so-called "flexible provisions" of the tariff law of 1922.

I know that at different times in the past those who are interested in putting an end, nationally, to the disgraceful evil of lynching have voiced the hope, which I am sure millions of Americans echo now, that the Senator from Idaho will be among those who will consent to the submission for constitutional determination of this great legislative issue to the highest court in the land.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. I should be very glad to have the Supreme Court pass upon the question if I knew of any way to do it without stultifying my own convictions as to what the law means. To my mind, if this kind of bill can be passed and sustained by the Supreme Court we have utterly annihilated all State sovereignty; we have broken down State lines completely. I can see no escape from that conclusion.

I have no desire to be drawn into a discussion of the constitutional question, but let me say to the able Senator from Colorado, in whose great human sympathies I thoroughly believe, that he has an absolute precedent for this bill in the National Recovery Administration, which deals with intrastate business, and he has a complete precedent in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, which deals with intrastate business. If you can go into the State of Idaho and take charge of a local business and direct that business man as to how it shall be run, and take the man who does not run it according to the rule passed by the Federal Government, and put him in jail, you can go into Alabama and take the sheriff by the shirt collar and make him abide by the rules which a Federal Congress has also laid down. If you can punish me under Federal law for not running my grocery store according to a rule or regulation made by some Federal department, you can punish the officers and citizens of another State for not conducting themselves according to some Federal law in the matter of protecting life.

I have been opposed to those propositions consistently, because I know they strike at the very foundation of State sovereignty. I believe we can only have a great Federal Union by having great individual sovereign States, and that when the latter are destroyed we may have a republic in name, but we will no longer have a republic in fact.

Twenty years ago I declared:

> A government from Washington by commission, reduced to its last analysis, is no different from a government by satrapies from Rome. God pity this Government in the hour in which we shall look to Washington for that economy in public expenditures, that comprehension of the common needs, that devotion to the general interests, the power and the willingness to correct abuses and distribute justice, all so essential to a democratic form of government, rather than to enlightened public opinion gathered up and crystallized into law through those agencies of government which reach back and down to the great body of the people—the sole sovereignty of the Republic.
>
> If there is anything now well settled, worked out through centuries of test and trial, it is that each member of the Federal Government must have complete and independent control of all matters domestic and internal and which relate alone to the individual members.

I have already said I sympathize with that which the Senator from Colorado would accomplish, and neither do I regard this bill as a sectional bill. I do not think the South ought to take it as such. We all know that the crime of lynching is committed all over the country in the different States. So I do not regard it as a sectional bill at all, but I do regard it as in conflict with the most fundamental principles upon which this Republic rests and in violation of the spirit and purpose of our dual system of government. It strikes deep and it strikes hard at the whole theory of State sovereignty. And, after all, there is nothing in all the realm of government more essential to the happiness and well-being of the American people than the right of local self-government.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, does the able Senator from Idaho know and is he prepared to suggest any other legislative program or procedure by which the lynching of human beings by mobs can be prevented in the United States?

Mr. BORAH. It is my belief that this type of bill would not prevent lynching. The class of crimes to which lynching belongs can only be prevented by the education of the people, by building up public opinion against it, and by bringing the people to realize that it is to their detriment and to their everlasting shame to have such crimes committed in their respective communities. Without the moral support and the intellectual backing of the communities in which such occurrences happen, the power of the Federal Government will be perfectly futile in undertaking to eradicate this kind of crime.

Therefore, I do not look at this measure as constituting a remedy for lynching; I do not believe it will accomplish that objective; I do not think it can be accomplished in that way. Any scheme which removes responsibility from the citizen cannot be in the interest of good citizenship.

Mr. President, before I sit down, let me say that the American Negro has always been noted for his fidelity to American institutions. It is one of the distinguishing characteristics of the Negro. Whatever his faults may be, and all races have them, his fidelity to American institutions, his loyalty to his country, and his devotion to the great underlying principles of our Government, as he understands them, are crowning virtues of the American Negro. We hear little talk of communism and other "isms" from the lips of the colored people.

When the Dyer antilynching bill was before the Senate, owing to the fact that I was chairman of the subcommittee, I received much censure from leaders of the colored race for my position, and, naturally, from colored people generally. It finally led to my addressing a mass meeting of colored people in this city to explain my position upon this question, which I did one Sunday afternoon.

I undertook to discuss it from the viewpoint of preserving the integrity of our Government as we had built it and of appealing to the colored race to respect our Government as it had been constructed by the Fathers. It is my belief that there were not a dozen individuals in that vast audience that afternoon who were not in full sympathy with my position when it was explained to them. I do not think that they want to infringe upon the fundamental principles of the Constitution; I do not believe they entertain any desire to do that; but, in my opinion, if they should succeed in passing a measure of this kind they would be instrumental in dealing a blow at the American Government, constitutionally speaking, the importance of which could hardly be overstated. I have no doubt the Negro feels strongly about the problem with which the authors of this bill would deal, but I would not be afraid to present the question of maintaining the integrity of our institutions to any group of Negroes, North or South.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BORAH. I yield, if I have the floor.

Mr. COSTIGAN. The Senator, of course, subscribes to the view, attributed to the present Chief Justice of the United States, that legislation is constitutional whenever the Supreme Court of the United States finally determines it so to be?

Mr. BORAH. The Chief Justice did not quite say that, but if he said something like it I feel he ought to apologize.

Mr. President, the Constitution of the United States is what is expressed in the terms of the document itself. The Court may, for reasons which affect courts the same as they affect other individuals, come to conclusions which at a particular time seem to construe fairly the Constitution of the United States. I remember after the Civil War, when the reconstruction measures were on their way to the Supreme Court of the United States, measures which, in my opinion, did more to engender ill will in the South than did the war itself. Those measures were never fully passed on by the Supreme Court, but some proceedings were had which have never since been approved by the Supreme Court of the United States. Courts are human, and we must expect such things, and I have no criticism to make. I do not ask for anything more than a sincere devotion to the cause of justice as the court sees it.

However, the Senator referred a few moments ago to the fact—and there was a very subtle criticism in his reference, to which I do not object—that I opposed the delegation of power to the President of the United States to make tariff treaties and to fix tariff duties. I did take that position, but the Supreme Court afterwards sustained the law. I claim no infallibility. But whatever my opinion is, I am willing at all times to defend it. Mr. President, when that measure came before this body, in the first instance under Mr. Hoover's administration, able lawyers on the other side of the Chamber, including the able lawyer from New York [Mr. WAGNER], who is one of the coauthors responsible for this bill, in a most powerful argument demonstrated to a certainty to my mind that it was unconstitutional. Others of like ability had no doubt of its being unconstitutional; but when a similar measure reached this body again under the present administration there was a complete swing around in the Senate as to those who believed it constitutional and those who believed it to be unconstitutional. I have never changed my mind for a moment that such legislation is thoroughly in violation of the most fundamental principles of our Constition. The Supreme Court may write opinions in which they incorporate the views of an ex-President as to a tariff commission until the crack of doom, but they will never derogate from the fact that the fathers of this country intended that the power to raise and control taxes should exist in the Congress of the United States alone, and that the House of Representatives alone should be the place where such bills should originate. That is true now in spite of anything the Supreme Court has said or can say. It is perfectly plain that the real question before the Court was not decided.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I do.

Mr. GLASS. The Senator from Idaho awhile ago referred to John Marshall. When John Marshall was Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Thomas Jefferson denounced the Court as the "sappers and miners of the Federal Constitution." What does the Senator think Thomas Jefferson would say of the present Supreme Court after the decision in the Minnesota case, the New York Milk case, and the tariff case to which the Senator has referred? Thomas Jefferson had the best vocabulary of any man who ever lived theretofore or since, but he could not have found in his vocabulary terms which would have adequately characterized the opinions of the Supreme Court in those cases.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I do not think the criticism of Thomas Jefferson would be any more severe than would the criticism of John Marshall.

Mr. GLASS. Oh, John Marshall compared with these people here!

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, Chief Justice Marshall said:

> No political dreamer was ever wild enough to think of breaking down the lines which separate the States and of compounding the American people into one common mass.

Now we have done that. We did it under the N. R. A.; we did it under the A. A. A.; and, as I said a few moments ago, this bill is in perfect harmony with those two measures. I venture to believe, however, that when the sky shall have cleared, when the troublous days shall be over, and we shall come to realize the value of this Union and the institutions under which we live, we will do as our forbears did after the Civil War—we will swing back to the great principles and abide by them. I am not disturbed because of things which happen in troublous times. While I do not always "go along", I nourish the belief that in the end the sound common sense, both among the masses and among the leaders, will prevail.

Abraham Lincoln said:

> To maintain inviolate the rights of the States to order and control under the Constitution their own affairs by their own judgment exclusively is essential for the preservation of the balance of power on which our institutions rest.

There is the cornerstone of this Federal Republic. Mr. Lincoln did not enjoy the reputation of being a great constitutional lawyer, but no mortal man ever had a firmer grasp of the aims and purposes and principles of the Government for the preservation of which he yielded up his life.

There can be no such thing as a great Federal Union without great States. There can be no such thing as a Federal Republic unless the States at home preserve their rights as sovereign States to the extent to which the Constitution has defined them.

If this bill does not wipe out State lines, if the A. A. A. does not wipe out State lines when it deals with a farmer in my State, if the N. R. A. does not wipe out State lines when it runs a grocery store in my State, I do not know by what means we could wipe out State lines.

It is not alone because I am opposed to this bill, but it is because I believe in the principle which it seems to me the bill violates. This principle is so plain, so vital to our Federal Republic, that it would be shameless moral cowardice in one who sees it, as I do, not to maintain it.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Without, of course, reflecting in any way upon the ability or judgment of the Senator from Idaho or upon the sincerity which has so evidently moved him in what he has said, I believe this is a suitable moment in which to read to the Senate a statement attributed to Mr. Chief Justice White, himself a jurist of southern birth, who is well remembered by many Members of this body as the Presiding Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. Speaking to the American Bar Association in 1914, Mr. Justice White used these words, which are distinctly applicable to the present issue:

> There is great danger, it seems to me, to arise from the constant habit which prevails where anything is opposed or objected to, or resorting without rhyme or reason to the Constitution as a means of preventing its accomplishment, thus creating the general impression that the Constitution is but a barrier to progress instead of being the broad highway through which alone true progress may be enjoyed.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. BYRNES. I only desire to say with reference to the statement of the Senator from Idaho as to the attitude of the Negro race upon this legislation that in recalling the history of the Dyer bill and what took place while that bill was pending, it is also interesting to note what took place after the adjournment of Congress.

Representative Dyer returned to his State, was a candidate for renomination, was opposed by a representative of the Negro race who defeated him in the primaries for the renomination; so that the Negro race evidently was not of the opinion that the efforts of Representative Dyer were so vital to their happiness, welfare, and life.

I only hope that no such fate shall befall the two distinguished Members of this body who are the authors of the bill, because they are rendering splendid service here. I hope that in the coming election they may not meet such a fate.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Alabama pardon me further?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. COSTIGAN. The generous references to the cosponsors of the bill are fully appreciated. In view of many expressions of concern over the attitude of the electors in various States, and supplementing what was said with such eloquence yesterday by the able Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN], I feel that I ought to say that I was advised yesterday, and I think authoritatively, that there are no Negro voters in 53 of the 63 counties of my State; that in one of the most populous counties of my State and in one of the most prosperous of northern Colorado cities in one of the richest agricultural regions in the country there is said to be only one colored voter, and that neither during the progress of this discussion nor at any other time have I received any expression of his views on the pending problem.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Alabama yield?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. LOGAN. Whether the bill be constitutional or not, whether it be a good bill or not, it seems perfectly obvious to everyone that there is not the slightest opportunity of bringing the motion to a vote. Is that the opinion of the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. BANKHEAD. There is no doubt in the world about it. I think every intelligent Member of the Senate knows it.

Mr. LOGAN. In view of that fact, and in view of the further fact that important legislation is awaiting consideration by this body, I for one do not believe the Senate ought to continue this discussion, knowing that no good can result. So far as I am concerned, I am perfectly willing to lay aside the motion of the Senator from Colorado until we dispose of important legislation, and then, if the Senator from Colorado shall see fit to make the motion again, we will enter into an endurance test with those who are opposing the motion and see who can last the longest during the hot days of July and August.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Alabama yield?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. Unfortunately, I was temporarily absent from the Senate and did not listen to the discussion which has taken place. I arrived today just in time to hear the end of a constitutional argument made by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH].

The Senator from Idaho referred to an argument which I made on the floor of the Senate holding that an act which delegated certain powers to the President with reference to the raising or lowering of tariff duties was unconstitutional. As I gathered, the Senator's theory was that the question involved here is a constitutional question similar to that involved in the tariff act.

Mr. BORAH. Oh, no.

Mr. WAGNER. That act involved a question of the delegation of power to an executive officer. The question was as to whether the legislation provided for such standards as would make the function of the executive merely administrative. It has been the position of the court that, if we are to delegate powers, at least we must fix certain standards and not delegate legislative powers.

As I understand the bill which is under discussion, I am persuaded absolutely not only that it is constitutional but also that there is a constitutional mandate, in view of the history of lynching in this country over a period of years, to preserve equal protection of the law for all citizens and prevent deprivation of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, by such Federal action as has been granted to us by the States themselves.

It is on that theory that this bill was introduced. We have enacted such legislation in the past. We have enacted legislation requiring, in the selection of jurors, that there should be no discrimination because of race, color, or creed. When in the State of Virginia a judge violated that law by discriminating against a certain race in denying to it the right to sit upon a jury as the peers of their fellow citizens, that judge was fined by virtue of the Federal statute. This was on the theory that, since he was an official of the State, the State itself was acting—for States act only through men. The imposition of that fine was sustained by the Supreme Court of the United States.

As the Senator, who is a lawyer, so well knows, the Court has intervened, in the absence of a Federal statute, when a mob had so influenced or terrorized a State jury that it did not dare bring in a verdict of innocent in spite of the conclusiveness of the evidence. In that case the United States Supreme Court found the fourteenth amendment a justification for the intervention of the Federal Government through its courts in order that the citizen of the particular State might receive the equal protection of the law. And that is the theory of this proposed legislation.

I did not intend to say this much, but I should like to make one further statement. The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] seems to be very much concerned over the possibility that if I should continue the prosecution of this measure, which I think is proper and the result of a constitutional mandate, I might imperil my reelection. I appreciate the Senator's consideration for my future welfare, but that is a matter of little concern to me so long as I am satisfied that what I am doing is in accordance with the dictates of my conscience, and is in the interest of the people whom

I, in part, represent, and of the people of the United States. The question of reelection should not give anyone any concern. Certainly it does not concern me.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I may say to the Senator from New York that I did not raise the question of tariff treaties or the delegation to the President of power to establish tariff duties. That matter was brought up by the able Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], and I was replying to it. Of course, I understood perfectly that that was a question of delegation of power and that this is not a question of delegation of power. This is what I regard as a question of usurpation of power, and I understand perfectly the difference between the two matters.

The case which the Senator cited, as to the judge being fined, is well taken care of by fundamental principles of the Constitution, which are provided for explicitly, and in my judgment it has little relevancy to the present situation.

Mr. President, let me say just a word further, and then I shall conclude what I have to say. I had no intention of taking any part in this debate; but a matter was brought up which involved my personal action here in the Senate, and I felt constrained to refer briefly to it.

I have no doubt both the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] and the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN] have convinced themselves that this bill is constitutional. We are all in agreement with them that it is humane and humanitarian in its purposes. The only matter about which there is any controversy is the constitutional question. The Senator from New York may be right in regard to it, and the Senator from Colorado may be correct in his position; but I have no doubt that the bill is unconstitutional. When it is said that the lynching of a man by 3 persons gives Federal jurisdiction, but the lynching of a man by 1 person does not give Federal jurisdiction, the Constitution is being made subject to construction in accordance with the number of persons present when the crime takes place. It seems to me that if we can do what it is proposed we shall do here we can and we ought to go into New York City and see that the criminal laws are enforced in that great city. If the Federal Government is concerned to protect life within the State, is it not obligated to protect against machine guns and the attacks of the racketeer as well as the rope and the attacks of the mob? Where are you going to stop, and why, once started, should you stop at all?

Mr. WAGNER. Possibly, Mr. President. If the Senator from Alabama will yield, I may say that this bill, if enacted, will apply to New York City as it will to every other city and State in the Union. The sectional question was not raised by me, and I was hoping that it would not be injected into this discussion at all. This measure should be viewed from the national standpoint and as a national obligation.

This, however, is what I was about to suggest: As to details, it may very well be, since none of us are perfect, that this measure is not so well drafted as it should be, is not so comprehensive as it should be, or perhaps is not so limited as it should be. That is the reason why some of us are anxious to have the bill taken up for consideration by the Senate, so that amendments may be proposed. That has not been done, thus far, because of the refusal of some of my colleagues to permit the motion of the Senator from Colorado to come to a vote.

Personally, I never have indulged in a filibuster. I hope I never shall do so as long as I am a Member of the Senate, because I am always willing to abide by what a majority of the Senators say should be done as to any particular proposal which is before us for consideration. I hope, therefore, that the bill will be considered; and if, ultimately, the Senators should feel that the proposed legislation either was not justified or was so clearly unconstitutional that they could not support it, they could so decide. Then we shall have discharged our obligation; but it seems to me that the bill ought to be brought up for the consideration of this body, like other legislation. I do not know why we should make an exception of this particular proposal.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, so far as bringing up the bill for consideration is concerned, I voted recently against adjournment. I had no objection to a full discussion of the measure. I am not going to vote against adjournment indefinitely; but I had no objection whatever to the bill being considered upon its merits upon the floor of the Senate. I am satisfied now, however, that it does not make any difference whether the bill is brought up or not brought up; it is not going to be brought to a final vote, so we shall have to consider other matters.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Alabama.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will my colleague yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. In view of the fact that so few of the old guard Republicans, who seemingly favor this bill, are in the Chamber—I do not see one of them here—and since this is a most interesting discussion, and they need enlightenment, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Connally	Keyes	Pope
Ashurst	Coolidge	King	Radcliffe
Austin	Copeland	La Follette	Robinson
Bachman	Costigan	Lewis	Russell
Bailey	Couzens	Logan	Schall
Bankhead	Dickinson	Lonergan	Schwellenbach
Barbour	Dieterich	Long	Sheppard
Barkley	Donahey	McAdoo	Shipstead
Bilbo	Duffy	McCarran	Smith
Black	Fletcher	McGill	Steiwer
Bone	Frazier	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	Gerry	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Brown	Gibson	Minton	Townsend
Bulkley	Glass	Moore	Trammell
Bulow	Gore	Murphy	Truman
Burke	Guffey	Murray	Tydings
Byrd	Hale	Neely	Vandenberg
Byrnes	Harrison	Norris	Van Nuys
Capper	Hastings	Nye	Wagner
Caraway	Hatch	O'Mahoney	Walsh
Carey	Hayden	Overton	Wheeler
Clark	Johnson	Pittman	White

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MCGILL in the chair). Eighty-eight Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Alabama yield to me?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Supplementing what has been said this morning, I count this an appropriate time to ask to have placed in the RECORD, or to have read, if that course be preferred, a list of the names of special endorsers of the proposed legislation, together with a statement of the estimated number of members of endorsing organizations. References have been made at different times to the large number of endorsements by American citizens, both men and women.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, does the Senator want the names read?

Mr. COSTIGAN. No; I was merely asking that they be incorporated in the RECORD, though I shall be glad to read them, if that course be desired.

Mr. CONNALLY. I should like to have them read, and I am perfectly willing to have the clerk read them if the Senator desires. I should like to have read by the clerk also, and I ask unanimous consent that I may have read by the clerk a statement made in the House of Representatives some years ago by Representative Hersey, of Maine, with reference to a bill then pending on the same subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HATCH in the chair). Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN]? The Chair hears none.

The Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] has also submitted a request. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I will not have the statement read at this time unless the Senator from Alabama agrees that it may be done.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I have no objection.

Mr. COSTIGAN. By way of introduction to what the clerk will now read, permit me to say that the names to be first read are those of endorsers of the proposed legislation, who also joined in a request that the proposed legislation be made part of the "must" program of the administration.

The clerk, following that list of names, is requested next to read the names of the organizations, together with estimated membership, endorsing the proposed legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

[Hearing before the subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary, United States Senate, Feb. 14, 1935, p. 33]

THE SIGNERS

GOVERNORS OF STATES AND FORMER GOVERNORS

Hon. C. Douglass Buck, Delaware.
Hon. Alf M. Langdon, Kansas.
Hon. William A. Comstock, Michigan.
Hon. Frank D. Fitzgerald, Michigan.
Hon. A. Harry Moore, New Jersey.
Hon. Harold G. Hoffman, New Jersey.
Hon. Herbert H. Lehman, New York.
Hon. Tom Moodie, North Dakota.
Hon. Gifford Pinchot, Pennsylvania.
Hon. Paul M. Pearson, Virgin Islands.

MAYORS

Hon. John Boyd Thatcher, 2d, Albany, N. Y.
Hon. Fred E. Lewis, Allentown, Pa.
Hon. Harry Bacharach, Atlantic City, N. J.
Hon. Howard W. Jackson, Baltimore, Md.
Hon. R. R. Stewart, Camden, N. J.
Hon. R. P. DeVan, Charleston, W. Va.
Hon. Russell Wilson, Cincinnati, Ohio.
Hon. Harry L. Davis, Cleveland, Ohio.
Hon. Hugh P. Finnerty, Council Bluffs, Iowa.
Hon. F. C. Roberts, Easton, Pa.
Hon. Henry H. Honan, Elmira, N. Y.
Hon. George A. Hoverter, Harrisburg, Pa.
Hon. John Cavanaugh, Homestead, Pa.
Hon. Reginald H. Sullivan, Indianapolis, Ind.
Hon. Leon F. Roberts, Jamestown, N. Y.
Hon. Daniel W. Hoan, Milwaukee, Wis.
Hon. A. G. Bainbridge, Minneapolis, Minn.
Hon. Mortimer A. Sullivan, Newport, R. I.
Hon. Roy N. Towl, Omaha, Nebr.
Hon. George E. Spratt, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.
Hon. Mark H. Gehan, St. Paul, Minn.
Hon. Anjelo J. Rossi, San Francisco, Calif.
Hon. Charles L. Smith, Seattle, Wash.
Hon. James E. Hagan, Somerville, Mass.
Hon. Fred R. Gray, Springfield, Ohio.
Hon. Solon T. Klotz, Toledo, Ohio.
Hon. George B. LeBarre, Trenton, N. J.
Hon. T. A. Penney, Tulsa, Okla.

BISHOPS AND CHURCHMEN

Samuel G. Babcock, suffragan bishop, Protestant Episcopal Church, Massachusetts.

Frederick B. Bartlett, Episcopal bishop of North Dakota.

Ferdinan Q. Blanchard, Euclid Avenue Congregational Church, Cleveland, Ohio.

Samuel B. Booth, Episcopal bishop of Vermont.

W. Russell Bowie, Grace Church, New York City.

Harold Leonard Bowman, First Presbyterian Church, Chicago, Ill.

Arthur H. Bradford, Central Congregational Church, Providence, R. I.

Benjamin Brewster, Episcopal bishop of Maine.

Charles E. Burton, secretary, General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches.

C. M. Brown, Cann Memorial Presbyterian Church, Kershaw, S. C.

Raymond Calkins, First Church in Cambridge, Cambridge, Mass.

Randall A. Carter, presiding bishop, third district, Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, Chicago, Ill.

James E. Cassidy, Episcopal bishop of Fall River, Fall River, Mass.

Samuel McCrea Cavert, general secretary, Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, New York, N. Y.

S. M. Corcoran, superintendent Methodist Episcopal Church Union, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Thomas F. Davies, Episcopal bishop of western Massachusetts.

Ralph S. Cushman, bishop of Methodist Episcopal Church, Denver, Colo.

Cameron J. Davis, Episcopal bishop of western New York, Buffalo, N. Y.

Edward Thomas Demby, suffragan bishop of colored work of the Episcopal Church in the Southwest, Little Rock, Ark.

R. E. Diffendorfer, corresponding secretary board of foreign missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, New York City.

Arthur Drossaerts, archbishop, San Antonio, Tex.

J. Stanley Durkee, Plymouth Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Harry Emerson Fosdick, Riverside Church, New York City.

Father Frederick, O. S. B., St. Emma Industrial and Agricultural Institute, Rock Castle, Va.

James E. Freeman, Episcopal bishop of Washington, D. C.

William Hiram Foulkes, Old First Church, Newark, N. J.

Francis J. Furey, secretary to His Eminence, D. Cardinal Dougherty, archbishop of Philadelphia.

James J. Gerrard, Fall River, Mass.

Charles C. Gilbert, Episcopal bishop, Diocese of New York, New York City.

Joshua L. Goldberg, national secretary American Jewish Congress, New York, N. Y.

John Haynes Holmes, Community Church, New York City.

Ivan Lee Holt, St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church, St. Louis, Mo.

Thomas Jenkins, Episcopal bishop of Nevada, Reno, Nev.

Robert Carter Jett, Episcopal bishop of Southwestern Virginia.

Joseph J. Kelly, St. Joseph's Church, Alexandria, Va.

Hugh L. Lamb, chancellor of the Archdiocese of Philadelphia, Philadelphia, Pa.

Moris S. Lazaron, rabbi, Baltimore Hebrew Congregation, Baltimore, Md.

David Lefkowitz, rabbi, Temple Emanu-El, Dallas, Tex.

Adnah Wright Leonard, resident bishop, Pittsburgh area, Methodist Episcopal Church.

J. J. McCort, bishop, Altoona, Pa.

F. A. McElwain, Episcopal bishop of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn.

Ralph W. McKenzie, district superintendent, Blairsville District, Methodist Episcopal Church, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Burr R. McKnight, district superintendent, Monongahela District, Methodist Episcopal Church, Pittsburgh, Pa.

William T. Manning, Episcopal bishop of New York.

J. C. Martin, presiding bishop, Fourth Episcopal District, Colored Methodist Episcopal Church.

Boynton Merrill, the Second Church in Newton, West Newton, Mass.

William Pierson Merrill, Brick Presbyterian Church, New York City.

Edwin D. Mouzon, bishop Methodist Episcopal Church South, Charlotte, N. C.

G. Ashton Oldham, Episcopal bishop of Albany, Albany, N. Y.

L. B. Pastorelli, head of the Josephite Order, Baltimore, Md.

David Philipson, honorary president Central Conference of American Rabbis, Cincinnati, Ohio.

C. H. Phillips, bishop of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, Cleveland, Ohio.

D. de Sola Poole, rabbi, Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, New York City.

Frederick F. Reese, Episcopal bishop of Georgia, Savannah, Ga.

William P. Remington, Episcopal bishop of eastern Oregon, Pendleton, Oreg.

C. A. Roach, St. Peter Claver's Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

W. Blair Roberts, Episcopal bishop of South Dakota, Sioux Falls, S. Dak.

George W. Robinson, Corinthian Baptist Church, Des Moines, Iowa.

Louis Childs Sanford, Episcopal bishop of San Joaquin, Fresno, Calif.

William Scarlett, Episcopal bishop of Missouri, St. Louis, Mo.

Elmer N. Schmuck, Episcopal bishop of Wyoming, Laramie, Wyo.

E. Cecil Seaman, Episcopal bishop of north Texas, Amarillo, Tex.

Charles L. Seesholes, First Baptist Church, Dayton, Ohio.

Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver, the Temple, Cleveland, Ohio.

William Simons, All Souls Unitarian Church, New York City.

L. W. Spangy, district superintendent Pittsburgh District, Methodist Episcopal Church.

Robert E. Speer, secretary board of foreign missions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

F. Guthrie Speers, Brown Memorial Church, Baltimore, Md.

Robert Nelson Spencer, Episcopal bishop of west Missouri, Kansas City, Mo.

Frederick K. Stamm, Clinton Avenue Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Ernest F. Tittle, First Methodist Episcopal Church, Evanston, Ill.

Ernest Milmore Stires, Episcopal bishop of Long Island, Brooklyn, N. Y.

W. S. Trosh, district superintendent Alleghany District, Methodist Episcopal Church, Pittsburgh, Pa.

J. W. Tutt, Union Baptist Church, Des Moines, Iowa.

W. J. Walls, presiding bishop Eighth Episcopal District, African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, Chicago, Ill.

John C. Ward, Episcopal bishop of Erie, Erie, Pa.

Benjamin M. Washburn, Episcopal bishop coadjutor of the diocese of Newark, Newark, N. J.

L. J. Welbers, San Antonio, Tex.

B. Wheeler, Mount Olive Baptist Church, Des Moines, Iowa.

Frank E. Wilson, Episcopal bishop of Eau Claire, Eau Claire, Wis.

John D. Wing, Episcopal bishop of south Florida, Orlando, Fla.

James Wise, Episcopal bishop of Kansas, Topeka, Kans., 27 superiors of convents of the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament for Indians and Colored People.

COLLEGE PRESIDENTS AND PROFESSORS

Leroy Allen, dean Southwestern College, Winfield, Kans.

J. S. Ames, president Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md.

James R. Angell, president Yale University, New Haven, Conn.

Albert E. Barnett, professor Scarritt College, Nashville, Tenn.

Robbins W. Barstow, president Hartford Seminary Foundation, Hartford, Conn.
Murray Bartlett, president Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y.
Edwin M. Borchard, professor Yale University, New Haven, Conn.
Arlo Ayres Brown, president Drew University, Madison, N. J.
O. W. Carrell, president Nebraska Central College, Central City, Nebr.
Paul Cloke, dean University of Maine, Orono, Maine.
Robert C. Clothier, president Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N. J.
Eugene A. Colligan, president Hunter College, New York City.
Ada Louis Comstock, president Radcliffe College, Cambridge, Mass.
C. E. Crossland, alumni secretary, University of Maine, Orono, Maine.
John W. Davis, president West Virginia State College, Institute, W. Va.
A. E. Deering, dean University of Maine, Orono, Maine.
Hoyt M. Dobbs, Centenary College of Louisiana, Shreveport, La.
Paul H. Douglas, professor University of Chicago, Chicago, Ill.
Ralph Earle, president Worcester Polytechnic Institute, Worcester, Mass.
Mother Mary Evarista, president Notre Dame College, Cleveland, Ohio.
Charles A. Ellwood, professor Duke University, Durham, N. C.
Frederick C. Ferry, president Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y.
Charles W. Flint, chancellor Syracuse University, Syracuse, N. Y.
Sheldon Glueck, professor Harvard University Law School, Cambridge, Mass.
Joseph M. M. Gray, chancellor American University, Washington, D. C.
John A. W. Haas, president Muhlenberg College, Allentown, Pa.
Arthur A. Hauck, president University of Maine, Orono, Maine.
Arthur Howe, president Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va.
Hatcher Hughes, president Columbia University, New York.
Howard Jensen, professor Duke University, Durham, N. C.
Thomas Elsa Jones, president Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn.
P. R. Kolbe, president Drexel Institute, Philadelphia, Pa.
Robert Morse Lovett, professor University of Chicago, Chicago, Ill.
G. S. Luter, dean University of Maine, Orono, Maine.
H. M. McCracken, president Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.
W. J. McConnell, president North Texas Teachers' College, Denton, Tex.
H. W. McPherson, president Illinois Wesleyan University, Bloomington, Ill.
Daniel L. Mash, president Boston University, Boston, Mass.
Broadus Mitchell, Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md.
Henry T. Moore, president Skidmore College, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.
James Muilenburg, dean University of Maine, Orono, Maine.
Philip C. Nash, president University of Toledo, Toledo, Ohio.
William A. Neilson, president Smith College, Northampton, Mass.
W. Stuart Nelson, Shaw University, Raleigh, N. C.
John S. Nollen, president Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa.
Arthur W. Palmer, president Chicago Theological Seminary, Chicago, Ill.
Ellen F. Pendleton, president Wellesley College, Wellesley, Mass.
Roscoe Pound, dean Harvard University Law School, Cambridge, Mass.
Rush Rhees, president University of Rochester, Rochester, N. Y.
Frederick B. Robinson, president College of the City of New York.
Edward A. Ross, professor University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.
G. H. Schlauck, president Spokane Valley Junior College, Spokane, Wash.
Vida D. Scudder, professor emeritus Wellesley College, Wellesley, Mass.
Guy R. Snavely, president Birmingham-Southern College, Birmingham, Ala.
Edmund D. Soper, president Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware, Ohio.
Edward V. Stanford, president Villanova College, Villanova, Pa.
John J. Sullivan, professor of law, University of Pennsylvania.
Charles F. Thwing, president Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio.
John J. Tigert, president University of Florida, Gainesville, Fla.
Edward H. Todd, president College of Puget Sound, Tacoma, Wash.
H. Orton Wiley, president Pasadena College, Pasadena, Calif.
Walter Williams, president University of Missouri, Columbia, Mo.
Charles F. Wishart, president The College of Wooster, Wooster, Ohio.
Mary E. Woolley, president Mount Holyoke College, South Hadley, Mass.
James F. Zimmerman, president University of New Mexico, Albuquerque, N. Mex.

LAWYERS

Zachariah Chafee, Jr., Harvard Law School, Cambridge, Mass.
Hubert T. Delaney, New York City.
Harry E. Davis, Cleveland, Ohio.
Jesse S. Hesslip, Toledo, Ohio.
Morris L. Ernst, New York City.
Arthur Garfield Hays, New York City.
Charles H. Houston, Howard Law School, Washington, D. C.
Arthur B. Spingarn, New York City.
Herbert K. Stockton, New York City.
James Marshall, New York City.
L. Hollingsworth Wood, New York City.

EDITORS AND WRITERS

Louis Adamic, New York City.
Gertrude Atherton, San Francisco, Calif.
A. T. Atwater, editor the Rome Enterprise, Rome, Ga.
Faith Baldwin, New York City.
Mary R. Beard, New Milford, Conn.
Robert Benchley, New York City.
Stephen Vincent Benet, New York City.
Bruce Bliven, editor New Republic, New York City.
Herschel Brickell, New York City.
Spencer Brodney, editor Current History, New York City.
Van Wyck Brooks, Westport, Conn.
Dan B. Brummitt, editor the Christian Advocate, Kansas City, Mo.
Struthers Burt, Southern Pines, N. C.
Erskine Caldwell, Mount Vernon, Maine.
Henry S. Canby, New York City.
Marc Connelly, New York City.
Countee Cullen, New York City.
Babette Deutsch, New York City.
Alfred Dashiell, managing editor Scribner's Magazine, New York City.
W. H. Davenport, editor Star of Zion, Charlotte, N. C.
James H. Dillard, Charlottesville, Va.
Edward Donahoe, Ponca City, Okla.
Theodore Dreiser, New York City.
Abraham Epstein, New York City.
Edward A. Evans, editor Columbus Citizen, Columbus, Ohio.
Edna Ferber, New York City.
Arthur Davison Ficke, Hillsdale, N. Y.
Dorothy Canfield Fisher, Arlington, Vt.
E. Franklin Frazier, Washington, D. C.
Lewis S. Gannett, New York City.
C. Hartley Grattan, New York City.
Harold K. Guinzburg, New York City.
Louis M. Hacker, New York City.
Harry Hansen, New York City.
Jessie Fauset Harris, New York City.
Robert Herrick, Winter Park, Fla.
Sheila Hibben, New York City.
Quincy Howe, editor the Living Age, New York City.
B. W. Huebsch, New York City.
Rupert Hughes, Los Angeles, Calif.
Inez Haynes Irwin, New York City.
Georgia Douglas Johnson, Washington, D. C.
James Weldon Johnson, New York City.
Freda Kirchwey, New York City.
Alfred A. Knopf, New York City.
Joseph Wood Krutch, New York City.
Suzanne La Follette, New York City.
William Ellery Leonard, Madison, Wis.
Sinclair Lewis, New York City.
Alain Locke, Washington, D. C.
Leonore Marshall, New York City.
Annie Nathan Meyer, New York City.
George Milburn, Wilton, Conn.
Edna St. Vincent Millay, Austerlitz, N. Y.
Ruth Comfort Mitchell, Los Gatos, Calif.
Clifford Morehouse, editor the Living Church, Milwaukee, Wis.
Lewis Mumford, New York City.
George Jean Nathan, New York City.
Robert Nathan, New York City.
W. W. Norton, New York City.
Mary White Ovington, New York City.
William Pickens, New York City.
Ruth Pickering, New York City.
A. S. Platt, Redburn, N. J.
Lorine Pruette, New York City.
Elmer Rice, New York City.
Lola Ridge, New York City.
Edwin Arlington Robinson, New York City.
Geroid Tanquary Robinson, New York City.
John William Rogers, Dallas, Tex.
Charles Edward Russell, Washington, D. C.
The Saturday Review of Literature, New York City.
George S. Schuyler, New York City.
Evelyn Scott, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.
Upton Sinclair, Los Angeles, Calif.
George Soule, editor the New Republic, New York City.
Benjamin Stolberg, New York City.
Phil Stong, New York City.
Ruth Suckow, New York City.
Dorothy Van Doren, New York City.
Carl Van Doren, New York City.
Mark Van Doren, New York City.
Carl Van Vechten, New York City.
Oswald Garrison Villard, the Nation, New York City.
Edward Wasserman, New York City.
Walter White, New York City.
Roy Wilkins, New York City.
James Waterman, editor Opinion, New York City.
Helen Woodward, New York City.
W. E. Woodward, president Writers' League Against Lynching, New York City.

GENERAL

Jane Addams, Hull House, Chicago, Ill.
Jacob Billikopf, Philadelphia Regional Labor Board.
Helen R. Bryan, secretary Committee on Race Relations, Society of Friends, Philadelphia, Pa.
Bernard S. Deutsch, president board of aldermen, New York City.
Ethel E. Dreier, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Hannah Clothier Hull, national president Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.
Alfred Baker Lewis, secretary New England District Socialist Party, Boston, Mass.
Lucy Randolph Mason, secretary National Consumers' League, New York City.
Louis Drexel Morrell, Philadelphia.
Mary M. Simkhovitch, Greenwich House, New York City.
J. E. Spingarn, president National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, New York City.
Elizabeth Cecil Scott, member national board and chairman Richmond (Va.) Young Women's Christian Association.
Mary Van Kleeck, Russell Sage Foundation, New York City.
Lillian D. Wald, Henry Street Settlement, New York City.

ORGANIZATIONS WHICH BY RESOLUTION HAVE ENDORSED AND WHICH ARE ACTIVELY WORKING IN SUPPORT OF THE COSTIGAN-WAGNER ANTI-LYNCHING BILL

California State Legislature	----------
Colorado State Legislature	----------
Kansas State Legislature	----------
Minnesota State Legislature	----------
New Jersey State Legislature	----------
Pennsylvania State Legislature	----------
Massachusetts State Senate	----------
Illinois House of Representatives	----------
Indiana State Assembly	----------
New York State Assembly	----------
General Court of Massachusetts	----------
City Council of Cleveland, Ohio	----------
City Council of Duluth, Minn	----------
American Federation of Labor	5,000,000
The Federal Council of Churches	26,000,000
National Baptist Convention	3,196,623
Young Women's Christian Association	404,632
National Student Council of the Young Women's Christian Association	30,000
Young Men's Christian Association	857,241
Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.
International Youth Movement.
National Association for the Advancement of Colored People	100,000
National Association of Colored Women	250,000
American Federation of Teachers	----------
National Council of Women	----------
National Council of Jewish Women	50,000
Young People's Socialist League of America	3,500
Writers' League Against Lynching	186
Maryland Anti-Lynching Federation	----------
Congregational Commission on Lynching	----------
Chicago Committee on Anti-Lynching Legislation	----------
Committee on Race Relations of the Society of Friends	----------
American Civil Liberties Union	3,000
National Urban League	12,000
The League for Industrial Democracy	5,600
The Fellowship of Reconciliation	8,000
The Protestant Episcopal Church	2,000,000
The Colored Methodist Episcopal Church	325,000
Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America	1,969,788
Congregational and Christian Churches	1,000,000
The Society of Congregational Church Women of the State of New York	----------
New York City Congregational Church Association	33,853
The Church League for Industrial Democracy	1,800
Philadelphia (Pa.) Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church	110,000
The Methodist Federation of Social Service	2,400
Women's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church South	225,000
National Council of Methodist Youth	500,000
Philadelphia Methodist Youth Conference	----------
Hartford (Conn.) Federation of Churches	600
Toledo (Ohio) Council of Churches	30,000
The Josephite Order of Baltimore, Md	68,000
Social Justice Commission of the Central Conference of American Rabbis	370
Committee on Social Justice of the Rabbinical Assembly of America	300
American Jewish Committee	100,000
American Jewish Congress	----------
Synagogue Council of America	1,000,000
Holy Name Society of Our Lady Queen of the Angels Church, Newark, N. J	400
Unity Circle of the First Unitarian Church, Des Moines, Iowa	----------
Oakland (Calif.) Council of Church Women	2,100
Interracial Commission of Judson Church, New York City	----------
Interdenominational Preachers' Meeting of Greater New York and Vicinity	----------

ORGANIZATIONS ENDORSING ANTILYNCHING BILL—continued

Nashville (Tenn.) Pastors' Association	48,000
Annual Ohio Pastors' Convention	2,000
New Orleans Ministers' Union	----------
Chicago Congregational Ministers' Union (communicants)	35,000
Union Ministers' Meeting of Chicago (communicants)	300,000
Jacksonville (Fla.) Ministerial Alliance	----------
North Philadelphia (Pa.) Civic Club	----------
People's Employment League of Maryland	----------
Springfield (Ohio) Colored Men's Council	----------
Atlanta (Ga.) Chautauqua Circle	----------
Winter Capital Lodge of Elks, New Orleans, La	10,000
City-Wide Forum, Baltimore, Md	2,500
El Paso (Tex.) Woman's City Government Club	----------
Federation of Women's Clubs of Greater Cleveland	25,000
Kappa Alpha Psi	7,000
Scarritt College for Christian Workers	----------
Christian Youth Council	10,000,000
Nashville (Tenn.) Committee on Interracial Cooperation	----------
Camden (N. J.) Brotherhood Day Committee	----------
St. Mark's Civic Forum for Adult Education, Kingston, N. Y	----------
Liberian Research Society, Los Angeles, Calif	----------
Twenty-second District Republican Club of New York	700
Total	53,720,593

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President——

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, the Senator from Alabama has yielded to me to have a paper read at the desk.

Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. President, I have no objection; I think it was understood the Senator from Texas should have that paper read; but if the Senator from Texas will permit me, I think it proper to request at this time, if he has no objection, that, following other endorsements which have been read, a telegram just received from Dr. Moton, to whom the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] made reference yesterday, be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SCHWELLENBACH in the chair). Without objection, the clerk will read, as requested.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

TUSKEGEE, ALA., May 1, 1935.

Senator EDWARD P. COSTIGAN,
United States Senate Chamber:

In the absence of adequate measures by State action to protect prisoners threatened with mob violence, to put an end to lynching, and to identify, to arrest, to indict, and to convict the leaders and participants in lynching parties, I am heartily in favor of such legislation as will register the Nation's disapproval of this crime against humanity and insure the prompt investigation of every lynching and the conviction of those who thus take the law in their own hands, and the impeachment and penalizing of officers of the law who fail in their duty to protect prisoners committed to their charge. When State officers and State courts persistently and repeatedly fail in their duty to guarantee the security of every citizen by the certain functioning of the orderly processes of the law, we are justified in looking to the Federal Government for the protection which the Constitution declares must be given to every citizen. It must be remembered that lynchings are not confined to those charged with crimes against women, as the records will show, but are resorted to on indiscriminate provocation, and as yet there is no guaranty anywhere by mandate of the law against their occurrence. And when the Governor of one of our great States goes so far as to publicly announce the pardon of lynchers in advance of their conviction, it is high time that something be done by higher authority to put an end to this evil. If Governors, Senators, Congressmen, and State legislators will pledge themselves publicly to see that the necessary legislation against lynching is enacted in each State, the occasion for national legislation will be removed. Till that is done we must look to the Federal Government for that protection which the States still fail to give and the Federal Constitution guarantees. And I would be disloyal to my own people, who have suffered most from the neglect, and to the best white people of the South, in whom I have the utmost confidence, if I did not add my voice in support of this Federal enactment. As matters now stand, every section and every race is exposed to this danger, and the application of this law will bear as heavily on one State as another. I am satisfied that outside the field of politics the sober conscience of all classes in the South will support this view. Federal legislation will strengthen those elements in the South who want to see this blot removed from our country.

R. R. MOTON,
President Tuskegee Institute.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, the Senator from Alabama yielded to me in order to have the clerk read an extract from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. I feel that I should say that the Honorable Ira G. Hersey, of Maine, was a distinguished Republican Member of Congress in 1922, and made the remarks in the House which I have asked that the clerk may read.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I object to the reading at this time of a speech made in some other place. I move to reconsider the action by which consent was granted to have the speech read.

Mr. CONNALLY. The order was made by unanimous consent, and it would take unanimous consent to reverse it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The understanding of the Chair is that the order was entered by unanimous consent, and it therefore requires unanimous consent to undo the action taken. The clerk will read, as requested.

The CHIEF CLERK. Reading from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD——

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. NEELY. What is the length of the speech about to be read?

Mr. CONNALLY. That is not a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair holds that is not a parliamentary inquiry. The clerk will read, as requested.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, without displacing the unanimous-consent order entered on request of the Senator from Texas to have certain matter read, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY] may be allowed to make his presentation, then to be followed by the reading of the extract requested by the Senator from Texas.

Mr. SMITH. I object. I call for the regular order.

Mr. CONNALLY. I do not want to deprive the Senator from West Virginia of an opportunity to speak on the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order has been demanded. The clerk will read, as requested.

The CHIEF CLERK. Reading from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of January 10, 1922, at page 1019, proceedings of the House of Representatives:

Mr. HERSEY. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the Committee, I am suffering from a cold, and my voice is not in good condition. If you will give me your attention for a little while, I shall try to hold it after that.

The late Republican national convention at Chicago desired above all things to break up what is called the "solid South" and to win and secure, if possible, for the Republicans the vote of the colored people. Accordingly the makers of the platform inserted the following:

"We urge Congress to consider the most effective means to end lynching in this country, which continues to be a terrible blot on our American civilization."

What Congress could do "to end lynching" never troubled the politicians at Chicago. It was enough for them, for the time being, to persuade the colored voters of the South to believe that a Republican Congress and a Republican President, if elected, would "consider the most effective means to end lynching in this country."

The author of this bill, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Dyer], in his speech in this House January 4, attempted to make this bill a party issue and a Republican measure. He said:

"In the last general election the people expressed their wishes in this regard also. They endorsed the action of the Republican Party at its last national convention, when in its platform it said:

"'We urge Congress to consider the most effective means to end lynching in this country, which continues to be a terrible blot on our American civilization.'"

At the outset I want my Republican colleagues in the House to remember that the National Republican platform nowhere advocated a Federal antilynching bill. The platform never contemplated that a Republican Congress would attempt to pass such legislation as is found in this bill. The politicians at Chicago had more political tact than to advocate legislation in violation of the Constitution or an antilynching bill like this that would endanger the success of the Republican Party in the Presidential campaign.

After his election, to which several Southern States contributed, President Harding found himself confronted by this declaration in his party platform, and therefore in his first message to Congress, April 12 last, he said:

"Somewhat related to the foregoing human problems is the race question. Congress ought to wipe the stain of barbaric lynching from the banners of a free and orderly, representative democracy. We face the fact that many millions of people of African descent are numbered among our population, and that in a number of States they constitute a very large proportion of the total population. It is unnecessary to recount the difficulties incident to this condition, nor to emphasize the fact that it is a condition which cannot be removed. There has been suggestion, however, that some of the difficulties might be ameliorated by a humane and enlightened consideration of it, a study of its many aspects, and an effort to formulate, if not a policy, at least a national attitude of mind calculated to bring about the most satisfactory possible adjustment of relations between the races, and of each race to the national life. One proposal is the creation of a commission embracing representatives of both races, to study and report on the entire subject. The proposal has real merit. I am convinced that in mutual tolerance, understanding, charity, recognition of the interdependence of the races, and the maintenance of the rights of citizenship lies the road to righteous adjustment."

The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Dyer] says the Republicans in this Congress should make his bill a party question and vote for it, because he says the President in his first message to Congress advocated it, and that we as Republicans should stand by the President.

I want my Republican associates in this House to bear in mind that the President in his message did not advise or recommend that the Congress should pass any Federal antilynching bill. He had given the race question, as he does all matters that affect the peace and welfare of the Nation, his careful consideration, and the only suggestion or recommendation to Congress he made was this:

"* * * The creation of a commission embracing representatives of both races, to study and report on the entire subject. The proposal has real merit."

What proposal? Not an antilynching bill; that never was in his mind. Here is the proposal that in addition to the commission which he says "has real merit", he said further:

"I am convinced that in mutual tolerance, understanding, charity, recognition of the interdependence of the races, and the maintenance of the rights of citizenship, lies the road to righteous adjustment."

The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DYER], who represents a large Negro voting population in the city of St. Louis, immediately at the opening of this Congress introduced, not a resolution authorizing the creation of a commission representing both races to study and report on the entire subject, as recommended by the President, but he introduced the bill under consideration, with this misleading title, "A bill to assure to persons within the jurisdiction of every State the equal protection of the laws and to punish the crime of lynching."

I want my Republican colaborers in this House further to remember that never in the party conferences or party caucuses have we as Republicans voted or pledged ourselves to stand by or advocate this antilynching bill as a party measure or otherwise, and when, in the course of this debate, we hear the party whip crack and are told by the advocates of this measure that our national platform, President, and party have pledged us as Republicans to favor or vote for this Federal antilynching bill, I repudiate that as a misleading and unfair statement.

The Southwestern Christian Advocate, the organ of certain societies formed to stir up race hatred and race prejudice, under date of December 29, advocates the passage of the Dyer bill by the Republicans of this House, as a bill to pay the debts of the Republican Party. It says:

"Let it be said that if the party's debt to the Negro can be canceled by consummating this vast moral reform, which means so much for the future perpetuity of the Nation, the bargain would be legitimate and the Negro welcomes the deal."

Of course the Negro welcomes the "deal." Under the false statements of certain agitators, who are working to bring about race riots, the Negro will welcome the "deal." This bill will give him the opportunity in large cities to hide up dark alleys and in crowded buildings and shoot up innocent men, women, and children on the streets with United States courts and marshals hundreds of miles away.

I want to say as a Republican that there is no deal or bargain made by the Republican Party to pay off any alleged debts to the Negro by the passage of this antilynching bill. We as a party owe the colored people nothing, and for one I refuse to be politically blackmailed. [Applause.]

Do not, I beg of you, allow partisan appeals and party prejudice to blind you to disturb the peace and harmony of our national household and do a terrible injustice and wrong to our own people in any section of this great and united Nation.

This bill was referred to the Judiciary Committee, of which I am a member. We held extended hearings, principally upon the question of the constitutionality of such a law as was contemplated in this bill.

It is admitted by everyone that the only authority for this legislation is found in the last clause of the first section of the fourteenth amendment to the National Constitution; and that if that amendment does not authorize this legislation, then it would be unconstitutional and void. The last clause of the amendment reads as follows:

"No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States * * * nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

The Constitution very plainly and distinctly gives exclusive powers to each State to pass and enact its own police and criminal laws, to establish and conduct its own courts, to execute and enforce its own laws; but it does not in any way allow, suffer, or permit Congress, by legislation, to interfere with these powers exclusively given to the States. The tenth article of the Constitution of the United States reads as follows:

"The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution nor prohibited by it to the States are reserved to the States respectively or to the people."

To a committee of lawyers the legislation suggested by this bill gave rise at once to grave doubts as to its constitutionality and to the right of Congress to make a criminal code for the States or to deny to the States the enjoyment and discharge of their constitutional rights and powers.

To assist the committee on the question of the constitutionality of the provisions of this bill, we called before us the Attorney General of the United States. He sent his assistant, Mr. Goff, an able lawyer and one well qualified to advise the committee. In the course of his testimony, as set forth in the hearings, it seemed to me that the Attorney General's office considered itself in duty bound to support and recommend this bill as a party measure and advise its passage, because it was claimed by its author that it was so pledged by the Republican platform and recommended to Congress by the President.

Mr. GOODYKOONTZ. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HERSEY. I regret I cannot yield. I borrowed my time.

In other words, the Assistant Attorney General argued his case for the proponents of the bill with all the skill and ingenuity of a paid attorney representing a certain client's interests. Every decision and authority cited was so arranged, colored, and quoted as to make out a prima facie case for the bill and to advise the committee, in substance, that even if its constitutionality was in doubt, it ought to be put up to the Supreme Court. In other words, that Congress should pass its responsibility on to the United States Supreme Court. In the hearings there is a letter from the Honorable Moorfield Storey, of Massachusetts, who is attorney for an organization of agitators known as the "National Association for Advancement of Colored People", which has its headquarters in New York City, an organization whose work is to stir up the race question in the South and to induce the ignorant Negroes to believe that they are the victims of imaginary wrongs at the hands of the whites and that Congress can stop all lynchings. Mr. Storey, in recommending this legislation, said:

"It has seemed to me a very doubtful question whether legislation by Congress against lynching in the States is constitutional, but I am very clearly of opinion that it ought to be tried. I think the South expects it, and many of our southern citizens who are opposed to lynching will welcome it. At the most, the country will be no worse off if the experiment fails than it is now."

Mr. Storey seems to voice the sentiment of the proponents of this bill, first, that they are very doubtful of its constitutionality; second, it is therefore the duty of Congress to enact it and pass it on to the courts. I can understand the zeal of those who view this bill from the standpoint of political expediency. They say in so many words "This Republican Congress can satisfy the colored people of the South by the enactment of this legislation. If the Supreme Court declares it unconstitutional, which it doubtless will, if enacted, then the colored voters will have nobody to blame but the Supreme Court, and as the judges of that court are appointed for life and do not, like Representatives, come up every 2 years to be elected, they can suffer no harm, and the party will discharge its responsibility and in another way have taken care of the recommendation of the President." [Applause.]

During the past 10 years there has been a large exodus of Negroes from the South to the big cities of the border States. Today many Congressmen outside of the Southern States find in their districts strong organizations of colored voters who call themselves Republicans and who hold the balance of power and can elect or defeat many of the present Members of this House. They have only one political policy or interest, and that is to defeat for reelection any Member of Congress that votes against the Dyer bill. I know the awful pressure that is brought to bear upon certain of my party colleagues to vote for this bill with the hope and expectation that the Supreme Court will finally save the Nation from the folly of the Republican leaders, who by a party rule attempt to force this bill through the House.

I am what is known as a "regular Republican." Whenever I possibly can do so I work, act, and vote with my party. I support, if possible, the reports of the committees who have measures in charge and follow the party and the President at all times whenever I can do so conscientiously and without—in my opinion—violating my oath to support the Constitution. I have no criticism to make of those members of my committee who by a small margin voted out this bill. They have a right to their opinion the same as I. I am not the keeper of their conscience, even of their political conscience. I have carefully, seriously, and thoroughly investigated this legislation, and without any doubts I have arrived at the conclusion that this bill, if enacted, would violate the Constitution of the United States; and if it should possibly be held legal and constitutional by the Supreme Court of the land, then its effect upon the Nation as a whole would be most unfortunate and disastrous to peace and good order in the Nation, and as a law it would be necessarily vicious legislation, unwise, unenforceable, and unworkable. I am, therefore, driven by my investigation to oppose this bill by every proper means. I believe with Abraham Lincoln that—

"No man who has sworn to support the Constitution can conscientiously vote for what he understands to be an unconstitutional measure, however expedient he may think it.—Abraham Lincoln (Cooper Union, Feb. 27, 1860)."

[Applause.]

I hold, with our President, that this lynching problem presents conditions that cannot be removed. I endorse the solution of this problem when he said in his message:

"Some of the difficulties might be ameliorated by a humane and enlightened consideration of it, a study of its many aspects, and an effort to formulate, if not a policy, at least a national attitude of mind calculated to bring about the most satisfactory possible adjustment of relations between the races and of each race to the national life."

I also favor, as a sensible and practicable step in the right direction, the further suggestion of the President, that there should be created a commission of both races to study and report on the entire subject.

One of the most unfortunate features of this debate is the idea put forth by the advocates of this bill that its passage will forever stop all lynchings. The newspaper from which I last quoted in the same issue said:

"Passage of H. R. 13, commonly known as the "Dyer antilynching bill", now pending in Congress, will mark this the epochal Congress in the life of the Nation since the days of the great Lincoln, because it will settle in security the otherwise insecure lives and liberties of 12,000,000 colored American citizens and render stable the now shaking foundations of our American Government."

The advocates of this antilynching bill totally disregard the recommendations of the President and in its place they attempt by Federal statutes to invade the States with a horde of high-salaried United States marshals, attorneys, and carpetbaggers, and set aside the criminal laws of all the States and proceed to punish the innocent for the acts of the guilty.

The only evidence, if it may be called evidence, before the House that any State has legalized lynching or has denied to any person the equal protection of the laws comes to us from two interested and prejudiced sources. First, propaganda furnished through the mails to each Member of Congress from an organization in Alabama called the Tuskegee Institute for the Training of Colored Men and Women. Their matter consists of statistics prepared by someone unknown, purporting to show the total number of lynchings in the United States for the last 36 years. The average is 112 a year, and for the last year, that of 1921 complete, 62, or about one-half the average. They do not furnish one bit of evidence as to what any State has done or neglected to do to stop or punish these lynchings. They do not furnish the history of a single case as to what was done in the courts of the State to prevent the lynching or to punish the lynchers. They do not give a single fact as a basis for Congress to say that any State has denied to any person the equal protection of its laws.

2. The only other evidence before us is a mass of propaganda sent also through the mails to the Members of this House from a New York City organization called and known as the "National Association for the Advancement of Colored People." They furnish Congressmen with a lot of copies of sensational newspaper headings and highly colored "write-ups" about the lynching of one Lowrey for the killing of a farmer and his daughter in Arkansas a year ago. These newspaper clippings fail to state in what way the State denied the equal protection of its laws to the Negro who was lynched, not a word as to what was done to prevent the lynchers, but only the fact of the killing with its sensational "write-up" from the pen of a "cub" reporter and that is all, except the strained and senseless inference that if we had during this time a Federal antilynching law like the one before us, no lynching would have taken place. This New York organization also furnished to Members of Congress a clipping from the New York Evening Post, which said of the present bill:

"Even if the lynching law should be declared invalid by the Supreme Court, its mere enactment will have gone far to serve its purpose. Notice will have been served on States which have been derelict in their duty that the conscience of the Nation will not tolerate the perpetuation of an abuse and a crime that make us a byword in the public opinion of mankind. It is argued by the World this morning that no proof exists that the States as such have legalized or tolerated lynching. Yet we have the fact that in 1920 the mobs took 61 lives and in the present year 63 lives. There is no escape from the alternative that the States are either unable or unwilling to suppress mob murder."

The absurd logic of the Post is the position of the friends of this bill, to wit: If there has been committed in any State a murder, the fact is proof positive that the State is either unable or unwilling to suppress murder, and has therefore denied to the person killed the equal protection of the laws. [Applause.]

Someone in the course of this debate said, in substance, that the fact that more Negroes are lynched than whites is proof positive that the Negroes do not receive the equal protection of the laws. [Applause.] By that same logic, if in a certain State last year 4 persons were lynched, 2 Negroes and 2 whites, then in that case there would be equal protection of the laws. Such nonsense is not worthy the serious consideration of this national lawmaking body.

As one Member of this Congress, I refuse to pass my responsibility on to the courts. [Applause.] I decline to take the statistics of murder in the several States as proof that these States are denying to any person the equal protection of its laws. I do not believe that Congress, by doubtful Federal statutes, can conduct the affairs of the States of the Union better and more efficiently than the States themselves.

For the crime of lynching there is no excuse or apology; the whole soul and being of every true citizen, every lover of law and order, cries out in condemnation of what has been called "the most cowardly of crimes"; and if I could see my way clear to favor any lawful measure that would in any way prevent or lessen this crime, no one would be more enthusiastic in its support than I. [Applause.]

What does this bill propose to do to lessen or prevent the crime of lynching? The first section attempts to define the phrase "mob or riotous assemblage", as it is used in this act, and provides that to give the Federal courts jurisdiction five or more persons must participate in a lynching. If but four persons do the lynching, then this bill gives no authority to the Federal courts and officers to interfere. This makes this bill impossible of enforcement at the very start.

Section 2 is an attempt to make the Congress, acting in a legislative capacity, construe judicially the first section of the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and to put this legislative body in the absurd position of saying what the fourteenth amendment means, and what, under that amendment, is a denial by a State of the equal protection of the laws, attempting thereby to usurp the functions of the Supreme Court, which functions are not a part of the prerogatives of Congress.

It seems an almost absurd position for the Congress to say that whenever there is a lynching in a State it is proof positive that the State has denied to the person so lynched the equal protection of the laws under the Constitution. The Assistant Attorney General, to recommend this bill, was driven to the necessity of taking the position that Congress by this enactment could foreclose the Supreme Court from declaring the law unconstitutional by the mere force of section 2.

Mr. Goff, in his testimony before the committee, on page 38 of the hearings on House bill 13, says:

"Mr. GOFF. I contend this: If the State, in the mind of Congress, denies this right because all legislation assumes the existence of an evil to be corrected, then Congress, having legislatively determined that fact, the courts will not consider whether Congress was or was not justified, but will assume, because of Congress having passed appropriate legislation, that the States have denied the rights in question."

If the Supreme Court is to say that the passage of this bill is conclusive proof that the Congress has found, as a matter of fact, that the States have denied to any person the equal protection of the laws, then quit your responsibility as men and first obtain the evidence. How shall we obtain the evidence? Answer: By the creation of such a commission as was recommended to us by the President in his message; and then base our legislation, if any, on the report, findings, and recommendation of that commission.

Mr. Goff holds that we have no right to enact this bill unless Congress finds as a matter of fact that the States have denied to persons the equal protection of the laws. In this matter there is no evidence before Congress that any State in the Union has denied to any person the equal protection of the laws.

Mr. Goff is driven by this position to say, on page 39:

"If Congress saw fit to pass a law which came within the meaning, as the courts have defined that meaning, of the fourteenth amendment, that then the courts could not conduct an inquiry as to whether Congress was justified in deciding what is generally termed 'a legislative fact.'"

The Attorney General thus shifts the responsibility to Congress for the enactment of this most unwise legislation, and we have not one bit of evidence on which to base this bill according to the Attorney General.

There was not a word of evidence before our committee that any State of the Union had denied to any person the equal protection of the laws. There was no evidence that any State in the Union had enacted laws or had now upon its statute books any laws discriminating against any person or had denied by its provisions to any person or class of persons the equal protection of the laws. The only evidence whatever—if it might be called evidence—was some tables submitted by the proponents of the bill showing the number of lynchings in the Nation over a period of 30 years. The report on the bill of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Dyer] shows that in the year 1919, 83 persons were lynched in the United States, 4 whites, 2 Mexicans, and 77 Negroes; that in 1920, 65 persons were lynched in the Union, 6 whites and 59 Negroes; that in 1921, 4 whites and 48 Negroes were lynched in the Nation. If these figures are correct, they go to show that the crime of lynching is growing less in the United States every year and have been reduced 25 percent the past year. What was done by the States in these several cases to deny equal protection of the laws to the persons lynched was not shown. What efforts were made, if any, to stop the lynchings by the State, or its officers, were not shown. What proceedings were taken in the State courts, what trials were had in the State courts of the lynchers, was not shown.

In other words, the only evidence before the committee was the statement from these tables that certain persons from time to time are lynched in the United States, and there was no evidence whatever to show that any State had in any way through its laws or by its acts denied to any person so lynched the equal protection of the laws. It seems to me no lawyer in this House can deny for a moment that the mere fact that a murder had been committed would be any evidence that the State had denied the equal protection of its laws to the person killed, and yet this bill proceeds upon that assumption, and the Attorney General's office holds, if it holds anything, that notice of the fact of the murder is all that is necessary to enact a law to make a State liable in the Federal courts under this bill for the unlawful killing of a citizen by a mob. On page 43 of the hearings Assistant Attorney General Goff states:

"If the Congress of the United States, in view of the fact that a State has a law punishing murder, says there should be a Federal law punishing murder in order that there may be conceded to the people of that State an equal, vigorous, and speedy enforcement of the law and the protection of their lives and their property, then Congress would have the right, in the exercise of the correlative duty of protection, to do so."

My colleague from Nebraska on the committee [Mr. Reavis] asks Mr. Goff (p. 43):

"Would you carry that further, to burglary, larceny, and assault and battery?

"Mr. GOFF. Of course, the principle would carry us there."

Yes; of course "the principle would carry us there." Reason and logic carry us there. Our own common sense tells us that there is no escape from the absurd position in which the Congress would be placed if we should pass this bill. If we can enact a code of Federal law to punish the crime of lynching, we can pass a code of Federal criminal law for all the States to punish every offense now within the jurisdiction of State courts. We could send a host of new Federal judges into every State to replace the State courts. We could infest every State with a swarm of Federal officers to punish every crime known to the law, and the States of the Union would have left no rights that politicians in Congress would be bound to respect. [Applause.]

In Barbier v. Connolly (113 U. S., p. 13) the Supreme Court, in speaking of the fourteenth amendment, said:

"Neither the amendment, broad and comprehensive as it is, nor any other amendment was designed to interfere with the powers of the State, sometimes termed its "police power", to prescribe regulations to promote the health, peace, morals, education, and good order of the people."

During the debate on the rule the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Campbell] attempted, as chairman, to justify the action of the Committee on Rules in making this bill in order. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Kelley] interrupted to put to the gentleman from Kansas the following question:

"Mr. KELLEY of Michigan. The gentleman has undoubtedly given the constitutional phase of this question a good deal of attention. I should like to ask directly for his opinion in reference to section 2. It provides that when any State or governmental subdivision fails to protect life that State or subdivision shall be guilty of a violation of the provision of the Constitution which says that equal protection of the law shall be afforded. Does the gentleman think that a State, acting in perfect good faith and doing everything in its power to enforce the laws, when it fails to protect life transfers its jurisdiction over those crimes to the Federal Government?

"Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. That is the large question in this case."

Yes, it is indeed "the large question in this case"; but that question, however large, has been definitely settled by the highest court in the land. That court by a mass of decisions has held that the jurisdiction of the State to enact and enforce its own criminal laws cannot by Congress be transferred to the Federal Government.

In Virginia v. Rives (100 U. S. 313) the Supreme Court of the United States, in speaking of the limitations of the fourteenth amendment, said:

"These provisions of the fourteenth amendment have reference to State action exclusively, and not to any action of private individuals."

Lynching is the action of private individuals.

Section 3 of this bill provides that if any State or municipal officer fails, neglects, or refuses to make all reasonable efforts to prevent a mob or riotous assemblage from putting to death a person, or fails, neglects, or refuses to make all reasonable efforts to apprehend or prosecute to final judgment under the laws of his State all persons so participating in such mob or riotous assemblage, shall be guilty of a felony, and if convicted may be punished by imprisonment for 5 years and a fine of $5,000, or both fine and imprisonment.

Under this section Congress denies the right of the State to make and enforce its own criminal laws or to punish the neglects and delinquencies of its own officials.

Under this act a town constable, before his town has time to act, can be haled before a Federal court in some distant State, and if a Federal jury find that the constable did not, in their opinion, make all reasonable efforts to prevent the lynching or to apprehend the lynchers, then they may fine him $5,000 and imprison him for 5 years.

If such a law as is contemplated in this bill is enacted and declared constitutional, then there will be no police, no officers of the law provided by any State in the Union, because no sane person would accept the position of a peace officer with this terrible risk and penalty and punishment awaiting him in case a lynching should happen in his State. [Applause.]

This section further provides that any person who participates in a mob that takes from the custody or possession of any State or municipal officer any person held by such officer to answer some offense, or participates in putting such person to death, or obstructs or prevents any State or municipal officer in the discharge of his duty in the punishment of persons charged with the crime of lynching, shall be guilty of a felony and upon conviction may be imprisoned for life.

On Monday, December 19, the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. MCSWAIN] extended his remarks in the RECORD on this measure. His argument was a fine presentation of the unconstitutionality of this bill. I wish you all could read it before you vote upon this measure. On page 644 of the RECORD he says:

"It must be admitted that the laws of all States require arresting officers to protect their prisoners. In like manner, under the laws of all States, every participant in a lynching is a murderer.

Can it be fairly said that because an officer occasionally fails in his duty to protect his prisoner from lawless mobs that such exceptional act amounts to the action of the State as a subdivision of organized society in denying due process of law and in denying equal protection of law?

"If Congress can by law provide punishment in a Federal court for a State sheriff for his acts or neglect of action as sheriff, then Congress could provide punishment for the Governor of a State for his acts or failure to act as the State's chief executive. And if the State's executive officers may be punished by fine or imprisonment under congressional laws, so may the chief justice and all judges of the State. And by the same token the members of the State legislatures may be punished for enacting laws found to be violative of the fourteenth amendment."

I wish here in this connection to again call your attention to the fact that every State in the Union has laws making it a crime to interfere with or obstruct an officer in the performance of his duty, and can it be constitutional that whenever that crime is committed in any State the United States marshals may arrest the offender and take him before a Federal court in another State and, if in the opinion of a Federal jury, he did so obstruct the officer he may be convicted and imprisoned for life? Such an act would not be a denial by the State of the equal protection of the laws under the Constitution, but it would be a denial of the rights of the States and the rights of all persons under the National Constitution.

Section 4 removes the last vestige of the rights of the citizens of the several States. It provides that any person who participates in any mob or riotous assemblage by which a person is put to death shall be guilty of a felony, and on conviction thereof may be imprisoned for life.

Lynching is nothing but murder. All who engage in it are murderers. Every State in the Union has laws against murder, and until it is shown by proper evidence that a State has enacted laws denying to persons the equal protection of the laws the Federal power cannot interfere. This bill is an attempt to enact a Federal statute to punish in Federal courts the crime of murder in the several States. If enacted and held constitutional it could be used to sweep away all the laws of the States. Not a single State criminal law would remain superior to the Federal statutes, for, in the language of the Assistant Attorney General, "the same principle would apply to larceny, burglary, assault and battery." [Applause.]

Section 5 provides that any county in which a person is put to death by a mob shall forfeit $10,000 for the use of the family of the person so put to death. If he had no family then it goes to his parents, and if he had no parents then it is given to the United States.

A county is but a subdivision of a State. Under this bill it is not necessary that the county itself should have failed in any particular to do its utmost to prevent the lynching. It is not necessary that the county should have any knowledge of the lynching or have failed in any particular to prevent it. It is sufficient to punish the county in a Federal court that a lynching has taken place within its borders. The sheriff of the county may have tried his utmost to prevent the lynching. He may have been shot to death by the lynchers, but under this bill his family would receive nothing, while the family of the person so lynched would receive $10,000 from the innocent taxpayers of the county.

If such a Federal law is constitutional, then the inhabitants of a county, however innocent of wrong, have no rights whatever and may be deprived of property, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness by a Federal law every time a murder is committed within its borders. [Applause.]

Section 6 is the worst of all. It provides that if any person so put to death has been transferred by a mob from one county to another between capture and death each county through which he was so transported shall forfeit $10,000. It is not necessary to show that the murder was committed in that county or that the county had anything to do with the lynching or had neglected to do anything to stop it or even had any knowledge that it was being committed. It is sufficient under this bill to penalize the county, that in the darkness of night a mob crossed your county or mine or entered upon its soil, even by a few rods, while engaged in its work of lynching.

Mr. HARDY of Texas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HERSEY. I cannot yield to anyone, because I have borrowed my time, and the gentleman says he will not give me any more time if I yield.

I now turn from the very unsatisfactory light given by the Attorney General's Office and the proponents of this bill to some of the decisions of the highest court in the land, which decisions have construed the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution, an amendment under which the friends of this bill claim that this legislation has a legal right to live or it must die.

The fourteenth amendment was born in the stormy days of reconstruction. Many of the Southern States, after slavery was abolished, passed laws discriminating against the Negro in his civil rights; and to give him equal protection in his civil rights, in his voting, as a citizen, in his business, in the courts, in the selection of jurors, and in all other civil rights, the fourteenth amendment was enacted.

In the Slaughterhouse cases (16 Wallace, U. S., p. 81), Justice Miller told us the object and purpose of the fourteenth amendment. He said:

"In the light of the history of this amendment and the pervading purpose of them, which we have already discussed, it is not difficult to give a meaning to this clause (equal protection of the laws). The existence of laws in the States where the newly emancipated Negroes resided, which discriminated with gross injustice and hardship against them as a class, was the evil to be remedied by this clause, and by such laws are forbidden."

In the case of Strauder v. West Virginia (100 U. S. 303), a law which denied colored persons the right to sit on juries was declared void. The Court said:

"It (the fourteenth amendment) was designed to assure to the colored race the enjoyment of all the civil rights that under the law are enjoyed by white persons and to give to that race the protection of the General Government in that enjoyment whenever it should be denied by the States."

The particular action of the State prohibited by the fourteenth amendment is fully set forth in the Civil Rights cases, United States against Stanley, Ryan, and others, found in the United States Reports, volume 109, page 11, in which the Court said:

"It is State action of a particular character that is prohibited. Individual invasion of individual rights is not the subject matter of the amendment. It has a deeper and broader scope. It nullifies and makes void all State legislation and State action of every kind which impairs the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States, or which injures them in life, liberty, or property without due process of law, or which denies to any of them the equal protection of the laws. * * * The last section of the amendment invests Congress with power to enforce it by appropriate legislation. To enforce what? To enforce the prohibition. To adopt legislation for correcting the effects of such prohibited State laws and State acts, and thus to render them effectually null, void, and innocuous. This is the legislative power conferred upon Congress, and this is the whole of it. It does not invest Congress with power to legislate upon subjects which are within the domain of State legislation, but to provide modes of relief against State legislation or State action of the kind referred to. It does not authorize Congress to create a code of municipal law for the regulation of private rights, but to provide modes of redress against the operation of State laws and the action of State officers, executive or judicial, when these are subversive of the fundamental rights specified in the amendment. Positive rights and privileges are undoubtedly secured by the fourteenth amendment, but they are secured by way of prohibition against State laws and State proceedings affecting those rights and privileges, and by power given to Congress to legislate for the purpose of carrying such prohibition into effect, and such legislation must necessarily be predicated upon such supposed State laws or State proceedings and be directed to the correction of their operation and effect."

Mr. Justice Field, in the One Hundred and Thirteenth United States Reports, page 27, in the case of Barbier against Connolly, made plain the purpose of the fourteenth amendment and its limitations. He said:

"The fourteenth amendment, in declaring that no State 'shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws', undoubtedly intended not only that there should be no arbitrary deprivation of life or liberty or arbitrary spoliation of property, but that equal protection and security should be given to all under like circumstances in the enjoyment of their personal and civil rights; that all persons should be equally entitled to pursue their happiness and acquire and enjoy property; that they should have like access to the courts of the country for the protection of their persons and property, the prevention and redress of wrongs, and the enforcement of contracts; that no impediment should be interposed to the pursuits of anyone except as applied to the same pursuits by others under like circumstances; that no greater burdens should be laid upon one than are laid upon others in the same calling and condition; and that in the administration of criminal justice no different or higher punishment should be imposed upon one than such as is prescribed to all for like offenses. But neither the amendment, broad and comprehensive as it is, nor any other amendment was designed to interfere with the power of the State, sometimes termed its police power, to prescribe regulations to promote the health, peace, morals, education, and good order of the people.

This was followed by the decision of the Pembina Mining Co. against the State of Pennsylvania, One Hundred and Twenty-fifth United States Reports, page 181, in which the Court said:

"The inhibition of the amendment that no State shall deprive any person within its jurisdiction of the equal protection of the laws was designed to prevent any person or class of persons from being singled out as a special subject for discriminatory and hostile legislation."

A later decision is found in James against Bowman, One Hundred and Ninetieth United States Reports, pages 127 to 137. There the late Justice Brewer construed the fourteenth amendment as follows:

"The equality of the rights of citizens is a principle of republicanism; every republican government is in duty bound to protect all its citizens in the enjoyment of this principle if within its power. That duty was originally assumed by the States, and it still remains there. The only obligation resting upon the United States is to see that the States do not deny the right. This the amendment guarantees, but no more. The power of the Government is limited to the enforcement of this guaranty."

The late James G. Blaine, of my State, was a Member of Congress when the fourteenth amendment was passed. In his great work Twenty Years of Congress, volume 2, page 313, he makes plain what Congress intended to be the purpose and limitations of that amendment. He says:

"Under it the citizen of foreign birth cannot be persecuted by discriminatory statutes, nor can any citizen of dark complexion be deprived of a single privilege or immunity which belongs to the white man. Nor can the Catholic or the Protestant or the Jew be placed under the ban or subjected to any deprivation of personal or religious right. It curtails the power of the States to shelter the wrongdoer or to authorize crime by a statute."

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Maine has expired.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman 5 minutes more.

Mr. UPSHAW. Give him 5 minutes of my time.

Mr. HERSEY. I would like to have 10 minutes.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. All right.

Mr. HERSEY. It was contended in our committee and by friends of this bill in the debate in the House that this Federal antilynching legislation was justified and constitutional because it is claimed that there is a precedent in the late Volstead enforcement code making the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors a Federal offense.

This contention of the proponents of this bill is very unfortunate for the constitutional side of this bill. A moment's thought must satisfy us that the eighteenth amendment, instead of being in favor of this legislation, is directly opposed to it.

Many years ago some of the States of the Union, like Maine and Kansas, enacted prohibitory laws outlawing the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor within the borders of their States. They passed also amendments to their State constitutions making it unlawful to manufacture or sell liquors. On appeal to the United States Supreme Court that Court held these statutes and amendments to their State constitutions were lawful under the police power given to the States by the Federal Constitution.

The Supreme Court said in substance the States have a right to enact their own criminal laws. They have the police power, and it is not only their duty, but it is their exclusive duty to enforce the police powers under the Constitution.

Afterward the friends of prohibition appealed to the Congress to enact Federal statutes making it a crime to manufacture and sell intoxicating liquors in every State in the Nation. In other words, they demanded of Congress Federal prohibition. Congress rightfully replied that they had no authority to enact such laws without an amendment to the Constitution. This position was admitted by all lawyers, and afterward Congress did submit to the people, and there was duly passed and made a permanent part of the Federal Constitution, the eighteenth amendment, making it a Federal crime to manufacture or sell intoxicating liquors, giving the States concurrent power with the Federal Government in the enforcement of laws to carry out the amendment and giving Congress authority to enact an enforcement code to carry out the purpose of the eighteenth amendment.

The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Volstead], Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, immortalized himself as author of what is known as the "Volstead Enforcement Act", which provides for the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment by Federal authority in conjunction with and in concurrence with the States.

On appeal to the Supreme Court by the breweries, distillers, and liquor sellers that Congress had no right to enact this enforcement code, the Supreme Court has recently held that Congress had that right because of the eighteenth amendment, which made the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor a Federal offense, and that Congress received from the eighteenth amendment authority to enact a Federal enforcement code, and so held the act of Congress constitutional.

What do we find in the bill before us? Not a resolution of Congress submitting the twentieth amendment to the people of the Nation, making lynching a Federal offense in every State in the Union, and authorizing Congress to enact a Federal code for the enforcement of the amendment. Nothing of the kind, but in its place we find this strange situation, not altogether Volstead enforcement code but the Dyer enforcement bill to enforce an amendment not now in existence.

Neither in the fourteenth amendment nor in any other amendment is lynching made a Federal offense, and until it is made a Federal offense by a constitutional amendment to the Federal Constitution and authority given to Congress to enact an enforcement code to carry out the purposes of such an amendment Congress has no power whatever to enact this bill.

If this bill should pass and become a law, and after that a person should be arrested for participating in a lynching and taken before the Federal court and convicted, and he should appeal to the Supreme Court on the ground that the law under which he was convicted was unconstitutional, I can imagine the scene in the Supreme Court of the United States when the constitutionality of that law should come up for argument.

When the code to enforce the eighteenth amendment was before the Supreme Court my chairman, Mr. Volstead, was for the law and its constitutionality, because, as he claimed, he was backed by the eighteenth amendment.

On the other side then was my friend from Missouri [Mr Dyer], author of this bill, who was opposed to the national prohibitory law on the ground that it was not constitutional and that Congress had no right to enact it. Now, when this bill comes before the Supreme Court, there is a wonderful change. On the day that the Constitution is to be crucified by the antilynching bill Pilate and Herod become friends. The gentleman from Missouri and the gentleman from Minnesota are now claiming that this law, this antilynching bill, is constitutional without any constitutional amendment whatever.

When the Supreme Court asks Mr. Volstead for his authority for the enactment of this legislation by Congress without an amendment to the Constitution making lynching a Federal offense, Mr. Volstead will stammer and say that his friend Mr. Dyer will present that side of the case, because he, Mr. Volstead, is more familiar with the eighteenth amendment than he would be with Mr. Dyer's bill, and the court would call upon Mr. Dyer to answer the person convicted how the court could hold this antilynching enforcement law constitutional without a constitutional amendment authorizing it, and Mr. Dyer would say in substance, as he said the other day to us:

"I have here, your honor, clippings from many newspapers all over the land recommending this legislation. I want to tell your honors about the awful riot out in St. Louis, my old State, some 4 years ago, known as the 'race riots', where 100 persons were shot and burned. I do not know who did the shooting, but it was done in a riot and by a mob, and it was caused by race feeling and prejudice, and for that reason we want this legislation to be held constitutional."

I can see the kindly Chief Justice, with that well-known broad smile spreading over his face, saying to Mr. Dyer: "The Court is not interested in the St. Louis riot or any newspaper clippings about the advisability of preventing lynching. We want you to point out to us the constitutional amendment that justifies making lynching a Federal offense." And Mr. Dyer would say, "We rely upon the fourteenth amendment, your honor." And the Court would say to Mr. Dyer, "The fourteenth amendment is to prevent discriminatory legislation on behalf of the States; it aims at State enactments and not the acts of individuals, and our Court has held that by repeated decisions by Justice Miller, Justice Field, and very lately by the late Justice Brewer that, under the fourteenth amendment, Congress has no right to enact a Federal code of criminal law for the States, and that the fourteenth amendment is limited to discriminatory legislation by State laws that do not give to all persons the equal protection of the laws." And then the Court will say, "That the appeal is sustained and the law declared unconstitutional, indictment dismissed, and prisoner discharged."

If the court should render any further opinion, it would hold, as it has held so many times, that Congress cannot make individual acts a Federal offense without a constitutional amendment. The court might, however, refresh the recollection of the gentleman from Missouri, Mr. Dyer, by citing the following case:

The Supreme Court of the United States in United States v. Harris (106 U. S. Repts., p. 638) construed the purpose and limitations of the two sections of the fourteenth amendment. The Court said:

"It is a guaranty against the acts of the State government itself. It is a guaranty against the exertion of arbitrary and tyrannical power on the part of the government and legislature of the State, not a guaranty against the commission of individual offenses; and the power of Congress, whether express or implied, to legislate for the enforcement of such a guaranty does not extend to the passage of laws for the suppression of crime within the States. The enforcement of the guaranty does not require to authorize Congress to perform the duty that the guaranty itself supposes it to be the duty of the State to perform, and which it requires the State to perform."

I want to say a word as to the effect of this legislation, should it be passed by Congress and be held constitutional by the courts. The law will be most unwise and absolutely unworkable. It could never be enforced by all the Federal courts of the Union and all the United States marshals in the Nation. The States must be left to work out their own destiny, to enact and enforce their own laws in accordance with the Constitution. The Federal power ought not to enter the domain of the State and take possession of the prerogatives, duties, and responsibilities of the States and attempt to perform their work. The fourteenth amendment contemplates that where States enact laws that discriminate between persons, and deny to any person the equal protection of the laws, that such enactments of any State are null and void. The fourteenth amendment goes no further.

It is generally claimed by the advocates of this bill that if enacted into law it is for the purpose of preventing lynching in certain Southern States, and particularly the lynching of the Negro.

If there are more Negroes lynched than whites, it is because of certain monstrous crimes committed by the Negro that arouse the blood of the white race. The terrible crime of rape was a legacy left to the South after the destruction of slavery. The South must deal with this awful problem. They are dealing with it. Every Southern State has laws punishing the crime of lynching. It is said that the State of Georgia is the greatest offender, and yet I find in a late edition of the Concord (N. H.) Monitor, the following:

[From the Concord (N. H.) Monitor]

"On a Friday morning recently two Negroes committed a heinous crime in Wayne County, Ga. By the following Wednesday morning the criminals had been caught, indicted by jury in open court at the county seat, found guilty, and sentenced to death. That sentence is soon to be executed.

"The whole proceedings, says an Atlanta newspaper, with pardonable pride, "passed off with dignity, order, and precision." The community in which the crime was perpetrated is satisfied, and all the more so because fundamental justice has been done without any sacrifice of self-respect.

"The only excuse for lynching has been its effectiveness. The legal procedure in this case was just as effective as a lynching bee. This is the way, and the only way, to stop lynching in criminal cases that involve race prejudice or invite the moral hatred of a community."

The New York World, in a recent issue under the title "High Cost of Lynching", says:

"The award of $2,000 damages made by a South Carolina court to the widow of a victim of mob violence establishes an interesting precedent. In April 1920 Joe Stewart, a Negro, was taken from the jail at Laurens, S. C., and hanged. Suit for this amount under the constitutional requirements was brought by the widow in the common pleas court, and the presiding justice directed the jury to return a verdict against the county for the full sum. * * * If it is going to cost even $2,000 to lynch a Negro in South Carolina, it is conceivable that the price may prove a deterrent to lynchings."

The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Dyer] inserts in the RECORD a clipping from a newspaper that wants the Dyer bill because it says it will stop all lynchings. It says of the efforts of southern Governors to prevent lynchings, as follows:

"Morrow, of Kentucky, puts through an automatic-removal law against officers derelict in the face of mobs and employs State soldiery to prevent lynching.

"McRae, of Arkansas, demands most stringent laws and their enforcement against lynchers.

"Cooper, of South Carolina, made a Nation-wide reputation by his use of National Guard against would-be lynchers.

"Under the fearless administration of Bickett, that great defense of the Goldsboro courthouse against the mob became practically possible.

"Dorsey, of Georgia, organized a State-wide movement against the continuance of the foulest and longest of all lynching records.

"And now Governor Neff, of Texas, goes up and down the State appealing for law enforcement and for order.

"However sincere and courageous, the southern Governors' efforts to stamp out lynching, they come to naught."

The President said the condition could not be removed.

The President further said:

"I am convinced that in mutual tolerance, understanding, charity, recognition of the interdependence of the races, and the maintenance of the rights of citizenship lies the road to righteous adjustment."

Under the Dyer bill there is to its advocates no other road but Federal laws, United States marshals, Federal troops and the bayonet, civil war, and race riots.

The Southern States are enforcing laws today similar to the one provided in this bill. It is their duty to so enact and enforce such laws. It is not the duty of Congress to interfere in the working out of this great problem by the States of the Union.

Over 30 years ago the immortal Henry W. Grady left his southern home and made a fraternal visit to the people of the North. He was the best friend the colored people ever had. He told us that the great race problem could not be settled by Federal statutes by sending to the Southern States United States marshals and a new force of "carpetbaggers" on the problem that this bill seeks to settle.

Grady said:

"The future holds a problem in solving which the South must stand alone, in dealing with which she must come closer together than ambition or despair have driven her, and on the outcome of which her very existence depends. This problem is to carry within her body politic two separate races, and nearly equal in numbers. She must carry these races in peace, for discord means ruin. She must carry them separately, for assimilation means debasement. She must carry them in equal justice, for to this she is pledged in honor and in gratitude. She must carry them unto the end, for in human probability she will never be quit of either.

"This burden no other people bears today—on none hath it ever rested. Without precedent or companionship, the South must bear this problem, the awful responsibility of which should win the sympathy of all humankind and the protecting watchfulness of God alone, even unto the end."

What wonderful progress the South has made in giving to the colored race the equal protection of the laws during the last 30 years! It is not contended by the proponents of this bill that today any State of the Union has in its constitution a single provision in violation of the fourteenth amendment of the Federal Constitution. It is not claimed for a moment that any of the States have now a single statute that discriminates against any person or class of persons. No one claims as an excuse for this bill that any State in all this broad land has laws that deprive any person or class of persons of the equal protection of the laws.

Today each State has its own constitution, patterned after and in accordance, conformity, and harmony with the Constitution of the United States. Every unconstitutional provision of the past that has discriminated in any manner against the colored race has been swept aside and declared null and void by the Supreme Court of the United States. Every State has its own legislature that enacts laws for the government, guidance, and protection of all its citizens. Every State has its courts to construe its laws and dispense justice to its people. Every State has its governors, sheriffs, and police officers to enforce its laws. These are sacred rights reserved by the Constitution of the United States to the several States, and these rights you and I under oath are sworn to preserve and protect.

Since the days of Blaine and Grady the sons of the Blue and the Gray have fought side by side on land and on sea, first to liberate the slaves of Spain. Then next the soldiers of the North and the South, forgetting partisanship and sectionalism, have borne the old flag of the fathers to triumphant victory on the blood-red fields of France; and while I am speaking to you together the sons of the Blue and the Gray sleep side by side under the poppies of Flanders Field. Only yesterday the path of the President was strewn with flowers by the people of the South. Never was this Nation more happily united. Here in the Capital of the Nation we have been spending the past 2 months with the great leaders of the civilized world. We have been trying to demonstrate how beautiful it is for nations to dwell together in unity.

In the afterglow of these happy Christmas hours through which we have just passed, when our hearts cry out "Peace on earth, good will toward men", it is no time to enact this monstrous law that can have no other effect or result than to fan into flames the expiring embers of race and class hatred and bring back again to the beautiful Southland the awful horrors of those days of darkness that followed the Civil War. God help us as Republicans to forget the doubtful political value of this bill and work together, North and South, East and West, for the peace, prosperity, glory, and grandeur of a united Republic. [Applause.]

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] has the floor. Does he yield to the Senator from West Virginia?

Mr. BANKHEAD. For what purpose?

Mr. NEELY. For the purpose of opposing the filibuster which has been in progress during the last week, and of speaking in favor of the enactment of the so-called "Costigan-Wagner antilynching bill."

Mr. BANKHEAD. No; I cannot yield for that purpose. I thought the Senator wanted to have something printed in the RECORD. I cannot yield for a speech.

Mr. NEELY. Will the Senator indicate, if he knows, when he will probably conclude his remarks?

Mr. BANKHEAD. That depends on the further action of the Senate. I cannot yield, though, for a speech at this time. That is out of the question, although I desire to be friendly and courteous to my friend from West Virginia.

Mr. NEELY. That is thoroughly understood.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I think we ought to have a quorum present, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Connally	King	Schall
Ashurst	Copeland	La Follette	Schwellenbach
Austin	Costigan	Lewis	Sheppard
Bachman	Couzens	Logan	Shipstead
Bailey	Dickinson	Lonergan	Smith
Bankhead	Dieterich	McCarran	Steiwer
Barbour	Donahey	McGill	Thomas, Okla.
Barkley	Duffy	McKellar	Thomas, Utah
Bilbo	Fletcher	McNary	Townsend
Black	Frazier	Minton	Trammell
Borah	Gibson	Murray	Truman
Brown	Glass	Neely	Tydings
Bulkley	Gore	Norris	Vandenberg
Bulow	Guffey	Nye	Van Nuys
Burke	Hale	O'Mahoney	Wagner
Byrd	Harrison	Overton	Walsh
Byrnes	Hastings	Pittman	Wheeler
Capper	Hatch	Pope	White
Caraway	Hayden	Radcliffe
Carey	Johnson	Robinson
Clark	Keyes	Russell

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-one Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Alabama yield to me for a motion?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate adjourn until 3 o'clock and 30 minutes this afternoon.

Mr. COSTIGAN. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GLASS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CUTTING]. I am not advised as to how he would vote; but, regardless of that, I transfer my pair to the junior Senator from Iowa [Mr. MURPHY]. I am not advised how he would vote, if present, but I vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I desire to announce that the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MALONEY] is absent because of illness, and that the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. COOLIDGE], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG], the Senator from California [Mr. MCADOO], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. MURPHY], and the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] are unavoidably detained from the Senate.

I wish also to announce the necessary absence of the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GERRY] and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MOORE]. I am instructed to announce that both Senators, if present and voting, would vote "nay."

Mr. LOGAN. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS], who is absent. If I were permitted to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I announce the necessary absence of my colleague [Mr. BONE] on departmental business, and announce further that if he were present he would vote "nay."

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce the necessary absence of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK] and the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE]. They are paired on this question. If the Senator from South Dakota were present, he would vote "nay", and the Senator from Georgia, if present, would vote "yea."

I also announce the necessary absence of the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF] and the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS], who are paired. On this vote the Senator from Rhode Island, if present, would vote "nay", and the Senator from North Carolina, if present, would vote "yea."

I further desire to announce that the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS], if present, would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 48, nays 32, as follows:

YEAS—48

Adams	Byrnes	Hatch	Pope
Ashurst	Caraway	Hayden	Radcliffe
Bachman	Clark	King	Robinson
Bailey	Connally	Lewis	Russell
Bankhead	Couzens	Lonergan	Sheppard
Barkley	Dieterich	McGill	Shipstead
Bilbo	Duffy	McKellar	Smith
Black	Fletcher	Murray	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	Frazier	Norris	Thomas, Utah
Brown	Glass	O'Mahoney	Trammell
Bulow	Gore	Overton	Truman
Byrd	Harrison	Pittman	Wheeler

NAYS—32

Austin	Dickinson	La Follette	Steiwer
Barbour	Donahey	McCarran	Townsend
Bulkley	Gibson	McNary	Tydings
Burke	Guffey	Minton	Vandenberg
Capper	Hale	Neely	Van Nuys
Carey	Hastings	Nye	Wagner
Copeland	Johnson	Schall	Walsh
Costigan	Keyes	Schwellenbach	White

NOT VOTING—15

Bone	George	Maloney	Murphy
Coolidge	Gerry	McAdoo	Norbeck
Cutting	Logan	Metcalf	Reynolds
Davis	Long	Moore

So the motion was agreed to; and (at 3 o'clock and 16 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until 3 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m., Wednesday, May 1, 1935.

SENATE

WEDNESDAY, MAY 1, 1935

The Senate met at 3 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, who art evermore ready to hear than we to pray, and art wont to grant unto us more than we either desire or deserve, pour down upon us Thy Holy Spirit. Visit, we pray Thee, our country, and particularly the Members of the Senate, with Thy loving favor. Enlighten their minds more and more with the light of the everlasting Gospel; graft in their hearts a love of the truth; increase in them true religion; nourish them with all goodness, and keep them, and those things committed to their care, under Thy fatherly guidance this day and throughout the days that lie ahead.

We ask it in Thy name and for Thy sake, O blessed Savior of the world, who didst come, not to be ministered unto but to minister, and who hast given Thy life a ransom for the world. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. ROBINSON, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of that part of the calendar day Wednesday, May 1, 1935, embraced in the legislative day of Monday, April 15, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

CHICAGO WORLD'S FAIR CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a joint letter from the Secretary of State, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Secretary of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to law, as members of the Chicago World's Fair Centennial Commission, a detailed statement of expenditures, together with other reports concerning the character and extent of Federal participation in A Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago during the year 1933, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

IMPORTS OF AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to Senate Resolution 111 (agreed to on Mar. 29, 1935), certain statistics regarding imports of agricultural products, and also enclosing a weekly publication of the Department of Agriculture, entitled "Foreign Crops and Markets", showing the agricultural commodities which have been tabulated as "competitive", which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I ask that the report may be printed as a Senate document.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to Senate Resolution 111 (agreed to Mar. 29, 1935), certain statistics showing the commercial production of raw cotton in principal countries in the period 1904 to 1935; the estimated world carry-over of raw cotton as of July 31 for the years 1921 to 1934; and the quantity and value of the exports and imports of raw cotton for the period 1909 to 1934, by leading producing countries and principal importing countries, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I ask that the report may be printed as a Senate document.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. BYRD, from the Committee on Rules, to which was referred the resolution (S. Res. 118) creating a standing Committee on Air Commerce and Civil Aviation, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 562) thereon.

Mr. HATCH, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 2608) to authorize an appropriation to pay non-Indian claimants whose claims have been extinguished under the act of June 7, 1924, but who have been found entitled to awards under said act as supplemented by the act of May 31, 1933, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 563) thereon.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 2655) to define the election procedure under the act of June 18, 1934, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 564) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (S. 1696) for the relief of Mary Sky Necklace, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 565) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each with amendments and submitted reports thereon:

S. 381. A bill for the relief of the Confederated Bands of Ute Indians located in Utah, Colorado, and New Mexico (Rept. No. 566); and

S. 1697. A bill providing old-age pensions for Indian citizens of the United States (Rept. No. 567).

Mr. WHEELER, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 96) to carry out the intention of Congress with reference to the claims of the Crow Tribe of Indians of Montana and any band thereof against the United States, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 568) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (S. 1637) to extend further the operation of an act of Congress approved January 26, 1933 (47 Stat. 776), entitled "An act relating to the deferment and adjustment of construction charges for the years 1931 and 1932 on Indian irrigation projects", reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 569) thereon.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma:

A bill (S. 2730) to relieve restricted Indians whose lands have been taxed or have been lost by failure to pay taxes, and for other purposes;

A bill (S. 2731) to create an Indian Claims Commission, to provide for the powers, duties, and functions thereof, and for other purposes; and

(By request.) A bill (S. 2732) to amend section 7 of the act approved February 27, 1925 (43 Stat. L. 1011), relating to the descent of restricted Osage Indian property; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. CLARK:

A bill (S. 2733) for the relief of Charles Edward Poole; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

EXTENSION OF NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY ACT

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I introduce a joint resolution for appropriate reference and wish to make a very brief statement about it.

This morning the Committee on Finance took under consideration the matter of the extension or renewal of the N. R. A., and voted upon certain questions of principle in connection with the proposed extension. The committee, by a vote of 16 to 3, decided to report a resolution extending the life of the N. R. A. until April 1, 1936, and appointed a subcommittee composed of the chairman of the committee, the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. HASTINGS], and myself to prepare a draft of the resolution in accordance with the principles indicated by the vote of the committee this morning.

The joint resolution which I am introducing embodies the report of the subcommittee, and I offer the resolution and ask that it be referred to the Committee on Finance.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 113) to extend until April 1, 1936, the provisions of title I of the National Industrial Recovery Act, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Finance.

INJUNCTIONS AGAINST PUBLICLY OWNED POWER PLANTS

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The resolution (S. Res. 123) submitted by Mr. NORRIS on April 27 (legislative day of April 15, 1935), was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Federal Power Commission be, and it is hereby, directed to furnish to the Senate:

(1) A list of all the publicly owned electric generating or distributing plants, whether Federal, State, county, or municipal, in the United States in which the installation, organization, or operation of such plants has been interfered with by reason of restraining orders or injunctions issued (a) in Federal courts and (b) in State courts;

(2) The delay, if any, in each case that has occurred by reason of such restraining order or injunction; and

(3) The expense, both direct and indirect, in each case that has been incurred by the owner of such publicly owned electric generating or distributing plant by reason of such restraining order or injunction.

PROPAGANDA—ADDRESS BY JOHN STEWART BRYAN

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an address on Propaganda delivered by John Stewart Bryan before the American Newspaper Publishers' Convention in New York City on April 24, 1935.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Thirty years ago, when we came to these meetings in New York, it never entered our minds that we would be confronted with any such problems as those facing us today. We look around this room and see very few of the old guard who ranted and roared in those happy days about propaganda. Their fears and interests were all based on a desire to keep a few chiseling patent-medicine men from getting publicity without paying for it. We did not then know what could happen in the way of free publicity, or what dangers were involved in opening up the field for the scientific use of propaganda. But we know today, and we know that the Oxford dictionary is entirely correct, psychologically and historically, in the definition it gives, to wit:

"Propaganda: Any association, systematic scheme, or concerted movement for the propagation of a particular doctrine or practice."

This name, as you know, was derived from the celebration of a society for the spread of the Gospel, but in modern political science the word "propaganda" is used as a term of reproach to secret associations for the spread of opinions and principles which are viewed, says Brande in his Dictionary of Political Science, by most governments with horror and aversion. Naturally, however, even governments fail to have horror and aversion when this powerful and insidious mechanism is used in developing ideas which the government holds dear to itself.

But the mere fact that a government in power likes propaganda no more robs that activity of its dangers than the fact that an addict likes morphine will deprive that drug of its deadly quality. And we as a profession and business which owes our lifeblood to the printing and unimpeded circulation of news which is in itself honestly conceived and honestly put forth, see in the prostitution to selfish and private ends of the press, the radio, to say nothing of the stentorian voice of the stump speaker, the complete destruction of that confidence in statement upon which, in the final analysis, sound dealing between man and man must depend.

It is worth while for us today to take account of part of what has happened. First, let us look abroad. In a speech made at Bloomington, Ind., last Friday by Lee White, of the Detroit News, the occasion being a memorial service for Don Mellett, he said that 80 percent of the press of the world today is under censorship.

Thirty years ago, with the exception of Russia and perhaps Japan, there was practically no censorship. Look at the change that has taken place in a generation. There is no semblance of freedom today in Germany, Russia, Austria, Italy, Jugoslavia, Rumania, Turkey, Japan, Poland, and Hungary, and the boasted freedom of France is tainted through and through by the open and acknowledged servitude of the press to the most degrading censorship—the censorship of the higher for the harlot words that walk the streets.

Foreign Affairs and the Living Age in their last issues give a clear and specific instance of the depths to which the character of the press of France has fallen. It makes little difference to the public who look for their information whether the pollution springs from the order of the minister of communications or from the order of the controlling stockholder, who is himself controlled by the bank, the munitions manufacturer, the trade association, or a party of frank propagandists.

A modern case in point is the use made by Bismarck of the plan that Napoleon III had worked out in perfectly good faith for the development of the United States of Europe. Himself an idealist, Napoleon III had drawn up a plan with Bismarck, in which the United States of Europe was set up as a step toward this achievement, and it was agreed that Belgium must be partitioned. It was all just a paper plan, but when Bismarck and Von Roon sent the celebrated Ens Dispatch, which precipitated the Franco-Prussian War, Bismarck sent for deBlowitz, the correspondent of the London Times, and gave him the rough draft of the Napoleonic plan. The result was that the whole spirit of Europe crystallized against France.

We in America need not think that we are not as others. We have a great deal of just satisfaction in our fight for a free press, and yet we must never forget that a free press postulates a free mind.

The old English common law understood that no witness could testify freely if he was under, as the phrase has it, the torture of fear or the false flattery of hope. If we translate that into our modern phraseology, we would say, perhaps, that no newspaper is to be trusted that gives its evidence under the torture of losing circulation or the hope of gaining advertising.

So the correlative of freedom is the exercise of courage—courage shot through with information and purposeful wisdom and the sense of social duty. One editor may highly resolve to give his readers the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; and another may deliberately set out to give only such information as will further the aims of some special interest. The motives behind these editors are vastly different, but if the first editor—the high-minded brother—uses hand-outs prepared by the publicity man of the special interest, his noble aspirations and patriotic motives will not be translated into reasoned action on the part of his readers.

A doctor who gives poison by mistake is just as surely the cause of death of the patient as the man who gives the poison intentionally.

Our problem, then, is not so much to insure to one another high ideals as it is to assure ourselves of information of whose correctness we are certain, and whose sources are unbiased and competent.

Now, it has been remarked by even the man in the street that for a generation there has not been such interest in politics, or such a news source as Washington. What do we get when we look to Washington for facts? We find that Congress passed a law 22 years ago which provides:

"No money appropriated by any act (of Congress) shall be used for the compensation of any publicity expert unless specifically appropriated for that purpose."

In a recent speech Elisha Hanson, of Washington, declared that this law has been evaded by giving to the official publicity men a lot of high-sounding titles and extra-special employment. As yet, however, Congress has done nothing about the matter, although the "goldfish bowl" of the National Press Club regularly reports more and more men drafted from active newspaper work to do Government publicity. The cost of the men so employed is estimated by Walter Lippmann as $1,050,000. These men are engaged just as undisguisedly in selling the views of the department that retains them as Hitler is engaged in forcing his Nazi philosophy into the mind of every German, or as Stalin is devoted to making the wishes and purposes of the Communist leaders of Russia the last word of the gospel to that nation and the final revelation of human destiny.

There is nothing to be gained by deploring this course of action. Every administration on earth has uniformly tried to protect itself, and each department head seeks access to the public mind by his own band of publicity agents, though often enough the result is that we find ourselves, as taxpayers and citizens, supporting expensive propaganda for diametrically opposed purposes.

The fact that Secretary Perkins and Chairman Biddle are sending out conflicting arguments for the court of final resort in labor disputes, and the contest going on between the publicity departments of the Department of Commerce and the Agricultural Department as to maintaining or destroying the merchant marine, is a complete evidence that even governmental heads may differ.

No one can doubt the value to the department, however, of this method of approach when we look back and see what General Johnson got for himself. In 1933 he was the big news of America. The fact that many people then believed that N. R. A. would come to the end it has apparently reached had nothing to do with its power at that time, for whether we like it or not it was working, and the public found themselves in the position of the man whose lawyer said to him, "The State has no right to put you in jail", and he replied, "But I am in jail!" What General Johnson was going to do, when he was going to turn on the heat, how he was going to crack down, whom he was going to destroy, and whom he was going to perpetuate so long as he was in power was obviously first-page news of the first quality. But how would an editor who wants the low-down go about securing it? He would have to send to Washington, and his reporter or representative would have to go to the departments and meet the publicity advisor or public-relations counsel, or what not, and get from him such news, or such so-called "news", as this official saw fit to give out.

Now, the crux of the whole situation, the vital instructive and destructive change, lies in the fact that no longer do the department heads even pretend to give out unbiased and nonpartisan information. The news is given out today to make prestige and position for the Department from which it emanates. According to their own bulletin, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, in the first year of its existence, issued nearly 5,000 news releases. The field-contact secretary of the press section, among other duties, is expected to plan and prepare material for speeches relating to the activities and programs of the administration, and to arrange for and coordinate the speaking activities of officials and others in the administration.

The Farm Credit Administration states that the office of director of information will write, on request, articles for periodical publications, and will also supervise the work of the 13 information agents in the field who disseminate information to the public and the press in their respective districts in the field.

The said department, for example, has a chief of the division of current information.

In the Treasury Department the Treasury itself, the Internal Revenue Bureau, the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Coast Guard all have special publicity offices.

The same is true of the War Department, the Department of Justice, the Post Office Department, the Navy Department has two. The Department of the Interior has a director of information for itself, 1 for the Bureau of Mines, 1 for the subsistence homesteads division, 1 for soil erosion service, and 1 for national parks.

The Agricultural Department has its own director and chief press service and a chief of radio service, a director of information and publicity for the Forest Service, for the Bureau of Public Roads, for the Bureau of Agricultural Engineering, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, the Bureau of Home Economics, the Bureau of Plant Quarantine, and the Biological Survey.

There are 2 in the Commerce Department, 3 in the Labor Department, 1 in the Civil Service Department, 1 each in the Interstate Commerce Commission, Federal Trade Commission, Tariff Commission, Federal Power Commission, Veterans' Administration, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, 3 in the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, 2 for the Tennessee Valley Authority, 1 each for the Farm Credit Administration, Public Works Administration, Emergency Relief Administration, Emergency Conservation Work, Civilian Conservation Corps, National Recovery Administration, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, National Emergency Council, Federal Alcohol Control Administration, Federal Housing Administration, Communications Commission, National Labor Relations Board, a total of 53.

Instinctively the public is right in feeling that the office is fundamentally the place to look for news, and the position that office carries with it, the power to give out news, is one of the important phenomena of the new situation. The mere fact that a man is head of a great department and does know what is being planned, and can within measure control it, gives his opinions a validity that under other conditions would be merely a guess. What such men say is news because they themselves are news. For example, the New York Times Index shows that in 1934 former President Hoover only got 1½ columns of reference in the Index, President Roosevelt got 60 columns, General Johnson got 5 columns, N. R. A. got 37 columns, Miss Perkins got 2½ columns, Senator BORAH got 2¼ columns, Senator GLASS 1 column.

Whereas 2 years before Secretary Ogden Mills had been big news he only got three-fourths column, while Secretary Morgenthau got four columns. When he same from England as the financial adviser whose opinion might have made for violent inflation, Dr. O. W. M. Sprague was news of the utmost importance, but his value faded out as he receded from the front page, and the Times Index for 1934 only gives him one-fourth of a column of reference.

No one can complain fairly of a man in office giving out news that is news and fair and unbiased and dispassionate, but when the office is used to give out information that is aimed not to inform the public but to benefit the distributor the question of propaganda in its most insidious and objectionable form appears. And where the editor's duty comes in is in his ability to find the truth that lies behind the hand-out, if there is any, and to resist the partiality that is shown to the subservient and docile trained seals.

Napoleon, the Great, was not known as a newspaper publisher, but his characterization of a general is profoundly right when applied to a newspaper editor. You will remember that Napoleon said a great general is not only one who fights but one who knows how to draw correct conclusions from evidences that a less able man would either misread or overlook. That is the kind of editor we want today.

And the citizen in general has a right to protest and resent the deliberate use of publications for the advancement of special interests. The Department of Agriculture, for example, prior to the Roosevelt administration, published bulletins that were essentially factual, but now they have become deliberate propaganda.

Here we come to the adoption of a theory that has reached its highest form of development in the Soviet Government: That a majority control of administration gives the department the right to use every governmental activity for the advancement of the party program. Of course, the officers who carry out this theory justify it on the ground that the whole purpose is national recovery, but we in America fail to see wherein the normal extension of such a doctrine differs from the drive behind Stalin's program or the clamorous exaggeration of Hitler and Goering.

In its final analysis, so far as the public is concerned, the propaganda of exaggeration is no more deadly than the propaganda of suppression. How are we going to get a fair balance again? Certainly one step is to insist upon a full report and an interpretative report on the acts of the legislature; the quickest and simplest way to make this country a complete dictatorship is to give every possible aid and comfort by publicity and subservience to the Executive.

It is just as necessary to preserve the news balance between the executive branch and the legislative branch as it is to preserve that balance in our Constitution. In the executive department there is only one note sounded, the note of triumph and praise for that department; but we must not allow that clamor to drown the voice of criticism in Congress. We have to blame no one more than ourselves if we do not see to it that our great news agencies, as well as our personal representatives, have the power to resist blandishment, the intelligence to see through the camouflage, the courage to state both sides.

It is a striking commentary that this is exactly what the news agencies do attempt in pre-election days, for they give both sides of the story, but just as soon as election is over the door is shut and there is no longer any place for the still small voice of questioning criticism. The flood of radio, books, pamphlets, and governmental publications is likely to drown all reasonable thought and hinder all sound action. Never before in its history has the press been threatened with greater danger or charged with a greater duty. Here is a challenge to all that the editor and publisher can summon of character, courage, and wisdom. The first step toward curing a disease is to recognize that the disease exists, to discover its origin, to trace its spread. We know that propaganda is here; we know its origin lies in selfish egotism, and we know that the only way to combat this menace is to give propaganda the acid test of truth and logic and fearless criticism.

Like a whirlwind radio comes and goes. It is the steady cultivation of the little plot at home by the local newspaper that repairs the damage to national thought, and collective wisdom builds up a new resistance to hysteria and gives us courage to endure.

The way to defeat demagogy is not by more demagogy, but by reason, and it is the priceless privilege of the local editor to bring his unbiased judgment to bear upon the duty and problems of this Nation. No nation is stronger than its citizens, and madness can never replace manhood. There is no substitute for education, and no alternative for discipline; the two-edged sword of freedom requires its wielder to take the sword or perish by the sword.

We must never forget that no constitutional guaranty is stronger than the will to support it, and we have nobody but ourselves, our own sloth, cupidity, ignorance, or prejudice to hinder us in our service of the public, and from these private weaknesses and public enemies God save the Commonwealth.

PAYMENT OF ADJUSTED-SERVICE CERTIFICATES

Mr. HARRISON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 3896, the adjusted-service certificate bill.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 3896) to provide for the immediate payment to veterans of the face value of their adjusted-service certificates, for controlled expansion of the currency, and to extend the time for filing applications for benefits under the World War Adjusted Compensation Act, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Finance with amendments.

CONSIDERATION OF THE CALENDAR

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, a number of Senators have asked for an opportunity to consider unobjected bills on the calendar. I am going to ask the Senator from Mississippi if he will consent to laying aside the unfinished business with a view to my asking unanimous consent to proceed to the consideration of unobjected bills on the calendar.

Mr. HARRISON. I have no objection.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I hope that order may be made.

Mr. ROBINSON. I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of unobjected bills on the calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arkansas that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside with a view to the consideration of unobjected bills on the calendar? The Chair hears none, and the clerk will state the first business on the calendar.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, in order that Senators may know that the unfinished business will not come up for consideration this afternoon, may I request that when the Senate concludes its session today it recess until 12 o'clock tomorrow, and then that the so-called "veterans' bill" be taken up?

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, it is my understanding that the calendar will be proceeded with this afternoon for the consideration of unobjected bills until the Senate is ready to conclude its labors for the day, and then that a recess will be taken until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the conference report on the Interior Department appropriation bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6223) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes, which is as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6223) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 18, 23, 43, 46, 48, 51, 53, 58, 60, 62, and 63.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 2, 4, 8, 9, 10, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 19, 20, 21, 22, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 39, 40, 41, 52, 54, 55, 56, 57, 59, 61, 64, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, and 71, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 6: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 6, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "$219,000, of which $50,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 7: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$65,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 11: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 11, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$471,910"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 12: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 12, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$144,200"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 42: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 42, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$70,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 44: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 44, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$650,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 45: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 45, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$458,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 47: That the House recede from its disagreement to the enactment of the Senate numbered 47, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$2,285,560"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 49: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 49, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$632,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 50: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 50, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$185,400"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 65: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 65, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,970,311"; and the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference report in disagreement amendments numbered 1, 3, 5, and 38.

CARL HAYDEN,
KENNETH MCKELLAR,
ELMER THOMAS,
FREDERICK STEIWER,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

EDWARD T. TAYLOR,
B. M. JACOBSEN,
JED JOHNSON,
M. A. ZIONCHECK,
J. G. SCRUGHAM,
W. P. LAMBERTSON,
R. B. WIGGLESWORTH,
Managers on the part of the House.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, has the report been explained?

Mr. HAYDEN. The report has been filed. It has been adopted by the House, and is now ready for action by the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. This conference report was laid before the Senate earlier in the day. The Chair thought every Senator knew about it.

Mr. HAYDEN. I may state to the Senator from Utah that generally the Senate amendments were agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives on certain amendments of the Senate, which was read, as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, UNITED STATES,
April 30, 1935.

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 3, and 38 to the bill (H. R. 6223) entitled "An act making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes", and concur therein; and

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 5 to said bill and concur therein with the following amendment:

In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert "$150,000; for payment of subsistence and expenses of advisory committees of local stockmen, $100,000; in all, $250,000."

Mr. HAYDEN. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House to Senate amendment numbered 5.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Arizona.

The motion was agreed to.

THE CALENDAR

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the first bill on the calendar.

The first business on the calendar was the bill (S. 944) to amend section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Mr. KING. Let that bill go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 213) to amend section 113 of the Criminal Code of March 4, 1909, Thirty-fifth Statutes 1109 (U. S. C., title 18, sec. 203), and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING (and other Senators). Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1506) to change the name of the Pickwick Landing Dam to Quin Dam was announced as next in order.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, this bill is a local measure. It is simply to change the name of a certain dam. All the local people and the Department and others have agreed to it. It does not involve anything except a change of name. I hope the objection will be withdrawn and the bill will be allowed to pass.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill has been passed over. Unless the Senator asks unanimous consent to revert to it, the bill cannot be considered, as it has already gone over.

Mr. SMITH. Very well, Mr. President; it is a matter of such great importance that we will let it go.

The bill (S. 1878) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear and determine the claims of the Mack Copper Co. was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 574) relative to Members of Congress acting as attorneys in matters where the United States has an interest was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The resolution (S. Res. 35) authorizing the Committee on the Judiciary to investigate certain phases of the National Recovery Act was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be passed over.

The bill (S. 875) for the relief of Michael F. Calnan was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The resolution (S. Res. 74) to investigate the public and official conduct of James A. Farley was announced as next in order.

Mr. SMITH. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be passed over.

The bill (S. 2119) for the relief of Amos D. Carver, S. E. Turner, Clifford N. Carver, Scott Blanchard, P. B. Blanchard, James B. Parse, A. N. Blanchard, and W. A. Blanchard, and/or the widows of such of them as may be deceased was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1162) to regulate the business of making small loans in the District of Columbia, and to amend an act to regulate the business of loaning money, etc., approved February 4, 1913, was announced as next in order.

Mr. SMITH (and other Senators). Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 509) to prevent the use of Federal offices or patronage in elections and to prohibit Federal officeholders from misuse of positions of public trust for private and partisan ends was announced as next in order.

Mr. ROBINSON, Mr. McKELLAR (and other Senators). Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 24) to assure to persons within the jurisdiction of every State the equal protection of the laws by discouraging, preventing, and punishing the crime of lynching was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 164) for the relief of Donald L. Bruner was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1452) providing for the employment of skilled shorthand reporters in the executive branch of the Government was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1453) to create a board of shorthand reporting, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 363) to increase the efficiency of the Veterinary Corps of the Regular Army was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 5) to prevent the manufacture, shipment, and sale of adulterated or misbranded food, drink, drugs, and cosmetics, and to regulate traffic therein; to prevent the false advertisement of food, drink, drugs, and cosmetics; and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 87) to prevent the shipment in interstate commerce of certain articles and commodities, in connection with which persons are employed more than 5 days per week or 6 hours per day, and prescribing certain conditions with respect to purchases and loans by the United States, and codes, agreements, and licenses under the National Industrial Recovery Act was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1589) authorizing the purchase of United States Supreme Court Decisions and Digest was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 477) to provide for the appointment of 2 additional judges for the Southern District of New York and 2 additional judges for the Southern District of California was announced as next in order.

Mr. CAPPER. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

POST-OFFICE BUILDING, CHAPEL HILL, N. C.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2356) to amend the act entitled "An act for the relief of contractors and subcontractors for the post offices and other buildings and work under the supervision of the Treasury Department, and for other purposes", approved August 25, 1919, as amended by act of March 6, 1920, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of Congress entitled "An act for the relief of contractors and subcontractors for the post offices and other buildings and work under the supervision of the Treasury Department, and for other purposes", approved August 25, 1919, as amended by act of March 6, 1920, be, and the same is hereby, amended so that said act shall include Haymes Bros., a firm composed of Charles H. and Joshua L. Haymes, of Chatham,

Va., the contractors for the United States post-office building erected at Chapel Hill, N. C.; as to said Haymes Bros., claims for reimbursement as provided by said act of August 25, 1919, as amended by act of March 6, 1920, may be filed within 3 months after the passage of this act.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I shall be glad to have an explanation of this bill by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], who introduced it.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, this bill simply provides that the contractors for the post office at Chapel Hill, N. C., a firm located at Chatham, Va., shall have the right to file a claim and have their claim adjudicated in accordance with the act which was passed after the war. The post office was built during the war.

Mr. McKELLAR. The claim goes to the Court of Claims?

Mr. BYRD. Yes; it goes to the Court of Claims.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 5599) to regulate the strength and distribution of the line of the Navy, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1492) to compensate the Chippewa Indians of Minnesota for lands set aside by treaties for their future homes and later patented to the State of Minnesota, under the Swamp Land Act, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, one of the Senators called my attention to this bill the other day. I ask that it be passed over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1426) providing for the appointment of Harry T. Herring, formerly a lieutenant colonel in the United States Army, as a lieutenant colonel in the United States Army, and his retirement in that grade was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1932) for the relief of the State of California, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment, on page 1, line 3, after the word "Secretary", to insert "of the Treasury", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the net balance due the State of California of $6,462,145.33 as certified by the Comptroller General of the United States, August 14, 1930, and printed in Senate Document No. 220, Seventy-first Congress, third session, the same to be accepted in full settlement of all advances and expenditures and interest thereon made by said State.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2213) to define the exterior boundaries of the Navajo Indian Reservation in New Mexico, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH], who reported the bill, whether it has the approval of the Indians, and whether they have had an opportunity to express themselves?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, this bill has been up before, and was passed over. There was some question about the bill. The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH] is not present, so I ask that the bill go over until he can be present.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

WESTERN CONSTRUCTION CO.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2312) for the relief of the Western Construction Co., which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment to insert at the end of the bill a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated and in full settlement against the Government, the sum of $1,634.56 to the Western Construction Co., of Seattle, Wash., to cover additional work not covered by the contract entered into by said company for the construction of a Weather Bureau station on Tatoosh Island, Wash.: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Washington [Mr. SCHWELLENBACH], who introduced the bill, or the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BURKE], who reported it, whether this claim is barred by the statute of limitations.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Utah that while the claim is barred by the statute of limitations, it is for work performed by the company and not covered by its contract, and the Department recommends the payment of the claim.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CITY OF BALTIMORE, MD.

The bill (S. 672) for the relief of the city of Baltimore was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the city of Baltimore the sum of $171,034.31, being the balance of the amount incurred and expended by said city of Baltimore to aid in the construction of works of national defense in 1863, at the request of Maj. Gen. R. C. Schenck, United States Army, and as found and reported to the Senate on May 3, 1930, by the Comptroller General of the United States.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2530) to protect American and Philippine labor and to preserve an essential industry, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], or some other Senator who is familiar with the bill, what modification it makes of existing tariff laws, and what modification, if any, is made in the act under which the Philippines were given the independence they are now enjoying. [A pause.] Let the bill go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

CAPT. ALEXANDER C. DOYLE

The bill (H. R. 240) for the relief of Capt. Alexander C. Doyle was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. SMITH subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask that the Senate recur to Order of Business No. 467, being House bill 240. I am quite sure that the Senate does not understand the great injustice which is being done the officer named in the bill. The Senator from Maine [Mr. WHITE] has the letter and all the facts pertaining to this case. I state that, upon the investigation, we found that the Government had not lost a penny, and this man had been cleared by a court martial. I am sorry the Senator from Maine is not present, because I handed him all the evidence, as he was the chairman of the subcommittee which investigated the case. With regard to the $1,600 which was said to be short, an explanation was made, which it would take me too long to go into now, but which, if repeated, would convince every Senator that this bill ought to pass. It does not involve the loss of a penny, and if it is not passed a great injustice will be done to a faithful officer.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, what number is it on the calendar?

Mr. SMITH. It is Order of Business No. 467. It was just passed over. It is for the relief of Capt. Alexander C. Doyle. I went into the matter personally and so did the Senator from Maine. I assure the Senate that the whole question turned on a mere technicality. The officer was court-martialed and the case was dismissed. He was completely exonerated. In this case there was a requirement that certain particulars in the building of barrels should be adhered to and a certain Japanese was employed to build them. They met all the specifications, but he could not keep the list of those employed and their per diem. After a thorough investigation it was found that the barrels were built within the Government's specifications, and the officer was completely exonerated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill went over under the rule.

Mr. SMITH. I ask unanimous consent to recur to it. The Senator who objected says he has no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 240) for the relief of Capt. Alexander C. Doyle, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, line 10, after the words " court martial ", to strike out " decision, and to certify same to Congress for an appropriation " and to insert in lieu thereof " decision. There is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,655, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to pay said claim ", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to adjust and settle the claim of Capt. Alexander C. Doyle, Quartermaster Corps, United States Army, in the sum of $1,655 on account of stoppage of pay as the result of alleged neglect of duty while stationed at Schofield Barracks, Territory of Hawaii, during the year 1922, of which charge he was declared not guilty by court-martial decision. There is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,655, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to pay said claim.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read a third time, and passed.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2357) to amend an act entitled "An act to improve the navigability and to provide for the flood control of the Tennessee River; to provide for reforestation and the proper use of marginal lands in the Tennessee Valley; to provide for the agricultural and industrial development of said valley; to provide for the national defense by the creation of a corporation for the operation of Government properties at and near Muscle Shoals in the State of Alabama; and for other purposes ", approved May 18, 1933, was announced as next in order.

Mr. VANDENBERG (and other Senators). Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1439) amending the postal laws to include as second-class matter religious periodicals publishing local information was announced as next in order.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Let that go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

UNDELIVERED PARCELS OF FIRST-CLASS MAIL MATTER

The bill (S. 1539) relating to undelivered parcels of the first class was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 3936 of the Revised Statutes, as amended April 24, 1920 (41 Stat. 583; 39 U. S. C. 406), be amended to read as follows:

" The Postmaster General may regulate the period during which undelivered letters and parcels of the first class shall remain in any post office and when they shall be returned to the dead-letter office; and he may make regulations for their return from the dead-letter office to the writers when they cannot be delivered to the parties addressed. When letters and parcels of the first class are returned from the dead-letter office to the writers, a fee of 5 cents shall be collected at the time of delivery, and in addition a charge shall be made of the minimum registry fee for the return of all ordinary dead letters containing $1 or more in cash, and parcels of the first class apparently valued at $1 or more, under such rules and regulations as the Postmaster General may prescribe."

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1504) authorizing the Arapahoe and Cheyenne Indians to submit claims to the Court of Claims, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 626) to amend the Agriculture Adjustment Act so as to include hops as a basic agricultural commodity was announced as next in order.

Mr. McNARY. I ask that that bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 2481) to stabilize the bituminous-coal mining industry and promote its interstate commerce; to provide for cooperative marketing of bituminous coal; to levy a tax on bituminous coal and provide for a drawback under certain conditions; to declare the production, distribution, and use of bituminous coal to be affected with a national public interest; to conserve the bituminous-coal resources of the United States and to establish a national bituminous-coal reserve; to provide for the general welfare; and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. BYRD. Let that go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

ROBERT A. WATSON

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 373) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims, to hear, determine, and render judgment on the claim of Robert A. Watson, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. This bill was considered on April 15, and the amendment was agreed to. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like an explanation of the bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, the bill refers the claim to the Court of Claims. I will say to the Senator that it is a proper bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RETIREMENT OF PROVISIONAL OFFICERS OF THE REGULAR ESTABLISHMENTS

The bill (S. 2265) extending the benefits of the Emergency Officers' Retirement Act of May 24, 1928, to provisional officers of the Regular Establishment who served during the World War was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, let me say to the Senator from Utah that only 30 or 40 former officers are affected by this bill. They were provisional officers who were commissioned in 1917, and served throughout the World War under provisional commissions. They were not given the benefits of the Emergency Officers' Retirement Act, because they were not emergency officers. They were neither Regular Army officers nor emergency officers, but rendered the same service as officers. There are only 30 or 40 of them. They are at present without any eligible status so far as benefits are concerned under the Veterans' Administration Act.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator what the bill proposes to do for them?

Mr. SHEPPARD. It enables them, on proof of service-connected disability, to obtain the benefits of the Emergency Officers' Retirement Act.

Mr. KING. Would they not be entitled to the same relief as any other person who was injured during the war or who suffered disability during the war?

Mr. SHEPPARD. Without this legislation; no. The situation of these men is an anomaly. A bill similar to this passed the Senate at the last session.

Mr. KING. Does the bill lift them out of the status in which they are found and retire them as emergency officers?

Mr. SHEPPARD. Not at all; it simply gives them the right to apply for benefits which the Emergency Officers' Retirement Act gave the emergency officers.

Mr. KING. The Emergency Officers' Retirement Act, as I understand, gave them the opportunity to be retired on three-fourths pay, the same as Army officers.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Provided they had the requisite disability; yes. They must have been disabled to a certain extent. The Regular Army officers have their retirement privileges under the Regular Army legislation.

Mr. KING. I should like to look into the bill; but I will consent that it be passed with the understanding that tomorrow I may move to reconsider and have it restored to the calendar.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Very well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment to insert at the end of the bill a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the benefits of the act of May 24, 1928, entitled "An act making eligible for retirement, under certain conditions, officers and former officers of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps of the United States, other than officers of the Regular Army, Navy, or Marine Corps, who incurred physical disability in line of duty while in the service of the United States during the World War", are hereby extended to those provisional officers of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps of the United States who were appointed pursuant to the provisions of the act entitled "An act for making further and more effectual provision for the national defense, and for other purposes", approved June 3, 1916, and the act entitled "An act to authorize the President to increase temporarily the Military Establishment of the United States", approved May 18, 1917, and who served during the period from April 6, 1917, to July 2, 1921, and whose appointments were not made permanent, if application for such benefits is filed with the Veterans' Administration within 12 months after the passage of this act, or if application is already on file with the Veterans' Administration for such benefits: Provided, That no back pay, compensation, benefit, or allowance conferred by this act shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

COOPERATIVE MARKETING ASSOCIATIONS

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 38) for the adjustment and settlement of losses sustained by the cooperative marketing associations was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I wish the Senator would withhold his objection for a moment. I desire to offer an amendment to make one part of the joint resolution conform to the other parts.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is the consideration of the joint resolution objected to?

Mr. KING. I withhold objection until the Senator's amendment can be acted on, and then I shall ask that the joint resolution go over.

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution, which was read, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That for the purpose of adjustment and settlement of losses sustained by the cooperative marketing associations dealing in grain during the stabilization operations of the Federal Farm Board in the years 1929 and 1930 when such cooperative marketing associations were induced and requested by the Federal Farm Board to withhold grain and/or cotton from the market and to make advances to their members in order to stabilize prices, the Federal Farm Credit Administration is hereby authorized and directed to make such adjustments and settlements in accordance with the understanding that such cooperative marketing associations had with the Federal Farm Board, and on the basis of a price or a sum equal to the amount directly loaned or advanced to such associations plus carrying charges and operating costs in connection with such grain and/or cotton from the date of the loans or advances to the date that such grain and/or cotton was finally taken over by the Federal Farm Board or delivered pursuant to its instructions.

Mr. FRAZIER. On page 1, line 5, after the word "grain", I move to insert the words "and/or cotton."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KING. I now ask that the joint resolution be passed over.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, if the Senator will withhold his objection for a moment, I will say that this measure is identical with the one which was passed last year by the Senate after hearings were held by the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. The joint resolution simply provides for presenting old claims against the Farm Board, in cases where cooperative cotton or grain organizations had held their cotton or grain off the market at the request of the Farm Board, and thereby sustained a loss, by cooperating with the Farm Board. They wish to have an opportunity to come before the Farm Credit Administration, which opportunity this joint resolution would provide for them, and put their evidence before that Administration, and if they shall admit that there is a loss on the part of the cooperatives, then they are to be paid.

I should like very much to have the joint resolution passed. I think it is just to the cotton cooperatives, and I feel they, as well as some of the grain corporations, have been unjustly treated.

Mr. McKELLAR. Have these cooperatives ever made a report to the Government? Has the Senator ever seen a report as to their losses, and just what has been done?

Mr. FRAZIER. They took up the matter with the Farm Board, and could not get any adjustment. That was after the Farm Board began to slack up on their stabilization of prices. I think they were called off, to be frank about it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I am not so sure, but there is merit in the Senator's measure, but before we pass it I think we ought to know just what the effect will be—what the losses are, and what may be done about them.

Mr. FRAZIER. There is no way to tell just what the losses are, but there are a number of cooperatives that feel they have been unjustly treated, and desire to come in before the Farm Credit Administration to have their losses adjusted.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. KING. I renew the objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The joint resolution will be passed over.

CRATER NATIONAL PARK

The bill (S. 2185) to amend an act entitled "An act to accept the cession by the State of Oregon of exclusive jurisdiction over the lands embraced within the Crater Lake National Park, and for other purposes", was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 6, paragraph 1, of an act entitled "An act to accept the cession by the State of Oregon of exclusive jurisdiction over the lands embraced within the Crater Lake National Park, and for other purposes", approved August 21, 1916 (39 Stat. L. 523), be amended so as to read:

"SEC. 6. That the United States District Court for Oregon shall appoint a commissioner, who shall reside within the exterior boundaries of the Crater Lake National Park or at a place reasonably adjacent to the park, the place of residence to be designated by the Secretary of the Interior, and who shall have jurisdiction to hear and act upon all complaints made of any violations of law or of the rules and regulations made by the Secretary of the Interior for the government of the park and for the protection of the animals, birds, and fish, and objects of interest therein, and for other purposes authorized by this act."

SEC. 2. That section 9 of the said act be amended by striking out the words "Provided, That the said commissioner shall reside within the exterior boundaries of said Crater Lake National Park, at a place to be designated by the court making such appointment."

SEC. 3. Any commissioner heretofore appointed under authority of the said act shall be entitled to receive the salary provided by law, which may have accrued at the date this act becomes effective, without regard to whether such commissioner or commissioners may have resided within the exterior boundaries of the Crater Lake National Park.

STATISTICS OF TOBACCO

The bill (S. 2215) to amend the act entitled "An act to provide for the collection and publication of statistics of tobacco by the Department of Agriculture", approved January 14, 1929, as amended, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1 of the act entitled "An act to provide for the collection and publication of statistics of tobacco by the Department of Agriculture", approved January 14, 1929, as amended, is hereby further amended to read as follows:

"That the Secretary of Agriculture be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to collect and publish statistics of the quantity of leaf tobacco in all forms in the United States owned by or in the possession of dealers, manufacturers, quasi-manufacturers, growers' cooperative associations, warehousemen, brokers, holders, or owners, other than the original growers of tobacco. The statistics shall show the quantity of tobacco in such detail as to types, groups of grades, and such other subdivisions as to quality, color, and/or grade for particular types, as the Secretary of Agriculture shall deem to be practical and necessary for the purposes of this act, shall be summarized as of January 1, April 1, July 1, and October 1 of each year, and an annual report on tobacco statistics shall be issued: Provided, That the Secretary of Agriculture shall not be required to collect statistics of leaf tobacco from any manufacturer of tobacco who, in the first three-quarters of the preceding calendar year, according to the returns of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, manufactured less than 35,000 pounds of tobacco, or from any manufacturer of cigars who, during the first three-quarters of the preceding calendar year, manufactured less than 185,000 cigars, or from any manufacturer of cigarettes who, during the first three-quarters of the preceding year, manufactured less than 750,000 cigarettes: And provided further, That the Secretary of Agriculture may in his discretion omit the collection of statistics from any dealer, manufacturer, growers' cooperative association, warehouseman, broker, holder, or owner who does not own and/or have in stock, in the aggregate, 25,000 pounds or more of leaf tobacco on the date as of which the reports are made. For the purposes of this act, any tobacco which has deteriorated on account of age or other causes to the extent that it is not merchantable or is unsuitable for use in manufacturing tobacco products shall be classified with other nondescript tobacco and reported in the 'N' group of the type to which it belongs."

SEC. 2. Section 2 of the said act of January 14, 1929, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 2. The Secretary of Agriculture shall establish standards for the classification of leaf tobacco, and he is authorized to demonstrate such standards, to prepare and distribute samples thereof, and to make reasonable charges therefor. He shall specify the types, groups of grades, qualities, colors, and/or grades, which shall be included in the returns required by this act. The Secretary of Agriculture shall prepare appropriate blanks upon which the returns shall be made, shall, upon request, furnish copies to persons who are required by this act to make returns, and such returns shall show the types, groups of grades, qualities, colors, and/or grades, and such other information as the Secretary may require."

SEC. 3. Section 5 of the said act of January 14, 1929, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 5. The Secretary of Agriculture shall have access to the tobacco records of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and of the several collectors of internal revenue for the purpose of obtaining lists of the persons subject to this act and for the purpose of aiding the collection of the information herein required, and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and the several collectors of internal revenue shall cooperate with the Secretary of Agriculture in effectuating the provisions of this act. The Secretary of Agriculture shall have access to the stocks, stock records, and internal-revenue records of all persons or firms subject to this act and may make such examinations and inspections as he shall deem necessary for the purposes of this act."

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1460) to fix standards for till baskets, climax baskets, round stave baskets, market baskets, drums, hampers, cartons, crates, boxes, barrels, and other containers for fruits or vegetables, to consolidate existing laws on this subject, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. BYRD. I ask that that bill go over for the purpose of offering some amendments.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 12) to amend the Packers and Stockyards Act was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

OSAGE INDIANS OF OKLAHOMA—MOTION FOR RECONSIDERATION

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, out of order, I desire to enter a motion to reconsider the vote whereby Senate bill 2482, relating to the tribal and individual affairs of the Osage Indians of Oklahoma was passed on a previous day.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion of the Senator from Oklahoma to reconsider the vote whereby Senate bill 2482 was passed will be entered.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2306) to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of the heirs of James Taylor, deceased Cherokee Indian, for the value of certain lands now held by the United States, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 506) to provide funds for cooperation with the public-school board at Wolf Point, Mont., in the construction or improvement of a public-school building to be available to Indian children of the Fort Peck Indian Reservation, Mont., was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1528) for expenditure of funds for cooperation with the public-school board at Poplar, Mont., in the construction or improvement of public-school building to be available to Indian children of the Fort Peck Indian Reservation, Mont., was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

ACCOUNT BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND VERMONT

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 89) directing the Comptroller General to readjust the account between the United States and the State of Vermont was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to audit the claim of the State of Vermont with respect to advances and expenditures made by such State for military purposes during the War of 1812–1815, with Great Britain, and after applying the rules of evidence and settlement to this class of claims, provided for in resolution of May 14, 1836 (5 Stat. L. 132), and in section 12 of the act approved March 3, 1857 (11 Stat. L. 229), to submit to the Senate a report containing the results of an audit of such claim, in conformity with said rules, and to certify to Congress for an appropriation the balance found due the State of Vermont.

CODES OF CRIMINAL AND CIVIL PROCEDURE FOR CANAL ZONE

The bill (S. 1379) to amend section 103 of the Code of Criminal Procedure for the Canal Zone and section 542 of the Code of Civil Procedure for the Canal Zone was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, this is a bill which has been recommended by the Department of Justice. It provides an amendment to existing law by requiring, in view of the change of administration, the depositing of any funds collected by the courts in another fund rather than the present fund.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 103 of the Code of Criminal Procedure for the Canal Zone, as amended (47 Stat. 886), be and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 103. A docket must be kept by the clerk of the district court denominated a criminal docket, in which he shall enter each criminal action and whatever proceedings are had therein, and a statement of the costs. The clerk shall receive, deposit, and account for all public moneys collected by him in accordance with the laws, rules, and regulations governing the receipt and disposition of moneys by clerks of the United States district courts in the continental United States exclusive of Alaska."

SEC. 2. That section 542 of the Code of Civil Procedure for the Canal Zone (47 Stat. 1004) be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 542. It shall be lawful for the clerk of the district court, referees, and commissioners appointed by the district court, the marshal, magistrates, constables, and other officers and persons hereinafter mentioned, together with their assistants and deputies, to demand and receive the hereinafter-mentioned fees and no more; but all fees collected by officers drawing a regular salary or fixed compensation from the Government, except the clerk of the district court and the marshal, shall be paid over to the collector of the Panama Canal. The clerk of the district court and the marshal shall receive, deposit, and account for all public moneys collected by them in accordance with the laws, rules, and regulations governing the receipt and disposition of moneys by clerks of United States district courts and United States marshals, respectively, in the continental United States exclusive of Alaska."

DEFENSE OF ALIBI IN CRIMINAL CASES

The bill (S. 1380) to regulate the defense of alibi in criminal cases was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator who reported the bill kindly explain it?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, this bill was drafted by the Department of Justice pursuant to the investigation which was made by the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND] and the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG]. As the Senate knows, a number of recommendations were made by that committee, and pursuant to the recommendations bills were offered, either drafted by them or by the Department of Justice, dealing with the crime situation. One of the recommendations made was that a defendant who intended to interpose a plea of alibi should give notice of that fact in due season. The Judiciary Committee was unanimous in reporting the bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That evidence offered by a defendant for the purpose of establishing an alibi shall not be admitted in any criminal case in any court of the United States unless, at the time of arraignment or within 10 days thereafter, notice in writing of the intention of the defendant to claim such alibi shall have been filed with the clerk of the court in which such case is pending. Such notice shall include specific information as to the place at which the defendant claims to have been at the time of the alleged offense: Provided, That the court may in its discretion admit such evidence if good cause is shown why the notice required above has not been served.

TESTIMONY OF DEFENDANTS IN UNITED STATES COURTS

The bill (S. 1383) to amend an act entitled "An act to make persons charged with crimes and offenses competent witnesses in United States and Territorial courts", approved March 16, 1878, was announced as next in order.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, what change does this proposed bill make in existing law?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, this measure was also recommended by the Department of Justice and unanimously reported from the Judiciary Committee. It proposes an amendment to existing law which I will explain. The law which now exists was predicated upon the statute which goes back to the old common law, that a defendant in a criminal case might not testify in his own behalf. Perhaps 50 or 60 years ago a Federal law was enacted permitting a defendant to be a witness in his own behalf, but no inference could be drawn from the fact that he did not take the stand in his own defense.

The Department of Justice takes the view that comment may be made by the court and by the attorney representing the Government upon the failure of the defendant to take the stand and testify in his own behalf.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, under the existing law, as I understand, no reference may be made to the fact that a defendant fails to offer to testify in his own behalf.

Mr. KING. Exactly.

Mr. ROBINSON. If this bill is passed, it may become matter of argument that the defendant does not testify or does not ask to testify.

Mr. KING. The Senator has correctly interpreted it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Was the committee unanimous in reporting this bill? Do they think the proposed amendment is proper? The rule in question has been the law in America from the beginning.

Mr. KING. I think, perhaps, if I were to answer accurately, I should say that I was the only "doubting Thomas" on the committee as to the wisdom of this measure.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have doubt about it.

Mr. KING. But I did not feel sufficiently fortified in my convictions to oppose the measure and, upon request of the chairman, consented to report it to the Senate.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, as stated by the Senator from Tennessee, from the beginning—in fact, I believe it is the rule of the common law—the failure of a defendant to testify in his own behalf raised no presumption of his guilt. The rule has never had, in my judgment, a foundation in reason. Take the case of a man who is charged with the commission of a particular offense; the facts are presumed to be within his knowledge; why should he be accorded the presumption that he is not guilty when he declines to tell what he knows about the crime?

I agree that this bill, if enacted, would provide a radical change in criminal procedure, but I sympathize with it, for the reason that I believe it would be in the interest of the prompt administration of justice.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I agree with the Senator from Arkansas in respect to his last statement. Let me make this observation: Under the common law the defendant was not permitted to testify in his defense, and no comment could be made upon his failure to testify by the court or by the Government's representative. Of course, it was unjust to permit comments to be made upon his failure to testify when the law forbade him to testify. As I have said, Congress changed the law which obtained in the Federal courts so that the defendant might be permitted to testify in his own behalf. It would seem to follow—and that is the argument of some and is the position of the Department of Justice—that, having abrogated the old common law and unsealed the defendant's lips and permitted him to testify, and he having the opportunity to make any explanation of incriminatory evidence which he might desire, and then, failing to take the stand and offer such explanation, the court, in a reasonable way, and counsel for the Government, in a proper way, might comment upon the fact that the defendant had full opportunity to testify and make such explanation as he desired and had failed to do so.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I think there is a good deal in what both the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] and the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] have said about the matter; but the feature that I do not like is the power granted to the court to comment on the failure of a defendant to testify. Practically speaking, in my judgment, that will be fatal to the case of any defendant. If he went to trial and the court at the last moment came in with a criticism of him for failing to testify, he would be convicted 9 times out of 10, whether he was guilty or not. That is my judgment. I think that the province of the court is to declare the law and not to comment upon the facts, anyway. I think the Federal courts have gone too far, and for that reason I am going to object to the consideration of the bill today, but I will look into it and talk to the Senators about it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

RETIREMENT OF WILLIAM J. STANNARD

The bill (S. 2467) for the retirement of William J. Stannard, leader of the United States Army Band, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That upon application of William J. Stannard, leader of the United States Army Band, for retirement after 33 years' service, the President is authorized to place him upon the retired list with the retired pay and allowances of a captain of the Army in the fourth pay period (over 17 years' service): Provided, That the limitations in section 1 of the act of June 10, 1922, relative to counting service for purpose of pay for officers appointed on and after July 1, 1922, shall not apply: Provided further, That all active service as a musician in the United States Army and as leader of the United States Army Band shall be counted in computing length of service for longevity pay purposes.

EMANUEL WALLIN

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2292) for the relief of Emanuel Wallin, which had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with amendments, on page 1, line 11, after the word "authorized", to strike out "and directed" and to insert "in his discretion"; on page 2, line 2, after the word "surveyed", to insert "vacant, unappropriated"; and in line 2, page 2, after the word "land", to insert "unreserved except by Executive Order No. 6910 of November 26, 1934, and Executive Order No. 6964 of February 5, 1935", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Emanuel Wallin, out of the funds in the Treasury belonging to the Chippewa Tribe of Indians in Minnesota, the sum of $101.90, and out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $9.30, as reimbursement in full of moneys paid the Government in connection with his homestead entry, Crookston, Minn., 010750: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized, in his discretion, to allow Emanuel Wallin, his heirs or assigns, to select, by legal subdivisions, 160 acres of surveyed vacant, unappropriated public land, unreserved except by Executive Order No. 6910 of November 26, 1934, and Executive Order No. 6964 of February 5, 1935, under the general homestead law, or 320 acres under the enlarged homestead law, or 640 acres under the stock-raising homestead law, free from lawful claim, anywhere in the United States where there are public lands subject to such entry, and receiving United States patent for such lands without payment to the United States of any fees, commissions, or other moneys, and without further compliance with the homestead laws in connection therewith, and the submission of proof thereof, the patent, however, to contain a reservation of mineral to the United States, if necessary, as in other entries under the same law.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2416) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto was announced as next in order.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, that is a very important measure and had better go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

DISTRIBUTION OF FUNDS UNDER FEDERAL EMERGENCY RELIEF ADMINISTRATION

The resolution (S. Res. 115) relative to the distribution of funds placed under the administration of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, submitted by Mr. COUZENS on the calendar day April 8, 1935, and reported by the Committee on Appropriations with an amendment to the preamble on the calendar day April 16, 1935, was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate is hereby authorized and directed to inquire of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration and to report to the Senate at the earliest date possible—

(a) The distribution of these funds to the several States.

(b) What data was required of the States before allotments were made to the States by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

(c) What cooperation or assistance was required of the several States to which appropriations or allotments were made.

(d) What funds were loaned to the several States and what agreement was demanded before the loans were made.

(e) Any other information which would give to the Congress complete information as to the methods of distribution of the funds, the amounts allotted to States, counties, cities, and other subdivisions, the assistance or cooperation required of States, counties, cities, and other subdivisions, the methods by which an accounting was made or required to be made by States, counties, cities, and other subdivisions.

The preamble was amended so as to read:

Whereas in the appropriation acts of 1932, 1933, 1934, and 1935; in the National Industrial Recovery Act of 1933; and through allotment of funds from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, there have been placed under the administration of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration total funds as follows:

Federal Emergency Relief Administration, $1,745,055,000; Civil Works Administration, $863,965,000; allotment from Reconstruction Finance Corporation, $300,000,000: Therefore be it—

PARTICIPATION OF UNITED STATES IN INTERPARLIAMENTARY UNION

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2276) to authorize participation by the United States in the Interparliamentary Union, which had been reported from the Committee on Foreign Relations with an amendment, on page 1, line 3, after the words "appropriation of", to strike out "not to exceed", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That an appropriation of $20,000 annually is hereby authorized, $10,000 of which shall be for the annual contribution of the United States toward the maintenance of the Bureau of the Interparliamentary Union for the promotion of international arbitration; and $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to assist in meeting the expenses of the American group of the Interparliamentary Union for each fiscal year for which an appropriation is made, such appropriation to be disbursed on vouchers to be approved by the President and the executive secretary of the American group.

SEC. 2. That the American group of the Interparliamentary Union shall submit to the Congress a report for each fiscal year for which an appropriation is made, including its expenditures under such appropriation.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INCLUSION OF WATER USERS' ASSOCIATIONS IN BANKRUPTCY ACT

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2453) to amend section 80 of chapter 9 of an act to amend the act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 80 of chapter 9 of an act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding thereto the following subparagraph (m):

"(m) The provisions of this section 80 shall apply to mutual nonprofit companies and incorporated water users' associations with like effect and to the same extent as such provisions apply to drainage, irrigation, reclamation, and levee districts."

Mr. KING. Mr. President, there is in my file no report accompanying the bill. May we have an explanation of it by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. POPE]?

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, this is a separate amendment to the municipal bankruptcy law designed to include mutual nonprofit companies and incorporated water users' associations along with irrigation districts, drainage districts, and the like.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INCLUSION OF POLITICAL SUBDIVISIONS IN PROVISIONS OF BANKRUPTCY ACT

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2471) to amend section 80 of chapter 9 of an act to amend the act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments, on page 2, at the beginning of line 23, to insert "mutual nonprofit companies and incorporated water users' associations"; on page 4, line 4, after the words "creditors of", to insert "mutual nonprofit companies and incorporated water users' associations"; and on page 4, line 18, after the words "case of", to insert "mutual nonprofit companies and incorporated water users' associations", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That subparagraphs (a) and (d) of section 80 of chapter 9 of an act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, be, and the same are hereby, amended to read as follows:

"(a) Any municipality or other political subdivision of any State, including (but not hereby limiting the generality of the foregoing) any county, city, borough, village, parish, town, or township, unincorporated tax or special assessment district, and any school, drainage, irrigation, reclamation, levee, sewer, or paving, sanitary, port, improvement, or other districts (hereinafter referred to as a 'taxing district'), may file a petition stating that the taxing district is insolvent or unable to meet its debts as they mature, and that it desires to effect a plan of readjustment of its debts. The petition shall be filed with the court in whose territorial jurisdiction the taxing district or the major part thereof is located, and for any such district having no officials of its own the petition shall be filed by the municipality or political subdivision, the officials of which have power to contract on behalf of said district or to levy the special assessments within such district. The petition shall be accompanied by payment to the clerk of a filing fee of $100, which shall be in addition to the fees required to be collected by the clerk under other chapters of this act. The petition shall state that a plan of readjustment has been prepared, is filed and submitted with the petition, and that creditors of the taxing district owning not less than 30 percent in the case of mutual nonprofit companies and incorporated water users' asssociations, drainage, irrigation, reclamation, and levee districts (except as hereinafter provided) and owning not less than 51 percent in the case of all other taxing districts in amount of the bonds, notes, and certificates of indebtedness of the taxing district affected by the plan, excluding bonds, notes, or certificates of indebtedness owned, held or controlled by the taxing district in a fund or otherwise, have accepted it in writing. The petition shall be accompanied with such written acceptance and with a list of all known creditors of the taxing district, together with their addresses so far as known to the taxing district, and description of their respective claims showing separately those who have accepted the plan of readjustment, together with their separate addresses, the contents of which list shall not constitute admissions by the taxing districts in a proceeding under this chapter or otherwise. Upon the filing of such a petition the judge shall enter an order either approving it as properly filed under this chapter, if satisfied that such petition complies with this chapter and has been filed in good faith, or dismissing it, if not so satisfied. If creditors holding 5 percent in amount of the bonds, notes, or certificates of indebtedness shall, within 90 days after the first publication of the notice provided for in subdivision (c), clause (1), of this chapter, appear and controvert the facts alleged in the petition, the judge shall decide the issues presented, and unless the material allegations of the petition are sustained shall dismiss the petition: Provided, however, That such written acceptance of not less than 30 percent of the creditors of mutual nonprofit companies and incorporated water users' associations, drainage, irrigation, reclamation, and levee districts shall not be required in any case where a loan shall have been authorized to the petitioning taxing district by an agency of the United States Government for the purpose of enabling any such petitioning district to reduce and refinance its outstanding indebtedness.

"(d) The plan of readjustment shall not be confirmed until it has been accepted in writing, filed in the proceeding, by or on behalf of creditors whose claims have been allowed holding two-thirds in amount of the claims of each class whose claims have been allowed and would be affected by the plan (except as hereinafter provided), and by creditors holding 66⅔ percent in the case of mutual nonprofit companies and incorporated water users' associations, drainage, irrigation, reclamation, and levee districts and creditors holding 75 percent in the case of all other taxing districts in amount of the claims of all classes of the taxing district affected by the plan, but excluding claims owned, held, or controlled by a taxing district, and such plan has been accepted and approved by the taxing district in a writing filed in the proceeding, signed in its name by an authorized authority: Provided, however, That it shall not be requisite to the confirmation of the plan that there be such acceptance by any creditor or class of creditors (a) whose claims are not affected by the plan; or (b) if the plan makes provision for the payment of their claims in cash in full; or (c) if provision is made in the plan for the protection of the interests, claims, or liens of such creditors or class of creditors; or (d) of a petitioning taxing district to which a loan shall have been authorized by an agency of the United States Government, for the purpose of enabling the petitioning district to reduce and refinance its outstanding indebtedness."

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, in view of the passage of the bill last considered and explained by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. POPE], the committee amendments to the bill now pending become unnecessary and I ask that they be not agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendments reported by the committee.

The amendments were rejected.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

UNION IRON WORKS

The bill (S. 918) to carry out the findings of the Court of Claims in the case of the Union Iron Works was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $165,284.53 to the Union Iron Works, being the difference between the actual cost of the construction of three torpedo-boat destroyers and the amount paid under the contract entered into for the building of said boats, as found by the Court of Claims and reported in Senate Document No. 78, Seventy-third Congress, first session.

EXAMINATION OF SEBEWAING RIVER, MICH.

The bill (S. 2505) authorizing a preliminary examination of Sebewaing River, in Huron County, Mich., with a view to the controlling of floods was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause a preliminary examination to be made of the Sebewaing River, in Huron County, Mich., with a view to the control of floods, in accordance with the provisions of section 3 of the act entitled "An act to provide for control of floods of the Mississippi River, and of the Sacramento River, Calif., and for other purposes", approved March 1, 1917, the cost thereof to be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for examinations, surveys, and contingencies of rivers and harbors.

ST. LAWRENCE RIVER BRIDGE AT OGDENSBURG, N. Y.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2311) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the St. Lawrence River at or near Ogdensburg, N. Y., which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments, in section 1, page 1, line 7, after the date "1933", to insert "heretofore extended by an act of Congress approved June 8, 1934"; and in line 8, after the word "hereby", to insert the word "further", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the St. Lawrence River at or near Ogdensburg, N. Y., authorized to be built by the St. Lawrence Bridge Commission by an act of Congress approved June 14, 1933, heretofore extended by an act of Congress approved June 8, 1934, are hereby further extended 1 and 3 years, respectively, from June 14, 1935.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SPOKANE RIVER, IDAHO

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1470) to provide a preliminary examination and survey of Spokane River and its tributaries in the State of Idaho, with a view to the control of their floods, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments, on page 1, line 4, after the word "examination", to strike out "and survey"; and on page 2, line 3, after the word "harbors" to strike out "Provided, That a survey shall not be undertaken unless recommended by the Chief of Engineers: And provided further, That a sum not to exceed $36,000 may be expended for the survey herein authorized", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause a preliminary examination to be made of the Spokane River and its tributaries in the State of Idaho, with a view to the control of their floods, in accordance with the provisions of section 3 of an act entitled "An act to provide for the control of the floods of the Mississippi River, and of the Sacramento River, California, and for other purposes", approved March 1, 1917, the cost thereof to be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for examinations, surveys, and contingencies of rivers and harbors.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to provide a preliminary examination of Spokane River and its tributaries in the State of Idaho, with a view to the control of their floods."

SOIL EROSION IN UINTA AND WASATCH NATIONAL FORESTS, UTAH

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 376) to facilitate the control of soil erosion and/or flood damage originating upon lands within the exterior boundaries of the Uinta and Wasatch National Forests, Utah, which had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys with an amendment, on page 2, line 4, after the word "hereby", to insert the words "authorized to be", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of Agriculture, with the approval of the National Forest Reservation Commission established by section 4 of the act of March 1, 1911 (U. S. C., title 16, sec. 513), is hereby authorized to acquire by purchase any lands within the boundaries of the Uinta and Wasatch National Forests, in the State of Utah, which, in his judgment, should become the property of the United States in order that they may be so managed with other lands of the United States as to minimize soil erosion and flood damage, and to pay for said lands from the entire receipts from the sale of natural resources or occupancy of public lands within the Uinta and Wasatch National Forests which receipts are hereby authorized to be appropriated for that purpose until said lands have been acquired.

Mr. DUFFY. Mr. President, the Senator from Kansas [Mr. McGILL] requested me to ask that there be an explanation by the Senator in charge of the bill or that it go over.

Mr. KING. I should be glad to make explanation, if that will be satisfactory.

Mr. DUFFY. I do not have any personal objection to the bill. I merely made the statement that the Senator from Kansas asked me to request an explanation, in order to make certain that this bill will not interfere with another bill recently passed in which he is interested, or else to ask that it go over.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, just a word in explanation. The Federal highway between two of the important cities of Utah, Salt Lake City and Ogden, has frequently been inundated by the floods from the adjoining mountains and the result has been that the highway has been covered for great distances in various places, necessitating repairs and, indeed, reconstruction, at considerable cost to the United States as well as to the State of Utah. In addition, houses and farms have been destroyed and hundreds of people have been seriously damaged.

The Government owns a large part of the mountain area from which the floods come, and a portion of the area is in a forest reserve. It is desired to have incorporated in the forest reserve a reasonably small area from which the floods come down in torrential flow onto the lands and highway below. The bill has the approval of the Department of Agriculture. The bill seeks to incorporate this area into the forest reserve which now has control of the adjoining land. It is desired to assert jurisdiction over this contiguous land in order that steps may be taken to prevent the floods which occur, to the great damage of the Federal highways as well as to the injury of the people below. The land is to be incorporated in the forest reserve and to be paid out of the receipts obtained from leases of the forest-reserve lands.

Mr. DUFFY. I note that the Senator from Kansas has returned to the Chamber and may speak for himself.

Mr. McGILL. Mr. President, I inquire if the pending bill will conflict with the bill which has been passed by the two Houses of Congress within a week or so?

Mr. KING. Not at all.

Mr. McGILL. It is in harmony with the program contemplated by that bill?

Mr. KING. This bill carries out a plan which the Department has recommended.

Mr. McGILL. Very well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARGARET G. BALDWIN

The bill (S. 2371) for the relief of Margaret G. Baldwin was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Margaret G. Baldwin, widow of Frederick W. Baldwin, late consul, Habana, Cuba, the sum of $3,500, being 1 year's salary of her deceased husband, who died while in the Foreign Service; and there is hereby authorized to be appropriated a sufficient sum to carry out the purpose of this act.

SARAH J. HITCHCOCK

The bill (H. R. 3911) for the relief of Sarah J. Hitchcock was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Sarah J. Hitchcock, widow of Henry B. Hitchcock, late American consul at Nagasaki, Japan, the sum of $5,000, being 1 year's salary of her deceased husband, who died while in the Foreign Service; and there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sufficient sum to carry out the purpose of this act: Provided, That no part of the amount authorized to be appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount authorized to be appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

COMPENSATION OF REGISTERS OF DISTRICT LAND OFFICES

The bill (S. 2361) to fix the compensation of registers of district land offices was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act to fix the compensation of registers of local land offices, and for other purposes", approved May 21, 1928 (45 Stat. L., ch. 661, p. 684), is hereby amended to read as follows: "That from and after the 1st day of the month following the approval of this act the compensation of registers of district land offices shall be a salary of $2,000 per annum each, and all fees and commissions now allowed by law to such registers, but the salary, fees, and commissions of such registers shall not exceed $3,600 each per annum: Provided, That the salary of the register of the Juneau land district, Alaska, shall be $3,600 per annum."

Mr. KING subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to recur to Calendar 528, being Senate bill 2361, which was passed just a few moments ago, to fix the compensation of registers of district land offices. I did not know we were to proceed to the consideration of bills on the calendar. I have received a number of communications in protest against the compensation permitted of only $2,000 per annum. The contention is that growing out of the grazing districts and the additional work which has been created, a compensation of $2,000 per annum is inadequate.

I ask unanimous consent for reconsideration of the votes by which the bill was ordered to a third reading and passed, and that it may be restored to the calendar. I should like to talk with a number of Senators from the West with a view to agreeing upon a satisfactory compensation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The votes by which the bill was ordered to a third reading and passed, are reconsidered. The bill will be restored to the calendar.

Mr. KING. I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

COMMISSIONED SERVICE OF NAVAL ACADEMY GRADUATES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 159) to amend the provision in the act approved March 3, 1931, governing the computation of commissioned service of Naval Academy graduates who have been retired for age or service ineligibility for promotion, which had been reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the provisions of section 6 of the act of March 3, 1931, prescribing the method of computing pay on the retired list of officers transferred to the retired list of the Navy pursuant to that act, shall also apply to all officers of the Naval Academy classes of 1906 to 1916, inclusive, who have been transferred to the retired list of the Navy, by reason of age or service ineligibility for promotion, in accordance with laws in effect prior to March 3, 1931: Provided, That nothing in this act shall entitle anyone to any back pay or allowance.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL] explain the purpose of the bill?

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, the Senator from Florida is not present. Can the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR] give us any information with reference to the bill?

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, first of all, may I point out that the bill is recommended by the War Department and of course has the approval of the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Under the existing law credit for a fractional year of 9 months or more was not extended to officers of the classes of 1906 to 1916, inclusive. Thus a distinction was created by the act of March 3, 1931, in favor of those officers of the classes who retired subsequent to that date, over those who retired prior thereto, by reason of ineligibility for promotion. The committee was of the opinion that there is absolutely no basis for such a distinction and therefore recommended unanimously that the bill be passed.

Mr. McKELLAR. Will the Senator tell us to how many officers the bill applies?

Mr. BARBOUR. I do not know. I can, however, easily find out, but I hope in the meantime there will be no objection to the consideration of the bill. It is merely designed to correct an inequality, and the amendment is simply to make more clear the meaning and intent of the bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SUBMARINE AND DESTROYER BASE RESERVATION, ASTORIA, OREG.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 616) authorizing the removal of rock from the submarine and destroyer base reservation at Astoria (Tongue Point), Oreg., which had been reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs with amendments, on page 1, line 3, after the word "authorized", to strike out the words "and directed"; and on page 2, line 1, after the word "works", to insert a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy is authorized to permit the State of Oregon, the county of Clatsop in such State, or any agent of or contractor with such State or county, or any department of the Government, to remove rock from the submarine and destroyer base reservation at Astoria (Tongue Point), Oreg., in any case where it is shown to the satisfaction of such Secretary that the rock sought to be removed is to be used exclusively in the construction of public works: Provided, That any operations under this act on said reservation shall be subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Navy may prescribe: And provided further, That the amount of any saving to any contractor on any existing contract with the Federal Government, by reason of the provisions of this act, shall be deducted from the amount payable under the contract.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TRANSFER TO NAVY OF LANDS NEAR VALLEJO, CALIF.

The bill (S. 1206) authorizing the transfer of certain lands near Vallejo, Calif., from the United States Housing Corporation to the Navy Department for naval purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the United States Housing Corporation, a corporation organized by authority of the President of the United States pursuant to the provisions of the act entitled "An act to authorize the President to provide housing for war needs", approved May 16, 1918, as amended, is authorized and directed to transfer, by appropriate conveyance, to the Navy Department, for naval purposes, that certain tract or parcel of land comprising 29 acres, more or less, designated as the unsold portions of the tideland lot no. 19, in Bay Terrace, near Vallejo, Solano County, Calif.

JOHANNES F. JENSEN

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 158) authorizing the President to present a medal in the name of Congress to John F. Jensen, which had been reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the President of the United States is hereby authorized to present, in the name of Congress, to Johannes F. Jensen, lieutenant commander, United States Naval Reserve, a medal of appropriate design in recognition of his heroic conduct on October 28, 1917, when, as acting master of the Finland, a United States Army chartered transport, he was largely responsible for the saving of that ship and its being brought safely into port after being torpedoed.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I should like to have the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL] or the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR] explain the justification for granting a medal in this case.

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, the Senator from Florida is not present, but I shall be glad to submit such explanation as may be necessary.

The report submitted on the bill is very clear. The bill simply provides, as Senators will see, that a medal be awarded to Lieutenant Commander Jensen in view of his heroic action in the face of grave danger while saving his ship, the Finland, of which he was acting as master, the Finland having been torpedoed. I want to point out that there was no objection on the part of the Department. As a matter of fact, the Department recommended passage of the bill and the committee, of course, unanimously approved it. I believe there can be no just ground for objection.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from New Jersey if this is in accordance with a suggestion of the Department?

Mr. BARBOUR. Yes; as I have said, it is.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill authorizing the President to present a medal in the name of Congress to Johannes F. Jensen."

ROBERT D. HUTCHINSON

The bill (H. R. 3787) for the relief of Robert D. Hutchinson was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, and benefits upon honorably discharged soldiers Robert D. Hutchinson, who was a member of Company D, One Hundred and Fourteenth Supply Train, transferred May 10, 1918, to Guard and Fire Co. No. 311, Newport News, Va., shall thereafter be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States as a private, first class, of that organization, on the 17th day of April 1919: Provided, That no bounty, back pay, pension, allowance, or any payment provided under the World War Veterans' Act, 1924, as amended, the World War Adjusted Compensation Act, 1924, as amended, or other benefit whatsoever to which said person may be or become entitled by law, shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 3370) for the relief of Carrie K. Currie, doing business as Atmore Milling & Elevator Co. was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

ROSE BURKE

The bill (H. R. 1488) for the relief of Rose Burke, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Rose Burke, of Cleveland, Ohio, the sum of $5,000 in full settlement of all claims against the Government of the United States on account of the death of Thomas E. Burke, husband of the said Rose Burke, resulting from injuries received May 24, 1931, when a United States mail truck struck him: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

C. H. HOOGENDORN

The bill (H. R. 2464) for the relief of C. H. Hoogendorn was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,500 to C. H. Hoogendorn in full settlement of all claims against the Government of the United States for the loss of his gas boat Comrade while under charter by the Department of Agriculture: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

WILLIAM L. JENKINS

The bill (H. R. 2473) for the relief of William L. Jenkins was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby authorized and directed to credit the accounts of William L. Jenkins as American consul, formerly at Trebizond, Turkey, with the sum of $2,000, such sum representing the amount for which he is held personally liable on account of official vouchers lost because of warlike conditions in Turkey during 1916 and 1917.

BERTHA INGMIRE

The bill (H. R. 3098) for the relief of Bertha Ingmire, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Bertha Ingmire, of San Pedro, Calif., widow of the late Edmund Percival Ingmire, the sum of $10,000. Such sum shall be in full settlement of all claims against the United States on account of the death of the said Edmund Percival Ingmire and the permanent injury sustained by the said Bertha Ingmire on April 6, 1927, when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by an automobile driven with gross negligence by a Federal prohibition officer: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

FRED L. SEUFERT

The bill (H. R. 3275) for the relief of Fred L. Seufert was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Fred L. Seufert, of Woodside, Long Island, N. Y., the sum of $5,000, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and in full settlement of all claims against the Government of the United States, for personal injuries received causing the loss of leg in collision with an Army truck: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

ABRAHAM GREEN

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1824) for the relief of Abraham Green, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment to insert a proviso at the end of the bill, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Abraham Green, of Manchester, N. H., out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $2,000, which sum represents the loss sustained by the said Abraham Green on the bail bond of William Treinish, who was afterward captured, convicted, and sentenced for violation of the National Prohibition Act: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OLIVER B. HUSTON, ET AL.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1214) for the relief of Oliver B. Huston, Anne Huston, Jane Huston, and Harriet Huston, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment to insert at the end of the bill a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Oliver B. Huston and his three minor daughters, Anne, Jane, and Harriet Huston, all of Salem, Oreg., the sum of $750, in full satisfaction of their claims against the United States for damages for personal injuries resulting from a collision when the car in which they were riding was struck by an Indian-school bus at the intersection of Hood and Winter Streets, Salem, Oreg., on September 17, 1934: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SALLIE S. TWILLEY

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2298) for the relief of Sallie S. Twilley, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment to insert a proviso at the end of the bill, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $5,000 to Sallie S. Twilley, in full settlement of all claims against the Government on account of the death of her husband, Samuel J. Twilley, a former rural carrier at the Cambridge (Md.) post office, due to injuries received while in the performance of his duties: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HUDSON BROS.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 985) for the relief of Hudson Bros., of Norfolk, Va., which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 1, line 9, after the word "Brothers", to strike out "December 1906" and insert "April 30, 1907"; in line 11, after the word "by", to strike out the words "court martial" and insert the words "board of inquiry"; and at the end of the bill to insert a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to pay to Hudson Bros., of Norfolk, Va., out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $620.60 for damages sustained by said Hudson Bros. on account of a collision between the United States revenue cutter Apache and barge C. T. Rowland, owned by said Hudson Bros., April 30, 1907, the collision being caused by the fault in handling the United States revenue cutter Apache, as determined by board of inquiry in the case: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM EDWARD TIDWELL

The bill (S. 1505) for the relief of William Edward Tidwell was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of any laws conferring rights and privileges upon honorably discharged officers and enlisted men who have served in the Army of the United States between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, William Edward Tidwell shall be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service on August 7, 1919: Provided, That no back pay, compensation, benefit, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act: And provided further, That the President is authorized, at his discretion, to appoint William Edward Tidwell a first lieutenant, United States Army, by and with the consent of the Senate.

ISSUANCE OF BONDS BY KETCHIKAN, ALASKA

The bill (H. R. 6084) to authorize the city of Ketchikan, Alaska, to issue bonds in any sum not to exceed $1,000,000 for the purpose of acquiring the electric light, power, water, and telephone properties of the Citizens' Light, Power & Water Co., and to finance and operate the same, and validating the preliminary proceedings with respect thereto, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the city of Ketchikan, Alaska, is hereby authorized to issue and sell its bonds in any sum not to exceed $1,000,000 for the purpose of acquiring for the said city of Ketchikan, electric light, power, water, and telephone properties of the Citizens' Light, Power & Water Co., Inc., and to finance and operate the same by the said city of Ketchikan. The bonds herein authorized to be issued and sold are the bonds referred to in the act entitled "An act to authorize the incorporated town of Ketchikan, Alaska, to issue bonds in any sum not to exceed $1,000,000 for the purpose of acquiring public-utility properties, and for other purposes", approved July 3, 1930 (46 Stat. 1011), in which act the said city of Ketchikan, Alaska, was erroneously referred to as the "incorporated town of Ketchikan, Alaska." Such bonds when issued shall be legal and valid in all respects as general obligations of the said city of Ketchikan, Alaska, notwithstanding any defects or irregularities in the submission to a vote of the people of said city of the question with respect to the issuance or sale of said bonds, in the ordinance calling the election, in the notice of election, in the form of ballot, in taking the vote, or in any of the proceedings had or taken in connection with the issuance or sale of such bonds, and all such proceedings are hereby declared to be legal and valid, and the city is also authorized to levy any taxes which may be necessary for the payment of said bonds for which the full faith and credit of the city shall be pledged. The revenues derived from said electric light, power, water, and telephone properties, over and above the expense of maintenance, operation, and depreciation reserve thereof, shall be pledged to the payment of principal and interest of said bonds.

SEC. 2. The bonds herein referred to and authorized to be issued and sold shall be issued in such form and detail and with such maturities as have been or hereafter shall be determined by resolution of the common council of the city of Ketchikan. Such bonds shall be issued in coupon form, registerable as to principal or as to principal and interest. In case any of the officers whose signatures or countersignatures appear on the bonds or coupons shall cease to be such officers before the delivery of such bonds to the purchaser, such signatures or countersignatures shall, nevertheless, be valid and sufficient for all purposes, the same as if they had remained in office until delivery of the bonds. The proceeds of the sale of such bonds shall be disbursed only for the purposes hereinbefore mentioned, and for which such bonds were authorized to be issued under the provisions of such act of July 3, 1930.

SEC. 3. The bonds herein authorized, when issued, are hereby declared to be valid and legally binding obligations of said city of Ketchikan, Alaska.

ISSUANCE OF BONDS BY PUERTO RICAN AND ALASKAN MUNICIPALITIES

The bill (S. 1227) to authorize the issuance and sale to the United States of certain bonds of municipal governments in Puerto Rico, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Let the bill go over.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I may say to the Senator from Michigan, that the bill in the form in which it now appears, has been completely changed from the form in which it was originally introduced. It now merely provides that certain obligations which are not general tax obligations shall not be regarded as a part of the public debt, which is the situation found in most of the States of the Union which issue bonds.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, the bill contemplates the expansion of the municipal debt in various subdivisions in Puerto Rico. For nearly 8 weeks the Senate has been trying to procure, either from the Secretary of the Interior or the Secretary of Agriculture, in response to a Senate resolution, a report affecting plans for the development of Puerto Rico involving the use of public funds of the character apparently covered by the bill.

So far as I am concerned, I think we are entitled to a report from one or the other of these departments regarding the very ambitious development plan which someone apparently has in mind, with the use of Government funds at stake, in connection with Puerto Rican development. Until we can have a response from one department or the other in respect to it, I shall persist in my objection, with great respect for the Senator from Washington.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, exactly the same state of facts in reference to a number of towns in Alaska seems to be involved in bills coming immediately after this bill.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I know nothing about the other bills. This is a particular situation, and involves what is called "the Chardon plan" for the development of Puerto Rico, concerning which the Senate has never yet been able to get specific information.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Tennessee is wholly in error about the Alaskan situation. Those bills have no connection whatever with Territorial financing, but are purely municipal bills.

Mr. McKELLAR. The next bill is entitled "A bill to authorize the incorporated town of Valdez, Alaska, to construct a public-school building and for such purpose to issue bonds in any sum not exceeding $50,000; and to authorize said town to accept grants of money to aid it in financing any public works."

I imagine that the purpose of the bill is to obtain money under the public-works bill.

Mr. BONE. There may be one bill, possibly this one, of which that is true; but in the case of the rest of the bills, the enactment of a little group of them has been requested by the Governor of Alaska and the officials of the Territory because the cities desire to make certain public improvements and to bond themselves. In one instance they had a vote of about 70 or 80 percent of the taxpayers in the community.

Mr. McKELLAR. Does the Department recommend the enactment of these bills?

Mr. BONE. Yes; there is no objection to the bills. The Territorial officials are highly desirous that they pass. They do not involve the Government in any expense; and if the people there wish to bond their towns in order to improve them somewhat, I do not think we should object.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator from Washington.

Mr. BONE. Certainly.

Mr. KING. Are there not limitations in the charters of these towns and cities, granted either by the Territorial legislature or by the Congress, as to the limits of their indebtedness?

Mr. BONE. I do not so understand. It is my understanding that they have to have statutory authority to do what they desire to do in this case. In other words, there is a little community up there——

Mr. KING. Yes; I notice that in the case of one town there are only 100 inhabitants.

Mr. BONE. But if that little town, and the people owning the property in it, wish to bond themselves for a waterworks or a sidewalk, I do not think we should stand in their way. In other words, I do not think we should become guardians and wet nurses. If I wish to vote for an improvement on my street, I do not think the Senate or the House should stand in the way. These projects require the votes of the people. If my colleagues will examine the reports, they will find that in several of the cases only the persons who are on the tax rolls are permitted to vote; and they have had one or two votes on some of these matters.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, if little towns or villages of only 100 people desired to bond themselves for $100,000 in one case and $50,000 in another, and the Congress authorized that, under those circumstances would not the Congress be morally liable to pay those bonds?

Mr. BONE. I have examined these bills because I was on the committee, and authority was given to me to report them out. The fact is that these bonds will have to be sold on the open market, and there is the supreme test. That is true in the case of Seward, as well as in the other cases. They do not propose to get the money from the Government. They will have to go out and offer the bonds on the open market; and the real protection, if there is any likelihood of overloading any one, lies in the fact that in that event no one will buy the bonds.

Mr. McKELLAR. Those towns are our wards, so to speak, and we have to act for them. We have to give them the authority that is sought. If we should authorize a village of 100 people to issue bonds for $100,000, I think we would be morally liable to the holders of the bonds, because that is going a long, long way in allowing people to create indebtedness.

Mr. BONE. I am sure the Senator would not suggest to us that any bond house would buy the bonds unless there were ample security back of them.

Mr. McKELLAR. Then, if bond houses would not buy them, and we are doing a useless thing in authorizing the communities to bond themselves, does not the Senator think we had better not do it?

Mr. BONE. But that is not the point. I think the Senator from Tennessee has not read the reports. I have examined the bills, and I certainly should not suggest the propriety of their enactment—we have already passed one of them—if the picture had not been made very plain by the Alaska officials.

For instance, the Governor of Alaska talked to me the other day, and he is very anxious that these bills should go through; and Mr. DIMOND, the Territorial Delegate, assured me of the desire of these communities, for which he speaks here by election, that the bills should be passed. It is no concern of mine; but somehow I have been selected as the sacrificial goat, and I desire to see the measures go through. I do not believe we should tell the people of Seward, Alaska, that they cannot take over a little power system in their city, when the power system makes more profit than the city collects in taxes. All they have to do is to sell their utility bonds, or any other kind of bonds, and take over the system.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I agree with what the Senator says as to our duty—or, rather, our lack of duty—with respect to the control of those municipalities, except in this respect, and I directed the Senator's attention to the matter a few moments ago: I am wondering whether the charters under which the municipalities operate were granted by Congress or by the Territorial legislature. If granted by Congress, and the charters fix the limit of indebtedness, I should feel an obligation resting upon Congress to scrutinize applications to amend their charters, which would enable them to bond the municipalities for larger amounts than authorized in the charters.

To illustrate, when Utah was a Territory the legislature authorized municipalities to do certain things and to issue bonds in an amount not in excess of 8 percent of the assessed valuation of the property within their limits. While the residents of the cities could incur indebtedness up to 8 percent, the legislature, if applications were made to extend the authority to bond, say, to 20 percent, would have hesitated, and certainly it would have scrutinized the applications, and, in my opinion, would have denied them.

The point I am trying to make is this: If Congress granted charters and fixed limits beyond which they might not extend their credit or borrow, I should like to be advised as to the capacity of the municipalities to meet the obligations which are to be created.

Mr. BONE. I do not wish to have to tell the Governor of Alaska and the Territorial Delegate that it is not possible for us now to give these Alaska cities any aid. I do not know why I should constitute myself a guardian, for instance, of the State of Tennessee and sit here as a Senator and object to the passage of a bill that the Senator from Tennessee might bring in here—and I might readily do so—and force the Senator to make a fight over the matter.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President——

Mr. KING. I hope the Senator from Washington will not take any offense at these inquiries. There is a difference between the State of Tennessee and the Territory of Alaska. The Territory of Alaska is in a sense a ward of the Government and is under the supervision of the Congress of the United States; and I am not willing to vote to amend the charter of the municipality in question unless I know whether it would be a wise and proper course to be pursued; but if the charter was granted by the Territory and the indebtedness sought to be created is within the authority granted, I have no objection to the bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I call the Senator's attention to my objection. Take Senate bill 2315, which I believe is now under consideration, to authorize the incorporated town of Valdez to issue bonds for $50,000 for a school building. If the Senator will look on page 2 of the report, he will see that the entire tax receipts for 1933 were $9,225.68 and the disbursements were $8,859.36; while in 1934 the tax receipts were $9,200.29, and the disbursements were $9,799.52, or an actual deficit. To allow a town of that size, where the taxes coming in are less than the present expenses of the town, to issue $50,000 of bonds upon which they must pay somewhere between two and three thousand dollars a year interest, it seems to me would be doing a very improvident thing; and I think it is our duty not to allow them to do that sort of thing.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I do not desire to force the Senator to prolong his objection to this bill. The next bill in this group affects Nome, and the next applies to Petersburg, and the last one is for Seward. The proposal in the case of Seward, Alaska, is to take over a system which has ample revenues to finance the project; and I certainly hope we shall not dispose of the Seward bill in this fashion.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is a different kind of bill, for the reason that when the bonds shall be issued and the plant taken over there will be an income from the hydroelectric plant.

Mr. BONE. Seward is not seeking anything at the hands of the Government. It will offer on the open market the bonds issued against this property. So far as I know, it will be able to dispose of them. I certainly should like to see the Seward bill pass, even if we are not willing to pass the others.

Mr. McKELLAR. I think it ought to be looked into. I have no objection to the Seward bill.

Mr. BONE. If there is no objection to the Seward bill, I should like to offer an amendment, merely to clarify the bill. The proposed amendment provides that in the event of delivery of title to the plant, it shall be a title free of encumbrance of any sort.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, their financial statement shows that the revenues over a period of 4 years averaged approximately $37,500, and expenditures over a period of 4 years averaged approximately $34,300, leaving a surplus of $3,200. They wish to issue bonds to an amount not exceeding $118,000. We find that their indebtedness consists of bonds for a schoolhouse, already issued, at 7 percent, amounting to $47,000, and bonds to mature in 1952, payable in installments per year of $2,500. There is no floating debt.

It seems to me it is very doubtful whether they could sell the bonds proposed to be issued.

Mr. BONE. Let me call the Senator's attention to the fact that he is now referring to city taxes and city finances, and not to the financial statement of the power system. The figures indicate that the income from their activities is many, many times more than sufficient to carry the bonded debt the city proposes to assume, and because the bill was recast in my office, having in mind the experience of our own Washington utilities, it was recast so as to permit them to use utility bonds, or underwrite the bond issue with a pledge of earnings. So it need not affect their local tax situation at all. If they propose to take this system over, they can float their bonds up there.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of Senate bill 2315?

Mr. McKELLAR. I object to the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

PROTECTION OF AMERICAN AND PHILIPPINE LABOR

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to recur to Order of Business No. 462, being Senate bill 2530.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2530) to protect American and Philippine labor and to preserve an essential industry, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs with an amendment, on page 2, line 5, after the word "thereof", to strike out the words "proportionately on the basis of their exportation to the United States during the preceding calendar year", so as to read:

Be it enacted, etc., That, effective May 1, 1935, and for 3 years thereafter, the total amount of all yarns, twines, cords, cordage, rope, and cable, tarred or untarred, wholly or in chief value of Manila (abaca) or other hard fiber, produced or manufactured in the Philippine Islands coming into the United States from the Philippine Islands, shall not exceed 6,000,000 pounds during each successive 12-month period, which 6,000,000 pounds shall enter the United States duty free.

The amount or quantity of such articles which may be so exported to the United States shall be allocated, under export permits issued by the government of the Philippine Islands, to the producers or manufacturers thereof. This allocation shall be made by the Governor General of the Philippine Islands prior to the inauguration of the Commonwealth of the Philippines, and thereafter by the President of said Commonwealth, unless otherwise provided by the legislature of the Commonwealth.

SEC. 2. Pending the final and complete withdrawal of American sovereignty over the Philippine Islands, the President of the United States may, by proclamation, at least 90 days prior to the expiration of the 3-year period provided in section 1 hereof, extend the operation of this act for an additional period of 3 years or more, provided such extension is accepted by the President of the Commonwealth of the Philippines.

SEC. 3. On and after the expiration of the operation of this act the articles described in section 1 coming into the United States from the Philippines shall be subject to the provisions of section 6 of the act of Congress approved March 24, 1934, entitled "An act to provide for the complete independence of the Philippine Islands, to provide for the adoption of a constitution and a form of government for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes."

SEC. 4. Except as provided herein, nothing in this act shall be construed to modify or repeal the provisions of any existing law.

SEC. 5. The Secretary of the Treasury shall promulgate such rules and regulations as may be necessary to enforce the provisions hereof; and this act shall be enforced as part of the customs law.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, this is a bill reported unanimously from the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs. It represents an agreement between the Philippine interests and the American cordage interests to put a limitation on the amount of cordage which can enter the United States from the Philippines duty free.

I am advised there is no opposition to the bill from any source. It was reported unanimously by the committee, and I have asked for its consideration because of the unavoidable absence of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], the chairman of the committee.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I objected to this bill because I did not know whether it meets the views of the new Philippine organization and the new Philippine leaders. Learning that it does, I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CARRIE K. CURRIE

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate recur to the consideration of Order of Business 534, being House bill 3370.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 3370) for the relief of Carrie K. Currie, doing business as Atmore Milling & Elevator Co., which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Carrie K. Currie, doing business as Atmore Milling & Elevator Co., of Atmore, Ala., the sum of $1,500 in full settlement of all claims against the Government of the United States for damages to an automobile truck destroyed on April 25, 1919, by Louisville & Nashville Railroad Co. passenger train operated by the United States Government through its Director General of Railroads: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

BOND ISSUE BY NOME, ALASKA

The bill (S. 2317) to ratify and confirm the corporate existence of the city of Nome, Alaska, and to authorize it to undertake certain municipal public works, including the construction, reconstruction, enlargement, extension, and improvement of its sewers and drains, fire-fighting system, streets and alleys, sidewalks, curbs and gutters, and a municipal building, and for such purposes to issue bonds in any sum not exceeding $100,000 was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, did the Senator from Washington understand that this was one of the bills which was to go over?

Mr. BONE. Yes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

BOND ISSUE BY PETERSBURG, ALASKA

The bill (S. 2316) to authorize the incorporated town of Petersburg, Alaska, to undertake certain municipal public works, including the filling, grading, and paving of streets and sidewalks and construction of necessary bridges and viaducts in connection with the same, and for such purposes to issue bonds in any sum not exceeding $40,000 was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

BOND ISSUE BY SEWARD, ALASKA

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 3808) to authorize the incorporated town of Seward, Alaska, to undertake certain municipal public works, including the construction of an electric-generating station and electric-distribution systems, and for such purposes to issue bonds in any sum not exceeding $118,000, which had been reported from the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

That the incorporated town of Seward, Territory of Alaska, is hereby authorized and empowered (a) by contract or contracts, or by its own agents and employees, or otherwise than by contract, to construct a municipal electric system, together with all parts thereof and appurtenances thereto necessary or convenient for the generation, production, transmission, and distribution of electric energy, and to acquire by gift, purchase, or the exercise of the power of eminent domain, lands, easements, or rights in land or water rights in connection therewith; (b) to operate and maintain said system for its own use and benefit and for the use and benefit of public and private consumers or users within and without the territorial boundaries of said town; (c) to issue its bonds to finance in whole or in part the cost of the construction of said system; (d) to prescribe and collect rates, fees, or charges for the services, facilities, and commodities furnished by said system; (e) to pledge to the punctual payment of said bonds and interest thereon all or any part of the gross or net revenues of said system (including improvements, betterments, or extensions thereto thereafter constructed or acquired); (f) to enter into contract with the United States of America or any Federal agency created or continued by or pursuant to the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935; and (g) to subscribe to and comply with all rules and regulations prescribed or continued by the President of the United States of America pursuant to the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935. The common council of said town, in determining the cost of the construction of said system, may include all costs and estimated costs of the issuance of said bonds, all engineering, inspection, fiscal and legal expenses, and interest which it is estimated will accrue during the construction period and for 6 months thereafter on money borrowed or which it is estimated will be borrowed pursuant to this act.

SEC. 2. The construction of said system may be authorized under this act, and bonds may be authorized to be issued under this act by resolution or resolutions of the common council of said town. Said bonds shall bear interest at such rate or rates not exceeding 6 percent per annum, payable semiannually, may be in one or more series, may bear such date or dates, may mature at such time or times not exceeding 40 years from their respective dates, may be payable in such medium of payment, at such place or places, may carry such registration privileges, may be subject to such terms of redemption, with or without premium, may be executed in such manner, may be in such form, either coupon or registered, may contain such terms, covenants, and conditions, and may be declared or become due before the maturity date thereof, as such resolution or subsequent resolutions may provide. Said bonds shall be sold for not less than par and may be sold at either public or private sale. Pending the preparation of the definitive bonds, interim receipts or certificates in such form and with such provisions as the common council of said town may determine, may be issued to the purchaser or purchasers of bonds sold pursuant to this act. Said bonds and interim receipts or certificates shall be negotiable for all purposes. Said bonds bearing the signatures of officers in office on the date of the signing thereof shall be valid and binding obligations, notwithstanding that before the delivery thereof and payment therefor any or all the persons whose signatures appear thereon shall have ceased to be officers of the town.

SEC. 3. Any resolution or resolutions authorizing the issuance of bonds under this act may contain covenants as to (a) the purpose or purposes to which the proceeds of sale of said bonds may be applied and the use and disposition thereof, (b) the use and disposition of the revenue of said system, including the creation and maintenance of reserves, (c) the transfer from the general funds of the town to the account or accounts of said system a sum or sums of money for furnishing such town or any of its departments, boards, or agencies with the services, facilities, and commodities of said system, (d) the issuance of other or additional bonds payable from the revenue of said system, (e) the operation and maintenance of said system, (f) the insurance to be carried thereon and the use and disposition of insurance moneys, (g) books of account and the inspection and audit thereof, and (h) the terms and conditions upon which the holders of said bonds or any proportion of them or any trustee therefor shall be entitled to the appointment of a receiver by the District Court for the Territory of Alaska, which court shall have jurisdiction in such proceedings, and which receiver may enter and take possession of said system, operate and maintain the same, prescribe rates, fees, or charges, and collect, receive, and apply all revenue thereafter arising therefrom in the same manner as the town itself might do. The provisions of this act and any such resolution or resolutions shall be a contract with the holder or holders of said bonds, and the duties of the town and of its common council and officers under this act and any such resolution or resolutions shall be enforceable by any bondholder, by mandamus or other appropriate suit, action, or proceeding in any court of competent jurisdiction.

SEC. 4. The common council of said town shall prescribe and collect reasonable rates, fees, or charges for the services, facilities, and commodities of said system, and shall revise such rates, fees, or charges from time to time whenever necessary so that said system shall be and always remain self-supporting. The rates, fees, or charges prescribed shall be such as will produce revenue at least sufficient (a) to pay when due all bonds and interest thereon, for the payment of which such revenue is or shall have been pledged, charged, or otherwise encumbered, including reserves therefor, and (b) to provide for all expenses of operation and maintenance of said system, including reserves therefor.

SEC. 5. No holder of any bond issued under this act shall have the right to compel the levy of a tax by said town to pay the principal of or interest on such bonds. All bonds issued under this act shall be payable solely from the revenues pledged to the payment thereof and shall contain a recital to that effect. Such bonds may be issued notwithstanding any debt or other limitation or restriction prescribed by any other law.

SEC. 6. This act shall become effective 30 days after its passage: Provided, however, That none of the powers herein granted to the said town of Seward, Alaska, shall be exercised by said town in the event that the Seward Light & Power Co., a corporation, shall, within 1 week after a copy of this act is served on said Seward Light & Power Co., offer in writing to sell and convey to the said town of Seward all its right, title, and interest in and to its electric generating plant or plants, electric distributing system, pipe lines, and water rights now owned by it and used and employed in supplying electric energy to the inhabitants of said town, said offer of sale to be for the sum of $75,000, and to provide that delivery of title shall be made to said town within 6 months from date of said written offer of sale: Provided further, That said offer and agreement to sell must be delivered by said Seward Light & Power Co. to the town clerk of the said town of Seward. Service of copy of this act on the Seward Light & Power Co. shall be made by delivery thereof to its president, S. M. Graff, or any other officer of the corporation: And provided further, That in the event the said Seward Light & Power Co. offers to sell and convey its properties as provided for in this section, the said town is authorized to purchase such properties and to issue bonds for such purpose in an amount not to exceed $75,000, such bonds to be issued in the manner provided for in this act.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Washington has offered two amendments, which the clerk will state.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 10, line 24, in the committee amendment, before the word "right", it is proposed to strike out the word "its."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHIEF CLERK. In the committee amendment on page 11, line 4, after "$75,000", it is proposed to strike out the words "and to provide that delivery of title shall be made to said town within 6 months from date of said written offer of sale: Provided further, That said offer and agreement to sell must be delivered by said Seward Light & Power Co. to the town clerk of the said town of Seward" and to insert in lieu thereof "and to guarantee that delivery of said title, free from encumbrance and debt of any kind, shall be made to said town upon payment of said sum, any time within 6 months from date of said written offer to sell: Provided further, That said offer and agreement to convey title must be delivered by said Seward Light & Power Co. to the town clerk of said town of Seward, Alaska, within the time specified above."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act concerning the incorporated town of Seward, Territory of Alaska."

UTAH GILSONITE CO.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 377) for the sale of certain public lands to the Utah Gilsonite Co., which had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

That the Utah Gilsonite Co., a Missouri corporation doing business in the State of Utah, be, and it is hereby, granted the right to use the water well now held by it on the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of section 20, township 9 south, range 24 east, Salt Lake meridian, in Uintah County, Utah, for the purpose of supplying water for culinary and other beneficial purposes to its camp about 2 miles distant, and so much land around said well, not exceeding 5 acres, as needed for the protection and use thereof, upon condition that the company pay to the United States through the register of the Salt Lake City district land office a yearly rental of $5, the first payment to be made within 60 days after the passage of this act, and annually thereafter on the anniversary date hereof, and the continued use of the well for the purpose of supplying water to its camp: Provided, That, upon failure to comply with said conditions, or either of them, for a continuous period of 1 year, the Secretary of the Interior may by appropriate proceedings declare said right forfeited and terminate the same.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to grant to the Utah Gilsonite Co. the right to use a water well on certain public lands in Utah."

LAND-GRANT COLLEGES AND AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATIONS

The bill (S. 2228) to provide for the further development of cooperative agricultural extension work and the more complete endowment and support of land-grant colleges and agricultural experiment stations was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, a Senator who is absent I think has an amendment to offer to this bill, and in view of that fact, and since we could not consider the bill under the 5-minute rule, I ask that it go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLARK in the chair). The bill will be passed over.

NELLIE OLIVER

The bill (H. R. 5133) for the relief of Nellie Oliver was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, and benefits upon honorably discharged soldiers Robert Oliver, alias John Lear, deceased husband of Nellie Oliver, who was a member of Company C, Thirteenth Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, shall hereafter be held to have been discharged under honorable conditions from the military service of the United States as a member of that organization on the 6th day of July 1864: Provided, That no bounty, back pay, pension, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

FRANK R. CARPENTER, ALIAS FRANK R. CARVIN

The bill (H. R. 1565) for the relief of Frank R. Carpenter, alias Frank R. Carvin, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, and benefits upon honorably discharged soldiers Frank R. Carpenter, alias Frank R. Carvin, who was a member of Company H, Sixteenth Regiment United States Infantry, honorably discharged, and an unassigned recruit at Columbus Barracks, Ohio, shall hereafter be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States as a private on the 20th day of June 1902: Provided, That no bounty, back pay, pension, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

CHIPPEWA INDIAN LANDS, MINNESOTA

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 2045) to set aside certain lands for the Leech Lake Band of Chippewa Indians in the State of Minnesota, which had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 1, page 1, line 6, after the word "the", to strike out the words "Leech Lake Band of"; on page 2, after line 4, to strike out "Said Indians may take fish from the navigable waters adjacent to the above-described lands for their own use, and not for sale without being amenable to the State game and fish laws of the State of Minnesota", so as to make the section read:

That the following-described lands are hereby withdrawn from the Minnesota National Forest Reserve under the Department of Agriculture and are hereby permanently reserved as Indian lands for the use of the Chippewas in the State of Minnesota, without in any manner affecting existing reserves for church, cemetery, or other purposes, or individual rights and interests in said lands:

South half southwest quarter northeast quarter and lots 9 to 30, inclusive, section 17, township 142 north, range 30 west, fifth principal meridian, Minnesota, containing 168.44 acres.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, page 2, at the beginning of line 10, to insert the words "in trust", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. Said lands are hereby permanently reserved in trust for the use of the Chippewa Indians of Minnesota for village site purposes.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to set aside certain lands for the Chippewa Indians in the State of Minnesota."

PUBLIC-SCHOOL BUILDINGS IN DUCHESNE COUNTY, UTAH

The bill (S. 2193) to provide for the construction, extension, and improvement of public-school buildings in Duchesne County, Utah, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $50,000 to be used by the Secretary of the Interior in making payments to the Duchesne County school district in accordance with the provisions of section 2.

SEC. 2. The Duchesne County school district shall submit to the Secretary of the Interior for his approval (1) plans for extensions and improvements of existing public-school buildings within such county, and for the construction of such other school buildings as such district may consider necessary, and (2) estimates as to the cost of carrying out such plans. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to approve such plans and cost estimates in whole or in part, or to require modifications or revisions thereof. Upon approval by the Secretary of any such plans and cost estimates, and upon agreement by such school district that the public schools maintained by it shall be open to Indian children who reside in such district, the Secretary shall pay to such district, but not in excess of the appropriation made in section 1, an amount equal to the approved cost estimate of carrying out such approved plan. Such amount shall be expended by such district for the purpose of carrying out such approved plan and for no other purpose.

SEC. 3. No payments shall be made to the Duchesne County school district under the provisions of this act unless such district maintains books, records, accounts, and memoranda and permits the examination of and produces such books, records, accounts, and memoranda, in accordance with such reasonable regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe.

DONALD O. MILLER

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1495) authorizing the President to order Donald O. Miller before a retiring board for a hearing of his case and upon the findings of such board determine whether or not he be placed on the retired list with the rank and pay held by him at the time of his separation, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with amendments, on page 1, line 4, after the word "authorized", to strike out the words "in his discretion"; on line 6, to strike out the words "a retiring board of physicians" and to insert in lieu thereof the words "a board of medical review"; and on page 2, line 5, after the word "authorized", to strike out the words "in his discretion", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War, under the direction of the President, is hereby authorized to order Donald O. Miller, late a captain, United States Army, before a board of medical review of the Veterans' Administration for the purpose of a hearing of his case and to inquire into and determine the facts touching the nature and occasion of his disability, and to find and report the cause which, in its judgment, has produced his incapacity, and whether such cause is an incident of the service, according to the statute; and that upon the findings of such board the President is further authorized to nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint said Donald O. Miller a captain, the grade which he had at the time of his separation, and to place him on the retired list of the Army: Provided, That no bounty, back pay, pension, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH CO.

The bill (S. 2225) authorizing adjustment of the claim of the Western Union Telegraph Co., was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to adjust, settle, and pay the claim of the Western Union Telegraph Co. for not to exceed $10,657.57, being the amount which that company paid to the United States as a part of the tariff for messages dispatched by American officers in Russia and forwarded to this country through the Western Union Telegraph Co. for which the company has failed to receive any payments due to the collapse of the Russian Government. There is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $10,657.57, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for the payment of this claim: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

MUTUAL SAVINGS AND LOAN ASSOCIATION, WILMINGTON, DEL.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1030) for the relief of the Mutual Savings and Loan Association, Wilmington, Del., which had been reported from the Committee on Claims, with an amendment, on page 2, line 1, after "1928", to strike out the words "inclusive, together with interest at the rate of 6 percent per annum from the dates of payments of such taxes to the date of the approval of this act", and in lieu thereof to insert "inclusive: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the Mutual Savings and Loan Association, formerly known as the Merchants' Mutual Association, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Delaware, the sum of $2,601.87, in full satisfaction of its claims against the United States for a refund of income taxes erroneously assessed and paid during the years 1913 to 1922, inclusive, and 1924 to 1928, inclusive: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANALYTICAL REGISTER OF REGULAR ARMY OFFICERS

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 56) authorizing the publication as a public document of America Secure: Analytical Register of Regular Army Officers and Security Statistics, with Graphs, 1775–1935, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from Texas explain the joint resolution?

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, this joint resolution passed the Senate at the last session, but at a time too late for action in the House. It authorizes the publication as a public document of America Secure: Analytical Register of Regular Army Officers and Security Statistics, with graphs, 1775–1935.

The War Department states that there is a distinct need for such a publication; that there is no comprehensive and up-to-date register containing brief military biographies of all Regular officers of the United States Army, and no comprehensive statistical tables or graphs showing all tangible elements of national security from 1775 to 1935.

The War Department states further that the publication of the proposed register would be of great value to the Adjutant General's Office in the conduct of its current business; that great savings in time and labor have resulted from the use of Heitman's work, the now used source; but that this is a great improvement on that work.

Mr. McKELLAR. What would it cost?

Mr. SHEPPARD. About $11,000.

Mr. McKELLAR. Of course, if this measure should be passed, that money would have to be appropriated in the deficiency bill.

Mr. SHEPPARD. This measure makes a direct appropriation.

Mr. McKELLAR. About $11,000?

Mr. SHEPPARD. About $11,000—or, to be exact, $11,250. The War Department says that the savings in time and expense would more than justify this outlay.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 1, page 2, line 2, after the word "compile", to strike out "and publish", so as to make the section read:

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of War is authorized and directed to compile a comprehensive register containing brief military biographies of all Regular officers of the United States Army and comprehensive statistical tables and graphs showing all the tangible elements of national security for the period beginning with 1775 and ending December 31, 1934, such compilation to be known as "America Secure: Analytical Register of Regular Army Officers and Security Statistics, with Graphs, 1775–1935", by John J. Lenney.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, page 2, line 12, after the words "and to", to strike out "appoint" and insert "arrange with the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs for the services of"; in line 16, after the word "resolution", to strike out the period and "Such appointment of said John J. Lenney shall be"; in line 19, after the word "such", to strike out "compilation, and" and insert "compilation. Such services"; and on page 3, line 2, after the figures "$8,250", to strike out "to be paid out of the available appropriations for the War Department" and insert "and shall also reimburse the Veterans' Administration for the services of said John J. Lenney at a cost not to exceed $3,200, a total of $11,450, and there is hereby appropriated, out of any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $11,450 for such purpose", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. The Secretary of War is further authorized and directed to use the compilation made by John J. Lenney, such compilation including the years 1775 to 1923, and to arrange with the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs for the services of said John J. Lenney to complete such compilation in accordance with the provisions of this resolution for such number of months, not exceeding 12, from the date of approval of this resolution, as may be necessary to complete such compilation. Such services shall be without prejudice to the status or compensation of said John J. Lenney as senior adjudicator of insurance claims in the office of the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs or to his relative standing in respect of efficiency. The Secretary shall appoint additional employees to assist said John J. Lenney and shall provide desk space and filing cabinets and drafting and photostatic services and necessary materials at a cost not to exceed $8,250, and shall also reimburse the Veterans' Administration for the services of said John J. Lenney at a cost not to exceed $3,200, a total of $11,450, and there is hereby appropriated, out of any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $11,450 for such purpose.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 3, page 3, line 11, after the words "of which", to strike out "three thousand" and insert "two thousand three hundred and thirty-three"; in line 13, after the word "Senate", to strike out "six thousand nine hundred" and insert "four thousand five hundred and sixty-seven"; and in line 15, after the word "Representatives", to insert "three thousand shall be for the use of the War Department", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 3. Such compilation, when completed, shall be printed as a Senate document and 10,000 additional copies shall be printed, of which 2,333 shall be for the use of the Senate, 4,567 shall be for the use of the House of Representatives, 3,000 shall be for the use of the War Department, and 100 for the use of said John J. Lenney.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to, as follows:

Whereas there is no comprehensive register containing brief military biographies of all regular officers of the United States Army and no comprehensive statistical tables nor graphs showing all the tangible elements of national security from 1775 to 1935; and

Whereas there is sufficient evidence of public need for publication of such register, tables, and graphs; and

Whereas a compilation of such register, tables, and graphs has been completed by John J. Lenney for the period 1775 to 1923, both dates inclusive: Therefore be it—

GORDON M'GEE

The bill (S. 2407) for the relief of Gordon McGee was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I ask that the bill be passed over.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I should like to explain that bill, if the Senator from Utah will withhold his request that the bill be passed over.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I have now examined the report, and I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, on page 1, line 6, after the word "considered", to strike out "to have served without desertion and", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the pension laws or any laws conferring rights, privileges, or benefits upon persons honorably discharged from the United States Army Gordon McGee shall be held and considered to have been honorably discharged on October 20, 1931, as a private, Casual Detachment, Guard and Fire Company United States Army: Provided, That no bounty, back pay, retirement pay, pension, or allowance shall be held to have accrued by reason of this act prior to its passage.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FORT MONROE MILITARY RESERVATION

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 42) to cede to the Commonwealth of Virginia jurisdiction over that portion of the Fort Monroe Military Reservation leased to the Old Point Comfort Hotel Corporation, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

That section 289 of the Criminal Code (U. S. C., title 18, sec. 468) be, and it is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 289. Whoever, within the territorial limits of any State, organized Territory, or District, but within or upon any of the places now existing or hereafter reserved or acquired, described in section 272 of the Criminal Code (U. S. C., title 18, sec. 451), shall do or omit the doing of any act or thing which is not made penal by any laws of Congress, but which if committed or omitted within the jurisdiction of the State, Territory, or District in which such place is situated, by the laws thereof in force on April 1, 1935, and remaining in force at the time of the doing or omitting the doing of such act or thing, would be penal, shall be deemed guilty of a like offense and be subject to a like punishment."

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "Joint resolution to amend section 289 of the Criminal Code."

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1689) for the relief of Frank Fisher was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

ANTHONY J. CONSTANTINO

The bill (S. 2516) for the relief of Anthony J. Constantino was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, and benefits upon honorably discharged soldiers, Anthony J. Constantino, private, Quartermaster Corps, United States Army, shall hereafter be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States on the 14th day of July 1919: Provided, That no bounty, back pay, pension, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1861) to incorporate the National Association of State Libraries was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

REFUNDING OF COUNTERVAILING CUSTOMS DUTIES ON LOGS

The bill (S. 1626) for the refunding of certain countervailing customs duties collected upon logs imported from British Columbia was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Washington whether that bill has been recommended by the Treasury Department?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Yes; and a similar bill passed the Senate at the last session.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That claims for the refunding of any customs duties erroneously or illegally assessed or collected upon fir, spruce, cedar, or western hemlock, under the provisions of paragraph 401 of the Tariff Act of 1922, approved September 21, 1922 (42 Stat. L. 858, 889), because of the existence of the so-called "timber tax" embodied in subdivision 2 of section 58 of the land and forest act of the Province of British Columbia may be presented to the Commissioner of Customs not later than 6 months after the passage of this act; and the Commissioner of Customs is hereby authorized and directed to receive, consider, and determine in accordance with law but without regard to any statute requiring protest, appeal, and the like, such claims as may have been presented, heretofore by way of protest to the collectors of customs and not allowed, and such claims as may hereafter be presented within the period above named, where and when and only when it be found and determined that such duties were collected upon the erroneous interpretation of law passed upon and condemned by the United States Customs Court, first division, in decisions rendered in the cases of George S. Bush & Co., Inc., and others against United States and Siemons Lumber Co. against United States, on March 12, 1931, and reported at page 590 in Fifty-ninth Treasury Decisions: Provided, That no interest shall be allowed on any of these claims.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to such claimants as have presented or shall hereafter so present their claims, any amount allowed in the determination of any claims so defined and which shall have been presented in accordance with this act.

FIRST LT. CLAUDE W. SHELTON, RETIRED

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1497) to authorize the appointment of First Lt. Claude W. Shelton, retired, to the grade of captain, retired, in the United States Army, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, on page 1, line 3, after the word "authorized", to insert "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint and commission Claude W. Shelton, first lieutenant, United States Army, retired, to the grade of captain, United States Army, retired, said grade being effective as of July 1, 1920, with the retired pay of captain, said pay to be based as is that of officers of like status and service: Provided, That no bounty, back pay, pension, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BIG BEND NATIONAL PARK

The bill (S. 2131) to provide for the establishment of the Big Bend National Park in the State of Texas, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That when title to such lands as may be determined by the Secretary of the Interior as necessary for recreational park purposes within the boundaries to be determined by him within the area of approximately 1,500,000 acres, in the counties of Brewster and Presidio, in the State of Texas, known as the "Big Bend" area, shall have been vested in the United States, such lands shall be, and are hereby, established, dedicated, and set apart as a public park for the benefit and enjoyment of the people and shall be known as the "Big Bend

National Park": Provided, That the United States shall not purchase by appropriation of public moneys any land within the aforesaid area, but such lands shall be secured by the United States only by public and private donations.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, in his discretion and upon submission of evidence of title satisfactory to him, to accept, on behalf of the United States, title to the lands referred to in the previous section hereof as may be deemed by him necessary or desirable for national-park purposes: Provided, That no land for said park shall be accepted until exclusive jurisdiction over the entire area, in form satisfactory to the Secretary of the Interior, shall have been ceded by the State of Texas to the United States.

SEC. 3. The administration, protection, and development of the aforesaid park shall be exercised under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior by the National Park Service, subject to the provisions of the act of August 25, 1916 (39 Stat. 535), entitled "An act to establish a National Park Service, and for other purposes", as amended: Provided, That the provisions of the act of June 10, 1920, known as the "Federal Water Power Act", shall not apply to this park.

Mr. SHEPPARD subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the report of the committee on Senate bill 2131, relating to the establishment of the Big Bend National Park in the State of Texas, be printed in the RECORD immediately following the passage of the measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The report (No. 547) submitted by Mr. PITTMAN on the calendar day of April 23, 1935, is as follows:

[S. Rept. No. 547, 74th Cong., 1st sess. (to accompany S. 2131)]

The Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, having had under consideration by reference from the Senate the bill (S. 2131) to provide for the establishment of the Big Bend National Park in the State of Texas, and for other purposes, hereby reports the same favorably and recommends its passage.

The bill provides that when title to such lands as may be determined by the Secretary of the Interior as necessary for recreational park purposes within the boundaries to be determined by him within the area of approximately 1,500,000 acres in the counties of Brewster and Presidio, in the State of Texas, known as the "Big Bend area", shall have been vested in the United States, such lands shall be, and are hereby, established, dedicated, and set apart as a public park for the benefit and enjoyment of the people and shall be known as the "Big Bend National Park."

The bill provides that the land necessary for the purposes heretofore described shall be secured only by donations to the United States and not by appropriation from the Federal Treasury.

The bill authorizes the Secretary of the Interior in his discretion and on submission of evidence of title satisfactory to him to accept on behalf of the United States title to such lands within the area heretofore mentioned as may be deemed by him necessary or desirable for national-park purposes.

The bill provides that no land for said park shall be accepted until exclusive jurisdiction over the entire area, in form satisfactory to the Secretary of the Interior, shall have been ceded by the State of Texas to the United States.

The bill further provides that the administration, protection, and development of the aforesaid park shall be exercised under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior by the National Park Service, subject to the provisions of the act of August 25, 1916 (39 Stat. 535), entitled "An act to establish a National Park Service, and for other purposes", and that the provisions of the act of June 10, 1920, known as the "Federal Water Power Act" shall not apply to the park.

The Big Bend region, within which the proposed park is to be located, is the triangular portion of southwest Texas enclosed by the big bend of the Rio Grande on the east, west, and south and roughly by latitude 30° on the north. It comprises approximately 5,500 square miles. In general character it is a semiarid plain, verging on desert, through which a group of mountain ranges, principally the Chisos, have been thrust. These constitute the southernmost spur of the Rocky Mountains. Of these, the Shisos Range "Phantom", the highest and most rugged, attaining an attitude of 7,835 feet, is literally a biological island.

The Big Bend area is the last great wilderness area of Texas. No railroad line transgresses its vastness. Its few roads are largely makeshift, leading in from the north, or improved wagon trails serving its few ranches and mining claims. The nearest thing to a town which exists are the two mining camps of Terlingua and Study Butte, some 25 miles west of the Chisos Range.

The reason for the long isolation of this area is its low economic value. Aside from the two quicksilver mines there has been no need for the arteries of trade, and the semiarid character of the plains surrounding the group of mountain ranges has offered little to agriculture save scattered areas for grazing.

The varied forest cover in the Chisos is still virgin. Large mamals, such as deer, bear, panther, and fox, still survive. The vegetation of the surrounding semiarid plains is principally a growth of chaparral and cactus. The forest cover in the higher levels of the Chisos, however, is extensively varied, with Douglas spruce, pine, junipers, oaks, and hackberry well represented.

The entire Big Bend region, comprising some three and a half million acres, would probably not be considered in its entirety as a national-park area since the northern portion thereof consists principally of dry plains having no superlative features. To the south, however, the landscape is dominated by mountain ranges and is felt to be of high caliber to rank well as a national park. In the Chisos Mountains the visitor is agreeably surprised at the colorful rock expanses, rose-colored and tinged with faint greens and yellows.

One of the dramatic features in this area is the Rio Grande itself, which, in its tortuous course, cuts through three steep-walled canyons, the Santa Helena, the Mariscal, and the Boquillas, and meanders over flat river plains between.

The romance of old frontier Mexico is in the atmosphere of the Big Bend region. In the Chisos Mountains the visitor is continually aware of its presence. The outstanding views in three directions carry the eye over into the mountains of old Mexico. From the south rim, over 5,000 feet above the river, the eye obtains the most dramatic panorama of the Chisos—a 200-mile sweep of American and Mexican terrain. Below the Rio Grande winds through walled canyons and river flood plains. As a unit of the national-park system the region would be unique in this international flavor.

The scenic standard of the Mexican side is apparently similar to that of the American. The aspects of a possible international park are highly intriguing. In fact, it is contemplated that an effort will be made to bring about the establishment of a park on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande immediately opposite the proposed park on the American side. The favorable report of the Department of the Interior on the pending measure is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C.

Hon. ROBERT F. WAGNER,
Chairman Committee on Public Lands and Surveys,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I have received your letter of March 8 enclosing a copy of S. 2131, entitled "A bill to provide for the establishment of the Big Bend National Park in the State of Texas, and for other purposes", and requesting a report thereon.

This proposed legislation would authorize the establishment of the Big Bend National Park in the State of Texas, when the necessary lands shall have been secured by the United States by donation. The Big Bend area is a region of inspiring scenery, and contains many varieties of rare plant and animal life. It is of national importance, and worthy of Federal protection and development as a national park. The scenic grandeur of the Big Bend country extends across the border into Mexico, and it is hoped that, if this proposed legislation is enacted, the Mexican Government will be invited to cooperate with the United States in the establishment of an international park.

The Acting Director of the Bureau of the Budget has advised that, insofar as the financial program of the President is concerned, there is no objection to favorable action on this bill.

This bill is similar to H. R. 6373, upon which a separate report is being submitted to the Committee on the Public Lands of the House of Representatives. It is recommended that it be amended in the following particulars:

Page 1, line 5, eliminate the word "the."

Page 2, line 5, change the word "donations" to "donation."

I recommend that S. 2131, with amendments as indicated above, be enacted by the Congress.

Sincerely yours,

THEODORE A. WALTERS,
Acting Secretary of the Interior.

In reference to the proposal for a Mexican park in this vicinity on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande, the following correspondence will be found of interest:

UNITED STATES SENATE,
February 16, 1935.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: The proposal for a national park in the Big Bend section of Texas on the Rio Grande has aroused general and favorable interest throughout Texas. It is one of the most magnificent and picturesque expressions of nature in the world. Inasmuch as the proposed park on the Texas side extends only to the middle of the Rio Grande, which is the boundary between Texas and Mexico, it has occurred to me that it would be a splendid thing to take up with Mexico the matter of an international park in that section and to have Mexico establish a park on her side, which would adjoin the proposed park on the Texas side. Please have the matter properly investigated and considered.

Yours very sincerely,

MORRIS SHEPPARD.

On February 19 the above letter was referred by the President to the Secretaries of State and Interior with a request for a report.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 26, 1935.

Hon. HAROLD L. ICKES,
Secretary of the Interior.

MY DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I enclose herewith, for your consideration, a copy of a memorandum, dated February 19, 1935, from the President, addressed to the Secretary of State and the Secretary of the Interior, and a copy of its enclosure, a letter dated February 16, 1935, from the Honorable MORRIS SHEPPARD, United States Senate, with reference to an international-park project in the Big Bend section of Texas and the adjoining section of Mexico, and suggesting that the matter be taken up with Mexico. I also enclose a copy of a letter which I am today forwarding to the President with reference to the matter.

Sincerely yours,

WILLIAM PHILLIPS,
Acting Secretary.

—

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 26, 1935.

The PRESIDENT,
The White House.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: I have received your memorandum of February 19, 1935, addressed to the Secretary of State and the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a copy of a letter dated February 16, 1935, from the Honorable MORRIS SHEPPARD, United States Senate, with reference to an international-park project in the Big Bend section of Texas and the adjoining section in Mexico, and suggesting that the matter be taken up with Mexico.

Prior to the receipt of your memorandum the Department had received a communication from Senator SHEPPARD in regard to this project. I informed the Senator under date of February 23, 1935, that the Department will be glad to take up the matter with the Mexican Government, through Ambassador Daniels, at such time as there is definite assurance that the park on the Texas side of the Rio Grande will be created.

I am today sending copies of this letter, of your memorandum, and of its enclosure to the Secretary of the Interior for his consideration.

Faithfully yours,

WILLIAM PHILLIPS, Acting Secretary.

—

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, February 27, 1935.

The PRESIDENT,
The White House.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: I have received from the White House a copy of Senator MORRIS SHEPPARD'S letter of February 16 to you, regarding the proposal to establish an international park along the Mexican border, and have noted your request for a report on this subject.

Under separate cover I am sending you a field report prepared by the National Park Service regarding this matter. The proposal involves lands in the Big Bend area in Texas, and in the adjoining Provinces of Chihuahua and Coahuila in Mexico. I recently approved the recommendation of the National Park Service that the area referred to in Texas be established as the Big Bend National Park. Proposed legislation to provide authority for this action is now being drafted for submission to the Congress.

The possibility of an international park in this region meets with my approval, and I recommend that, if the legislation is passed by Congress authorizing the establishment of a national park on the United States side of the international boundary line, the Mexican Government be invited to cooperate with the United States in the establishment of such an international park.

Sincerely yours,

HAROLD L. ICKES,
Secretary of the Interior.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1807) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I ask that the bill be passed over. It would be impossible to consider it under the 5-minute rule.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

POST-OFFICE BUILDING AT HEMPSTEAD, N. Y.

The bill (S. 2647) authorizing the Comptroller General of the United States to settle and adjust the claims of subcontractors, materialmen, and laborers for material and labor furnished in the construction of a post-office building at Hempstead, N. Y., was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to settle and adjust on a pro rata basis in an amount not exceeding in the aggregate the unpaid balance due from the United States under the contract no. T1SA-3050, dated March 30, 1932, between the United States and the Brooklyn & Queens Screen Manufacturing Co., Inc., the unpaid claims of subcontractors, materialmen, and laborers for materials or labor furnished at any time in the construction of the post-office building at Hempstead, N. Y., under said contract, which work was completed by the National Surety Co., as surety on the performance bond, before said surety company was placed in the hands of a rehabilitator or liquidator appointed by the Insurance Department of the State of New York, and after the United States had terminated the right of the Brooklyn & Queens Screen Manufacturing Co., Inc., to proceed under said contract. The Comptroller General of the United States is authorized and directed to settle and adjust the said claims which may be filed and established hereunder without regard to the Government's right of set-off against any indebtedness of the National Surety Co. to the United States in other cases and without regard to the Government's right to priority in the payment of its claim: Provided, That no settlement shall issue hereunder until 6 months after the enactment of this act, and no claimant who shall have failed, neglected, or refused to submit his claim to the Comptroller General of the United States within the said period shall share in the benefits of this act. Such allowance as may be made by the Comptroller General as herein provided shall be paid from the appropriations heretofore made for the construction of the building in question. Payments so made shall be charged to the National Surety Co. in the adjustment of the accounts between said company and the United States: Provided, That no allowance shall be made pursuant to the terms of this act, unless and until the rehabilitator or liquidator of the National Surety Co. shall file with the Comptroller General written consent thereto.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2616) for the relief of the estate of Joseph J. Underwood was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, can we have an explanation of this bill? Otherwise, I ask that it be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 2644) for the relief of the estate of Harry F. Stern was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of that bill? The sum involved is a large one. Unless we can have an explanation, I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 6323) to provide for the custody of Federal proclamations, orders, regulations, notices, and other documents, and for the prompt and uniform printing and distribution thereof was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, that is a very long bill. May we have an explanation of it? If not, I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

MONUMENT TO GROVER CLEVELAND

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 147) authorizing the erection of a monument to Grover Cleveland in Washington, D. C., which had been reported from the Committee on the Library with an amendment, on page 2, line 6, after the words "Director of", to strike out "Public Buildings and Public Parks of the National Capital" and insert "the National Park Service, Department of the Interior", so as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved, etc., That authority is hereby granted to any association organized within 2 years from the date of the approval of this resolution for that purpose, to erect a statue of Grover Cleveland, President of the United States, 1885 to 1889 and 1893 to 1897, in the city of Washington at such place as may be designated by the Fine Arts Commission, subject to the approval of the Joint Committee on the Library, the model of the statue so to be erected and the pedestal thereof to be first approved by the said Commission and by the Joint Committee on the Library, the same to be presented by such association to the people of the United States.

That for the preparation of the site and the erection of a pedestal upon which to place the said statue, under the direction of the Director of the National Park Service, Department of the Interior, the sum of $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the joint resolution to be read a third time.

The joint resolution was read the third time, and passed.

NAVAL STATION AND LIGHTHOUSE RESERVATION AT KEY WEST, FLA.

The bill (H. R. 7132) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of Commerce to exchange a portion of the naval station and a portion of the lighthouse reservation at Key West, Fla., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 2294) for the relief of Thaddeus C. Knight was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

FRED C. AINSWORTH ENDOWMENT LIBRARY

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 98) to authorize the acceptance on behalf of the United States of the bequest of the late Maj. Gen. Fred C. Ainsworth for the purpose of establishing a permanent library at the Walter Reed General Hospital to be known as the "Fred C. Ainsworth Endowment Library", which was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the adjutant Walter Reed General Hospital be, and is hereby, authorized to accept the bequest of the late Maj. Gen. Fred C. Ainsworth, or such amount thereof as is available, as contained in his last will and testament, and such interest as may have accrued on the funds covered by such bequest, and to receipt therefor on behalf of the United States, and to deposit the funds so received in the Treasury of the United States as a special fund dedicated to the purpose of establishing a permanent library at the Walter Reed General Hospital, to be known as the "Fred C. Ainsworth Endowment Library", said fund to be subject to disbursement for such purpose upon vouchers submitted by the adjutant Walter Reed General Hospital and to be available until expended: Provided, That the Treasurer of the United States, upon the written request of the adjutant Walter Reed General Hospital so to do, is authorized to invest and reinvest any part or all of the corpus of this bequest, as well as any income therefrom, in interest-bearing United States Government bonds, and retain custody thereof, if, in the judgment of the adjutant it will best serve the objects of the bequest: Provided further, That the Treasurer of the United States, upon the written request of the adjutant Walter Reed General Hospital so to do, is authorized to dispose of, for cash, any part or all of any bonds in which such funds may be invested, and redeposit the proceeds thereof, as well as all interest received from time to time upon any such bonds, to the credit of such special fund and subject to withdrawal and disbursement and reinvestment, as above provided: And provided further, That the administration, control, and expenditure of this fund and its application to the purposes intended shall be according to the sole discretion of the adjutant Walter Reed General Hospital, and the exercise of his discretion and authority in regard thereto and his decision thereon shall not be subject to question or review except by the Secretary of War and courts of competent jurisdiction.

SEC. 2. The necessary space or a separate room in any building at the Walter Reed General Hospital is authorized to be set aside for the purpose of establishing the said library.

OBERLIN M. CARTER

The resolution (S. Res. 60) to investigate the facts concerning the court martial of former Capt. Oberlin M. Carter was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Military Affairs is authorized and directed to investigate the facts leading to the court martial, as well as the court-martial proceedings and all the findings, in the case of former Capt. Oberlin M. Carter, United States Engineer Corps, and report to the Senate.

BILLS OF INTERPLEADER

The bill (S. 1277) authorizing persons, firms, corporations, associations, or societies to file bills of interpleader was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of that bill?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, this is a bill extending the right of interpleader in law suits in the Federal courts. Congress on three occasions heretofore has enacted interpleader legislation involving the right of persons in different States and in different Federal court districts to the possession or custody of funds held by insurance companies or others. This bill simplifies the matter, and extends the right so that all persons who have custody of funds over which there is a dispute may bring the parties into court, and settle the question, and distribute the funds accordingly.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, is the bill recommended by the Department?

Mr. BARKLEY. No; it is not specifically recommended by the Department. The Department does not object to the bill. It does not involve a Department of Justice matter. The bill has been before the Senate for a number of years. It was favorably reported in the Seventy-third Congress, and was again reported unanimously by the committee at this session of the Congress.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

That subsection 26 of section 24 of the Judicial Code, as amended (U. S. C., title 28, sec. 41 (26)), be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"(26) Original jurisdiction of bills of interpleader—Twenty-sixth: (a) Of suits in equity begun by bills of interpleader or bills in the nature of bills of interpleader duly verified, filed by any person, firm, corporation, association, or society having in his or its custody or possession money or property of the value of $500 or more, or having issued a note, bond, certificate, policy of insurance, or other instrument of the value or amount of $500 or more, or providing for the delivery or payment or the loan of money or property of such amount or value, or being under any obligation, written or unwritten, to the amount of $500 or more, if—

"(i) Two or more adverse claimants, citizens of different States, are claiming to be entitled to such money or property, or to any one or more of the benefits arising by virtue of any note, bond, certificate, policy, or other instrument, or arising by virtue of any such obligation; and

"(ii) The complainant (a) has deposited such money or property or has paid the amount of or the loan or other value of such instrument or the amount due under such obligation into the registry of the court, there to abide the judgment of the court; or (b) has given bond payable to the clerk of the court in such amount and with such surety as the court or judge may deem proper, conditioned upon the compliance by the complainant with the future order or decree of the court with respect to the subject matter of the controversy.

Such a suit in equity may be entertained, although the titles of claims of the conflicting claimants do not have a common origin, or are not identical, but are adverse to and independent of one another.

"(b) Such a suit may be brought in the district court of the district in which one or more of such claimants resides or reside.

"(c) Notwithstanding any provision of the Judicial Code to the contrary, said court shall have power to issue its process for all such claimants and to issue an order of injunction against each of them, enjoining them from instituting or prosecuting any suit or proceeding in any State court or in any United States court on account of such money or property or on such instrument or obligation until the further order of the court; which process and order of injunction shall be returnable at such time as the said court or a judge thereof shall determine and shall be addressed to and served by the United States marshals for the respective districts wherein said claimants reside or may be found.

"(d) Said court shall hear and determine the cause and shall discharge the complainant from further liability; and shall make the injunction permanent and enter all such other orders and decrees as may be necessary or convenient to carry out and enforce the same.

"(e) In any action at law in a United States District Court against any person, firm, corporation, association, or society, such defendant may be set up by way of equitable defense, in accordance with section 274b of the Judicial Code (U. S. C., title 28, sec. 398), any matter which would entitle such person, firm, corporation, association, or society to file an original or ancillary bill of interpleader or bill in the nature of interpleader in the same court or in any other United States District Court against the plaintiff in such action at law and one or more other adverse claimants, under the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection or any other provision of the Judicial Code and the rules of court made pursuant thereto. The defendant may join as parties to such equitable defense any claimant or claimants who are not already parties to such action at law. The district court in which such equitable defense is interposed shall thereby possess the powers conferred upon district courts by paragraphs (c) and (d) of this subsection and by section 274b of the Judicial Code.

"SEC. 2. The act entitled 'An act authorizing casualty companies, surety companies, insurance companies or associations, or fraternal or beneficial societies to file bills of interpleader', approved May 8, 1926 (U. S. C., Supp. III, title 28, sec. 41 (26)), is hereby repealed. Said repeal shall not affect any act done or any right, accruing or accrued in any suit or proceeding had or commenced under said act hereby repealed, prior to the passage of this act, but all such acts or rights, suits, or proceedings shall continue and be valid and may be prosecuted and enforced in the same manner as if said act had not been repealed hereby."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to amend section 24 of the Judicial Code by conferring on district courts additional jurisdiction of bills of interpleader."

HARRY T. HERRING

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, before the calendar is completed I ask unanimous consent to recur to Senate bill 1426 for the purpose of asking the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] if he has read the report on that measure.

Mr. KING. What is the measure?

Mr. HATCH. It is a bill for the relief of Harry T. Herring. On the last call of the calendar the Senator from Utah asked me to explain it, and stated that he would read the report on the bill.

Mr. KING. I regret to say that I have not read the report. I have no objection to the bill being passed at this time, with the understanding that if, upon reading the report, I find it necessary, I shall ask to have the bill reconsidered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 1426) providing for the appointment of Harry T. Herring, formerly a lieutenant colonel in the United States Army, as a lieutenant colonel in the United States Army and his retirement in that grade, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Whereas Harry T. Herring graduated from the United States Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., in the class of 1905, at which time he was denied commission in the United States Army because of an alleged heart ailment; and

Whereas he continued to follow the profession for which he was trained, being successively commandant of Saint John's (Military) School, Manlius, N. Y., 1906–8; in the New York National Guard, 1908–10; and adjutant general of New Mexico, 1913–17, serving with the New Mexico Guard on the Mexican border during 1917, and resigning from the Guard to enter the Army of the United States as a captain of ordnance, from which rank he was successively promoted to lieutenant colonel, which was his rank on leaving the service; and

Whereas, while technically an emergency officer, he actually performed the duties of a regular, being assigned a most important and difficult detail, involving the establishment of schools for the technical training of both officers and men for the mobile shops of the Ordnance Department to accompany combat organizations in the field, in which assignment his work was so outstanding as to result in his being recommended for the Distinguished Service Medal; and

Whereas in 1920 he was recommended by the Chief of Ordnance for retention in the Regular Army, but was denied a commission because of a disability incurred in service; and

Whereas he is now disabled to an extent that the constant work required in earning a livelihood is a menace to his life: Therefore

Be it enacted, etc., That the President is authorized to appoint Harry T. Herring, formerly a lieutenant colonel, Ordnance Department, United States Army, a lieutenant colonel, United States Army, and to retire him and place him on the retired list of the Army as a lieutenant colonel with the retired pay and allowance of that grade.

The preamble was agreed to.

FRANCES AGRAMONTE

The bill (S. 2472) to pay an annuity to Frances Agramonte, the widow of Dr. Aristides Agramonte, member of the Yellow Fever Commission, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator explain that bill?

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, this bill gives to the widow of Dr. Agramonte, who was a member of the Yellow Fever Commission, the commission which was headed by Walter Reed, the same allowance which has been given the widows of other deceased members of the commission.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I inquire what the Department has had to say about this bill?

Mr. SHEPPARD. They left the matter for Congress to decide. Mrs. Agramonte would receive under this bill the annuity which was paid to Dr. Agramonte in his lifetime, pursuant to the provisions of an act approved February 28, 1929, entitled "an act to recognize the high public service rendered by Major Walter Reed and those associated with him in the discovery of the cause and means of transmission of yellow fever."

Annuities are being paid under special acts of Congress to the other widows of deceased participants in the yellow fever experiments in Cuba.

This bill extends recognition and relief of a like character to the widow of Dr. Agramonte.

Mr. McKELLAR. What troubles me is the statement of General McArthur, Acting Secretary of War. He says:

The Department has in the past refrained from expressing any opinion as to the merits of the proposed legislation of this character, and in keeping with that practice prefers to make no recommendation either for or against the bill, leaving the determination of the question as to whether an annuity should be made in this case to the discretion of Congress.

Likewise, there is a statement from Secretary Dern in exactly the same words. I do not know how we could find out whether it is a meritorious claim except through the War Department. What are the facts on which the committee based its action?

Mr. SHEPPARD. The Senator, of course, remembers the work of Maj. Walter Reed and his associates, a work resulting in the discovery of the cause of yellow fever and enabling us to conquer that terrible scourge.

Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, yes; I remember that very well.

Mr. SHEPPARD. This man was one of the associates of Maj. Walter Reed in that work. All of them were voted recognition and annuities by Congress. As they have died their widows have been permitted to receive those annuities. The policy has been pursued as to all others who have died, and this merely provides similar treatment for the widow of Dr. Agramonte.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let the bill go over for the time being and I shall be glad to look it up and confer with the Senator about it.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On objection, the bill will be passed over.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 166) for the relief of Jack Doyle was announced as next in order.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, this measure will require some consideration. From the report it appears that the man was convicted of larceny and dishonorably discharged from the Army. I think the bill should go over.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold the objection for a brief explanation?

Mr. ROBINSON. I think the bill had better go over at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On objection, the bill will be passed over. That completes the calendar.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF A COMMITTEE

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters, which were ordered to be placed on the Executive Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further reports of committees, the calendar is in order.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. ROBINSON. I ask unanimous consent that nominations of postmasters be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. That completes the calendar.

RECESS

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 53 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Thursday, May 2, 1935, at 12 o'clock meridian.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate May 1, 1935

POSTMASTERS

MISSOURI

Charles Gentry, Houston.

NEW JERSEY

Leon P. Kays, Stanhope.

PENNSYLVANIA

Ambrose A. Connelly, Rosemont.
Andrew E. Hiltebeitel, Souderton.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WEDNESDAY, MAY 1, 1935

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Infinite Spirit, Father of our immortal souls, whose power and goodness are everywhere upholding the works of Thy hands, let Thy richest blessing be upon our Speaker and all other Members of this Congress. Establish Thou the work of our hands, the work of our hands establish Thou it. Endue us with wisdom and fortitude that we may withstand injustice, falsehood, and intemperate criticism. O light of God, shine through all of them, bringing out faith, courage, and other qualities that make strong and enduring characters. Enable us to walk each day without stumbling. By faith may we endure and by hope may we have eternal fruition, and at last give us a glorious transition that remaineth for the people of God. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 408) entitled "An act to promote safety on the public highways of the District of Columbia by providing for the financial responsibility of owners and operators of motor vehicles for damages caused by motor vehicles on the public highways in the District of Columbia; to prescribe penalties for the violation of the provisions of this act; and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6223) entitled "An act making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 5 to the foregoing bill.

BANKING BILL

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I also ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point by inserting a statement I have sent to each Member of the House on the banking bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The statement referred to is as follows:

PENDING BANKING BILL

APRIL 30, 1935.

DEAR COLLEAGUE: It is a long step in the right direction. Failing to get time to discuss the bill, I respectfully invite your attention to this statement. The following amendments should be adopted:

UNIFIED BANKING SYSTEM NEEDED

1. Present law will prohibit banks getting benefit of Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation after January 1, 1937, unless members of Federal Reserve System. The nonmember banks will be permitted to enter the System without capital stock change. It is in the interest of the general welfare that we have a unified banking system. Congress cannot coin money and regulate the value thereof according to the constitutional mandate without a unified system. This bill repeals the present law making this requirement. Congressman HANCOCK of North Carolina, a member of the committee, will offer a motion to strike it out. I hope it is adopted.

GET BANKERS OUT OF GOVERNMENT'S BUSINESS

2. The member banks of the Federal Reserve Banking System own the 12 Federal Reserve banks. Their investment is $146,000,000. This stock should be owned by the Government and the Federal Reserve banks operated by the Government in the interest of the people. Congressman CROSS, a member of the committee, will offer an amendment proposing that the Government purchase this stock and take over these banks. We should adopt this amendment and get the bankers out of the Government's business.

BUREAU OF ENGRAVING AND PRINTING DELIVERED OVER TO PRIVATE BANKS

3. Under existing law, the Federal Reserve Board appoints 3 of the 9 directors. One of the three is Federal Reserve agent and chairman of the Board—the most important position. The pending bill changes the Federal Reserve agent's title to that of governor of the Board and allows the banks' directors to name the governor, subject to the Federal Reserve Board's approval. Certainly the board of the Federal Reserve bank will not name one for this place that is not satisfactory in every way to the bank owners. Therefore the result of this change allows the Federal Reserve Board to appoint 2 of the 9 directors instead of 3, as under the present law, and allows the banks to control the most important place in each Federal Reserve bank. This important individual will have at his disposal the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and may have his bank's money printed at a cost of 27 cents a thousand dollars without paying a penny's tax on any transaction and all profits going into the surplus fund of his bank. Every bill he causes to be printed will be a blanket mortgage on all the property of all the people. He will use the credit of the Nation free and in the interest of his bank and its member banks. This provision should either be changed substantially or stricken from the bill. If it is not, the Money Trust will have a firmer grip on the throats of the people.

There should also be a limitation placed on the salaries paid by Federal Reserve banks. Many of these officials are paid $30,000, $40,000, and $50,000 annually; and all excess profits should go to the Government instead of banks if Federal Reserve banks are not taken over by the Government.

Respectfully submitted.

WRIGHT PATMAN.

HERE LIES THE G. O. P.

Mr. HILDEBRANDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. HILDEBRANDT. Mr. Speaker—

Here Lies the G. O. P.—Died November 8, 1932.

This is the inscription on a tombstone portrayed in an invitation from the Young Democratic Clubs of South Dakota to its annual State convention that just reached my office. It was mailed me in connection with a meeting to be held June 14 and 15 at Hot Springs under the auspices of these clubs.

The message is both amusing and instructive. The G. O. P. is dead—the inscription is no misstatement of facts. The G. O. P. has gone where the old Federalist Party of Alexander Hamilton and John Adams went—where the old Whig Party of ante-bellum days went. It has gone where every reactionary party in the history of every nation went.

The destination of every reactionary party and group is the discard of history—the cosmic rubbish heap.

As a believer in basic, fundamental democracy—the kind of democracy that rings true to the philosophy of the movement and to the principles back of it—I welcome this clever bit of humor from the Young Democratic Clubs of South Dakota. But I want to warn my enthusiastic and charming young friends among the young Democrats not to be too cheerful and optimistic just because the Republican Party has used the knife of hari-kari to commit suicide with. I want them to appreciate that the Democratic Party is not immune from similar possibilities. Being liberal, rather than conservative, it has a right to expect a longer life. But it must not take too much for granted. It cannot perpetuate itself simply on the strength of the splendid idealism of Thomas Jefferson and the militant iconoclasm of Andrew Jackson. It cannot depend upon the past. It must be able to point to present achievements.

Above all, the progressive, intelligent Jeffersonian democracy of 1935 must refuse to be mesmerized or intoxicated by deceptive phrases. It is a cunning scheme to call a man a radical or something worse because he champions the cause of the common people—the real builders of America.

The task of a clear-thinking Democrat is to refuse to be swept away by such slogans. Do not let paid tools of corrupt private interests frighten you by calling you names! Do not be alarmed because a volley of adjectives is thrown at you! Stand by your principles, regardless of what people say! That is what Jefferson and Jackson did! They were accused of radicalism, but they stood by their guns in spite of lying and insinuations. Can you do equally as well? Here is hoping you can!

The fight for complete real democracy has only begun. The conflict is just ahead. I appeal to you as the vanguard of the South Dakota democracy to prepare yourselves for a greater, more far-reaching struggle than any in which you have yet participated. If you do so, you will have the proud satisfaction of having been warriors for democracy that covers industry as well as politics—democracy that actually means something for the people back on the farms, in the factories, and in every little community in which production is carried on faithfully and honestly.

AN APPRECIATION OF TWO CABINET MEMBERS AND A PLEA FOR ECONOMY

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to insert a few excerpts from the writings of Thomas Jefferson.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. SNELL. Reserving the right to object, what is it the gentleman wants to insert?

Mr. LUDLOW. A few excerpts from Thomas Jefferson.

Mr. SNELL. I want to know whether that is in praise of the President or not, because we were notified yesterday that nothing else should go in the RECORD.

Mr. LUDLOW. It is in praise of Thomas Jefferson.

Mr. SNELL. Is it in praise of the President?

Mr. BLANTON. Well, Mr. Speaker, common decency ought to cause the other side to praise him once in a while.

Mr. TABER. Is that the only reason? [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. LUDLOW]?

There was no objection.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, with the worst of the depression over we should begin to pilot the ship of state out of the turbulent open sea into calmer waters where the marks of navigation are more safe and dependable and where the course has been charted by the experience of the ages.

As soon as possible, we should cease to experiment and should return to fundamentals.

As soon as possible we should restore the word "economy" in all the expenditures and regulations of all branches of the Government service and should begin to cultivate once more the art of balancing the Budget, for in that direction, and in that direction only, lies national prosperity and well-being.

I arise, however, to pay a brief tribute of appreciation to two Members of the President's Cabinet who by their administrative practices and utterances are proving in an outstanding way that they are exemplars of sound philosophy in government. I would like to express the hope that the wholesome leaven of their examples may finally permeate the whole loaf and to say of them as was said of Abou Ben Adhem: "May their tribe increase."

I refer to James A. Farley, the Postmaster General, and Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce.

WATCHWORD OF OUR STATESMEN

For a hundred years "economy" was the watchword of our statesmen. For a hundred years "we demand retrenchment in the cost of government" was a full, resounding phrase that was featured and exploited in every political platform of every political party, national, State, and local, as the greatest of all desiderata. In those times political action lost all of its virtue and its beneficent essence unless it was associated with economy. During that period America arose to a pinnacle of prosperity and greatness unparalleled among the nations of the earth.

Postmaster General Farley has enthroned economy in his Department and he is doing one of the best jobs of protecting the interest of the taxpayers that I know anything about. In administering the great Postal Service he gets 100 cents of value for every dollar of the taxpayers' money he spends. He does not prate about economy but he practices economy in a most effective way. As a member of the Post Office and Treasury Subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee, I have been brought into close touch with the Postmaster General's administrative methods, and I only wish that every other administrative official in Washington had as fine a regard for economy as he has. As a nation we would be better off and on safer ground. He is constantly thinking of economy in the Postal Service and is exercising ingenuity in devising ways and means to effectuate that purpose.

This extends to things which appear little in themselves but which are big when applied to the quantity purchases of the great Post Office Department. For instance, postmasters have been instructed to save wrapping twine that has been used, to knot it together and roll it into balls for future use. This may seem to be an inconsequential item, but it cuts thousands of dollars off of the Government's twine bill and is a very proper economy. I was impressed, also, by an order sent out recently in the Postal Bulletin to all postmasters. It was to the effect that now that the days are longer it is not necessary to turn on the electric lights as early as in the winter, thus making it possible to save on electricity.

WHAT A STUDY IN CONTRASTS!

About the time this Bulletin was going out notifying postmasters to cut down on electric-light bills, a State F. E. R. A. director in Missouri, Mr. J. Warren Sanders, was notifying the 3,617 families on relief in Greene County, that State, that there must not be too much efficiency in relief work, thus making an open bid for inefficiency and waste, as reported by the Associated Press. While the Postmaster General is using second-hand twine to save as much of the taxpayers' money as possible another Government official is encouraging the people on relief to be inefficient and wasteful. What a study in contrasts!

The Postmaster General by his practical economy brought the Post Office Department out of the "red" into the "black" last year with a surplus of $12,161,415—the first surplus in many years. Personally, and speaking for myself only, I would like to see Mr. Farley put in charge of the big $4,000,000,000 relief fund, the Department of the Interior, the Department of Agriculture, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, and a few other Departments and activities besides his own. It makes me sick at heart to think of killing millions of pigs and turning their carcasses into soap grease instead of feeding them to people who cannot buy meat; to think of artificially curtailing crops and causing a shortage of food when there are so many hungry mouths to be fed; to think of proposals for spending millions—or should I say billions—for such projects as harnessing the tides or trying to establish a tree belt across the United States, where the Almighty hardly permits a cactus to grow.

SECRETARY ROPER'S SOUND REASONING

For clear discernment and sound conclusions the addresses made during the last 2 years by Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, are without a parallel. Where could one find a better statement of sound principles than is contained in an address delivered last year by Mr. Roper to the conference of State directors of the National Emergency Council when he said:

> The crux of the recovery program is to so administer the emergency efforts that the pump of private business will be primed to bring forth as quickly as possible a full flowing stream of employment and purchasing power. The Government is doing the priming, business must keep up the pumping. The function of public and semipublic spending has been widely misunderstood in this country. The Government can be expected to start the pendulum on the economic clock, but business must do the winding. The vast expenditures for direct relief which the Federal Government is now making cannot continue for long without creating for the years immediately ahead a condition just as serious in proportions and implications as that which faced our country on March 4 of last year. The motto needed is: Back to normal ways as quickly as possible and thus preserve individual self-respect, business self-respect, State and local self-respect.

Business—honest business, striving to find its way out of the darkness of depression—took heart when Mr. Roper said in that same address:

In this and other connections, the question has been and will continue to be asked as to whether the Federal Government under this administration plans or proposes to increase permanently bureaucracy and Federal control of business to the extent of destroying our economic system by eliminating profits in business and thus submerging and imprisoning human initiative, acknowledged to be the greatest asset in the building of our country and the developing of our trade and commerce. Certainly no one with a proper knowledge of conditions can interpret in the Recovery program such an intention or objective on the part of the present administration. The policy has been clearly stated that the Federal Government should not undertake to do for business in any line what business can do as well for itself; and that, when the imperative emergency requirements have been met, the Government will return, as quickly as conditions will permit, to the hands of business the inherent responsibilities of business.

The businessmen of America—and again I refer to the honest businessmen—have confidence in Mr. Roper, and rightly so. They regard him as a sound thinker and a wise counselor.

ECONOMY SHOULD BE CORNERSTONE

Mr. Speaker, economy should be the cornerstone of our temple of reconstruction. When the debris of the devastation caused by the World War and its backwash—the depression—are cleared away we will find that the genius of our masterful President has forged into our social structure great principles of right and justice, and there they will remain to bless posterity through all the years to come. The one thing now needed to place America on a higher permanent basis of happiness and prosperity than it ever has enjoyed is to abolish the inquisitorial features of government created during the emergency, dismiss the excessive bureaucratic personnel, stabilize the currency, and hew to the strict line of economy.

JEFFERSON ON ECONOMY

To support my contention that economy should be the cornerstone of our temple of reconstruction, I call a distinguished witness—a witness who certainly is entitled to credibility in a Congress predominantly democratic. I call as a witness Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the Democratic Party and one of the first and foremost champions of economy in the history of the Republic.

The Library of Congress is a treasure-trove of Jefferson's writings and in rummaging among them I came across almost innumerable instances in which he stressed economy in Government as the road to national prosperity and happiness. From his writings I quote these typical expressions.

Jefferson to Elbridge Gerry in 1799:

I am for a government rigorously frugal and simple, applying all of the possible savings of the public revenue to the discharge of the national debt.

Jefferson in his first inaugural address in 1801:

Economy in the public expense that labor may be lightly burdened I deem one of the essential principles of our Government and consequently one that ought to shape its administration.

Jefferson in his second annual message in 1802:

To expend the public money with the same care and economy that we would practice with our own is one of the landmarks by which we are to guide America in all our proceedings.

Jefferson to Nathaniel Macon in 1801:

We shall push Congress to the uttermost in economizing.

Jefferson to M. Pictet in 1803:

We are endeavoring to reduce the Government to the practice of a rigorous economy to avoid burdening the people and arming the magistrate with a patronage of money which might be used to corrupt and undermine the principles of our Government.

Jefferson to Shelton Gilliam in 1808:

The same prudence which in private life would forbid our paying our money for unexplained projects forbids it in the disposition of the public moneys.

Jefferson to Samuel Kercheval in 1816:

We must make our election between economy and liberty, or profusion and servitude.

Jefferson to Governor Plumer in 1816:

I place economy among the first and most important of republican virtues.

Jefferson to Samuel Smith in 1823:

I learn with great satisfaction that wholesale economies have been found sufficient to relieve us from the ruinous necessity of adding annually to our debt by new loans. The deviser of so salutary a relief deserves truly well of his country.

Jefferson to Marquis Lafayette in 1823:

A rigid economy of the public contributions and absolute interdiction of all useless expenses will go far toward keeping the Government honest and unoppressive.

Jefferson in his second inaugural address:

The suppression of unnecessary offices, of useless establishments and expenses, enabled us to discontinue our internal taxes. These, covering our land with officers and opening our doors to their intrusions, had already begun that process of domiciliary vexation which, once entered, is scarcely to be restrained from reaching successively every article of produce and property.

Thus, more than 100 years ago, wrote the seer of Monticello whose philosophy in regard to economy in government is as true and immortal as his declaration of the inherent equality of men. The depression forced the great man now in the White House to adopt extraordinary methods which involved extraordinary expenditures but with the worst of the depression over let us hope and pray for an early return to Jeffersonian principles.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for a period of 10 minutes on the subject of Mr. John E. Edgerton and the Southern States Industrial Council and Southern aristocracy, which subject came up yesterday. I believe I have the right to speak as a matter of personal privilege, but I do not like to do that. It would take me 15 minutes to say it and then 1 hour to address the House, which would make 1 hour and 15 minutes. I think I can get by on 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. MAVERICK] asks unanimous consent to proceed for 10 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. KNUTSON. Reserving the right to object, and I do not intend to, because I know the other side is fair, but I would like to have 10 minutes following the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. EKWALL. Reserving the right to object, and I will not object, if there is any Democrat who can make a 1 hour and 15 minute speech in 10 minutes, I think we ought to let him do it.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. STEAGALL. What are the requests before the House?

The SPEAKER. There is only one request before the House. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. MAVERICK] asked unanimous consent to proceed for 10 minutes. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON] has indicated he will make a similar request.

Mr. STEAGALL. I do not object to the request for 10 minutes, which has already been made.

Mr. KNUTSON. It has not already been made, because I reserved the right to object. I will say that I would like to have 10 minutes.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that two unanimous-consent requests cannot be connected. Each must stand on its own feet.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has no intention of putting but one at a time.

Mr. KNUTSON. For the time being, then——

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do feel there ought to be some system and reasonable limitation to these morning speeches. It seems to me there is no sense in a half dozen Members all asking for 10 or 15 minutes, to speak immediately after the reading of the Journal, when we have 15 hours of general debate right now in front of us. I think I ought to object to anybody asking for more than 5 minutes before we take up the bill under consideration. They should be willing to come in under the general debate and ask to speak out of order and for 10 minutes, and I am sure they can secure time that way.

Mr. SNELL. The general debate is confined to the bill, as the gentleman knows.

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, I will ask for 20 minutes, and of that time I will give 10 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON].

Mr. KNUTSON. I will withdraw my objection.

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, I modify my request, and I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 20 minutes, and I am going to yield 10 minutes of that time to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON].

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman cannot do that.

Mr. MAVERICK. I ask unanimous consent for 20 minutes, 10 of which I will give to the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON]; and further, I will object to anybody else speaking except the gentleman from Minnesota and myself. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. MAVERICK] asks unanimous consent to proceed for 20 minutes, with the understanding that he will yield 10 minutes of that time to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON]. Is there objection?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Reserving the right to object, that is such an outrageous violation of the rules of the House——

Mr. KNUTSON. Well, we are having an outrageous form of government now.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I object.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I wish to announce that my colleague from Maryland, Mr. COLE, was unable to be present on yesterday because he is a member of the Board of Visitors at the Naval Academy and was required to be at Annapolis. He wishes me to announce that had he been present he would have voted for the conference report on the Interior Department appropriation bill.

HON. JAMES B. REED

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. Speaker, with profound sorrow I announce the death of a former Member of the House, the Honorable James B. Reed, of Arkansas.

He was a native of that State, born in Lonoke County, January 2, 1881; served his country as a member of the Arkansas Legislature in 1907, and two terms as prosecuting attorney of the seventeenth judicial district. Was a Presidential elector from the Sixth Congressional District of Arkansas in 1924, and was elected a Member of Congress in 1923 and served in the Sixty-eighth, Sixty-ninth, and Seventieth Congresses.

He was a loyal Democrat, a faithful public official, and served with distinction in every office to which he was elected.

Arkansas has lost one of her most distinguished citizens.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order there is not a quorum present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently there is not a quorum present.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 66]

Ashbrook	Bloom	Buck	Cartwright
Bankhead	Boland	Buckley, N. Y.	Casey
Beam	Bolton	Cannon, Wis.	Celler
Berlin	Brennan	Carden	Christianson
Bland	Brewster	Carter	Claiborne
Clark, Idaho	Gassaway	McGroarty	Smith, Wash.
Clark, N. C.	Gavagan	Marcantonio	Snyder
Cochran	Goodwin	Martin, Mass.	Somers, N. Y.
Cole, Md.	Granfield	May	Starnes
Connery	Gray, Pa.	Mead	Sullivan
Cooley	Griswold	Meeks	Sweeney
Cooper, Ohio	Guyer	Montague	Taylor, S. C.
Corning	Haines	Moritz	Thomas
Culkin	Hancock, N. Y.	Perkins	Tobey
Deen	Harter	Peyser	Tolan
DeRouen	Hartley	Pfeifer	Tonry
Dies	Healey	Plumley	Underwood
Dingell	Higgins, Conn.	Richards	Utterback
Ditter	Higgins, Mass.	Rogers, N. H.	Vinson, Ky.
Driscoll	Imhoff	Rudd	Wadsworth
Driver	Kee	Ryan	Walter
Ellenbogen	Kennedy, N. Y.	Sabath	White
Englebright	Kniffin	Sandlin	Wilson, La.
Fernandez	Lamneck	Schneider	Withrow
Fish	Lee, Okla.	Schuetz	Wood
Frey	Lemke	Schulte	Woodruff
Gambrill	McCormack	Shannon	Zioncheck
Gasque	McGehee	Sisson

The SPEAKER. Three hundred and nineteen Members have answered to their names—a quorum.

On motion of Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

BANKING ACT OF 1935

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 7617) to provide for the sound, effective, and uninterrupted operation of the banking system, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 7617, the Banking Act of 1935, with Mr. WOODRUM in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 40 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, it has been suggested that this legislation is premature, that it requires further study before the country may expect intelligent action at our hands. I wish to say that if any country or any Congress ever had an abundance of experience it is this country and this Congress. We have had every possible experience with the operation of the banking system of the United States. I pray that we may have no more of the kind of experiences we have had some of the time during recent years.

There is nothing radical in the legislation embraced in this bill. It has been developed as the result of the lessons gathered during the periods of prosperity and of unprecedented distress. I want to discuss the provisions of the bill as they disclose the more important purposes contemplated. I shall confine myself to title II which deals with the powers and the activities of the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Reserve bank.

The first provision to which I desire to direct attention is contained in section 201 of the bill, on page 44, which provides for the combination of the agents of the Federal Reserve banks and the governors of the Federal Reserve banks. Under the original Federal Reserve Act no provision was made for the office of governor of a Federal Reserve bank. That act provided for the appointment of a chairman of each Federal Reserve Bank Board who was to be the executive officer of the bank and also the representative of the Federal Reserve Board. The Federal Reserve banks, without authority in law, but with later sanction by the Federal Reserve Board, set up the office of governor of each Federal Reserve bank, and since that time there has been a divided authority, in practical operation, between the Federal Reserve agent and the governor of each bank.

The confusion has not been serious in its result, but it has created a situation which, I think it is recognized on all sides, needs to be clarified and straightened out. This bill undertakes to accomplish that result, but there is no transfer of district autonomy to the Federal Reserve Board. On the contrary, as was pointed out yesterday by the gentleman from Texas, the bill embodies something of a surrender of its authority in the management of each of the Federal Reserve banks by accepting the plan adopted without provision of law creating the office of governor and transferring into his hands the powers that under the original law were vested in the Federal Reserve agent selected by the Federal Reserve Board. Hereafter under the pending bill the governors selected are to be approved by the Federal Reserve Board, but in practical operation the men selected by the officials of each of the Federal Reserve banks to exercise these combined powers all of which originally were vested in the Federal Reserve agents will be approved by the Federal Reserve Board. It would be only in very rare instances that this would not happen.

Mr. BACON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield before he leaves section 201?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield for a question if it relates to the subject matter that I am undertaking to discuss—

Mr. BACON. I may say to the gentleman that it does.

I notice at the bottom of page 44, speaking of the governor, it is stated:

His first appointment shall be subject to the approval of the Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. STEAGALL. That is correct, and he is to be appointed for a term of 3 years and serves for a term of 3 years; then his successor is to be appointed and the matter of approval rests with the Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. BACON. It is further stated:

He shall not take office until approved by the Federal Reserve Board.

Would that not give the Federal Reserve Board complete control over who the governor shall be?

Mr. STEAGALL. It gives them the power of approval only. The governor already in office would act until a new officer could qualify. The same is true of the vice governor.

Mr. BACON. It would be very simple for the Federal Reserve Board in Washington to say, "Unless Mr. Jones, Smith, or Robinson" or whoever it may be "is appointed governor, we will not approve anybody else."

Mr. STEAGALL. The appointment is made originally for each of the Federal Reserve banks, subject to the approval of the Federal Reserve Board, but in return we are surrendering the provision of the original law which gives all those powers to a Federal Reserve agent appointed by the Federal Reserve Board, so we are not taking away any of the autonomy of the Federal Reserve banks.

Mr. BACON. As I understand the present law, the governor of the Federal Reserve banks must be a resident of the Federal Reserve district?

Mr. STEAGALL. Yes. A change that has been made in this bill in that connection. The governor is not required to be a resident of the district. It follows the rule and the principles that were applied to the appointment and qualification of a Federal Reserve agent. What has happened has been that the Federal Reserve agents themselves have been residents of the districts practically without exception, and really selected by each of the Federal Reserve banks. If the gentleman will permit, I will read an extract from a letter from Hon. Edmund Platt, who was Vice Governor of the Federal Reserve Board for a number of years. I quote from this letter because he is a former Member of this House and one highly respected and honored here.

Mr. BACON. And I may say a very distinguished constituent of mine.

Mr. STEAGALL. That is true. It is stated in this letter:

There is a good deal in title II that seems to me unobjectionable and some things that are certainly an improvement, as, for instance, the abolition of the office of Federal Reserve agent and the doing away with special collateral back of the Federal Reserve notes. I do not see that the Board is given any more power over the Reserve banks by the fact that the governors of the banks elected by their directors are to be "approved" by the Federal Reserve Board. As a matter of actual operation class "C" directors and Federal Reserve agents never have been, or at least only rarely been, actually appointed by the Federal Reserve Board (apart from the first appointments at the organization of the system). By this I mean that nearly all the appointments of class "C" directors and Federal Reserve agents have been made by the Federal Reserve Board on recommendation from the directors of the Federal Reserve banks themselves. It seems to me that that is the way the thing must operate for a Board sitting in Washington can't possibly know the best men to select. Now and then there has been an effort to inject politics into these appointments as was the case, for instance, when President Harding undertook to select a Federal Reserve agent for Kansas City. The Board has always successfully resisted these political efforts, but as long as the Federal Reserve agent remains legally a Board appointee there is danger of injecting politics. I do not believe there will be the same danger about the approval of governors who will be chosen by the directors of the Federal Reserve banks as proposed in the pending bill.

That is the opinion of Mr. Platt.

Mr. BACON. And I respect Mr. Platt's opinion.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Platt has had a very large experience in the operation of the Federal Reserve System.

Mr. BACON. It seems to me that under this bill it is possible to impose say, on the Federal Reserve District of San Francisco, a man from New York, the District of Columbia, or elsewhere.

Mr. STEAGALL. But that imposition would no more exist than it does in the case of the Federal Reserve agent under the original law.

Mr. PATMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. PATMAN. The chairman of the committee would not resist an amendment to put the law back where it is now?

Mr. STEAGALL. Please do not ask me to discuss amendments at this time. I am undertaking to explain the outstanding provisions of title II——

Mr. PATMAN. That is a question that will come up and we would like the chairman's attitude on the matter.

Mr. STEAGALL. I again request the gentleman not to ask me to discuss amendments while I am outlining the paramount provisions of the bill. I will be glad to discuss that matter later.

Mr. KELLER. Is there any reason why this provision should not be in the law?

Mr. STEAGALL. Certainly, there is no reason why it should not be in the law and nobody has ever contended there was any reason it should not be in the law.

Mr. Chairman, I want to call attention to another provision which is of far-reaching importance.

I call attention to the provision which liberalizes the discount facilities and lending powers of the Federal Reserve banks. Heretofore, except under the Emergency Act of 1933, which was a temporary emergency measure, no discounts or advances could be made by a Federal Reserve bank for a member bank except upon eligible paper. Eligible paper consists of 90-day commercial obligations or 9 months on agricultural paper. Under this bill the Federal Reserve Board is given power to define anew what eligible paper is, and a broad provision would authorize the Federal Reserve banks to make advances to member banks on their notes secured by any sound assets. There is a very small portion of the security held in the portfolios of the Federal Reserve banks in this country that is eligible under the strict provisions of the rule of eligibility. At the present it amounts to only about $2,000,000,000, or less than 8 percent of the resources of the banks.

I desire to say that this provision of the bill is one of the most important of all contained in the entire measure. I attach importance to this particular provision of the bill because we all know what it means and what to expect under its operation.

I want to make the statement based upon my own knowledge and practical observation of Federal Reserve banks that it was not uncommon prior to the collapse of 1933 for member banks of the Federal Reserve System to approach Federal Reserve banks with large amounts of solvent securities, gathered in service to legitimate business interests of the communities served by the various banks only to be turned away from the Federal Reserve banks without accommodation because of the technical rules of eligibility—unable to respond to the demands of depositors or to supply reasonable requirements of agriculture, industry, and commerce. They were turned away because of the strait-jacket provisions of the Federal Reserve law based upon narrow rules of eligibility.

If we had had this bill as law, together with the insurance of bank deposits, it would have prevented the closing of thousands of solvent banks that went down in ruin during the years prior to 1933, because of the inflexibility of the law and lack of common sense in the administration of the Federal Reserve System.

These difficulties were recognized when it was too late. I could name now in my own district a number of banks, serving their communities happily and satisfactorily, who, when depositors became frightened and began to withdraw their deposits, were unable to secure accommodation at the Federal Reserve bank because solvent paper tendered the Federal Reserve bank could not meet the rules of eligibility. I could name a number of those banks in my own district that were closed under such conditions that have paid 100 cents on the dollar to their depositors during this depression [applause], and there is no man who has sense enough to cash a check at a bank window who does not know that a bank that could pay out under forced liquidation during this depression was, by all honest-to-God rules, a solvent institution when it was closed. [Applause.]

We recognized these difficulties after the suffering had been brought upon us and the country was in ruin by incorporating in the emergency act of 1933 the liberal provisions that are now embodied in this bill, enabling the Federal Reserve banks to be conducted along common-sense lines and upon principles of solvency rather than mere technical requirements.

Is there not more of statesmanship in anticipating difficulties like these and safeguarding ourselves against them in advance than there is in waiting until perhaps sometime again we see a reenactment of the scene that took place in this House on the 9th day of March 1933, when in the hour of distress and suffering we came here to do the things which some men in Congress, and many on the outside who understood the difficulties that were about to come upon us, had urged should be done in advance and in anticipation of such difficulties, and which would have been a preventive if enacted at the proper time?

Mr. COLDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. COLDEN. I would like to ask the chairman of the committee to give us further information about the time limit that this bill provides with respect to mortgages or deeds of trust on real estate.

Mr. STEAGALL. Under another liberalization in this bill that is provided for. The real-estate provision conforms to the general principles of this legislation and the general purpose to make the test of liquidity of bank paper rest upon its solvency and not upon any mere technical rule that in practical application will ruin the country. We are applying that principle to real-estate loans and liberalizing the provisions under which such loans may be made. This provision would amend section 24 of the Federal Reserve Act so that the conditions under which real-estate loans may be made by national banks will be prescribed henceforth by regulations of the Federal Reserve Board, except that (1) the amount of any such loan hereafter made shall not exceed 60 percent of the appraised value of the real estate at the time the loan is made; and (2) the aggregate amount of such loans which any bank may make shall not exceed the capital and surplus of the bank or 60 percent of its time and savings deposits, whichever is the greater.

The purposes of this amendment are to increase the ability of commercial banks to serve their communities, to provide a greater outlet for the banks' funds, and to promote business recovery by opening up the mortgage market and reviving the construction industry.

Few banks are purely commercial, since a large part of the deposits in the banks represents savings. Member banks hold in the aggregate as much as $10,000,000,000 of savings funds. Separation of commercial banking from savings banking in this country at the present time is an academic question, as it could not be accomplished now without disrupting the banking system. So long, moreover, as commercial banks continue to accept and hold a large amount of the people's savings they should use at least a part of these funds in long-time loans and investments.

In using savings funds for long-time investments, there are no outlets that would serve a more useful economic purpose at the present time than real-estate loans. The restoration of building activity to something like a normal level is absolutely essential to further business recovery, and to this end reestablishment of an active mortgage market would greatly contribute. At the present time the banks of the country have a vast amount of funds for which they can find no profitable outlet. Increased activity in real-estate loans would, therefore, be of importance to the banks in helping them to make reasonable earnings and would at the same time enable them to render the proper service to their communities, as well as to contribute to recovery.

Member banks have an enormous volume of excess reserves, and at the same time they are neglecting a broad field of real-estate loans in which there is an opportunity to place their funds. Commercial banks, which are surfeited with funds, are refraining from making real-estate loans in any considerable volume, while building-and-loan associations, which are anxious to make such loans, lack funds for the purpose and are endeavoring to obtain funds from the Government. The Government, on the other hand, is pouring money into the real-estate loan field through various agencies, such as the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and the lending agencies under the Farm Credit Administration. If commercial banks increased the volume of their loans on real estate, special Government agencies would not be under the same pressure to make these loans, the banks' ability to make a living would improve, and their usefulness to their communities would increase.

There is no logic in prescribing rigid limitations as to the proportion of a bank's funds that can be invested in real-estate loans, when the proportion of their funds that can go into bonds and other kinds of long-time uses is not restricted.

The record of real-estate loans during the depression has not been worse than that of many other classes of loans and investments. Real-estate loans, however, have differed from other long-time investments, such as bonds, in that there was no organized market where they could be sold even at a reduced value. As compared with commercial loans, real-estate loans have also suffered from ineligibility as a basis of borrowing at a Federal Reserve bank. In consequence, real-estate loans which might have been good in substance, despite being temporarily uncollectible, have had to be considered entirely frozen because, until the emergency legislation of February 1932, temporary accommodation could not be obtained from the Reserve banks on these loans as security. The elimination by this bill of rigid eligibility requirements would remove from real-estate loans this serious disability.

What we are interested in is to save any institution and any citizen from bankruptcy and foreclosure and ruin. We ought to furnish adequate credits to take care of every solvent citizen and every solvent institution.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. Yes.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. There is some objection offered to title II. Could the gentleman explain the changes sought to be brought about in title II to which there is so much opposition?

Mr. STEAGALL. I am coming to that right now.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. We would like to find out why there is so much opposition to certain parts of Title II.

Mr. STEAGALL. I am trying to deal first with these practical matters that are easily understood and about which we are not carried into the field of expert economics or, as the gentleman said, the common-sense provisions of the legislation. I call attention to an important provision of page 48, section 203:

This provision would amend section 10 of the Federal Reserve Act by striking out the present requirement that, in selecting members of the Board, the President shall have due regard to a fair representation of the financial, agricultural, industrial, and commercial interests and geographical divisions of the country, and substituting a requirement that they shall be well qualified by education or experience, or both, to participate in the formulation of national economic and monetary policies. The requirement that not more than one member of the Board shall be from any one Federal Reserve district is preserved, but it is made inapplicable to the Governor of the Board.

This amendment is for the purpose of describing the qualifications of Board members in terms of the Board's principal function, which is the formulation of national economic and monetary policies. It is important to emphasize in the law that Board action should reflect, not the opinion of a majority of special interests, but rather the well considered judgment of a body that takes into consideration all phases of the national economic life.

The President is authorized to appoint a Governor of the Federal Reserve Board who shall serve until further order of the President, and he is permitted to continue to serve on the Board if he steps down as Governor.

That is not any substantial change in existing law. I wish to direct attention to the provision on page 51:

It shall be the duty of the Federal Reserve Board to exercise such powers as it possesses in such manner as to promote conditions conducive to business stability and to mitigate by its influence unstabilizing fluctuations in the general level of production—

"In the general level of production"—not regimentation or discrimination as between industries as has been suggested. Nobody ever dreamed of that, and it is hard to believe that anybody who ever read the bill should have such a thing in mind. Certainly there is no such purpose on the part of those responsible for this legislation.

To mitigate by its influence unstabilizing fluctuations in the general level of production, trade, prices, and employment so far as may be possible within the scope of monetary action and credit administration.

Mr. KENNEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield.

Mr. KENNEY. In order to carry out that policy it would be necessary for the knowledge to be lodged in that Board of the banking balances and conditions.

Mr. STEAGALL. The Board should have knowledge of all those things.

Mr. KENNEY. Should it not have superior knowledge over member banks, and is there anything in the bill that would give them that superior knowledge?

Mr. STEAGALL. We could not guarantee superior knowledge on the part of members of the Board any more than we can guarantee superior knowledge on the part of Representatives in Congress elected by the people.

Mr. KENNEY. One further question. In order for the Board to control all these things it is necessary to control the member banks?

Mr. STEAGALL. Not entirely; only such control as involves the entire Nation, not the operation of the banks in details.

There is another provision of the bill which changes the method of fixing the powers that are to be exercised to protect the public interests and national welfare. These powers would be placed definitely and unreservedly in the Federal Reserve Board.

The control of the discount rates of the banks has always been placed with the Federal Reserve Board. When the original law was enacted we had only a very scant amount of Government bonds outstanding—probably two or three hundred million dollars—a very small amount, comparatively.

It was thought that the control over interest rates embodied the essential powers necessary for the formulation and enforcement of desirable policies.

I shall read to you now the language of the Federal Reserve Act, to show you how it has been brought down from time to time. Here is what the original law said:

(d) To establish from time to time, subject to review and determination of the Federal Reserve Board, rates of discount to be charged by the Federal Reserve bank for each class of paper, which shall be fixed with a view of accommodating commerce and business.

By the Banking Act of 1933, this objective was further defined with respect to open-market operations as follows (subsection (c) of section 12A of the Federal Reserve Act):

(c) The time, character, and volume of all purchases and sales of paper described in section 14 of this act as eligible for open-market operations shall be governed with a view to accommodating commerce and business and with regard to their bearing upon the general credit situation of the country.

Section 4 of the original Federal Reserve Act prescribed the following mandate for the board of directors of each Federal Reserve bank:

Said board shall administer the affairs of said bank fairly and impartially and without discrimination in favor of or against any member bank or banks and shall, subject to the provisions of law and the orders of the Federal Reserve Board, extend to each member bank such discounts, advancements and accommodations as may be safely and reasonably made with due regard for the claims and demands of other member banks.

By the Banking Act of 1933, this was amended to read as follows:

Said board of directors shall administer the affairs of said bank fairly and impartially and without discrimination in favor of or against any member bank or banks and may, subject to the provisions of law and the orders of the Federal Reserve Board, extend to each member bank such discounts, advancements, and accommodations as may be safely and reasonably made with due regard for the claims and demands of other member banks, the maintenance of sound credit conditions, and the accommodation of commerce, industry, and agriculture. The Federal Reserve Board may prescribe regulations further defining within the limitations of this act the conditions under which discounts, advancements, and the accommodations may be extended to member banks. Each Federal Reserve bank shall keep itself informed of the general character and amount of the loans and investments of its member banks with a view to ascertaining whether undue use is being made of bank credit for the speculative carrying of or trading in securities, real estate, or commodities, or for any other purpose inconsistent with the maintenance of sound credit conditions; and, in determining whether to grant or refuse advances, rediscounts or other credit accommodations, the Federal Reserve bank shall give consideration to such information. The chairman of the Federal Reserve bank shall report to the Federal Reserve Board any such undue use of bank credit by any member bank, together with his recommendation. Whenever, in the judgment of the Federal Reserve Board, any member bank in making such undue use of bank credit, the Board may, in its discretion, after reasonable notice and an opportunity for a hearing, suspend such bank from the use of the credit facilities of the Federal Reserve System and may terminate such suspension or may renew it from time to time.

That provision was put in the law of 1933. The Members of this House know how that law was written. They know who was responsible for it. It was recognized then that we needed a broadening and an extension of the powers of the Federal Reserve Board, to be exercised in protection of the national welfare as a whole in pursuance of the declared purpose of the original act. Let us see what happened. These policies of the Federal Reserve banks were developed first by the operation of the banks in buying securities when they did not have commercial paper. Finally they found what they were doing affected very seriously the general trend of prices and business conditions throughout the country.

Prior to 1922 the Reserve banks, having the power to invest money, made considerable investments in the market buying bills and buying Government securities. The holdings of United States Government securities by Federal Reserve banks gradually increased in the early years of the System to about $300,000,000 in 1920, and were slightly smaller in 1921. Purchases and sales of bankers' acceptances were made largely in accordance with seasonal changes in the supply of acceptances and in the demand for funds.

In 1922 Federal Reserve banks, facing a decline in earning assets because of repayments of discounts by member banks, began to buy Government securities for the purpose of increasing their earnings. It was observed that the operations of Federal Reserve banks, acting independently, were affecting the market for Government securities and that these operations conflicted with each other and with those of the banks as fiscal agents of the Treasury.

In May 1922, at a meeting of the governors of the Federal Reserve banks, a committee was appointed to coordinate the buying and selling of Government securities so as to have a more orderly program under central control.

In October 1922 this committee undertook to make recommendations to the Federal Reserve banks regarding the purchases and sales of Government securities. It was observed in this year that purchases of Government securities did not cause an increase in the earning assets of the Federal Reserve banks, nor did sales cause a decrease, but rather they affected the volume of borrowings at member banks. As a consequence, the conference of governors of the Federal Reserve banks voted that—

> Investment policy should give minor consideration to the question of earnings and constant consideration to the effects which open-market operations have upon the condition and the course of the money market and the volume of credit.

On April 7, 1923, the Board advised the governors of the Federal Reserve banks formally of a resolution adopted by the Federal Reserve Board on March 22, 1923, with respect to open-market operations by Federal Reserve banks, pointing out the necessity of the coordination of open-market operations of the Federal Reserve banks with their discount operations and their general credit policy. It also announced the organization of the Open Market Investment Committee for the Federal Reserve System. This committee consisted of five representatives of the Reserve banks and was to be under the general supervision of the Federal Reserve Board.

In March 1930 the Open Market Policy Conference, consisting of representatives of all the Reserve banks, replaced the Open Market Investment Committee. Under the Banking Act of 1933, the Federal Open Market Committee, consisting of 12 Reserve bank governors, was established.

I want to trace what took place under the operation and exercise of these powers. The 12 Federal Reserve banks were finally given power to initiate open-market policies subject to approval of the Federal Reserve Board, but the Federal Reserve Board has no power to require the execution of such policies. What has happened? Under the law as it stands, the 12 governors of the Federal Reserve banks may meet and attempt to lay down a rule for the guidance of themselves in their open-market operations, and the Federal Reserve Board may enter full approval of the plans initiated, but one of the Federal Reserve banks, if it has sufficient resources and facilities, would have the power to nullify everything the other 11 banks might do toward effectuating those policies. Do you think that is a sound condition? That is what has happened, and that is what we are trying to remedy.

Mr. KELLER. Are you doing it in this bill?

Mr. KENNEY. That is a big job. How do you do it?

Mr. STEAGALL. We are going to say that the Federal Reserve Board, under the provisions of this bill, shall consult the governors of the Federal Reserve banks and advise with them about policies that are to be initiated. The Federal Reserve Board will exercise the controlling voice. They are servants of the Government. The Federal Reserve System is the creature of the Government. The basis upon which the Supreme Court sustains the power of the Government to charter banking institutions is that they are instrumentalities of the Government.

It is well settled under decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States that Congress has the power to create banks as instrumentalities of the Federal Government and to regulate and control their operations.

It was established in the case of McCulloch v. Maryland (1819) (4 Wheat. 316) that Congress has the power to create banks as convenient, appropriate, and useful instrumentalities to aid the Federal Government in the performance of its functions. In this case it was decided by the Court in an opinion rendered by Chief Justice Marshall that the act to incorporate the Bank of the United States was a law made in pursuance of the Constitution. As stated by Chief Justice Marshall in the opinion of Osborn v. United States Bank (1824) (9 Wheat. 738):

> The whole opinion of the Court, in the case of McCulloch v. the State of Maryland, is founded on, and sustained by, the idea that the bank is an instrument which is "necessary and proper for carrying into effect the powers vested in the Government of the United States."

Further, in the case of Farmers and Mechanics National Bank v. Dearing (1875) (91 U. S. 29), the Supreme Court of the United States said:

> The national banks organized under the act are instruments designed to be used to aid the Government in the administration of an important branch of the public service. They are means appropriate to that end. Of the degree of the necessity which existed for creating them, Congress is the sole judge.

Moreover, it is established that banks created by Congress as instrumentalities of the Government are subject to its paramount authority. In Davis v. Elmira Savings Bank (1896) (161 U. S. 275), the Court said:

> National banks are instrumentalities of the Federal Government, created for a public purpose, and as such necessarily subject to the paramount authority of the United States.

Also, in Easton v. Iowa (1903) (188 U. S. 220), the Court stated:

> Our conclusions, upon principle and authority, are that Congress, having power to create a system of national banks, is the judge as to the extent of the powers which should be conferred upon such banks, and has the sole power to regulate and control the exercise of their operations; * * *.

After the Federal Reserve Board outlines policies, every Federal Reserve bank will be required to carry out in full faith the plans and policies declared by the Federal Reserve Board, as the servants of the Government of the United States, speaking for all the people and not for any private interest. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to be allowed to proceed for 15 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

Mr. TRUAX. Reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the distinguished Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency if any time will be yielded to anyone on this side other than members of the committee?

Mr. STEAGALL. I do not anticipate that there will be any trouble in allotting some time to Members other than members of the committee. We expect to sit until Friday night.

Mr. TRUAX. If the gentleman is granted 15 additional minutes, will the gentleman answer the questions to be asked by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN]?

Mr. STEAGALL. Of course, I will do that if I can.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. PATMAN. Is the gentleman ready to answer questions now?

Mr. STEAGALL. Just let me proceed, I am on what I think is a most important part of this bill.

The control of the Federal Reserve System, for a long time, in the most critical period of the Nation, has been in the hands of one Federal Reserve bank; not under the control of the 12 Federal Reserve banks; not under the control of the Board representing the people of this country, but under the control of one of the Federal Reserve banks. Do not forget that. That is what we are trying to remedy.

The governor of one of those banks conducted constant and frequent conferences with the Bank of England and with other foreign banks. I hope nobody will think I mean to be ugly in saying this, but it was reported that the Governor of the Bank of England came to this country and registered under an assumed name as "Professor Skinner" and held conferences with the governor of one of our Federal Reserve banks.

Mr. CELLER. Will the gentleman name him? He is in my district, and I will be happy to have him named. I think he ought to be named.

Mr. STEAGALL. No. These bankers have suffered enough and I do not desire to criticize them. We want to help them, as well as everybody else, and we want to avoid repetition of past mistakes; but we need to know the history of these events. They finally did come down and shake hands with the Federal Reserve Board as a courtesy. When the Committee on Banking and Currency sought to find out something about what was going on we were told that we would not be permitted to know. Mr. Beedy, of Maine, a former Member of the House, of splendid ability and highly esteemed, introduced a resolution reciting the history of those developments and calling for an investigation. I would like to suggest that it will be very instructive if Members will read House Resolution 228, which Mr. Beedy introduced on May 26, 1928, Seventieth Congress, first session, and the recitation of facts set forth in that resolution.

Mr. KELLER. Will the gentleman put a copy of that in the RECORD for us?

Mr. STEAGALL. I will try to furnish it to you. Now, following these events to which I have called attention, the Banking Act of 1933 contained this provision:

(g) The Federal Reserve Board shall exercise special supervision over all relationships and transactions of any kind entered into by any Federal Reserve bank with any foreign bank or banker, or with any group of foreign banks or bankers, and all such relationships and transactions shall be subject to such regulations, conditions, and limitations as the Board may prescribe. No officer or other representative of any Federal Reserve bank shall conduct negotiations of any kind with the officers or representatives of any foreign bank or banker without first obtaining the permission of the Federal Reserve Board. The Federal Reserve Board shall have the right, in its discretion, to be represented in any conference or negotiations by such representative or representatives as the Board may designate. A full report of all conferences or negotiations, and all understandings or agreements arrived at or transactions agreed upon, and all other material facts appertaining to such conferences or negotiations, shall be filed with the Federal Reserve Board in writing by a duly authorized officer of each Federal Reserve bank which shall have participated in such conferences or negotiations.

I did not write it; Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH did not write it; Mr. HOEPPEL did not write it; Mr. PATMAN did not write it. It originated in the Senate of the United States, with the approval of a great Senator, whom I respect and esteem, though I do not always agree with him, who certainly cannot be branded as a radical or a foolish extremist, as is sometimes said of some of us.

This law of 1933 grew out of these practices to which I have called attention. This is to compel them to carry out the purposes declared in the original Federal Reserve law. Sometimes we hear much about the Federal Reserve Board, representing the Government, being called a political body. As far as I am concerned, I will take my chances under a political agency, if it must be called "political" simply because it does represent the Government; I will take my chances with a Government board as between a board and 12 banks, 11 of which are dominated by one of the banks, as has been the case heretofore. [Applause.]

Mr. PATMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. Please let me proceed just a little further. Throughout the history of this legislation, from 1913 until this very hour, the battle has been fought around the question of whether or not these vast powers, this great control over credit and currency, this power of life and death over agriculture and industry and commerce in the United States, shall be directed by the chosen servants of the sovereign people of the United States for the promotion of the welfare of all the people, or whether they shall be left in the hands of private interests, where they are at least susceptible of use for private profit or private purposes. [Applause.]

I wish to follow that up just a little with some more history; I want to go back to the original law; I want to read excerpts from the report of the committee of this House, which report was written when the original Federal Reserve Act was passed.

* * * In order that the banks may be effectively inspected, and in order that they may pursue a banking policy which shall be uniform and harmonious for the country as a whole, the committee proposes a general board of management intrusted with the power to overlook and direct the general functions of the banks referred to. To this it assigns the title of "The Federal Reserve Board." * * *

* * * * * * * * * The only factor of centralization which has been provided in the committee's plan is found in the Federal Reserve Board, which is to be a strictly Government organization created for the purpose of inspecting existing banking institutions and of regulating relationships between Federal Reserve banks and between them and the Government itself.

There is nothing to this talk of politics. When the great Senator from Virginia wrote that language he was denounced as a radical, one who was trying to turn the control of the economic and financial systems of this country into the hands of irresponsible politicians. I quote further from the same report:

Local control of banking, local application of resources to necessities, combined with Federal supervision, and limited by Federal authority to compel the joint application of bank resources to the relief of dangerous or stringent conditions in any locality are the characteristic features of the plan as now put forward.

It is proposed that the Government shall retain a sufficient power over the reserve banks to enable it to exercise a directing authority when necessary to do so, but that it shall in no way attempt to carry on through its own mechanism the routine operations of banking which require detailed knowledge of local and individual credits and which determine the actual use of the funds of the community in any given instance. In other words, the reserve-bank plan retains to the Government power over the exercise of the broader banking functions, while it leaves to individuals and privately owned institutions the actual direction of routine.

In this section provision has been made for the creation of a general board of control acting on behalf of the National Government for the purpose of overseeing the reserve banks and of adjusting the banking transactions of one portion of the country, as well as the Government deposits therein, to those of other portions. * * *

* * * The power granted in subsection (d) to fix a rate of discount is an obvious incident to the existence of the reserve banks, but the power has been vested in the Federal Reserve Board to review this rate of discount when fixed by the local reserve bank at its discretion. This is intended to provide against the possibility that the local bank might be establishing a dangerously low rate of interest, which the reserve board, familiar as it would be with credit conditions throughout the country, would deem best to raise.

It was not known then that we would come upon a time when the open-market operations would be far greater than the control of discount rates.

Experience has demonstrated that at times the open-market policy of the Federal Reserve System has had a more important effect than the discount rates and it is clear that the same authority which is given the final determination of discount rates should be given the power to make final decisions regarding the open-market policy. The question was whether these powers should rest in the hands of private interests or be placed in the control of a body representing the sovereign people of the country.

One of the fundamental principles of the Federal Reserve Act—a principle contributed to the act by President Wilson himself—was the principle that the Federal Reserve Board should be independent of the bankers and should not include representatives of the bankers. The origin of and reasons for this principle are clearly shown in Senator GLASS' book, "An Adventure in Constructive Finance."

That the Federal Reserve Board, created "as a capstone" to the Federal Reserve System, was suggested by President Wilson in the first instance is shown by the following passage on pages 81 and 82:

December 26, 1912, was a desperately cold day. The snow at Princeton was 2 feet deep. Dr. Willis, the committee expert, had accompanied the chairman, prepared to answer or discuss any purely technical question that might be projected. I had made a written divisional memorandum of the bill I desired to outline to Governor Wilson. The latter had a severe cold and was propped up on pillows in bed. He had canceled every other engagement for the day, and at once it was suggested that he let us come another time when he might be in better trim; but he insisted on proceeding with the business, so intent was he on a speedy and sweeping currency reform. For 2 hours the situation was reviewed and the chairman's memorandum dissected. Toward the end, Mr. Wilson announced it as his judgment that we were "far on the right track"; but offered quite a few suggestions, the most notable being one that resulted in the establishment of an altruistic Federal Reserve Board at Washington to supervise the proposed system. We had committed this function to the Comptroller of the Currency, already tsaristic head of the national banking system of the country. Mr. Wilson laughingly said he was for "a plenty of centralization, but not for too much." Therefore, he asked that a separate central board provision be drafted, to be used or not, as might subsequently be determined, "as a capstone" to the system which had been outlined to him.

The question before us is whether we shall stand back of the present administration in the worthy effort to preserve the great accomplishment of the Wilson administration and apply to present conditions the wholesome and constructive principles upon which the great Federal Reserve Act was founded.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for an additional 10 minutes.

Mr. TRUAX. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from Alabama if he could now find time to answer the question propounded by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN]. I think it is a very important question and should be answered.

Mr. PATMAN. The gentleman can do it under the reservation of objection and it will not be taken out of his time.

Mr. STEAGALL. What is the question?

Mr. PATMAN. The question is, Under present law the Federal Reserve Board selects the Federal Reserve agent of each Federal Reserve bank. He is the chief executive officer of that bank. The Federal Reserve Board also designates the one to act in his place if he is not there. The proposed law changes this and allows the directors of the local Federal Reserve bank to appoint the governor, the title "Federal Reserve Agent" having been changed by this bill to "Governor"—to appoint the governor and also to appoint the one who is to act in his place if he is not there. Does not the gentleman think this is giving the bankers, the private bankers, private corporations, more power and more control in this regard instead of taking something away from them; and does not the gentleman think the system in this regard should be continued just as it is?

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I have stated that under the original law the Federal Reserve Board named the Federal Reserve agent, who is the chairman of the board of the Federal Reserve bank.

Later, the practice of naming governors grew up in the operation of the Federal Reserve System without specific authority in the law; and I have said that insofar as that particular provision of the law is concerned we have extended further autonomy in the control and operation of the local bank. But let me ask the gentleman this question: I know the struggle it took to get this bill before the House; I know the history of it; I know the fight the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board has made for a year and more to liberalize the Federal Reserve System and to give an enlarged power to the Board in order that the Board may be enabled better to protect the public interest and the people interested in the exercise of these vast powers. I ask the gentleman if he does not think we are gaining a great deal for the public when we recapture and restore to the Federal Reserve Board the complete control of the powers which affect the national welfare as a whole, when we merely surrender the little difference between the Federal Reserve agent and the governor, especially in view of the fact that the governor selected by the Federal Reserve bank must be approved by the Federal Reserve Board?

Mr. PATMAN. I would like to ask the gentleman this question: To whom did he have to surrender? With whom was the gentleman dealing that he had to give up such great power?

Mr. STEAGALL. Does the gentleman believe we can wrest from the banks of this country the control that I have outlined here, that involves the efforts of years on the part of those responsible to the people of the country for protection of their interest in the Federal Reserve banks without a struggle? Does the gentleman say he does not understand that the great liberalism of this act and the recapture of the powers to be exercised in the interest of the people at large did not necessarily involve a struggle on the part of those responsible for this measure?

Mr. PATMAN. I want to know who the gentleman is struggling with on this particular provision.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I wish to quote again from Senator GLASS' book.

Mr. KENNEY. When was this?

Mr. STEAGALL. During the consideration of the original Federal Reserve Act.

As related in Senator GLASS' book, the bankers made a desperate fight to have representatives selected or at least nominated by them included in the membership of the Federal Reserve Board. How this proposal was defeated by President Wilson, and the conclusive reasons for such action are shown in the following passage on pages 112 to 116:

It was at this point that the President had us come to the White House for a conference concerning that feature of the bill that gave the banks minority representation on the Federal Reserve Board. I was very definitely committed to giving the banks some voice. Senator Owen, of the Senate committee, had sided with Mr. Bryan in opposition. At the White House conference McADOO agreed at first with me, but later in the evening he proposed a compromise. The President decided against banking representation. This was one of the crucial questions the President had to determine. It was evident it might involve the failure of legislation by embittering the bankers should they be entirely excluded. If they should be included, Bryan and his following might revolt. I had urged the "essential injustice and political inexpediency" of denying the banks minority representation. The President was not bothered about the political phase; but he was willing to discuss the justice of the thing. So convinced was I that the President was wrong in his conclusion that I sent him this note, which is reproduced here to indicate that the President was not easily persuaded nor the chairman of the committee entirely complaisant:

"At the risk of being regarded pertinacious I am going to ask if you will not consider the advisability of modifying somewhat your view of bank representation on the proposed Federal Reserve Board. The matter has given me much concern, and more than ever I am convinced that it will be a grave mistake to alter so radically the feature of the bill indicated. Last night, when I came back to my hotel, I found Mr. BULKLEY waiting, and he sat with me until past 1 o'clock this morning. Knowing that he was so earnestly for a Government note issue and for Government control, I imagined he would be delighted with the suggested alteration. I told him of the change without first indicating my own view, and much to my astonishment and gratification he instantly and vigorously protested, saying he had regarded the extent to which we had already put the Government in control, together with the tremendous power of the Board, as the real weakness of the bill. He also said we could not escape the charge of exposing the banking business of the country to political control. As indicated to you last night, Mr. BULKLEY is a strong man of the committee with whom we must reckon; hence his view of this proposed alteration fully confirms my belief that it would prove an almost irretrievable mistake to leave the banks without representation on the central board. You will note that the bill requires the three members selected by the banks to sever all bank connections before qualifying. Might it not be well at least to take Mr. McADOO's suggestion and have the President select these men from a list proposed by the banks? With high esteem, etc."

The President was adamant; and, if there was ever a lapse, I soon was to revive the conviction that Mr. Wilson knew more about these matters than I did. As anticipated, when the bill was introduced in Congress, bankers raised an uproar about this provision. With scarcely suppressed satisfaction, I headed a delegation of them to the White House to convince the President he was wrong. Forgan and Wade, Sol Wexler and Perrin, Howe and other members of the currency commission of the American Bankers' Association constituted the party. The first two, peremptory and arbitrary, used to having their own way, did not mince matters. They evidently were not awed by "titled consequence", for they spoke with force, and even bitterness. Sol Wexter and Perrin were suave and conciliatory. The President was courteous and contained. These great bankers, arbiters for years of the country's credits, were grouped about the President's desk in the Executive office adjoining the Cabinet room. I sat outside the circle, having already voiced my own dissent from the President's attitude. President Wilson faced the group across the desk, and as these men drove home what seemed to me good reason after good reason for banker representation on the central board, I actually experienced a sense of regret that I had a part in subjecting Mr. Wilson to such an ordeal. When they had ended their arguments Mr. Wilson, turning more particularly to Forgan and Wade, said quietly: "Will one of you gentlemen tell me in what civilized country of the earth there are important government boards of control on which private interests are represented?" There was painful silence for the longest single moment I ever spent, and before it was broken Mr. Wilson further inquired: "Which of you gentlemen thinks the railroads should select members of the Interstate Commerce Commission?" There could be no convincing reply to either question, so the discussion turned to other points of the currency bill, and, notwithstanding a desperate effort was made in the Senate to give the banks minority representation on the Reserve Board, the proposition did not prevail.

The issue then was the same as it is now: Shall we listen to the appeal for further delay in this period of suffering and depression and permit a continuation of private, selfish control of the vast powers of the Federal Reserve System, that reach now many, many times beyond any power dreamed of by President Wilson and the framers of the original Federal Reserve Act? The Federal Reserve System has surpassed, in the sweep of its powers and influence, anything ever dreamed of at the time the Federal Reserve Act was passed. It is an institution whose controlling officers are sought out by the potentates of the world of finance at home and abroad. The reason is a thousandfold stronger now for the views expressed by President Wilson, and which were written into the law then as best they could be expressed with the facts existing at that time. There is much more reason now to fear private control than there was at the time of these great utterances which I have read to the Membership of the House. [Applause.]

Mr. KENNEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. KENNEY. May I ask the gentleman whether the Government was not handicapped at that time to a great extent by reason of the fact that the party platform in 1912 had declared against a central bank?

Mr. STEAGALL. I have not the exact language of the platform before me at this time.

Mr. KENNEY. Well, in substance.

Mr. STEAGALL. What the platform at that time declared for was a new deal in the control of the credit and currency of the United States. All through the report, as well as in the specific provisions of the bill, there runs the one clear purpose to decentralize private control of the credit and currency of this country. There was a clear purpose to see that the great forces mobilized under this plan should be guarded to the end private interests should never use those powers to their own selfish purposes. Safety in Government depends upon laws written in distrust of individuals and officials. This applies to all citizens and all officials, high and low. I would not trust these powers in the hands of any private interest. I do not abuse bankers. I would write this law following the principle of distrust, and I would apply that principle even to the governing board itself by specifying their powers and the purposes for which they are to be exercised, and by every limitation and restriction that can be written into the law.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I agree with the gentleman, and I would like to ask him a question.

Mr. STEAGALL. So far as this talk of politics is concerned, we cannot have public control unless we get it through public officials. The public officials of this country get their power from the people and will continue to get it there unless we permit the development of private interests big enough to dominate popular opinion and the politics of the land. Public officials get their power from the sovereign people of the Nation.

The Federal Reserve Act, let me say, was written by politicians. Worse than that, if you could so term it, it was written by partisan politicians in fulfillment of a party-platform pledge. It was written behind closed doors and was taken into a party caucus, and members were required to vote for it or lose their standing in the party. It was written by the same kind of men who are sponsoring and who are responsible for this great reform embodied in the bill now before the House. [Applause.]

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order there is not a quorum present.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. DARDEN). The gentleman from Michigan makes the point of order there is no quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and three Members present, a quorum.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. WOLCOTT) there were—ayes 22, noes 91.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chair appointed as tellers Mr. STEAGALL and Mr. WOLCOTT.

The Committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 13, noes 115.

So the motion was rejected.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield myself 45 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, in my remarks on Monday on the rule I touched very generally on the philosophy which is behind the changes in the Federal Reserve Act which title II of this bill brings about. I stated then that when I took time in general debate on the bill I would attempt to go in greater detail into the various specific provisions of title II which illustrate the philosophy to which I referred. I spoke at that time briefly on the history of central banking in this country with particular reference to the history of the organization of the Federal Reserve System. The House was kind enough to grant me unanimous consent to insert in connection with my remarks a considerably more detailed account of the connection between Government and central banking in this country and also a statement of the method of operation of central banks in other civilized countries, in order that the Members might have before them the information by which they could ascertain how other countries conducted their central-banking operations and could see how far the provisions of this bill, if adopted, would carry this country beyond what most civilized countries have felt was wise with respect to governmental control of their central bank.

The distinguished chairman of the committee, with his usual oratorical ability, has completed his statement on this bill. He has also gone into the history of the development of the Federal Reserve System and has talked at great length about the necessity of keeping the control of credit and the control of banking in the hands of the public, where he says it belongs.

I must take very definite and distinct issue with the chairman, if that is really his theory of a proper banking system, because all history has shown that if there is one way in which a country must be kept free, it is in the keeping of the banking system of the country reasonably far removed from the direct influence of the Government and of the Treasury of the Government.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH and Mr. ROBERTSON rose.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield first to the gentleman from Maryland, a member of the committee.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. May I suggest that the gentleman differentiate between the function of banking and the function of monetary control? One difficulty, as I conceive it, in all our discussions in this country is that we confuse the normal functions of banking with monetary control, and I would ask the gentleman to differentiate between them.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I think the gentleman is quite correct in stating that monetary control and banking are very different. Banking is for the purpose of providing the necessary and proper means, through credit facilities, of helping industry, commerce, and agriculture, while currency control is quite a different matter.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Who issued the worthless German marks, the German Government or the politically controlled German bank?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Whether they were issued by the politically controlled German bank or the German Government, I am unable to state to the gentleman; but the fact remains it was done under the direction of the German Government.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I may state to the gentleman that it was done by the Reichsbank and not by the German Government.

Mr. HOLLISTER. But the Reichsbank at that time was under the control of the German Government, and they were issued under the orders of the German Government at that time.

At the risk of seeming tedious and repetitious, I want to point out again that there is no subject which should be less embroiled in politics than the question of banking. That is quite a different problem from discussing whether or not a particular banking set-up might be subject to political control. I cannot emphasize too strongly that this subject should be studied without the slightest consideration of party and without the slightest consideration of what administration may now be in power or what administration may be in power at a later date. It should be approached solely on the subject of proper theory and whether it is wise that a matter as delicate as the banking system of the country should, by any possibility, be placed in a position where it might be subjected to political influences.

There are, of course, any number of bank-system theories which are rife among the people. There are thousands of economists, and each economist claims to be the Messiah, who, if we will follow him, will lead us out of the wilderness. We have the 100-percent bankers; we have the system of laissez faire, who hold that the banks should be run under private control, without any Government supervision whatever; we have the disciples of manipulation, those who believe that in some way by the control of the amount of currency that is outstanding and by the control of certain other things to which they refer as "levers"—that in some way stabilization of prices, stabilization of employment, or stabilization of production can be achieved. The number of these is legion, and each one has a different plan from the other.

We have in turn various currency theorists—those who believe in the strict gold standard, those who believe in the unfortunate silver-buying policy on which the Government has embarked, those who believe in bimetallism, those who believe in symmetallism, and many other different theories.

We have, however, in the existing Federal Reserve System, one which was evolved after years and years of careful study. It was an act picked from four or five different acts drafted about the same time, and the Congress picked the one which it most approved, and which has worked fairly well up to this time.

The System has been far from perfect. No one will contend that it is perfect. The question is whether it is wise to change this System at the request of one man who has had little, if any, central banking experience, and who has himself changed his mind four or five times since the bill was first prepared.

I expect to recur to this matter again, but in order that it may remain in your minds, I want to repeat that we are here considering one of the most important matters that we will have before us at this session of Congress.

Mr. REILLY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. REILLY. I know that the gentleman wants to be fair. He would not want the House to understand that Mr. Eccles has changed his mind in any particular since this bill was presented to the committee. The only change he has made is in the details since the bill was drafted. He has made no change in the principle of the bill.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Eccles' mind has not changed on that.

Mr. REILLY. That is the principal purpose of the bill.

Mr. HOLLISTER. The method of doing it has changed.

Mr. REILLY. On the details of the bill.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Yes.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that there has been extensive study of this subject. There was extensive study of it when the original Federal act was written, and in every session of this Congress since 1920 the subject has been studied very extensively, so that I believe the gentleman is inadvertently in error when he makes the statement that this subject has not been studied very thoroughly.

Mr. HOLLISTER. In answer to the gentleman, permit me to say that of course the act was originally studied very carefully. I have repeated that over and over again, so far as the beginning is concerned. Meanwhile the act has been in operation for something over 20 years, and there has been no time in this period when any independent commission was appointed to study the act or when anybody gave it any detailed study as a whole. All that has happened is that committees of Congress have from time to time taken different aspects of the act and have had certain hearings on it and passed or failed to pass, as the case might be, certain bills covering these aspects. There has never been any time in that 20-year period when an independent commission was appointed by Congress to study the act and the result of its operation over a period of time and to make general recommendations for its complete revamping. Am I correct?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. The gentleman is correct in saying that no independent commission has been appointed to study it; but, in my opinion, the gentleman is incorrect in his conclusion that the Committee on Banking and Currency has not studied the Federal Reserve Act very thoroughly during every session, certainly since 1920; and I speak from personal knowledge.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I have sat, and I think no one more punctiliously than I, in all the hearings of the Committee on Banking and Currency at this session when this bill was under consideration by the committee. We have had before us Mr. Eccles most of the time and a few other witnesses for an hour or so at a time. Most of these represented particular organizations, but were not in a position to speak for anything except some particular idea which their organization might have.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Is it proper for me to suggest at this time that one of the witnesses, Dr. Spahr, who was suggested by the gentleman now speaking, stated to the Committee on Banking and Currency that if Congress exercised its constitutional duties to issue money and regulate its value, it would be guilty of forgery. The gentleman's own witness testified to that.

Mr. HOLLISTER. If the gentleman will permit me to answer his question, Dr. Spahr pointed out that one of the definitions of forgery is the signing of a name to a worthless piece of paper, and that if the Government of the United States ever got to the point when it was issuing paper which was absolutely worthless and which had nothing behind it except a promise to pay, then in a way it would be committing forgery. I am inclined to agree with Dr. Spahr. Does that answer the gentleman?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. The gentleman will remember that when Dr. Spahr was questioned he was asked particularly when a bond was sold to a bank, which bond had absolutely nothing back of it except the credit of the Government, and money was issued by the bank because of the bond, why the money issued by the bank was any better than money that could have been originally issued by the Government. In other words, there is just as much behind a greenback as there is behind a Government bond. There is nothing behind a Government bond except the credit of the Government.

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is correct.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. And the same thing is behind a greenback.

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is correct. But behind our Federal Reserve note is 40 percent of gold coverage. It was more gold before the dollar was devalued, but there is still 40 percent of gold coverage. Is the gentleman saying that a Federal Reserve note with 40 percent of gold coverage behind it is not worth more than a note with nothing behind it?

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. We were discussing a Government bond.

Mr. HOLLISTER. The gentleman started to discuss the currency.

I shall yield to the gentleman later if I can. I do not want to get into the question of currency at the present time until I have completed my statement.

The Federal Reserve System, as I have said, was evolved as a kind of compromise between those who believed there should be complete Government control of banking and those who believed that banking should operate absolutely independently of any Government control. We are told that what we need is additional Government control. I shall take time in a moment to point out where this additional control is provided in the bill. I wonder how many Members of the House know that there are today in the Federal Reserve Act plenty of implements to do the very things which the proponents of this new legislation claim should be done, but that those weapons have not been used simply because the human equation has failed.

Mr. Chairman, today, in the kind of legislation which we are considering, there is too much of a failure to realize that what has happened in this country has not been the failure of machinery but the failure of human beings who were conducting that machinery. Strangely enough, other human beings of much the same type think that they can invent some new kind of machinery which will abolish the human equation and will in some way, by giving greater power to the people who failed to exercise properly the control that they had, be able in a better way to execute these greater powers. As a matter of fact, there is great danger that if they do no better with these powers than they have done in the past, we will be in worse shape than we were before.

You have heard a great deal about the necessity of changes in the rediscount rate, the necessity for the control of open-market operations, and the necessity of a change in the reserve requirements of member banks; how those three weapons, levers, as they are called, may be used by those in charge to check inflation or check deflation. Those levers are now in the Federal Reserve Act and are capable of being utilized. It is true they are not in the same form which they will be placed in the new act.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Is it not a fact that early in 1929 New York banks wanted to increase the rediscount rate and the Federal Reserve Board refused to do it?

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is exactly what I was going to say.

Mr. ROBERTSON. And is it not also true that in 1933, as far as was then humanly possible, the Congress put new restrictions in the Federal Reserve Banking Act, subject, of course, to the human equation in every law that it cannot be self-administered?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I am very glad the gentleman raised that question, because I expected to mention it a little later. Here we are talking about giving this Federal Reserve Board additional powers to do certain things, on the theory that they will act to protect the country against inflation and protect the country against deflation, when, as a matter of fact, they refused to act back in 1929, when action should have been taken. They refused to take advantage of the powers that they have today, even though the strongest and most influential and most powerful Federal Reserve bank came down here time after time and asked the Federal Reserve Board to give them authority to raise the rediscount rate and stop the orgy of speculation that was then going on. This bill in no way changes control over the rediscount rate.

Furthermore, at the present time the reserve requirements of banks may be changed by a vote of five members of the Board on the declaration of an emergency and with the approval of the President. As far as I have been able to gather, this power has never been utilized. Five members of the Board have never asked that the reserve requirements be changed and have never made an attempt to use the lever which the proponents of this bill now wish to put in their hands to be used much more freely and much more easily.

I should like to take a few minutes to touch on the various provisions of this bill to which I particularly object. Incidentally, before I go into the bill, and apropos of some questions that have been asked, I want to point to H. R. 5357, which I hold in my hand. That is a bill which was prepared and presented to our committee under the name of its chairman, but I know our distinguished chairman never boasted of having prepared it. It was apparently prepared by a combination of various financial officers of the Government who constituted a committee which ultimately approved this bill. After the bill had been presented and we had conducted hearings on it, many amendments in draft form were presented to us. In order that I may do full justice to Mr. Eccles, a number of the suggestions to which I am going to refer were suggested by Mr. Eccles informally the day he first appeared; but before he got through we were presented with a new draft entirely, and interlined in it was page after page of typewritten matter, which was Mr. Eccles' second idea of the form in which this bill should be accepted by Congress. This present bill was accepted practically without change as redrafted in accordance with Mr. Eccles' suggestions.

The new bill which is now before us is practically entirely that redraft. I am not saying that in any criticism of anyone. Conceivably the bill was redrafted as a better bill. It is in some aspects, whereas in some other aspects, in my opinion, it is worse than the original bill. I am not saying that the members of the committee or any individual member of the committee necessarily has greater ability than Mr. Eccles or those who assisted him in drafting this bill, but I do not say that in a matter of such importance I do not like to see legislation submitted in complete draft form and adopted with hardly a change of more importance than the crossing of a "t" or the dotting of an "i."

Now, referring to title II of the bill, which is what I am solely considering, I should like the Members to turn to section 201, at the bottom of page 44, line 23, where it is stated:

> The governor shall be the chief executive officer of the bank and shall be appointed annually by the board of directors. His first appointment shall be subject to the approval of the Federal Reserve Board.

I read now from line 7, page 45:

> At the expiration of such term as a class C director, and of each term of 3 years thereafter, his continuance in office shall be subject to the approval of the Federal Reserve Board.

This is the first time that the office of governor of a Federal Reserve bank is recognized in legislation. In the original act there is no provision for such an office. The governorship is an office which was evolved by the boards of directors of the Federal Reserve banks, and the governor has by custom become the chief executive officer and the dominant figure in the activities of the banks.

The original act provided that there should be appointed by the Federal Reserve Board a chairman of the board of directors of each regional bank. I should point out for those who do not know it that the board of directors of each one of the regional Federal Reserve banks consists of 9 men, 3 of them the class A directors, being elected by the stockholders of the regional banks who are, of course, the member banks of that district. These class A directors are usually bankers. Class B directors consist of three men also elected by the stockholders of the bank, but they are not bankers; they must be actively engaged in commerce, industry, or agriculture.

The class C directors in turn are appointed by the Federal Reserve Board. Thus two-thirds of the members of the board of directors of each regional bank are elected by the private interests whose money has gone into the capital of that bank, whose deposits are held by that bank, whose reserves and excess reserves are there held, and for whom that bank does discounting and the other financial operations permitted under the Federal Reserve Act. The other one-third of the directors are appointed by the Federal Reserve Board, thus giving them a substantial voice in the activities of that particular bank.

This new provision makes the Federal Reserve Board the arbiter of who shall be the governor, and it is later stated that he shall be the chief executive officer, and that all other officers and employees of the bank shall be directly responsible to him.

The Federal Reserve Board can say who shall be the governor of each regional bank, and at the end of 3 years, if it is desired to continue him in office, the Federal Reserve Board's approval must be received. This provision of the bill as first presented to the committee provided that the governor had to be reapproved every year by the Federal Reserve Board if he was reappointed, but Mr. Eccles conceded that 3 years would be often enough for the control which it was desired that the Federal Reserve Board should exercise over him.

I am not pointing this out as a particularly vicious provision by itself; what I want the Members to realize is that all these various steps and the new control granted along the line are cumulative and bring about a greater control than in my opinion is wise for the Government to exercise over the operations of Federal Reserve banks. This one sentence expresses my chief objection to certain portions of this bill.

There is a provision of the bill on page 46 which I think is of doubtful wisdom. It is there provided—line 16:

> No member of the board of directors of the Federal Reserve bank, other than the governor and vice governor, shall serve as a director for more than two consecutive terms of 3 years each.

Many of the best men on the boards of the regional banks have been there for some little time, and, in my opinion, it would be undesirable to eject them at the conclusion of their present terms, as would happen under this provision, realizing, though I do, the wisdom of having a certain rotation in office, and realizing, too, the danger of having any particular clique continue in complete control of the operation of an individual bank. I am merely pointing this out as I pass as something to be considered.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. If the gentleman does not mind going back to the provision creating the position of Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank: As I understand it the duties of Governor, chairman of the board of directors, and Federal Reserve agents, are all combined in the present bill.

Mr. HOLLISTER. They are combined in the pending bill. I think it is a very wise provision.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. How will he handle collateral? He will be Governor of the bank and also hold collateral for the bank notes.

Mr. HOLLISTER. If this bill goes into effect there will not be any collateral on Federal Reserve notes in the future.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Will any function be left to the Federal Reserve agents?

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is a highly technical question which I would not want to answer offhand. There probably would be some technical things left for the Federal Reserve agent to handle; but the holding of collateral is eliminated in the pending bill.

Mr. REILLY. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, under the terms of the bill the Governor has the right to delegate some portion of his various duties.

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is correct, and is a very proper provision.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. PATMAN. The gentleman stated that the duties of governor and Federal Reserve agent are combined. Is it not a fact there never was any legal authority for the office of governor of a Federal Reserve bank?

Mr. HOLLISTER. What the gentleman means by that is not that it is an illegal office.

Mr. PATMAN. I am speaking of realities. Is it not a fact that the provision in the pending bill changing the title of Federal Reserve agent to governor is abolishing an office that does not legally exist?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Absolutely not. The office of governor as it now exists is in no sense illegal.

Mr. PATMAN. Congress cannot abolish something Congress has not created.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Yes, it can; Congress can abolish things it has not created; and that is exactly what is done by this provision of the pending bill—it abolishes the right of the directors of a Federal Reserve bank to appoint their own chief executive officer.

Mr. PATMAN. The effect of it, however, is that there will be but one officer in the future.

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is right.

Mr. PATMAN. And he will take over the duties of the Federal Reserve agent and chairman of the board of directors.

Mr. HOLLISTER. This is a change which, in my opinion, will be highly satisfactory. I believe there should not be any overlapping.

The chief objection to it is that it does not permit the directors of the bank who represent the private interests whose money organized the bank and is in the keeping of the bank to name their own chief executive officer.

Mr. PATMAN. The gentleman realizes they can already appoint 6 out of 9 directors under the present law.

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is correct.

Mr. PATMAN. And under the pending bill they will, in effect, appoint 7 out of 9.

Mr. HOLLISTER. It is impossible to appoint anybody when the appointment is subject to somebody else's approval.

Mr. PATMAN. They just have the veto power, and they are not going to submit the name of one who will not be in every way satisfactory to the private bankers.

Mr. HOLLISTER. The gentleman knows enough about the veto power by this time to know that it is quite a power.

Mr. Chairman, section 202, in my opinion, is entirely satisfactory, and I shall therefore give it no further attention. The first part of section 203, dealing with the pension system under which members of the Federal Reserve Board could retire, is, in my opinion, satisfactory. It has always seemed to me that a man who has a position in the financial world such as to entitle him to membership on the Federal Reserve Board or on a monetary authority or a supreme court of money, or whatever you want to call the particular body which handles these functions, certainly ought to be worthy of his hire. We ought to be able to pick the best men we can, pay them well, and, if they serve for a long period of time, give them a pension.

Mr. DONDERO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DONDERO. Suppose a man was appointed at 30 years of age and served 12 years at a salary of $12,000 or $15,000 a year; then went off the Board and lived 40 years after that. He would draw more than a half million dollars in pension for a job that he held just 12 years. Does the gentleman think that is fair?

Mr. HOLLISTER. What does the gentleman mean by "fair"?

Mr. DONDERO. Is it fair to the rest of the people?

Mr. HOLLISTER. The gentleman, of course, is giving a hypothetical illustration which involves an almost impossible situation. In the first place, a man 30 years of age would probably never be appointed on the Federal Reserve Board. Then, again, if he served 12 years he would more than likely be reappointed for an additional 12 years. I cannot imagine a man who had served 12 years and would not want to continue in office. I can conceive the gentleman's illustration happening, but it is so remote that it should not defeat the general purpose of this particular section.

Mr. DONDERO. Could he serve 12 years after having served the first 12?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Yes. He could serve 40 years if he lived that long.

I want to point out, on page 48, line 15, one of the little arrows which point the way the wind is blowing in the mind of Mr. Eccles and others who have conceived this bill. There it is stated that—

In selecting the six appointive members of the Federal Reserve Board, the President shall choose persons well qualified by education or experience or both to participate in the formulation of national economic and monetary policies.

There is one place where I take direct issue with the philosophy of the people who have evolved this kind of legislation. I do not believe it is the function of those in control of the banking system of the country to manipulate it in line with any particular kind of an economic policy. I do not believe that a qualification for membership on the Federal Reserve Board should be education or experience looking toward participation in the formulation of national economic and monetary policies. We should not take education alone, for instance. There are a lot of professors down here who are qualified by education, but far from qualified by experience, to do certain things. I do not believe that is a proper test to make of a member of the Federal Reserve Board. I am not making an issue of this particular feature of the bill, but merely pointing it out so that the Members may see the way the wind is blowing in respect to this legislation.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. What did the hearings disclose, if anything, as to the interpretation those who favor that language would give?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Eccles is very distinct in his views that the whole economic system of the country should be tied in with the economic policy of the particular administration in control. That is where I take direct issue with him. I say that after careful thought and irrespective of any particular administration. I would not give the greatest President we have ever had the complete power to use the banking system of the country in connection with whatever economic policies he might think were wise at the time. I believe the two should be separated to a certain extent.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. WOLCOTT. As a matter of fact, Mr. Eccles expressed the thought at least that we had not spent enough or rapidly enough and he does not fear a forty-billion national debt?

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is correct.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. In the gentleman's opinion, what would be the purpose of a Nation-wide monetary policy?

Mr. HOLLISTER. A Nation-wide monetary policy?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Yes.

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is a question I would rather have the gentleman answer himself. What does the gentleman mean by a "Nation-wide monetary policy"?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Would it be worth anything if it did not affect economic conditions?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Would a Nation-wide monetary policy be worth anything if it did not affect economic conditions? No.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield to the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Was any consideration given in committee to the disjunction on line 14, between the words "experience" and "education"?

Mr. HOLLISTER. It was given consideration by me. I raised the question in committee.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Is the gentleman going to offer an amendment?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I am going to have so many amendments to offer that I do not want to waste my time and energy on minor ones.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Does not the gentleman think that is about the most important thing in this bill, especially if it has any new features? Does the gentleman not think this is liable to lead us very far afield from what we have always considered as conservative banking to put the banks of this country in the position of being more or less back of certain promotion schemes?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Yes. I think the theory is absolutely wrong. Of course, that has little to do with this stump speech which the bill contains, because the President is going to appoint on the Federal Reserve Board whoever he wants. He is not going to announce that the appointee is only qualified by education or experience or both. He is going to say that he is a prominent banker and appoint him. However, it is the theory behind those words that I do not like, and I think the gentleman is correct because it shows a dangerous trend.

Mr. Chairman, at the bottom of page 49, I call particular attention to the words "to serve as such until the further order of the President." That has reference to the appointment of the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board. I do not want any of the Members to get mixed up between the appointment of the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board and the appointment of the governors of the various Federal Reserve banks.

For the first time we have it specifically stated in the law, if this bill takes effect, that the Governor and Vice Governor will serve as such only until the further order of the President.

In other words, they may be designated one day and undesignated the next. When this bill was first presented to the committee it was so worded that the Governor, who was undesignated as such, immediately ceased to be a member of the Federal Reserve Board. This placed the Chief Executive in the position, if he cared to do it (and I do not think any Chief Executive would, but he might), to appoint each member of the Board in turn as Governor, undesignate him the next day and he would go off the Board. Thus, in the brief space of 6 days the Chief Executive could completely clean up the Federal Reserve Board and get a fresh one. When this was pointed out to Mr. Eccles he conceded this possibility and was willing to make a change so that when the Governor is undesignated as such he still remains as a member of the Board if he cares to remain. However, if he resigns within 90 days after his undesignation, he is not subject to the restrictions that are placed on those who have served on the Federal Reserve Board, that for 2 years they may not go into the banking business. He could thereupon leave instantly and go into the banking business.

Mr. CROSS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. CROSS of Texas. The language is somewhat ambiguous and the gentleman will recall that Mr. Eccles testified it would not remove him from the Board, but there were some members of the committee who thought it might have that effect and therefore suggested that it should be made plain in the bill.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I do not think it is worth while to go into that now, because it is not in the bill, but I think I could point out by the original bill it was pretty clear what it meant, notwithstanding what was said.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. HALLECK. I notice the language used is that he may continue to serve, which is permissive and not mandatory. At whose option is it?

Mr. HOLLISTER. It has been assumed it is at his option.

Mr. HALLECK. Would it not be more definite if it were referred to as at the option of the removed Governor?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Perhaps, it would, yes. I must say it never occurred to any of us that it was not at the option of the removed Governor, but it ought to be made clear if there is any doubt about it.

This particular point, by itself again, is not anything particularly vicious. At the present time the removability of the Governor is perhaps an open question and I am now saying this to anticipate what I know the gentleman from North Carolina will probably say when he gets on his feet. That is that the Governor at the present time could probably be removed by the President. The question of whether or not the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board could be removed, that is undesignated as Governor and still remain a member of the Board, has never been settled. The only thing we can say, in answer, is that if it is so, that the President today may remove the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, why are we now asked to provide for it specifically in the law?

I am trying to point out how these various points build up this additional control over the operation of the Federal Reserve System.

I pass on to section 204. Subdivision (a) is perfectly satisfactory, permitting the designation of minor officers to perform minor functions under the Federal Reserve Board.

Section (b), however, is another manifestation of the same matter we were discussing a little while ago, showing the theory behind the views of those who have evolved this legislation. It reads as follows, page 51, line 4:

> It shall be the duty of the Federal Reserve Board to exercise such powers as it possesses in such manner as to promote conditions conducive to business stability and to mitigate by its influence unstabilizing fluctuations in the general level of production, trade, prices, and employment, so far as may be possible within the scope of monetary action and credit administration.

This is one of the prettiest stump speeches I have heard in a long time, and I shall ask the Members who have not studied it carefully to study it and see if they really know what it means. It is, apparently, a mandate placed on the Federal Reserve Board, a Board that was merely to supervise the operation of the banking system of the country. It is a mandate on them to manipulate things so as to bring about certain stabilization factors which may or may not be wise.

It is a very open question whether a particular stabilization of prices, whether a particular stabilization of production, whether a particular stabilization of labor, or of other factors which go into our economic life is wise or not. It is a thing about which economists disagree.

It has never been considered the function of the banking system to point all its efforts toward effecting any particular stabilization of that nature, and I say that this stump speech which is inserted at page 51 is another evidence of what those who are behind this legislation really intend.

Section 205, I suppose, is the most objectionable feature of title II. It is one of the dangerous compulsory features to which I object.

There are in this title a number of permissive provisions. I am never particularly fearful of a permissive provision if those to whom the permit is given do not necessarily have to take advantage of it. I do fear a compulsory provision when the compulsion may bring about a dangerous result.

This section refers to the open-market operations. At the present time, for those who do not know, I should like to say that open-market operations may not be compulsorily enforced on any particular Federal Reserve bank which does not care to enter into them. Incidentally, open-market operations are not alone the buying and selling of Government obligations, as most people think, but also the buying and selling of certain other obligations.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 15 additional minutes.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I want to see if I understand the point that has been made by the gentleman. I believe these Federal Reserve banks are privately owned.

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is correct.

Mr. ROBERTSON. And this policy board can issue an order, mandatory in its effect, that they shall take Government securities at par, say?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Or less than par.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Or at less than par; yes.

Mr. HOLLISTER. At any interest rate.

Mr. ROBERTSON. And at any interest rate. For instance, if the national debt went above $50,000,000,000 and the private investor felt that Government securities were perhaps not worth to him over 75 cents on the dollar, this policy board could make these privately owned banks continue to buy Government securities at the price they had fixed?

Mr. HOLLISTER. As long as they had any resources left.

Mr. CAVICCHIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. CAVICCHIA. Following the gentleman's question, if Government bonds dropped 20 or 25 points, as he suggested, and 60 percent of the capital and surplus of the banks was invested in Government bonds, almost overnight the capital and surplus of these banks would be wiped out?

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is correct.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Is not it a fact that 75 percent of the holdings in the Federal Reserve System was in Government bonds during the Hoover administration?

Mr. HOLLISTER. What difference does it make?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. The gentleman said that the banks are privately owned. What does he mean by ownership?

Mr. HOLLISTER. The same way that any corporation is owned—by the stockholders of the corporation.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Does not ownership carry control?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Usually.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Do the directors of the regional banks have any stock?

Mr. HOLLISTER. No.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. It amounts to nothing more than a bond for investment.

Mr. HOLLISTER. It is their option to take that stock or not.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Is it not a fact that the Federal Reserve banks have to keep 35 percent of their member-bank deposits in cash and 40 percent of their Federal Reserve bank notes in gold?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Yes. I am glad the gentleman called my attention to that.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Is there not in the existing law today a provision that the Federal Reserve banks must buy Government bonds?

Mr. HOLLISTER. There is not.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. The gentleman is familiar with the Thomas amendment, is he not?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I do not think there is any requirement in that amendment that compels the Federal Reserve banks to buy Government bonds.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Of course there is; if necessary, to buy up $3,000,000,000 worth.

Mr. HOLLISTER. The Federal Reserve banks?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Yes.

Mr. HOLLISTER. The gentleman is correct, if that is so, but I would like to have the gentleman explain it in his own time. I do not think that it is mandatory.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Are the open-market operations confined to Government bonds? Are there not other classes of security?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Yes; there are. I so stated.

Mr. CAVICCHIA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Yes.

Mr. CAVICCHIA. I should like to answer the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. HANCOCK] by saying that it does not make any difference to me whether the Government bonds now held by the Federal Reserve banks were bought during the Hoover administration or any other administration. Politics does not enter into my calculations in considering this or any other bill. I am looking forward to the dangers that may come to the banks if the national debt increases and the banks are forced to take billions of dollars of Government bonds, with a consequent drop in value, which would again close our banks.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Let me pursue that further. In regard to this particular provision about open-market operations, I started to differentiate them as they work at the present time, and as they are provided for in this particular section. At the present time there is an open-market committee, which is appointed by the governors of the Federal Reserve banks. That open-market committee may make recommendations to the Federal Reserve Board as to open-market operations, and if approved by the Federal Reserve Board it is then passed on to the various regional banks, who have a certain length of time in which to state whether or not they care to take a part in those operations, and if they decline to take part, they may not be compelled to do so. Under the present bill, first, there is a greater control by the Federal Reserve Board over the management of the Federal Reserve banks, next a greater control by the Executive over the Federal Reserve Board, and now here a greater control by the Federal Control Board over the credit resources of the country.

I do not know how many of you know that open operations are conducted through the New York Federal Reserve Bank, which acts for all of the other banks, and when it conducts these operations it notifies the various banks pro rata through the country as to how much they must contribute, and the banks in every part of the country, the very banks whose resources are held by the Federal Reserve banks, will see their money syphoned off to New York, to be used in the New York money market and the New York bond market to acquire bonds under the order of the Federal Reserve Board in Washington.

Let me point out something more about the Federal Reserve Board. It is a Board consisting of eight. The Secretary of the Treasury is ex officio a member. He is appointed by the President of the United States. The Comptroller of the Currency is ex officio a member, and, while he is appointed for a 5-year term, and therefore his term is not coterminous with that of the President, nevertheless he is considered an administrative officer. Next, there is the Governor of the Board, who is appointed by the President, designated from the Board, and under this law may be undesignated; next, the Vice Governor, who may be designated and undesignated. Thus, of your Board of eight, you have at least four who are very much under the control of the Executive. I am pointing that out because I am trying to build up in your minds the picture of the power which this bill will give.

Mr. REILLY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Yes.

Mr. REILLY. Is it not a fact that there is nothing new in this bill about open-market operations of the Federal Reserve System, except the authority to manipulate it is taken from the Federal Reserve banks and put with the Federal Reserve Board?

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is correct. The Federal Reserve banks had a right to decide whether or not to use their own resources in the acquisition of or in the sale of bonds. If the gentleman thinks there is no great difference between using his own money to buy what he wants and having somebody else telling him what he may buy, well and good.

Mr. REILLY. I am pointing out the only difference is taking it from people who do not function and giving it to a body that will function.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Does the gentleman know where there has been any attempt made by the Federal Reserve Board to have open-market operations carried out where the banks refused?

Mr. REILLY. I do know that under the old system the Federal Reserve Board had no power to make them function.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Did it ever try?

Mr. REILLY. I am not familiar with that proceeding.

Mr. HOLLISTER. If the gentleman will check on it, he will find it was the same old thing. It was the failure of the human equation. There is no particular reason to think that by giving more power to people who failed in the past that they will do any better.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. WOLCOTT. The principal difference between the system we set up under this act and the old system is that it is mandatory upon the banks, under this system, to avail themselves of the Federal Reserve Board, while under the old system they were allowed to use some discretion in the investment of the people's money.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Is it not also a fact that under this section, instead of an open-market committee of 12 selected by the banks themselves, there is a committee of 5, 3 appointed by the President and 2 by the banks?

Mr. HOLLISTER. No. The gentleman has read the original bill. That is another thing which I am glad the gentleman has brought out. The original bill as brought in provided for an open-market committee of 5 members, 3 to be members of the Federal Reserve Board, 1 the Governor, and 2 to be appointed by the regional Federal Reserve banks. Therefore the regional banks would have had some say in the operation of that committee. Under Mr. Eccles' suggestion, later submitted to the committee, the open-market committee is the Federal Reserve Board, acting entirely as a board. A bare majority of the Board, even a bare majority of a quorum, could order these open-market operations.

While I am on that point I would like to devote a minute or two to discussing the really great danger in a provision of this kind. We have heard a great deal about fiat money. Most of us know that it merely means money without anything behind it. In putting out money of that kind, naturally, the issue of $2 would cause no harm whatever; issuing $2,000 would not cause any harm; or, perhaps, $2,000,000; but when you get to a certain point and when the people realize that such money is being issued indefinitely, with nothing behind it, the value of that money goes down and prices go up correspondingly.

There is no difference between the financing of the Government by the issuing of fiat money in that way in an indefinite amount and financing the Government by bonds which unwilling buyers are compelled to take. Both are obligations of the Government. One carries interest and the other does not. The reason a bond carries interest is because the bond is the obligation of the Government, sold to a willing buyer, who buys it in the open market freely, at arm's length, from his savings, the same way as he buys the obligation of a private organization. That is what a Government bond is. That is why the Government bond carries interest, because the investor is willing to lend this money to the Government for the return he receives. When the Government is in such position that it may compel buyers against their will to take a Government obligation with interest, there is no sense in the Government putting out such obligation. It might just as well face the fact that this Government obligation with interest is no better than a greenback forced down the throat of a man who has to take it. What democratic people have fought from the very beginning of time has been the attempt by the ruler to make a forced loan on the people. When a government is in a position that it may so use the credit resources of the country to force people to take its obligations against the desires of those who have saved their money, those who have established these credit resources, then, I say, we are going as far down the road to tyranny as it is possible to go.

You may think I am conjuring up a lot of strawmen to knock down. You may say this will never happen, but I say the danger of it is that when a government begins to pump out fiat money, everybody knows it. When the Government, however, under the powers of a bill like this, may quietly compel the banks to take bonds which they do not want, the Government credit may have disappeared quite a while before the people wake up and realize what has happened. That is the chief vice in this particular provision.

Mr. HALLECK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. HALLECK. Is there any reason to suppose that these six members of the Federal Reserve Board will know anything more about what the banks ought to have in order to be safe, than the people who are operating the banks themselves?

Mr. HOLLISTER. No. All history shows that. The gentleman is bringing out what I have tried my best to say a number of times, that we cannot, by a change in machinery, get away from the human equation. Any system that we set up is going to be only just so good as are the men who run it.

Mr. HALLECK. Many of the national banks in my city got into trouble because the examiners required them to set up what they call a secondary reserve. They made them buy a lot of bonds. Then the bottom dropped out of the market.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HOLLISTER] has expired.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 15 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. HALLECK. The bottom dropped out of the value of those bonds, that secondary reserve that they had been required to buy, and by reason of that they found that those bonds were the worst asset they had; that they had taken a greater loss on those than they had in the loans they had put out in their own community. Might not that same thing happen if this principle is applied as intended in this section of the law?

Mr. HOLLISTER. It might very well.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I just want to refer back to section 205. I may have misunderstood the gentleman. I thought the gentleman said that the bill now before the House did not carry a provision for the selection of representatives by the banks to constitute the open-market advisory committee?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I should have touched on that. The sentatives by the banks to constitute the open-market open-market advisory committee has no power whatsoever. The open-market advisory committee set out in section 12 (a), page 51, is solely advisory. The Federal Reserve Board, before ordering open-market operations or changing the rediscount rate or the amount of reserve, is required to consult with the open-market advisory committee; but the gentleman knows that consultation does not necessarily mean that they will follow the instructions of that committee.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. I think from some of the remarks which the gentleman has made that several members of the committee have drawn an erroneous conclusion. The gentleman does not intend, I know, to convey the impression that the member banks are in any way affected by the policies of the Federal Reserve Board respecting the purchase of Government bonds.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Of course, the Federal Reserve Board cannot compel the member banks to use their own resources which they hold at the time; but do not forget the member banks have their reserves and excess reserves deposited with the regional Federal Reserve banks, and those in turn constitute the resources of the regional banks; and those resources over and above the gold requirement to which the gentleman has referred, must be used by the Federal Reserve Board for the acquisition of Government securities if required. Is that correct?

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Yes; that is true, but I do not want the impression to get about that the Federal Reserve Board can directly tell a member bank, as distinguished from the Federal Reserve bank, what it must do relative to the purchase of Government bonds.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I meant to give no such impression. I am glad the gentleman corrected me if I did give such an impression.

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. As between currency and bonds, does not the issuance of interest-bearing bonds entail a greater obligation upon the Government than the issuance of money?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Certainly.

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. And under the general rule and custom of funding bonds, is it not a fact that before the bonds were paid it would require a double amount of money to pay principal and interest?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I do not quite understand what the gentleman means by a double amount of money. I assume he refers to the interest on the bonds.

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. It would take a great deal more money to pay off the bonds, principal and interest, when they finally are paid off than it would take to redeem a similar issue of currency. Is not this true?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Is it not likewise true when the gentleman borrows money from a friend?

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. I am not asking the gentleman that; I am asking the gentleman whether it is not a fact that it costs a great deal more eventually to issue interest-bearing bonds than it does to issue money?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Certainly.

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. And, under the rules, the practice and the custom of funding these bonds, would it not require about double the amount of the face of the bonds by the time they are ultimately retired?

Mr. HOLLISTER. It depends on the interest rate and the maturity. At 5-percent compound interest the principal doubles in about 14 years.

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. These bonds are not always paid at maturity; they are generally refunded.

Mr. HOLLISTER. We hope that all Government bonds will be paid ultimately. We are beginning to be doubtful, however.

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. It would require a greater obligation.

Mr. HOLLISTER. If the gentleman would like me to go into the difference between the issuance of money and the issuance of bonds, I shall be pleased to at some future time. I merely wanted to touch on it at the present time; I would rather not go into it now.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Are we to understand that under the law as it exists at the present time the Federal Reserve bank of Kansas City or of San Francisco is not required to abide by the policy of the open-market committee as recommended by the Federal Reserve Board?

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is correct.

Mr. CRAWFORD. And do we understand further that under the pending bill if the situation is such in New York City and along the Atlantic seaboard that the new open-market policy board recommends a certain policy be followed with reference to open-market operations, that in the event similar conditions did not exist in Kansas City and on the Pacific coast, the Federal Reserve banks at these points could be forced to comply with the policy set up more for the benefit of the Atlantic seaboard than the Pacific seaboard?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Absolutely; it might be just the wrong thing for the western coast, but under the proposed plan each section of the country would contribute its proportionate share to the open-market operations ordered by the Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The gentleman started to tell us a few minutes ago what open-market operations consist of, but he was interrupted. If the gentleman has time I wish he would complete that statement for the RECORD.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Open-market operations consist of the buying and selling of Government obligations in the open market and also the buying and selling of certain other specified kinds of obligations, usually acceptances and paper of the same kind which is now discountable at Federal Reserve banks.

Mr. PIERCE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. PIERCE. Is it not necessary to support the price of Government bonds until such time as we can balance the Budget through higher taxation?

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is a hard question to answer. Let us put it the other way: Would it not be better to balance the Budget as soon as possible so as not to have to issue so many bonds the price of which we may be called upon to support?

Mr. PIERCE. I would vote to balance the Budget today, but in the meantime the price of Government bonds must be supported.

Mr. HOLLISTER. The gentlemen should use his influence to prevent the creation of more spending agencies.

Mr. PIERCE. I would go the greatest distance to support the market for Government bonds. No greater disaster could come than to have United States bonds drop in value. Until the time comes when we can balance the Budget by taxation I think it is absolutely necessary to support the market for Government bonds.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I understand the gentleman's point of view.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. GIFFORD. I would like to have the gentleman continue that discussion a little, as to whether he thinks the Government should be a preferred customer in the markets; should the Government have the preference over all others?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Answering the gentleman, I do not think the Government should be able to compete in a preferred position with private investors in the sale of its bonds. I believe when the time comes that the Government credit is such that its bonds cannot be sold freely in the open market, that only one of two things could happen: Either the Government would have to balance its Budget immediately or it would have to declare frankly that its credit was impaired and that it was at least partially bankrupt. I hope that day will never come, but I want to be sure that all the danger signals that may be set will appear to warn this country that we are going along the wrong track. We ought not by some kind of subterfuge permit the spending authorities to run by those danger signals so that we get into a dangerous situation before we know where we are.

Mr. GIFFORD. The gentleman made a very frank admission to the effect the Government should have a preferential place in this matter.

Mr. HOLLISTER. The gentleman is not referring to me?

Mr. GIFFORD. No; the gentleman from Oregon. He made a very happy suggestion, so far as I am concerned. I would like to ask the gentleman if he would pursue this subject and say whether the Government should be allowed to peg its bonds and put other people in jail for doing the same thing with their securities?

Mr. HOLLISTER. The gentleman will have plenty of time later, and I hope he will develop that matter.

Mr. GIFFORD. The gentleman is so much more able than I am in this respect that I hoped he would discuss this subject of whether the Government should peg its own securities. I hoped he might arouse the conscience of the House by so doing.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I have tried my best to arouse that conscience.

Mr. Chairman, turning to section 206, I wish to point out to the Members that this is a liberalizing provision, inflationary perhaps in its implications, because it permits the rediscounting of any commercial, agricultural, or industrial paper, and permits the making of advances by Federal Reserve banks to member banks on their own notes secured by any sound assets. I am going to take only a little time in a discussion of that section, because while I am doubtful of the wisdom of the section, it is not one of the particular steps to which I object, which builds up governmental control over the credit resources of our country. It is a permissive provision only. A properly run Federal Reserve bank, even though given this authority, would not necessarily follow it to its logical conclusion and would make its own rules as to lending on sound assets, and rediscounting. While I say it is perhaps inflationary and has some dangerous implications, I should prefer not to tie it in with the general argument I am making against the increase in centralized control over the credit resources of the country.

Section 207 seems perfectly satisfactory.

Section 208 is another provision which I do not particularly fear. It provides that hereafter the extra 60-percent coverage over and above the 40-percent gold-certificate coverage existing at the present time on Federal notes, instead of having to be commercial paper of a certain nature, or even Government bonds, under the emergency provisions which Congress recently enacted, this additional coverage may be in general assets of the Federal Reserve banks. I do not much fear under this that a large amount of unnecessary currency will go out.

After all, the tangible currency which we use from day to day in our transactions will only go out as it is wanted by the people. There are a great many who have some sort of a theory that currency may be pumped out in some way by the Federal Reserve banks under existing law. There is no particular advantage in a Federal Reserve bank putting out additional notes. The Federal Reserve banks put their notes out merely as people calling for money want them. If you go into a bank and borrow a thousand dollars, you do not take the thousand dollars out in Federal Reserve notes. You simply want a credit set up on the books of the bank for a thousand dollars and you in turn use it by means of checks. This liberalization, which permits the extra 60 percent over and above gold coverage to be in general sound assets of Federal Reserve banks, does not particularly worry me, and again, is not one of those provisions to which I have referred which builds up control over the credit resources of the country.

Mr. McCORMACK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. Does the gentleman believe that the present law should continue with reference to the powers of the Federal Reserve Board and the various boards of the 12 districts?

Mr. HOLLISTER. What does the gentleman mean? There are some 80 or 90 pages covering that matter.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is true.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Does the gentleman mean to ask me whether I think any changes should be made in the act?

Mr. McCORMACK. I will make it more direct. Does the gentleman believe there should be a more centralized power some place?

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is a pretty hard question to answer.

Mr. McCORMACK. I am seeking information.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I realize the gentleman's attitude.

Mr. McCORMACK. I am not trying to embarrass the gentleman.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I am answering the gentleman in full confidence. It is a question on which I should like to have the opinion of the best experts after a long period of study.

I think, in certain aspects, there might be a more centralized control in the event that centralized control could be exercised by a body which was not in any way tied in with the administrative and executive policies of any particular administration or under any particular political control.

Mr. McCORMACK. I was not going to follow that up by asking the gentleman whether the origin was from a political, governmental, or bank angle, but my inquiry was directed more to whether or not the gentleman felt there should be a more centralized control some place.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I am glad the gentleman asked the question, but I am frank to say it is one on which I am not prepared to make a complete answer. It brings out very clearly what a complicated subject this is.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for an additional 15 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, answering the gentleman from Massachusetts further, I feel that with an absolutely independent central board it would be safe to grant additional powers; that with a board that is subject to outside control, as the present Board is, the powers now given are as much as should be given and perhaps go a little further than should be granted. But as to exactly what power should be given and how the board should be removed from all control and the checks and balances which should be set up, it makes such a complicated subject that I am not prepared to say right here exactly what should be done.

This is one reason I believe that all the provisions to which I particularly object should be removed now and should be retained for further consideration when Congress next meets.

Mr. McCORMACK. In other words, it really resolves itself into whether the controlling influence should be the source or the origin of the controlling influence or in the Federal Reserve Board in the event of a more centralization of power.

Mr. HOLLISTER. That and, also, how far that controlling influence could go or how far it is perhaps dangerous to go. With the best kind of a board, set up as far removed as possible from any political control, it still might be dangerous to give too much power, because of the fact that the regional situation is so much better known to those who conduct a regional bank than might be known to a central board in Washington.

Mr. McCORMACK. The thought I have—and I say this with some reservation, because, not being on the committee, naturally I cannot devote as much attention to it as the members of the committee—is that commercial banking is now national, and probably one of the weaknesses of our present banking system is the 49 charter-granting and 49 supervisory bodies.

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is a great weakness; I agree with the gentleman.

Mr. FIESINGER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. FIESINGER. I do not want the gentleman to think I am at all facetious, because I am asking this question in perfectly good faith. Has the gentleman any notions about gold redemption?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I have a lot of notions about it, but I do not think it is pertinent at this time, and I do not believe I ought to take the time of the Committee in discussing that. I shall be pleased to discuss it with the gentleman some other time.

Section 209, I believe, is the next most dangerous provision to that governing the open-market operations.

Section 209 gives the Federal Reserve Board the power to change the reserve requirements in various classes of cities. You know that today there are central Reserve cities, which are the chief cities where the Federal Reserve banks are set up; then there are Reserve cities where the branches of the central banks are set up in the various districts; and then there are " other cities ", as they are called. There are these three types and there is a different reserve requirement in each one. Thirteen percent is the reserve requirement in the central Reserve city, 10 percent in the Reserve city, and 7 percent in the outlying districts—this is on demand deposits; and 3 percent is required in all cities on time deposits.

At the present time these requirements may be changed by a vote of five members of the Federal Reserve Board, who must declare an emergency and must get the approval of the President, thus making it not a particularly easy thing to do quickly.

Under this change a bare majority of a bare quorum—a quorum being 5 and a majority of a quorum being 3—3 members of the Board at any time could very materially change the whole banking set-up of the country.

I do not know whether you know what the implications are of a change in the reserves which must be maintained by the banks. If you increase the reserves to 100 percent, you would, of course, stop all banking functions from a lending point of view, because a bank would have to call all its loans in order to put its resources into gold or lawful money or something which constituted a reserve, and would have to cease doing any banking whatsoever. To the extent that you reduce reserve requirements to that extent you open the way for almost unlimited credit expansion, inflation of one kind or another. Therefore, the power which is granted by this particular section is perfectly enormous and runs the whole gamut from absolute deflation down to the highest kind of inflation.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. What is the gentleman's understanding of existing law with respect to changes in the reserves?

Mr. HOLLISTER. The existing law, if the gentleman heard my statement, is that five members of the Federal Reserve Board on the declaration of an emergency and with the approval of the President, may change them. Is this the gentleman's understanding?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. My understanding is that in this clause of the Thomas amendment it is stated that in case of danger of credit expansion the reserves may be increased or decreased. Of course, there will never be any occasion to decrease reserves in case of danger of credit expansion.

Mr. HOLLISTER. No; absolutely not. The gentleman is correct.

Section 210 deals with real-estate loans. I shall touch on this briefly because of the fact that again it is permissive and not compulsory. It is liberalizing and, in my opinion, it is somewhat dangerous, because the failure of a great many of our banks in the past few years was due to the fact they had too many real-estate loans. This permits national banks, as against the present law under which they may only lend up to 25 percent of their capital and surplus, or 50 percent of their time deposits, whichever is greater, and then only on 50 percent valuation—this section changes that and permits them to lend 100 percent of their capital and surplus, or 60 percent of their time and savings deposits, whichever is greater, and permits them to make 60 percent loans. So it is merely a liberalization which a bad banker might take advantage of in order to fill up with too much real estate.

But let me point this out to you, to show again what is in the mind of some of the people who wrote this legislation. When this was brought in to us by Governor Eccles, when he had amended the first draft which came in, it provided that the lending on real estate should be governed solely by rules and regulations of the Federal Reserve Board. In other words, the Federal Reserve Board could, if it cared to do so, issue a regulation to the effect that all the resources outside of a national bank, of the reserves which had to be retained, might be put into real estate, and Governor Eccles said very frankly that one of the ways in which he thought the banking system should cooperate was the relieving of the real-estate mortgage situation in the country, a view which is not in accordance whatsoever with sound banking. Governor Eccles, all the way through his testimony, showed that what he was thinking of were certain broad, economic policies, certain things which it might be wise to do from the point of view of the economic situation in the country. He would be willing to use the banking system, notwithstanding what the results might be to the banking system, as a vehicle to accomplish certain ends—ends the wisdom of which might be highly problematical or might be greatly disapproved of by wise bankers.

Now, I have gone through this title in detail. I do not believe that anyone listening to me has any doubt about how I feel and what my reasons are for discussing the bill in the way I have. I shall attempt, as well as possible, to improve title II on the floor. There are some good things in title II, and no one will say that it should be rejected as a whole.

I shall do my best to try to strike out three or four dangerous provisions in this title. If unable to perfect title II in any proper respect, I am in hopes that we will be able by a motion to recommit to take out in a lump those provisions which give the additional power over the operation of the Federal Reserve System.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I yield.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. What would be the gentleman's attitude if the same powers were conferred on the Federal Reserve System free from Government control?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I would hesitate to answer that right now. It depends on where the control might be. I do not want to put the control into the hands of the great city banks, but I do not want either to put the banks under political control.

Now, I want to point this out, and I wish everyone would regard this statement with the greatest of care: There has been no showing, no evidence whatever, before the committee of any immediate need for this legislation. There has been no emergency shown to exist. The various provisions to which I object can very well be dropped until a year from now, when there is plenty of time to consider them.

I am not talking about delay for the purpose of holding up legislation. It may be that legislation along these lines will ultimately prove wise. A commission to study this question could have upon it representatives of all the different theories of banking, all of the different theories of monetary control, and could have upon it various Members of the Senate and of the House, and also independent economists. With such a commission, and with the study that could be given this legislation, perhaps we could revamp the Federal Reserve System in such a way that it would be a vehicle for proper banking facilities of the country for many years to come. [Applause.]

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Yes.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I want to follow up what I asked the gentleman a few moments ago by saying further that undoubtedly the gentleman divined what was back of my question. Many of us regard money as the most vital function in government, next to preserving a stable government, and the question in our minds is whether power over money and credit can be intrusted to private control and direction and yet such power be exercised in the interest of the people as a whole. The gentleman has made a most lucid and informative statement of this bill. There are two questions in it. One is the powers conferred, and the other is where the exercise of the power is lodged. It strikes my mind that in the mind of the gentleman and those who take his view of this legislation, his objection is rather to where the power is lodged under the bill rather than the increased power extended to the Federal Reserve System.

Mr. HOLLISTER. That is chiefly it; although, as I said to one of the other gentlemen, that is a question I would not want to settle finally at this time. It may very well be that some slight extension of power would be wise in the interest of greater coordination, but I would hesitate to answer that definitely.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I am one of those who have always believed—and that is for a longer time than the gentleman has been on earth——

Mr. HOLLISTER. The gentleman flatters me——

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. That the monetary system of the country has been privately controlled for the benefit of the banking system of the country and not in the interest of the people generally. I believe the time has come to curb that system and that it would be nothing less than a hollow gesture to pass a law here that would still leave the same control in the banks over the money and the credit of the country that has existed up to this time and that exists now.

Mr. HOLLISTER. The gentleman is opening up a very large subject, which I think is worth careful consideration. I think there is a lot in what the gentleman says. I think there is great danger, however, in leaping from one extreme to another, and political control—real political control—over the banking system is a good deal worse than bad private control. I hope we do not have to have either. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has again expired.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 hour to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. HANCOCK].

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, this bill marks a happy and wise compromise between an outright central bank and the present dual system of irresponsible control in central banking. It proposes, however, a recapture on the part of the Congress of its powers to coin money and regulate the value thereof. If enacted into law, the citadel of financial control in America will be removed from its present location in Wall Street, in the city of New York, to offices in the Capital of the United States, and placed in the hands of responsible men of prestige and authority, responsive only to the duly elected representatives of the people.

My good friend the able and conscientious Representative from the State of Ohio [Mr. HOLLISTER] has made a clear and splendid explanation of the various sections of title II of the bill. I regret very much that his interpretation of the meaning and purposes of many of the sections is somewhat erroneous. I know that he believes conscientiously in the view that he has related to you. You will recall, however, that when the great Federal Reserve System was set up it involved a terrific struggle on the part of the Congress and the people to have representation in the matter of control of monetary policies and banking in America. There are groups today who are criticizing this legislation who directed their venom, vengefulness, and opposition to the Federal deposit insurance law.

This bill is like all Gaul—divided into three parts. Title I and title III seem to have met the approval of the bankers and the business men of the country. I shall have little to say at this time on these titles. There are several amendments I want to offer and perhaps debate at the proper time under the 5-minute rule.

Title I, briefly, makes permanent the present temporary plan for insurance of deposits, setting as the maximum insurable amount $5,000. This covers approximately 98 percent of the individual deposits in the banks of the country. In lieu of the uncertain contingent assessment, a fixed annual assessment of one-eighth of 1 percent is provided, not upon the insured deposits, as exists in the present law, but upon the total deposit liability of all insured banks.

Mr. DARDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I will be glad to yield.

Mr. DARDEN. I do not want to interrupt the gentleman, but why does the gentleman feel it necessary to levy a charge on insured deposits? As I understand it, the one-eighth of 1 percent is now levied against all deposits in insured banks, rather than against just those deposits which are insured. Am I correct in that?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Under the present law the assessment lies against only insured deposits, which means that the small banks, whose deposits do not run much in excess of $5,000, are carrying their own burden, whereas under this law as now proposed, considering the question a Nation-wide one rather than applying to individual banks, the assessment will apply to the total deposit liability of all banks under the System.

Other important changes are made in title I, which will facilitate the effective operation of the Federal deposit insurance law. It is my candid opinion that no measure which has been enacted by Congress during this administration is entitled to a larger measure of gratitude on the part of the American people than the Federal deposit insurance law.

Title III deals with certain technical amendments to the various banking laws of the country. The suggested amendments are based upon the experience of the Comptroller's Office and are offered to you with the belief that their enactment will better enable the proper administration of the banking laws through that office.

Title II is the heart of this legislation. Those who would delay its consideration today, in my opinion, are resorting to a time-worn method of killing the legislation. The Congress has studied this question year in and year out. Some of those who suggest that we delay consideration of it until a commission of appropriate character can go further into a consideration of it admit that that suggestion is brought forward for the purpose of delay, which some of them honestly believe to be eminently desirable. Their criticism of title II seems to have come all from one source originally. The National Association of Manufacturers, the American Liberty League, the United States Chamber of Commerce all denounce title II, and in effect say that it represents not a desire to improve a central banking system of America but to create a politically controlled machine, in order that politics may play an important part. I deny those allegations. There is no suggestion of politics in this measure. I can prove to those present here that under the terms of this bill there is greater independence between the Executive and the Federal Reserve Board than exists today. I can also prove under this bill that local autonomy and self-control of the regional banks is increased under this bill, and such arguments to the contrary cannot be established.

Mr. GIFFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I yield gladly.

Mr. GIFFORD. We are going to hear this matter that there is no politics in this bill raised many times. Now, let us be fair about it. I ask the gentleman to answer this question, and I think he will answer it fairly. If this bill was presented when Andrew W. Mellon was Secretary of the Treasury and on the Federal Reserve Board, how many votes would he have gotten on the Democratic side?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I do not know. I will be glad to poll the Members for the gentleman.

Mr. GIFFORD. I ask the gentleman fairly: Would he himself have voted for this authority if those conditions existed?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I absolutely would.

Mr. GIFFORD. I was sure the gentleman would answer fairly. I give him great credit for it. I will try to believe that there are others who feel like he does, but later I may have to express my own views on the matter.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I want to make it clear that there is nothing in this bill designed to regulate banking, per se.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I will be glad to yield.

Mr. COX. If control of a system of banking and issue must be within the Government, then how is it possible to put an institution, which is to exercise control in the name of the Government, beyond the reach of politics, if by "politics" the gentleman means the duty and power of Congress to deal with the subject?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. By "politics", I will say to the gentleman from Georgia, I mean dealing with social and economic problems. That is what banking is for.

Mr. MOTT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I yield.

Mr. MOTT. I do not quite understand that. If I understood the gentleman correctly, he said there was no politics in it, and then he said that politics, in its broad sense——

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. My first statement referred to that narrow conception of "politics."

Mr. MOTT. I understand, but politics used in its proper sense; that is, the machinery by which the Government is operated——

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. In the sense that a real statesman ought to use it.

Mr. MOTT. Then politics, in that legitimate and broad sense, and the business of banking as it will be carried on under this act, do meet; and it is also the purpose of this act to have the banking operations of the country controlled by those people who are going to constitute a board for the promulgation of economic policies of the Government, and make banking operations fit that policy. Is that correct?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Coordinate with it, I would say is the answer.

Title II of the bill accomplishes two important purposes. One is to clarify and fix definitely once and forever the responsibility involved in the administration of the Federal Reserve System.

The other purpose is to improve the administration and credit machinery which the Federal Reserve System sets up. Under this bill, if enacted into law, the control of the volume and cost of money is definitely placed in a governmental board appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

The expansion and contraction of credit, Mr. Chairman, in its last analysis is nothing more than the buying and selling of money. When the central system buys governments it is increasing the supply of money and decreasing its cost; when it sells governments it is diminishing the supply of money and increasing the cost, either of which operation affects the purchasing power of the people. It is the most important function of government and it is the exercise of the sovereign power of a central government.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I yield.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I did not want to interrupt the gentleman's train of thought, but during the time I was addressing the Committee the gentleman propounded a rather pointed question to me, intimating that the Thomas amendment had given powers to the Federal Reserve Board to require Federal Reserve banks to acquire Government obligations. I thought I knew the answer at the time the gentleman asked his question, but I did not want to give a categorical denial to the gentleman when he had made a direct assertion. I have the Thomas amendment before me. There is nothing in the Thomas amendment which gives any power whatsoever to the Federal Reserve Board, or anyone else, to compel Federal Reserve banks to acquire Government bonds. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to secure the approval of the Federal Reserve Board, and if the Federal Reserve banks will agree, then to enter into agreements with them by which they will acquire Government bonds. There is absolutely no compulsory feature in it.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I read it a little differently than does the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. Chairman, the heart of this bill, as I have just said, revolves around the operations of the open-market committee; but, Mr. Chairman, there is not a single new principle introduced into this legislation. Every power provided for in this bill exists today in the present law; but there is a transfer of power to take the control of the volume and the cost of money from private hands and place it in Government hands, where, in my opinion, it should have been for the past 20 years. [Applause.]

Under title II there are four major proposals: One has to do with the combination of the governorship and chairmanship of the Federal Reserve banks. It has been found that a dual organization works against the welfare of the Nation as a whole, and that by combining these two offices the Government will effectuate a saving of more than $400,000 a year. The second major proposal is to modify the determination of the open-market policy. The third proposal is to transfer the determination of eligibility from the statute to regulations to be prescribed by the Board. The fourth is to liberalize the provisions with respect to real-estate loans.

The suggestion has been made that under this bill the Federal Reserve Board will be able to force the banks to purchase Government obligations. In my opinion, this is absurd, but personally I believe that in times of great depression and in times of danger and war the Government ought to have the right through its central system to insure an adequate supply of credit at reasonable cost. Let me ask you this one question, and you answer it in your own minds: Suppose this Congress tomorrow should appropriate $1,000,000,000 for public use; suppose it should say to the Secretary of the Treasury, "We want $1,000,000,000; the Government needs it"; suppose the banks would not be willing to buy the bonds of the Government; do you mean to tell me that this Congress has lost its sovereign power? Do you mean to tell me that private bankers have a monopoly upon the creation of money? If the banks would not buy the bonds the Government would create its own money and finance this Government. [Applause.] What else could they do?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I yield.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Does the gentleman consider that sound financing?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. It would depend upon the purpose for which used. Under those circumstances, yes.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I yield.

Mr. HALLECK. The gentleman heard the statement of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HOLLISTER] regarding his idea as to the proposition that to force the buying of bonds would be exactly similar to the issuance of fiat money. Does the gentleman believe there is any real distinction between the two propositions?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. My views with respect to money matters are pretty liberal and, I hope, sound. It has been very difficult for me to determine the real distinction between fiat bonds and fiat notes when both of them have nothing behind them but the full faith and credit of the United States Government. [Applause.]

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I yield.

Mr. PATMAN. The gentleman stated, if I understood him correctly, that the Federal Government would save $400,000 a year by abolishing the office of the Federal Reserve agent and placing the duties upon a man to be designated governor of the Federal Reserve bank. I do not understand how the Government could possibly save anything when no profits, not even excess profits, of the Federal Reserve banks go into the Treasury, but all the profits go into the surplus funds of the banks.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I know the gentleman from Texas fully understood what I meant by that, because, even though the law does say that the profits shall go to surplus, in case of liquidation of the banks all of it would go into the Treasury.

Mr. PATMAN. In case a bank were entirely liquidated, the Government will get what is left.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Yes.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I yield.

Mr. MOTT. The gentleman made the statement that the contention that under this bill the banks could be compelled to buy Government securities was absurd. I asked the gentleman how he reconciles that statement with the language of subsection (c) on page 52 of the bill.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Which requires that they shall cooperate?

Mr. MOTT. Not merely that they shall cooperate. The language is short; I will read it:

> Each Federal Reserve bank shall purchase or sell obligations of the United States, bankers' acceptances, bills of exchange, and other obligations of the kinds and maturities made eligible for purchase under the provisions of section 14 of this act to such extent and in such manner as may be required by the Federal Reserve Board in order to effectuate the open-market policies adopted by the Board from time to time under the provisions of this section and each Federal Reserve bank shall cooperate fully, in every way, in making such policies effective.

If this language is not absolutely compulsory, then I do not know how to interpret language.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Let me ask you a question in reply: Suppose they would not do it, how could it be enforced? It is purely a matter of providing a means for smooth, coordinated effort in behalf of the Nation as a whole. It is essential to the carrying out effectively such policy as may be prescribed by the Board for the attainment of the objectives under the mandate.

Mr. MOTT. I may say to the gentleman that I have not examined this bill for the penal parts of it, so I am not able to say off-hand what would be the remedy should a bank refuse, but I dare say, if the bill is well drawn, the remedy is in the bill. It should be in there or else this language does not mean a thing.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. The original philosophy of the Federal Reserve Board or system contemplated that the Board here would exercise supervisory control over the regional banks. If that was not the purpose and philosophy, will the gentleman tell me why have a central board in Washington?

Mr. MOTT. That was not my question.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I would like to continue. I have given the gentleman my opinion. He may differ with me.

Mr. MOTT. Then does the gentleman go further and say that under such circumstances this subdivision (c) could as well be taken out? If it cannot be enforced, why require it?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I think it ought to be so worded that you could under extreme conditions, where the Nation's welfare is endangered, force them to finance the Government's operations.

Mr. MOTT. Will the gentleman agree to an amendment which would limit the compulsion to that particular emergency situation? If he would, I could go a long way with him.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I do not know. The committee has studied this bill for 9 weeks and everyone who had an idea or thought was given an opportunity to present and advance it. We have discussed each section back and forth, and I am inclined to go down the line for this bill, with one or two exceptions, because I believe in its purposes with all my heart.

Mr. GIFFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. GIFFORD. If the gentleman will read the record, he will find an answer to the question he just asked. Governor Eccles said it would be too bad for those banks who did not cooperate.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, we know in this country there is no source to which the banks can turn in time of distress for money except to the central reserve system. That is the purpose in having a central reserve system. There is no other authority except the Federal Government that can issue money. If this act had been on the statute books in 1932, we would never, in my opinion, have had a bank holiday in America; and, notwithstanding the statement made by my good friend the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. CAVICCHIA] the other day, that under the bill we are likely to have another holiday, I prophesy that not in your lifetime nor in mine will we see another banking holiday in America if this act is placed upon the statute books, because the things of sound value in this country whether they be liquid according to orthodox banking may be used to support currency and Federal notes.

One of the most important provisions or proposals in the act has to do with the question of the eligibility of paper. There are those who hold the orthodox view that no paper should be eligible unless it is self-liquidating and this liquidation can be accomplished within a short period of time. I need not relate to you the changes that have come in our economic system. You know what has happened. You know the whole system has undergone a radical change. Small banks throughout the country, which this particular section will help and which it is designed to help, may come to the Federal Reserve banks, if this bill is passed, and secure accommodations which they could never secure before. The small country banks are, as they should be, really for the first time put on an equality with the big ones. The old idea of commercial paper or such paper as can be liquidated almost overnight has been the greatest curse to business activity in America. It has done more to force banks to remove their support from local communities than any other one thing. I hear the orthodox boys talk about liquidity. When they refer to liquidity they are merely talking about a listed bond or stock. I contend that we must reemphasize the value of real-estate mortgages in this country and restore those securities to their erstwhile high state.

Mr. KENNEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. KENNEY. Is there anything in this bill providing for the old bill of exchange?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I do not think there is.

Mr. KENNEY. Can the gentleman tell us why we abandoned in this country the bill of exchange?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I have not considered the matter. There was no discussion of it before the committee.

Mr. KENNEY. The bill of exchange is in vogue in England and in France?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I understand the gentleman is correct as to England, but I do not know anything about the financial situation in France.

Mr. Chairman, it has been frequently asserted in newspaper and financial reports that the failure of a great many banks in America was due primarily to frozen real-estate paper. Such assertion is absolutely false, based upon the record.

An examination of failures of banks throughout the country during the recent debacle proves conclusively that in those areas where the banks carried the most real-estate paper the failures were less, and that more failures took place in this country as the result of depreciated bonds and stocks than because of frozen real-estate paper. Upon reflection this is easy to understand, because when the examiner came around to examine the portfolio of the bank, his estimate or appraisal of the value of securities was usually fixed by the quoted price on the New York Stock Exchange rather than by the intrinsic value of the stock or bond, whichever he was appraising.

Here is good news, I am sure, to all of you.

Under the provisions of this bill any sound asset, mortgage, bond, or any other thing representing sound value may be used as a means for borrowing from the Federal Reserve System. This does not mean, as some critics have stated, that the doors are being opened wide to unsound paper. Emphasis under this bill would be placed on substance rather than form or maturity. In these rapidly changing times it is necessary, wise, and well that we vest in this Board the discretion to regulate what paper will be eligible and what paper will be ineligible.

Mr. DARDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. DARDEN. Are there not certain sections of this country in which there is very little eligible paper available for banking?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. The gentleman is correct. The record shows that in 1929 less than 12 percent of the total assets of banks belonging to the Federal Reserve System was eligible for rediscount. The record shows that less than 8 percent, under the rigid, narrow rules of eligibility, is eligible today. This finding, I understand, was made by the banks themselves and is therefore probably a liberal one.

May I say, apropos of what our great leader said the other night in his radio address, that banks are not set up merely to be savings institutions, but should be so set up and operated as to serve the local community and aid the great Central Government and States in a speedy effort to bring about recovery and employment in this country. Without the sanction of the Government they would have no right to operate. Do not forget that. Do you know that out of $8,700,000,000 in assets of the Federal Reserve System there is today less than $6,000,000 of discounts in the entire System?

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I will be pleased to yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. HOLLISTER. The gentleman quoted from the speech of the President the other night. I should like to add that the President also said, "Wise public policy, however, requires that banking be safe." Bankers are perfectly willing to lend money today if they could find any safe place to lend it, and the reason they cannot find a safe place to lend it is because the confidence of the people has been so badly shaken. If confidence is once restored there is plenty of money to lend, and the bankers have their tongues hanging out now trying to lend money where it will be safe.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I have heard that song for the last 2 or 3 years, I will say to the gentleman.

Mr. HOLLISTER. It is a good song.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. The thing the gentleman fails to state when he speaks about loss of confidence is the time when this loss of confidence started. I want to know whether the gentleman feels we should proceed upon the same plan that existed back in 1932 and "let Nature take its course and its toll."

Mr. HOLLISTER. I am sorry to say to the gentleman that he is always looking backward instead of forward. If the gentleman would look forward and not discuss what has been done in the past, perhaps we might get along. It does no good to try to go back and decide whether it was the war or certain particular policies or something else that brought about the depression. We are all interested in ending it.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I am glad to hear you say that. What do the indexes show with respect to trade and business today?

Mr. HOLLISTER. I wish I could tell exactly.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Would the gentleman mind inserting in the RECORD at some time during the consideration of this bill a comparison of business conditions in 1932 with conditions today?

Mr. HOLLISTER. If the gentleman has that information available, I would be pleased to have him insert it in the RECORD.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I think it would be very helpful to the House. It would certainly reveal a remarkable growth of confidence of the average man in his Government during the past 2 years.

Mr. COLDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I yield.

Mr. COLDEN. The gentleman spoke of the short-term loans of the present system on commercial paper. Did not that have the effect on small banks, particularly in the country, of forcing such banks to invest in securities away from home and drain the community of the funds necessary to carry on the business of that community?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. That is correct, and any man who is familiar with the banking system of this country knows that the average short-term paper is practically, without exception, never paid upon maturity. It is a process of renewals from time to time. It merely tightens the grip of the banker over the borrower in many instances.

There have been some reports going the usual rounds about how the administration stands with respect to this measure. I have no authority whatever to speak for the administration, but I do believe that the Members will be interested in listening to a letter which I wrote to our President about this bill. On March 21, 1935, I wrote him as follows:

MARCH 21, 1935.

Hon. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT,
The White House, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: Though certain modifications and changes in the Banking Act of 1935, as now written, which our committee has had under consideration for the past 2 weeks, will and should be made, it is my reasoned judgment that the purposes sought to be carried out through title II of the act are not only desirable but urgently necessary if your splendid program for recovery and reconstruction is to become permanently effective as an improved and more righteous economic system.

The controls provided for in section II are not only essential to prevent the recurrence of speculative excesses which preceded the recent break-down of our banking machinery but are also equally essential as a present need to encourage the banking system to give a full measure of cooperation to efforts of the administration at economic recovery. Without such controls, vested in the Federal Reserve Board or an independent board similar to the one proposed in the Federal Monetary Authority Act of last year, our banking structure cannot possibly, year in and year out, be an ever-effective influence toward the moderation of fluctuations in employment, trade, and business. As you, of course, well know, the control or regulation of the volume and cost of deposit or check money is the all-powerful weapon for avoiding successfully the up-and-down economic battles of a free people.

I do not know how you feel toward this legislation; but I am confident that at the right and strategic time you will make your views known. My candid opinion is that the House of Representatives will by a large majority receive this legislation with open arms, and that the real fight against it will come in the Senate. Subterranean rumors are coming to the surface from various sources to the effect that legislation of this character should not be considered further at this time or until after a comprehensive study of banking and monetary matters by a national commission of appropriate character could be made. To carry out such a plan, the idea is being planted here and there that you will at the proper time recommend a division of the banking bill so that title I and title III can be acted upon at this time, action of title II to be deferred until further study by an appropriate committee can be made. Of course, I realize that this may be the usual propaganda which we must meet in all proposals which certain selfish interests oppose and try to defeat. I certainly trust that you will not consider any proposal looking to a division of the bill, especially if you favor the general purposes incorporated in title II.

With assurances of my confidence and best wishes,

Very respectfully yours,

FRANK HANCOCK.

On the 15th of this month I received a message from the President stating that he found himself in general accord with the views I had expressed in my letter of March 21.

Mr. Chairman, I said at the beginning that I could show there was a greater independence provided for in this bill between the Chief Executive and the Federal Reserve Board. I take it it is now my duty to prove this.

In the first place, I think independence is created by the fact that the directors under this bill are provided with a pension which will enable them to act independently and not be apprehensive about losing their positions.

In the second place, we restrict the President as to the type of men that he may appoint on this Board. They must be men, well qualified by training or experience, to participate in the formulation of economic and monetary policies.

Mr. MOTT. That is not the language of the provision. It says "education or experience" and not education and experience.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I appreciate the correction.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Tugwell could qualify under this definition of qualifications.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. And probably make an able man on the Board.

Mr. MOTT. Perhaps he would, but I am simply saying that under this language he could qualify and he is not a banker and has had no experience in banking.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Banking experience alone should not qualify a person for membership.

There are two more reasons why I think greater independence results. The third is that under the provisions of this bill if the directors are required to exercise one of the levers for monetary control, to wit, that of changing the reserves of the banks, they can do so without the approval of the President. Under the Thomas amendment the affirmative action by five of the Board with the approval of the President is required before the reserves can be increased or decreased.

The fourth is that in this bill there is a mandate to this Board to which they shall ever work. The committee took the position, and rightfully so, in my opinion, that if Congress is to delegate further powers to this Board, the Board itself should not have the right to define the objectives for which these powers must be utilized, and we have put in this bill a mandate which must be respected and observed, and this mandate provides, in sum and substance, that the powers which we delegate in this bill to the Board must be used to promote conditions conducive to stability in business and to mitigate, by its influence, unstabilizing fluctuations in the general level of price, trade, production, and employment as far as this can be done within the scope of monetary authority and credit administration. The Reserve Board would have some discretion in the means of handling each situation, while at the same time employing the main objective the Board should keep before it.

The present Federal Reserve System was set up at a time when open-market operations were not a problem and few men knew anything about their relation to or effect upon the credit or monetary situation. We only had but about $200,000,000 in bonds available for use in such operations at the time this system was established, if my memory is correct. The main objective, as written into the act, was that the system should be so conducted as to accommodate the credit needs of agriculture, industry, and commerce.

That phrase is a vague one. It has the attributes of a statesmanlike pronouncement. It is scarcely more than a glittering generality—something like, you might say, the Declaration of Independence—and its contents can be changed as circumstances change.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I yield.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Does the gentleman mean to say that the Declaration of Independence is a glittering generality?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Yes; I think it is a glittering generality to a considerable degree.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I think it is a pretty fine document.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. So do I. But with the changes that have come about during the past 20 years in our banking and economic system it is imperative that we substitute a more clearly defined objective than this inadequate and somewhat meaningless phrase. In the formulation and administration of a monetary policy there is the greatest responsibility that can fall to a group of human beings. This function transcends those of banking, farming, manufacturing, or any other business activity. As I have said, it literally controls the economic and social welfare of the whole Nation. May we trust and pray that never again in the life of our Republic will it be possible for these powers to be used for private profit of a few "in the know" at the expense of an innocent, distressed, and sorely stricken people.

May I now, without further interruption, elaborate in the order named at the beginning of my remarks, the four major proposals included in title II of the bill, all of which are necessary to clarify and definitely fix the responsibility involved in the administration of the Federal Reserve System, and to bring about the wise adjustments necessary in the light of past experience and present-day needs. I should digress here for a minute to analyze some of the suggestions of the opposition. It might be better to search them.

The critics of this measure, in their hysterical and emotional outpourings, and the hymns of hate by some are resorting, as I mentioned in the start, to a time-worn device for delaying action on the theory that there is no need for these changes in the law at this time. Those who understand the financial situation and its grave potential possibilities recognize that an improvement of our banking machinery is imperatively necessary to speed recovery, to safeguard the banks themselves, and to provide the necessary mechanism that will unquestionably be urgently needed in meeting the shifting conditions in our business and economic life. As you well know, there is no telling when we might have a highly undesirable inflation movement which will have to be put under control. May I remind you that today the excess reserves are sufficient to provide an expansion of credit currency of approximately twenty-five billions? If this expansion were carried to its full possibilities, it would increase the deposits of banks to a peak amount for all time in this country.

Though entirely improbable, no one can tell when another wave of deflation may not start, calling for immediate and prompt action by a responsible and authoritative organization. Delay, far from being eminently desirable, might be extremely dangerous to the banks, to the Federal Reserve System, and to the country. If the opposition to this legislation cannot muster any sounder reasons for opposing its enactment or for delaying action by the Congress in its consideration, than those which have been presented to the committee and printed by the newspapers in attacking the bill, we can with full speed ahead proceed to enact the measure and wait for the critics to come into line, as they surely will, after the law is in operation.

Let us now consider the four major proposals in title II. What is the purpose of each and why are they necessary? In considering these, I do not believe that a clearer, abler, and more logical explanation can be presented than that which was presented to our committee by Governor Eccles.

As you know, the present law provides that the Federal Reserve Board appoint 3 directors of each Federal Reserve bank and that 1 of the directors appointed by the Board be the chairman of the board of directors. It appears to have been the intention of the framers of the Federal Reserve Act that the chairman of the board of directors be the principal executive officer of each bank and the law makes him also the official representative of the Federal Reserve Board at the bank. In practice, however, it has developed that the directors appoint an executive officer for whom they have adopted the title of governor of the Federal Reserve bank, a title that is not mentioned in the law, and that these governors have become the active heads of the Federal Reserve banks.

The proposal in the bill is to recognize the existing situation by giving the governor of a Reserve bank a status in the law and to combine his office with that of the chairman of the board of directors. It is, of course, essential that the holders of these combined offices be approved by the Federal Reserve Board. The Board, you will note, will no longer appoint a chairman of the Board, but will merely have the power to approve or disapprove the appointment of the governor, who will also be chairman of the Board. In this proposal there is no encroachment on the autonomy of the individual Reserve banks. It merely reestablishes the original principle of the Federal Reserve Act that the Federal Reserve Board, which has responsibility for national policies and for general supervision over the Reserve banks, shall be a party to the selection of active heads of the 12 Reserve banks. This change will work toward smoother cooperation between the Board and the banks and will establish within the banks a greater unity of administrative control than now exists. It will also result in considerable saving through the elimination of one of the two highest officers in each Federal Reserve bank.

From the long-time point of view the recommendations dealing with changes in the machinery for determining and carrying out the open-market policies of the Federal Reserve System are essential. Open-market operations are the most important single instrument of control over the volume and the cost of credit in this country. When I say credit in this connection I mean money, because by far the largest part of money in use by the people of this country is in the form of bank credit, or bank deposits. When the Federal Reserve banks buy bills or securities in the open market, they increase the volume of the people's money and lower its cost; and when they sell in the open market, they decrease the volume of money and increase its cost. Authority over these operations, which affect the welfare of the people as a whole, must be vested in a body representing the national interest.

Under existing law, open-market operations must be initiated by a committee consisting of representatives of the 12 Federal Reserve banks, that is, by persons representing primarily local interests. They must be submitted for approval or disapproval to the Federal Reserve Board, and after they have been approved by the Federal Reserve Board, the boards of directors of the Federal Reserve banks have the power to decide whether or not they wish to participate in the operations. We have, therefore, on this vital matter a set-up by which the body which initiates the policies is not in a position to ratify them; and the body which ratifies them is not in a position to initiate them or to insist on their being carried out after they are ratified; and still a third group has the power to nullify policies that have been initiated and ratified by the other two bodies.

In this matter, therefore, which requires prompt and immediate action and the responsibility for which should be centralized so as to be inescapable, the existing law requires the participation of 12 governors, 8 members of the Federal Reserve Board, and 108 directors scattered all over the country before a policy can be put into operation.

It requires no further explanation to show that the existing machinery is better adapted to delay and obstruction than it is to effective operation, and that it results in a diffusion of responsibility which prevents the necessary feeling of complete authority and responsibility by a small group of men who can be held accountable by the Congress and the Nation for the conduct of this matter that is of national importance. The proposal in the bill is to constitute the Federal Reserve Board as the open-market committee with explicit direction in the form of a mandate as to its objectives in the exercise of this tremendous power. This proposal would have the advantage of creating a committee or authority with undivided responsibility. The Federal Reserve Board, which is appointed by the President and approved by the Senate for the purpose of having general responsibility for the formulation of monetary policies, would under this proposal be solely responsible in the execution of the will of Congress from whom such power is derived. Through exercise of this power depends to a large degree the country's economic, business, and social welfare. It is the first control in the sale and purchase of money which is the dynamo of commerce, industry, and agriculture.

The placing of this authority in such a committee would also have the advantage of giving this important power to the Board which has under existing law the power of the rediscount rate and fixing the amount of reserves. These constitute the three levers of monetary control.

Under the bill, however, there is a provision for a committee of five governors of Federal Reserve banks to advise with the Board in this matter. The Board will be required to obtain the views of this committee of governors before adopting a policy for open-market operations, discount rates, or changes in reserve requirements.

Such an arrangement will result in the power to initiate open-market operations by either a committee of the governors or by the Board, but will place the ultimate responsibility as it should upon the Federal Reserve Board, which is created for that purpose. In this connection I should like to quote President Woodrow Wilson, who, in his address to the joint session of Congress on June 23, 1913, said:

> The control of the system of banking and of issue * * * must be vested in the Government itself, so that the banks may be the instruments, not the masters, of business and of individual enterprise and initiative.

It is proposed to give the Federal Reserve Board authority by regulation to determine the character of paper that may be eligible as a basis of borrowing at the Federal Reserve banks. This is particularly important at this time because it would encourage member banks to pay less attention to the form and maturity of paper that is offered by would-be borrowers and to concentrate their attention on the soundness of such paper. At present many banks are unwilling to extend loans to borrowers who have assets that, in case of a withdrawal of deposits, they would be able to liquefy at the Federal Reserve banks.

In times of emergency it has been necessary to remove existing restrictions and to give discretion in the matter to the Federal Reserve authorities, as was done under the Glass-Steagall Act of 1932. This act, however, was passed after a great many banks had gone to the wall at least partly because of lack of eligible paper and its provisions insofar as they relate to borrowing from the Reserve banks, have now expired.

What is proposed is not, as has been sometimes alleged, a policy of opening the doors of the Federal Reserve banks to all kinds of paper, regardless of its soundness. On the contrary, it is proposed to place emphasis on soundness rather than on the technical form of the paper that is presented.

Experience under emergency laws shows that the Federal Reserve banks and the Federal Reserve Board have exercised caution and, though they have extended credit on ineligible assets to the extent of $300,000,000, all but $1,500,000 of this has been paid back and the banks have suffered no considerable losses. It would appear safe, therefore, to intrust discretion in the matter to the Federal Reserve Board, which is always in session and, therefore, in a position to consider emergencies promptly without being under the necessity of proclaiming them by an appeal to Congress and thereby aggravating the situation, and being obliged to wait for Congress to be in session and to act on the matter.

Another phase of this problem is that the total volume of paper eligible for discount held by member banks at the present time is, as I have stated before, only about $2,000,000,000, or less than 8 percent of the resources of the banks, and even in 1929 it was only about $4,000,000,000, or a little more than 12 percent. While this amount is sufficient in the aggregate to provide access to the Federal Reserve banks, there were many individual banks that did not possess sufficient eligible paper. Even more important than that, is the fact that in a period of timidity the banks tend to refrain from making loans, except on paper eligible for discount at Federal Reserve banks. This is even now a factor causing liquidation in many communities and preventing adequate expansion of credit in others.

A bank that would conduct its business on the theory of having only such assets as can be disposed of at will in times of crisis, when the national income has been cut in two, cannot serve its community adequately. Such a bank would confine its operations to the purchase of the most liquid open-market paper, with the consequence that it would neglect its local responsibilities and would nevertheless find it difficult to earn enough from the low returns on such paper to cover expenses and dividends. The banks should be in a position to meet the needs of their communities for all kinds of accommodation, both short and long term, so long as the credits are sound, and they ought to have the assurance that all sound assets can be liquefied at the Federal Reserve bank in case of an emergency.

Closely allied to this matter of eligibility is the proposal that the limitations on real-estate loans be modified so as to permit member banks better to supply the needs of their communities for mortgage loans. This proposal does not introduce a new character of loan; it merely relaxes existing limitations on real-estate loans which national banks have made for 20 years. What the bill proposes is to modify the requirements so as to make them more realistic and to enable the member banks better to serve their communities. Coupled with the provisions in regard to eligibility, these proposals ought to result in greater willingness of member banks to lend on real estate and therefore to an improvement in the mortgage market, restoration of real-estate values, and a stimulation of construction which is essential to business recovery.

Member banks hold about $10,000,000,000 of the people's savings, and it is, therefore, proper and necessary that they invest a part of their funds in long-time undertakings. The separation of commercial banking from savings banking may be theoretically desirable, but it cannot be accomplished in this country without disrupting existing machinery, while the need for increased activity in building is urgent. Member banks are suffering from competition of many Government and other agencies that are entering the field of real-estate loans, and it is a matter of self-preservation for the banks to be able to hold and expand their activities in this field.

Under the bill there is no time limit on real-estate mortgages or geographical restrictions. No loan can be made on property valued in excess of 60 percent, which, in my judgment, should be increased to 75 percent when the mortgage is amortized so as to require regular monthly or semiannual payments. The amount of the banks' funds that can be loaned is increased from the present limitation of 25 percent of capital and surplus or 50 percent of savings deposits, whichever is greater, to 100 percent of capital and surplus or 60 percent of time and savings deposits, whichever is greater.

There are other important amendments to the Federal Reserve Act in title II, but I shall not have the time to discuss them in detail. Some of them have already been mentioned, and no doubt will be thoroughly considered when we read the bill under the 5-minute rule. I hope that I have been of some service to the Members of the House in their effort and desire to understand this legislation, and particularly title II. The members of our committee have given more than 8 weeks of hard and conscientious study to the provisions of the bill. Able authorities on monetary operations and banking have come before the committee. For more than 2 weeks we listened to the able, straightforward, and masterful conceptions held by Governor Eccles on these subjects. His splendid grasp of the great problems facing our Nation from a financial, banking, and economic standpoint was the marvel of a great number of our members. Though not posing as a final authority on these matters, he was always prepared to give his own well-thought-out opinion and to discuss intelligently every phase of these important and far-reaching subjects. No small part of the credit for this legislation is justly due him and his able staff of assistants.

I think it will be very appropriate in considering this legislation to read to you what has been said from time to time by our great President, whose courageous, wise, and inspiring leadership is bringing recovery out of chaos and restoring faith and happiness to, but a short while back, a dismayed and sorrowful people. He understands what has been going on under the present set-up, and solemnly promised that the money changers must abdicate.

This bill is a performance of another promise which he made to the American people, when he guaranteed a sound currency at all hazards, and later in his inaugural address when he said:

> Plenty is at our doorstep, but a generous use of it languishes in the very sight of the supply. Primarily this is because the rulers of the exchanges of mankind's goods have failed, through their own stubbornness and their own incompetence, have admitted their failure and abdicated. Practices of the unscrupulous money changers stand indicted in the court of public opinion, rejected by the hearts and minds of men. True, they have tried, but their efforts have been cast in the pattern of an outworn tradition.

Again quoting:

> Stripped of the lure of profit by which to induce our people to follow their false leadership, they have resorted to exhortations, pleading tearfully for restored confidence. They know only the rules of a generation of self-seekers. They have no vision; and when there is no vision the people perish. The money changers have fled from their seats in the temple of our civilization. We may now restore that temple to the ancient truths.

Again quoting:

> And there must be an end to conduct in banking and business which too often has given to a sacred trust a likeness of callous and selfish wrongdoing.

And again:

> Finally, in our progress toward the resumption of work, we require two safeguards against a return of the evils of the old order; there must be a strict supervision of all banking and credit and investments; there must be an end to speculation with other people's money; and there must be provision for an adequate and sound currency.

Under the Roosevelt regime no longer will the monetary and central banking system be operated so that "to them that hath more shall be given and to them that seemeth not to have, what little they might have shall be taken away from them."

Another thing he said the other night:

The reestablishment of public confidence in the banks of the Nation is one of the most hopeful results of our efforts as a Nation to reestablish public confidence in private banking. We all know that private banking actually exists by virtue of the permission of and regulation by the people as a whole, speaking through their Government. Wise public policy, however, requires not only that banking be safe but that its resources be most fully utilized in the economic life of the country. To this end it was decided more than 20 years ago that the Government should assume the responsibility of providing a means by which the credit of the Nation might be controlled, not by a few private banking institutions but by a body with public prestige and authority. The answer to this demand was the Federal Reserve System. Twenty years of experience with this System have justified the efforts made to create it, but these 20 years have shown by experience definite possibilities for improvement. Certain proposals made to amend the Federal Reserve Act deserve prompt and favorable action by the Congress. They are a minimum of wise readjustment of our Federal Reserve System in the light of past experience and present needs.

This measure undertakes to strengthen rather than regulate private banking in America. It recognizes the right of the banker to self-control in all local operations, but it declares in no uncertain terms that so far as the control of monetary policies and operations is concerned, the private banker for profit must stay out. I ask this Congress, If you are going to delegate these powers, and, of course, of necessity you must do so, to whom would you delegate them save to a governmental body? Is there a man in this House who would vote to delegate these powers to a group of commercial bankers today? Remember, they are the group whom the critics and the organized opposition want continued in power. Why, they talk about having an independent, disinterested board! How are you going to get it without changing the Constitution?

It might be desirable. I am inclined to think it would. But I say to you that there must always be in this country a close working arrangement between the authority controlling money and the man whom the people have elected to provide for the protection and to direct their social and economic welfare, and you cannot effectively direct the social and economic welfare of a nation like ours without being able to, within proper limitations, influence the monetary policies.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Yes.

Mr. GIFFORD. Right there, where the gentleman asked the question, to whom would one delegate this power, would not the gentleman state to whom England has delegated the power of her central bank, together with his comment of approval or disapproval.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. As I understand it, England claims to have a board entirely independent, with no commercial bankers on it; but, in view of the fact that I have seen the list of several of them, I am satisfied that the Morgan banks in New York have representation on the bank's board. It may also be well to state that in practically all the countries of the world the stock in the central banks is held by individuals and not by banks. But what might be a good system in England or France carries no conviction in my mind that it would therefore be good for us. I say fix our own pattern. My good friend HOLLISTER continues to revert to the fact that our banks are owned by private interests, and for that reason a few private bankers should continue to direct the Federal Reserve System. When three or four men, sitting in New York, may dictate year in and year out what the price of tobacco and cotton in North Carolina shall be, who can claim that this is a free country? I claim that the stock in the central banks of this country is not privately owned, for the reason that the stockholders of the member banks do not have any control in the Government or operation of the Reserve banks, and after all the stock does not amount to any more than a bond or an investment. Of course they own the certificate, but it carries no real control.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Has the gentleman looked at bank statements? Has the gentleman ever seen a bank statement of a member bank?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Oh, yes.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Does not the gentleman realize that the stock in the Federal Reserve bank is set up as an asset on the bank statement of a member bank?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Oh, yes; it is carried as an asset. It has no value beyond the fixed 6-percent dividend. It is just an investment.

Mr. HOLLISTER. What does the gentleman mean by saying it has no value? What does the gentleman mean by saying it is just an investment? Is not any investment in stock an investment?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Certainly. You know well what I mean.

Mr. HOLLISTER. How does that differ from any other investment in stock?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. It is not a voluntary investment. It is rather unusual that the directors do not own any stock.

Mr. HOLLISTER. I did not say they did. The stockholders own all the stock.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. The member banks hold the investment. I imagine most of the voting is done by proxy anyway. A small clique in the Reserve banks run things. That is usually the case.

Mr. HOLLISTER. But the gentleman is not stating the actual facts with respect to banks. The stock is owned by member banks. It is their money which has gone into the investment of that stock. They vote to elect the directors.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I think I am. I have given my understanding of the extent of their ownership, but you know that the regional banks are really under supervisory control of the Federal Reserve Board in Washington, where they ought to be. That is what was intended when the System was created.

Mr. HOLLISTER. Does the gentlemen say they are now?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. They will be under this bill. Of course they are not now, because the directors of some of the Federal Reserve banks have perverted the System and twisted control away from the Government and vested it in themselves.

Mr. HOLLISTER. The fact remains that six directors must be elected by the stockholders. The stockholders are the member banks whose money has bought the stock. Three directors are appointed by the Federal Reserve Board. That is certainly a system whereby private money, money which belongs to the member banks, goes to make up the stock of the regional bank. Is that not so? I do not know what the gentleman means when he says there is no private ownership.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. The gentleman agrees with me that in the original act, control of the bank was intended to be vested largely in the executive officer, who was to be the chairman, appointed by the Federal Reserve Board, and was to serve as the liaison between the Board and the bank.

Mr. HOLLISTER. He was to be the chief executive officer. I think that was probably the intention, but control of the bank is never in the hands of the chief executive officer, as control of no corporation is. The control of any corporation or bank is in the board of directors.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Well, that is my viewpoint about it. I am sorry that we differ.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I yield.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. As a matter of fact, is not the stock which member banks own in Federal Reserve banks, required by law to own, more in the nature of a franchise tax which they have to pay?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Of course, that is about all it amounts to. It is almost a fiction.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. It is not an investment which they can or cannot make in a private institution. They are required to make an investment in order to conduct their bank. The investment is made in the interest of the public, is it not?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. That is correct. I do not think ownership is so important, anyway. It is a question of management or control that counts.

Mr. KENNEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I yield.

Mr. KENNEY. The gentleman made reference to the house of Morgan having representation on the Bank of England. Does the gentleman care to tell us who that is?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has consumed 1 hour.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I cannot recall the name right now, but if the gentleman thinks it important, I will be glad to furnish it tomorrow.

Mr. KENNEY. He is not a banker, I understand, in any case.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. I understand he is; but, of course, he is not active as a commercial banker.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina has consumed 1 hour. [Applause.]

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, first let me make the customary proverbial confession that I am not a banker. In fact, I am going to be honest and in all humility confess to you that going through this banking bill has been something of a mental effort for one like me, who is new on the committee and who has to dig like a coal miner for all of these abstruse and seemingly theoretical truths. I do not mind confessing to you that I have had difficulty with it, but I have been just as diligent as I know how. I hope that perhaps I can contribute one or two thoughts to the discussion that has taken place on this bill.

I am not going to worry you with any discussion about the merits or demerits of Federal deposit insurance; but there was one provision in the original bill as it came to the committee which recited the fact that on and after the 1st of July 1937, which is substantially 2 years hence, all banks would have to come into the Federal Reserve System or otherwise automatically have their insurance discontinued. Now, that is a hold-over from the previous banking legislation, and it would simply mean that those State banks which are not now members of the Federal Reserve System, and which did not enter the Federal Reserve System as of July 1, 1937, or sooner, would have their insurance discontinued. It appears to me that that is entirely unfair; first, because we have so many State banks that are serving a great many small communities. Now, just write these figures down in a book: Over 41 percent of all the banks in the United States right now are in towns of less than 1,000 people. You know what kind of banks they are. For the most part that is where you will find the State banks. Seventy-three percent of all the banks in this country are capitalized for less than $1,000,000. I am thinking of the small banker in the little community, trying to divine some definite reason other than the academic consideration of wanting unification of the banking system, for the purpose of that kind of a provision in the bill. Fortunately we took that provision out in the committee; but when I got to my office this morning there was a mimeographed circular lying on my desk. The first paragraph of that circular reads as follows:

> The present law will prohibit banks getting benefit of full Deposit Insurance Corporation after January 1, 1937, unless members of Federal Reserve System.

That is in the law at the present time.

To continue:

> The nonmember banks will be permitted to enter the System without capital changes. It is in the interest of the general welfare that we have a unified banking system. Congress cannot coin money and regulate the value thereof according to the constitutional mandate without a unified system.

And then in capital letters:

> This bill repeals the present law making this requirement. Congressman HANCOCK of North Carolina, a member of the committee, will offer a motion to strike it out. I hope it is adopted.

That communication is signed by Congressman PATMAN, of Texas. Now, after thorough consideration of that provision, we struck it out in the committee.

As you have been notified by a similar circular today, an effort will be made to restore this language to the bill. I want simply to express my opposition to the restoration of the language in the bill. I believe there is a place in this country for a dual banking system. When they come along with a lot of fancy facts and figures as to how many national banks failed, as to how many State banks failed, as to how many member State banks failed, it does not mean a thing, and it does not prove a thing. After all, it does not make any difference whether it is a State bank or a national bank, whether it is a metropolitan bank, or a bank in a town of 300 people out on the prairies of Illinois, the first prerequisite is good management. If they are well managed those banks will succeed and do not have to be members of a Federal Reserve System. To get into the System they have to subscribe for Federal Reserve stock equal to 6 percent of the capital and surplus of the bank. Here is a little two-by-four bank hardly large enough to accommodate 10 people at a time, doing good business, solvent, with a capital of $25,000 and with a surplus of perhaps another $25,000, which makes $50,000, 6 percent of which is $3,000. So they have to subscribe to $3,000 of stock in the Federal Reserve System before they can come in. They secure dividends, to be sure, but if those banks are amply serving their individual communities and have no particular need for the rediscount privileges of the Federal Reserve System, why use a club to force them in? That is all that provision was and all it will be if it is restored to the bill. It is just like a club in the hands of an agency here in Washington which says: "Join the Federal Reserve System or we are going to take away your insurance privileges."

In a community which is insurance conscious it may mean putting some of these little banks out of business. No good reason has been advanced for it. You say to me: "We want a unified system." That sounds rather academic and theoretical. If the bank is well managed and serving the borrowing needs of the community and taking care of the banking requirements of the small community, is there any reason, by restoring this provision to this bill, to force them into the Federal Reserve System or take away their insurance?

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. PATMAN. Does not the gentleman remember that when we conferred that Federal benefit on State institutions it was with the understanding that later they would come into the Federal Reserve System or would not continue to get the benefits?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Let us presume that that was the understanding, although I am not at all sure that the Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency would put his stamp of approval upon that interpretation of the language; it was a kind of compromise, and we could not get away from it.

Mr. PATMAN. One further question, if the gentleman will permit: How can the gentleman justify a bank receiving the benefits of a Federal institution unless it is willing to join the Federal system?

Mr. DIRKSEN. It can be justified on two grounds. In the first place, they pay for the insurance they get. In the second place, they are examined as scrupulously under that bill as are the Federal Reserve banks, and perhaps even more strictly, for obviously there would be some suspicion attaching to a State bank that it might not be as solvent as a national bank. Under the extraordinary requirements of that bill, 7,000 State banks have qualified for this insurance. Let us be fair. Does the gentleman in good conscience think we should say to a responsible State bank that it cannot longer obtain the benefits of deposit insurance because it has not joined the Federal Reserve System, when they say to us there is no need for joining the Federal Reserve System, that they do not need its privileges?

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I shall be pleased to.

Mr. PATMAN. The United States Government is paying by far the greater share of the premium. The initial premium on this insurance was $339,000,000, of which the Federal Government provided $300,000,000, the banks being required to supply only $39,000,000. Is it fair for the Government to pay $9 to the bank's $1? These State banks certainly should pay their part of the premium if not compelled to enter the system.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Let us be perfectly honest with each other. That is not the real reason the gentleman from Texas has in mind. He appreciates that the currency can be manipulated so much more expeditiously if all the banks are gotten into a unified system. That is what the gentleman is interested in rather than the portion of premium paid by the banks; he wants to get the banks into the system. Is not that the reason?

Mr. PATMAN. The reason is that it is the Government's business to handle currency and credit and not the State's or private banker's business. Therefore, the Government should have charge of the monetary system and not a particular State or 48 States.

Mr. DIRKSEN. That is a confession on the gentleman's part that he is more interested in monetary control through these banks than he is in the welfare of the banks or any particular consideration for the banks coming in.

Mr. PATMAN. It will promote the general welfare of the people to unify the system.

Mr. DIRKSEN. In line with this effort to compel these banks to come into the system, J. F. T. O'Connor, the Comptroller, was in Chicago on the 7th of September 1933 and made a speech there to the Chicago bankers, in which he quoted from a letter written by the President of the United States to the governors of all the Federal Reserve banks. I want to read a quotation from the President's letter to the governors:

> It is not the purpose of this section—

Referring to the 1933 bill—> to discriminate, in any manner, against State nonmember and in favor of national or member banks.

There was to be no discrimination against State nonmember banks. This is from the President of the United States:

> But the purpose is to provide all banks with the same opportunity to obtain and enjoy the benefits of this (insurance) title.

Somebody circulated a letter stating that a great onslaught was being made against the independent banker, and I quote from this letter without giving the name of the author, because it is not contained in Mr. O'Connor's speech. The letter says:

> In the parlance of the street the independent bank is to be ironed out. Powerful influences are at work to wipe out the small banks, and the independent banker has been placed on the defensive.

Here is what Mr. O'Connor, the Comptroller, had to say about that:

> I know of no more vicious, unwarranted, and untruthful propaganda. The present administration has demonstrated its policy of protection for the little fellow, whether individual or corporate.

So from the Comptroller and from the President himself we have had assurances there would be no discrimination against State nonmember banks. Is not that precisely the reason for the amendment the gentleman proposes to put back into this bill after we struck it out after due deliberation and a couple of votes in the committee?

Mr. PATMAN. Since most of the banks that failed were nonmember banks and very few member banks failed, would we not be protecting the small banks by bringing them into the Federal Reserve System, where they can be protected?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Let me point out a difficulty to the gentleman. May I say that I sat in on 10 or 12 State bank reorganizations when I went back home last year. Here is what we found: There is a little bank we will say down in Podunk. The bank fails and they go to the depositors and say: "Will you waive 30 percent of your deposits?" The answer is, "Yes." So they get them to sign a waiver of their deposits. But the auditor in Illinois requires that when you ask for a waiver of a deposit you must give the depositor a preferred certificate equal to the amount of money waived, and that becomes a charge against the earnings of that bank.

There were banks out there that had these preferred certificates outstanding, and some of them may be outstanding for 10 or 15 years depending on the earnings of the bank, but they are no liability other than against the earnings of the bank. Some of the banks went to the Federal Reserve System of Chicago for the purpose of applying for admission. Do you know what the ruling was? The banks were told that that was a contingent liability and so long as it is outstanding they cannot come into the Federal Reserve System.

Mr. Chairman, there is a provision in this bill that waives not only capital requirements but a great many other requirements for the purpose of facilitating entry into the Federal Reserve System; but it says nothing specifically about these deferred certificates. Would you like to see the spectacle of two or three thousand banks that are doing business, but have these deferred certificates outstanding, being left high and dry on account of some regulation of the Federal Reserve System, confirmed after this bill becomes law? This beautiful amendment which the gentleman from Texas is trying to get into this bill is going to crucify them. The gentleman would not want to crucify several thousand good American communities whose very life revolves around a little bank which serves their needs. This is what the gentleman is going to do.

Mr. PATMAN. The gentleman gave as an illustration a bank with $25,000 capital and $25,000 surplus, stating that such a bank would have to put up $3,000 as an investment in stock in a Federal Reserve bank.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Is not that right?

Mr. PATMAN. That is not right. They will have to put up only $1,500.

Mr. DIRKSEN. My statement is true, because even though it is not paid, it is a liability.

Mr. PATMAN. No; it is not. They do not need it and it will never be called.

Mr. DIRKSEN. How does the gentleman know it will not be called?

Mr. PATMAN. Read the testimony of the Governors of the Federal Reserve Board. They testified they never expected to call these commitments. Mr. W. P. G. Harding said it was never intended that more than 3 percent would be paid.

Mr. DIRKSEN. But the law says they are liable.

Mr. PATMAN. Therefore the gentleman is 50 percent incorrect in his statement that it will require a $3,000 investment by the bank given as an illustration.

Mr. DIRKSEN. They owe it even if they do not pay it in. The gentleman will admit the truth of that statement?

Mr. CASTELLOW. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. CASTELLOW. A statement was made a moment ago that the number of nonmember banks which failed was largely in excess of the number of member banks that failed. However, is it not true that the losses sustained by the failure of the member banks largely exceeded the losses sustained by the nonmember banks, even though there was a greater number of failures among the nonmember banks?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I will say to the gentleman that they had a chain-bank failure here in the East involving one bank and the losses amounted to more than the total losses sustained by all the closed banks in the State of Illinois, and therefore when they talk about numbers it does not mean anything. The amount that is involved is the important item.

Mr. CASTELLOW. And is not that of much greater consideration than the number involved?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Oh, yes, indeed.

Mr. PATMAN. But the gentleman is arguing for numbers, because he is pleading for the small banks.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I am talking about quantity, because that is the way we figure the interests of the American people today.

Mr. COLDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from California.

Mr. COLDEN. The gentleman referred to a small bank at Podunk. I want to ask the gentleman if he is not considering the interests of the bank as paramount to the interests of the depositors, when our first thought should be the interests of the depositors and not the bank?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Absolutely; and here are over 7,000 banks that have qualified for deposit insurance and they will qualify all over again. What reason can you assign for having them come here on an arbitrary date and then saying, "You have qualified after 3 or 4 years, but here it is July 1, 1937, and we will have to take it away from you unless you join the Federal Reserve, even though you have no use for its facilities.

Mr. COLDEN. I will say to the gentleman I think the interests of the depositors should be considered, and if it is necessary for them to go into the Federal Reserve System in order to provide for protection, the banks should do it.

Mr. DIRKSEN. They have got it now and there is no disposition to take it away from them unless we follow out this idea of unification, and that is absolutely arbitrary and inequitable.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the distinguished chairman of the committee.

Mr. STEAGALL. I want to make this suggestion, which, it seems to me, is very pertinent right here. The history of the difficulties of the 1933 law show that the Federal Reserve banks, the national banks, were permitted under the law passed by the Congress to fold up and cease their operations in a normal way or to continue on a restricted basis under orders from the Comptroller, and through this action thousands of State independent banks responding to that situation had to close their doors, and many of them were banks that could have operated until now uninterrupted but for the action of the Federal Government in dealing with the Federal Reserve System.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I think that is an accurate and a correct statement, and let me add this brief remark. If we are going to fight out this issue of unified banking versus a dual banking system, why do we not join the issue squarely and honestly instead of bringing it in here in the form of a sandwich somewhere tucked away between the upper and lower halves? Let us bring in some legislation to join the issue squarely and fight it out. It seems to me that would be the proper way to meet the issue, but here it comes to us in the form of an obscure paragraph in the bill, and I cannot help but feel it means that somebody is trying to take an unfair advantage and cripple a lot of these little banks for the purpose of vesting further control here in the national capital.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I shall be pleased to yield to my distinguished colleague from North Carolina.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. The gentleman understands that under the present law all nonmember State banks, if they are to continue to enjoy the benefits of Federal deposit insurance, shall go into the system on July 1, 1937, under the law as it exists today.

Mr. DIRKSEN. That is quite true, and the gentleman is quite familiar as to how it probably got into the law.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. My version of it is entirely different from that of my good friend from Illinois.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I presume it is.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to my friend from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. I shall not ask the gentleman any questions on that point, but I am quite interested to find out if the gentleman can give me approximately the number of bank failures we have had since January 1, 1934.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I am sorry I have not that information in mind. It was submitted in the data that came to our committee, and perhaps the chairman can volunteer the information.

Mr. HANCOCK of North Carolina. The gentleman will find that in the back of the report.

Mr. McCORMACK. I was then going to ask what percentage of the failures were members of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Mr. DIRKSEN. It seems to me there have been about 13 or 14.

Mr. STEAGALL. They have had 11 failures since the operation of the Deposit Insurance Corporation, and there have been 47 failures outside the Insurance Corporation, as I recall it.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I want to add to that statement that the first failure in the United States under the F. D. I. C. was in my congressional district, which is perhaps a doubtful distinction, but that is what actually happened.

Mr. McCORMACK. In other words, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation on its record has been a very powerful contribution.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I think it has and I am entirely in favor of title I, but I am thoroughly opposed to restoring to this bill any language which seeks to penalize State banks by taking away their insurance unless they are clubbed into the Federal Reserve System.

Mr. McCORMACK. I am keeping my mind open on that. I believe there should be one charter-granting power and one supervisory power over commercial banking. I think it has left State lines behind. However, you have given me some evidence, and, as I understand, it is still under the supervision of the F. D. I. C. under this bill.

Mr. DIRKSEN. More so than ever before, and they will be thoroughly examined at all times, and every safeguard has been placed around them.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Oh, let me have a little of my own time.

Mr. PATMAN. Just for a short question. The gentleman will admit, however, that the reserve requirements will not be in the control of the Federal System.

Mr. DIRKSEN. That is true.

Mr. PATMAN. The States will still control them, and if a State wants to let a bank lend $20 to one or $10 to one, it will be all right.

Mr. DIRKSEN. But when the F. D. I. C. examines one of those banks, it does not overlook anything. It will be thoroughly examined before it is given the privilege of having that insurance.

Mr. McCORMACK. And if the F. D. I. C. finds that a bank is unsound, I assume that it can withdraw the insurance protection.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Oh, let me have a little of my own time.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Just to tell us whether or not the bank which failed in the gentleman's district was a member or a nonmember bank.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I think, incidentally, it was a member bank. I am reasonably sure it was, although I will not be positive.

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. We now have a privately owned banking system, a privately controlled banking system, a privately operated banking system, and I can see the reason why the gentleman would not want the small banks of his community to be forced into that kind of a system. But suppose some of these suggestions here should be accidentally carried out.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Is the gentleman going to ask a question or make a speech?

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. I have to be preliminary about it. Suppose we should have a publicly owned banking system, operated and controlled publicly, recognition that the public currency is vital, what objection would the gentleman then have to going into the public banking system, to be controlled by the Government?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I am not interested in any mere academic considerations of this subject. I am thinking of those State banks that might be penalized and those communities that might be penalized, and I am thinking further of this constant invasion of State rights, when we are fully capable through the banking department of the State of Illinois of doing something in behalf of our State banks. I do not know that all the brains are concentrated down here in the Treasury Department in Washington. We have gotten along pretty well so far, and our derelictions have not been any greater on the average than they have been in the national banks.

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. But the currency of this Nation is a national function. What objection would the gentleman have to going into a national system controlled by the public?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I confess to the distinguished gentleman from Indiana that I am the veriest amateur when it comes to this subject of expanded currency and inflated currency and of controlled or manipulated currency, and I am afraid to venture into those deep waters, which I leave to my distinguished friend.

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. How could the currency be controlled and directed without the banks of the country coming into the national system?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I suppose if we oiled up the printing presses down here on Fourteenth Street we probably would have some difficulty in that direction. I do not anticipate that is going to be done, however. I want to say a word about title II of the bill, and by way of preface let me say that in 1816 we chartered the Second Bank of the United States. If I recall, it was up here in Philadelphia, only an hour's ride by plane. Nicholas Biddle became the president of the bank. If I recall correctly, about 20 percent of the stock was subscribed by the United States and the rest of it was privately sold. It operated there for quite a while and did a note-issue business and general banking business. What happened? One fine day Nicholas Biddle decided to discipline the Members of Congress and discipline politicians and others, and he started a program of money contraction, which left distress and despair wide-spread in this country. It is refreshing to read in his memoirs that Biddle left—and they have not been published so many years—that he went up to Boston and talked there to the head of the branch bank of the United States Bank and said to him:

> It is necessary to teach them a lesson or two and to discipline them by scattering distress over the land.

That is from the president of the Second Bank of the United States, which was dominated by politicians, and to some extent dominated those identified with the Government.

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Will the gentleman please let me go ahead?

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. Does not the gentleman know that that was a private banking corporation and not a public institution at all?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Part of the stock, I think, was owned by the United States Government, as I remember. What happened? Why, even Daniel Webster was on the pay roll of that bank. One of the greatest messages I ever read in my life was the little message that he sent to Nicholas Biddle. He said:

> I hope it is agreeable that my usual retainer be renewed and refreshed.

I thought that was such elegant language. [Laughter.] Here was Daniel Webster on the pay roll. There is no doubt about it. They made their brags how they were going to dominate the fiscal system of this country. Daniel Webster even admitted to Biddle, he said:

> I think it has a salutary effect on the people to discipline them by contraction.

That great structure just dominated this country at that time. Finally, old Andy Jackson, all power to his name, reared up on his haunches and he carried the fight to Nicholas Biddle. He pointed out to the people that over one and one-half million dollars of the profits of that bank every year came from nine Western States where they did not hold over $140,000 worth of stock. It was a great bloodsucking enterprise, if you please, that reached out everywhere into the arteries of trade and commerce. But, oh, what distress, despair, and anxiety it cast over this country, like a great darkened shadow.

Now, then, so much for the Bank of the United States. In my opposition to title II, I cannot escape the implications of that earlier experience. Let me put it to you in this fashion: The Federal Reserve System was a Christmas present to the United States. It came into being, if I recall, on the 23d day of December 1913, just 2 days before Christmas.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOLLISTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman from Illinois 10 additional minutes.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Up here is the Federal Reserve Board, 6 members appointed and 2 ex-officio members. Leading off from that are 12 regional Federal Reserve banks, located in Dallas, San Francisco, Richmond, Philadelphia, Chicago, New York, Minneapolis, and Kansas City. They are offshoots of this central body, as it were, this controlling authority. Then out from all those are perhaps 5,500 national banks and perhaps 1,000 State member banks. They are all part and parcel of this great Federal Reserve structure. Now, let us see what we are doing with the control of this thing at the present time. It has been said here that substantially we are not enlarging the control of the central board over this banking system. I asked Mr. Eccles, when he came before the committee, this question. I said:

> Could you go to New York and get a governor and, by your power of approval, set him over the Chicago bank?

I said:

> Would he be eligible to preside there?

He said:

> Yes, sir; that would be possible under the law, and it would be possible under this.

They changed some of the qualifications. They have rolled the chairman and the governor into one. Then they have approval power. You know full well that the approval power is the same as the appointive power. Suppose somebody wants to make my friend LEWIS Comptroller of the Treasury and I have the approval power. I say, "You cannot do that. I will not approve it." They will have to submit somebody else. They will have to get somebody who is agreeable to me before I will approve it. Is that not substantially appointive power? So when they finally eliminate this governor, for whom no provision has been made in existing law, and roll him into one with the chairman and make him more or less responsive to the Federal Reserve Board, no one can deny that you are concentrating that power and giving the Federal Reserve Board controlling power over all Federal Reserve banks.

Mr. PATMAN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. DIRKSEN. No; I only have a few minutes. In the exercise of this immense power it seems to me some things have been overlooked in the discussion. Let me point out a few of them. First, the power over the reserves. I am no banker and I do not know much about the technicalities of this thing, but it seems to me if they raise the reserve requirements above those now prevailing, namely, 3 percent for time deposits, and above 7, 10, and 13 percent on demand deposits—suppose you double it, what do you do? You drain that money out of our little communities and into the larger centers. That is a tremendous lever to put into the hands of the Federal Reserve Board. Certainly you are giving them virtual life and death control over the banks when you do that.

Secondly, in the case of open-market operations, there was a time when we had a check and balance on that power. The Federal Reserve bank in Chicago, for instance, could notify the Federal Reserve Board that it refused to comply. They could do that in writing and then they would not have to comply with the open-market policy. Under the pending bill that discretion is taken away. That check and balance is taken away. Now, by way of justification they say this has to be a national policy. We raise corn and hogs out in that country. They raise cotton down South. They raise wheat out in the West and Southwest. They have industries in Pennsylvania. Sometimes our interests are not exactly identic in all these great sections of the country. It is difficult to make a national policy apply. Then, is one section of the country to be impaled upon the altar of benefits to some other section? That can happen. It was mentioned that in 1929 the Federal Reserve bank in New York came down to Washington and begged to have the rediscount rate raised. There is a story ahead of that, that goes back 2 years, to 1927. When they lowered the rediscount rate to stop the flow of gold to Europe and to induce some investment, what happened? The Federal Reserve bank of the seventh district in Chicago protested the lowering of that discount rate. Did they pay any attention to it? No, they did not. Hindsight tells us that the Chicago bank was justified in their attitude. What they did then was not particularly salutary for the Chicago area. It might have been for the New York area.

So there is going to be that conflict of interest constantly that is going to come about through the administration of the open-market policy that is supposed to act as something of a monetary-control blanket over all 48 States. I do not mind telling you that I cherish some apprehensions about it.

The Federal Reserve Board is all-powerful. It can determine the interest rate on time deposits; it takes care of admissions to the system, examinations; it has the power to suspend banks; it has the power to discipline directors; and, finally—this is the thing I want to bring out particularly, lest you forget it—we wrote into the Securities Act of the Seventy-third Congress several powers to the Federal Reserve Board. This was not alluded to before the committee; I do not suppose any of us thought about it. Here is what we wrote into that act, known as "Public 291." I want to read just a little from section 7 (a)—this is not N. R. A.; this is the securities-exchange bill—dealing with margin requirements:

> For the purpose of preventing the excessive use of credit for the purchase or carrying of securities the Federal Reserve Board shall, prior to the effective date of this section, and from time to time thereafter, prescribe rules and regulations for the initiation and the maintenance of credit.

There is a tremendous power.

I quote further:

> The Federal Reserve Board is invested with the power to raise and lower the margin requirements in the market from time to time.

Have you forgotten that?

I read still further:

> It shall be unlawful for a dealer or a broker or a member of a registered securities exchange to extend any credit to a customer on any security other than exempted securities in contravention of the rules of the Federal Reserve Board.

What is an exempted security? The law says it is a direct obligation of the Government, or it is a guaranteed obligation of the Government. So you have said to the dealer and to the broker and to the member of the securities exchange: "You shall give no credit on any security except Government securities unless you abide by the rules of the Federal Reserve Board."

Do you see the power that is invested there, that may be exercised arbitrarily, power over every market and trading transaction in the country? And so the pending bill is going to be the capsheaf of a great, centralized, controlled structure that is positively dangerous to our future well-being. Somehow we have forgotten the tremendous powers we have invested in the Federal Reserve Board.

Another power that is defined in the securities bill reads as follows:

> It shall be unlawful for any member of a national securities exchange or any broker or dealer to transact a business in securities through the medium of such member directly or indirectly to borrow in the ordinary course of business from any other institution.

To carry on his business he has got to borrow from a member of the Federal Reserve System or, secondly, a State bank, a nonmember that has agreed in writing to comply with all of the provisions of that act; or, third, by special permission of the Federal Reserve Board.

Do you appreciate the power they have? Do you remember that we give them the additional power in title II? And what is the practical implication of it? I think I can honestly and truthfully say that I have never tried to find any political implications in any bill, but you have made it possible for the Federal Reserve Board to penalize all forms of securities and to finance these exempted Government securities through the Federal Reserve System, and have concentrated control in such a way that ultimately it may prove dangerous.

This, in substance, is the reason I am apprehensive about title II. I would like to see this bill divided and title II set aside to wait until we can study it further. We should pass titles I and III and then consider a little bit more some of the tremendous implications of title II. Much as I dislike to do it, because I want to be deferential to our distinguished chairman, who has been so courteous in the consideration of this bill, I am afraid I am going to have to vote against it if title II remains in the bill in its present form. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The CHAIRMAN. Before the Chair puts the motion of the gentleman from Alabama, the Chair states for the information of the Committee that there remain 8 hours and 34 minutes of general debate. The gentleman from Alabama has 4 hours and 4 minutes remaining; the gentleman from Ohio has 4 hours and 30 minutes remaining.

The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Alabama.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. WOODRUM, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill H. R. 7617, the Banking Act of 1935, had come to no resolution thereon.

EARNINGS, EXPENSES, AND SECURITIES BY THE FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD, and to include therein a letter received from the Chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following letter received by me from the Chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation:

FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION,
Washington, May 1, 1935.

Hon. JOHN W. McCORMACK,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN: In response to your telephone request for information relative to the earnings, expense, and securities owned by this Corporation, I am pleased to submit to you the following figures:

During the period from September 11, 1933, to March 31, 1935, the income and cost of operation and estimated losses were as follows:

Interest on securities owned	$8,485,801.46
Profit on sale and exchange of bonds	1,287,055.69
Total	9,772,857.15

Operating expenses	$4,954,123.75
Provision for suspense items and adjustments	617,088.67
Provision for payment of claims of depositors and expenses in connection therewith	1,724,954.83
Total	7,296,167.25
Less expenses allocated to members withdrawing from the fund June 30, 1934	221,137.76
		$7,075,029.49
Surplus Mar. 31, 1935		2,697,827.66

In arriving at the surplus of $2,697,827.66, as stated above, there has been included in the losses the sum of $1,051,500, representing the amount authorized for payment of claims to depositors in three banks for which no estimate of the recovery is available at this time. There has also been deducted the sum of $617,088.67 set aside for suspense items and adjustments. It is conservative to say that probably $500,000 of this amount may be restored to surplus, increasing it to $3,197,827.66. At March 31, 1935, the securities owned by the Corporation cost $315,692,816.98, and had a market value at the close of business that day of $324,658,940.35. The increase in this market value over cost of the securities owned is not reflected on the records of the Corporation. If the securities had been sold at this market value, the Corporation would have realized a profit of $8,966,123.37, which would have given it a surplus of $12,163,951.03 on March 31, 1935. This amount is equal to 3.68 percent of the money paid to the Corporation by fund members, Federal Reserve banks and the United States Treasury in the aggregate amount of $330,680,582.33, as follows:

Fund members	$41,381,025.34
Federal Reserve banks	139,299,556.99
United States Treasury	150,000,000.00
Total	330,680,582.33

Estimate of income and expenses for the 3 months from April 1, 1935, to June 30, 1935. are as follows:

Interest on securities owned	$2,177,000.00
Operating expenses	647,000.00
Net income		1,530,000.00
Gross amount authorized for payment of claims of depositors in banks closed during April 1935 without consideration to the probable recovery (no estimate available in respect to losses of this type for the months of May and June 1935)		275,000.00
Net addition to surplus		1,255,000.00
Surplus Mar. 31, 1935, after giving effect to the restoration of the sum of $500,000 previously charged to provision for suspense items, and giving effect to appreciation in bond holdings at Mar. 31, 1935, in the amount of $8,966,123.37		12,163,951.03
Total		13,418,951.03

It is estimated that the income of the Corporation for the 6 months ending December 31, 1935, will amount to $4,355,000 and the operating expenses for that period are estimated to be $1,209,755.

I hope that the information contained herein is sufficient for your needs; however, if not, I shall be glad to furnish you with any additional information you desire.

Cordially and sincerely,

LEO T. CROWLEY, Chairman.

SENATE ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

The SPEAKER announced his signature to an enrolled bill of the Senate of the following title:

S. 408. An act to promote safety on the public highways of the District of Columbia by providing for the financial responsibility of owners and operators of motor vehicles for damages caused by motor vehicles on the public highways in the District of Columbia, to prescribe penalties for the violation of the provisions of this act, and for other purposes.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 16 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, May 2, 1935, at 12 o'clock noon.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. KNUTE HILL: Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation. S. 946. An act to amend sections 3 and 4 of the act of July 3, 1930, entitled "An act for the rehabilitation of the Bitter Root irrigation project, Montana"; without amendment (Rept. No. 810). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. WARREN: Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. H. R. 4239. A bill authorizing the Secretary of Commerce to convey to the city of Grand Haven, Mich., certain portions of the Grand Haven Lighthouse Reservation, Mich.; without amendment (Rept. No. 811). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mrs. GREENWAY: Committee on Indian Affairs. H. R. 7741. A bill to authorize an appropriation to pay non-Indian claimants whose claims have been extinguished under the act of June 7, 1924, but who have been found entitled to awards under said act as supplemented by the act of May 31, 1933; without amendment (Rept. No. 814). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. TURNER: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 2394. A bill for the relief of David Hughes; without amendment (Rept. No. 812). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. TURNER: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 2393. A bill for the relief of John P. Smith, deceased; without amendment (Rept. No. 813). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. EATON: A bill (H. R. 7833) to provide retirement annuity to civil-service employees with 20 years' service, involuntarily separated from the service; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. EKWALL: A bill (H. R. 7834) to repeal the excise tax on manufactures of furs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LUCKEY: A bill (H. R. 7835) to authorize the erection of an addition to the existing Veterans' Administration facility, Lincoln, Nebr.; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Administration.

By Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma (by departmental request): A bill (H. R. 7836) to amend section 7 of the act approved February 27, 1925 (43 Stat. L. 1011), relating to the descent of restricted Osage Indian property; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7837) to create an Indian Claims Commission, to provide for the powers, duties, and functions thereof, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. MITCHELL of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 7838) to promote the foreign trade of the United States, to authorize the creation of foreign-trade promotion corporations, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. EATON: A bill (H. R. 7839) for the relief of C. E. Rightor; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HENNINGS: A bill (H. R. 7840) for the relief of Frances Marie Broz; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KOPPLEMANN: A bill (H. R. 7841) for the refund of income and profits taxes erroneously collected; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. McCORMACK: A bill (H. R. 7842) for the relief of Charles A. Wallace; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. MITCHELL of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 7843) for the relief of Robert Taylor; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. PLUMLEY: A bill (H. R. 7844) granting a pension to Sarah M. Morey; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RAYBURN: A bill (H. R. 7845) conferring jurisdiction on the Court of Claims to hear and determine the claims of the Choctaw Indians of the State of Mississippi; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 7846) to extend the benefits of the Employees' Compensation Act of September 7, 1916, to Florida R. Greer; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

8196. By Mr. GOODWIN: Petition of patrons of star mail route, Carlisle, N. Y., urging support of House bill 3994, which provides for the issuance of route certificates to carriers on star routes and fixing the compensation of such carriers; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

8197. By Mr. HART: Petition of Columbia Council No. 8, of New Jersey, representing the Sons and Daughters of Liberty, urging upon Congress favorable consideration and immediate passage of House bill 5921, which has for its object the strengthening of our present law pertaining to deportation of aliens; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

8198. By Mr. KRAMER: Petition adopted in California State Senate and Assembly on April 16, 1935, relative to memorializing and petitioning the President and the Congress of the United States to include the Central Valley project in the national program of work relief; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8199. By Mr. MERRITT of New York: Resolution of the Holy Name Society district committee, twenty-fourth district, Brooklyn Diocesan Union, protesting against the religious persecution in Mexico, and calling upon the President of the United States and the Congress to take such steps as may be necessary to restore to the Mexican people the liberty and freedom to which they have the inalienable right, etc.; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

8200. By Mr. TABER: Petition of Maud I. Randall and others, regarding chiropractors; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

8201. By Mr. TRUAX: Petition of the Packers and Wrappers Union, Local 19499, of Cleveland, Ohio, by their secretary, Herbert Schranfl, requesting support of the Wagner-Connery labor-disputes bill, the Black-Connery 30-hour-week bill, and the amended National Recovery Administration bill, because the present National Recovery Administration expires in June of 1935 and section 7 (a) of the present National Recovery Act has proven inadequate and it is necessary to further reduce the hours of labor in order to reemploy some of the millions of unemployed; to the Committee on Labor.

8202. Also, petition of Robert Beyer and numerous citizens of Cincinnati, Ohio, requesting the support of House bill 6995, relative to Spanish War veteran legislation; to the Committee on Pensions.

8203. Also, petition of Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, Edgewater Post, No. 496, of Cleveland, Ohio, by their adjutant, Fred Scain, endorsing House bill 6995, otherwise known as the Smith bill; to the Committee on Pensions.

8204. Also, petition of United Mine Workers, Local Union 1486, of Lore City, Ohio, by their secretary, A. Lystak, requesting the support of the Guffey coal bill, the Wagner bill, and the Black-Connery bill, because these bills are of the utmost importance to the miners and coal industry as a whole; to the Committee on Labor.

8205. Also, petition of the United Spanish War Veterans, Camp 78, of Athens, Ohio, by their commander, H. E. Sutter, requesting the support of House bill 6995; to the Committee on Labor.

8206. By Mr. WOLCOTT: Petition of Otto Jacob, of Armada, Mich., and 100 other citizens and voters of Lapeer and Macomb Counties, Mich., favoring the enactment of the Frazier-Lemke bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

8207. Also, petition of George E. Cripps, of Marlette, Mich., and 25 other citizens of the seventh district of Michigan, urging the support of House bill 6995; to the Committee on Pensions.

SENATE

THURSDAY, MAY 2, 1935

(Legislative day of Wednesday, May 1, 1935)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. ROBINSON, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Wednesday, May 1, 1935, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. LEWIS. I note the absence of a quorum, and ask for a roll call.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Coolidge	King	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Copeland	La Follette	Robinson
Austin	Costigan	Lewis	Russell
Bachman	Couzens	Logan	Schall
Bailey	Dickinson	Lonergan	Schwellenbach
Bankhead	Dieterich	Long	Sheppard
Barbour	Donahey	McAdoo	Shipstead
Barkley	Duffy	McCarran	Smith
Bilbo	Fletcher	McGill	Steiwer
Black	Frazier	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Bone	Gerry	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Borah	Gibson	Metcalf	Townsend
Brown	Glass	Minton	Trammell
Bulkley	Gore	Moore	Truman
Bulow	Guffey	Murphy	Tydings
Burke	Hale	Murray	Vandenberg
Byrnes	Harrison	Neely	Van Nuys
Capper	Hastings	Nye	Wagner
Caraway	Hatch	O'Mahoney	Walsh
Carey	Hayden	Overton	Wheeler
Clark	Johnson	Pittman	White
Connally	Keyes	Pope

Mr. LEWIS. I announce the absence of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS], called away on official Government business; the absence of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], detained on official departmental business; and the absence of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MALONEY], occasioned by illness.

Mr. AUSTIN. I wish to announce the necessary absence of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK] and of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS].

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-seven Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following memorial of the Legislature of the State of Florida, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

A memorial to the Congress of the United States

Whereas an infestation of Mediterranean fruit fly, from an unknown source, was lately discovered in the State of Florida, and in accomplishing its complete eradication, through regulations promulgated by the United States Department of Agriculture, growers of citrus fruits, vegetables, and other agricultural products in the State of Florida suffered great losses and had to sacrifice their own property to the common good; and

Whereas the Mediterranean fruit fly is a pest that might well destroy the fruits, vegetables, and other farm products throughout the entire southern half of the United States, and to permit its spread would have cost untold millions of dollars in control and a shortage in essential food products: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the State of Florida—

SECTION 1. That the Congress of the United States be, and it is hereby, requested and urged to provide an appropriation of money from the Treasury of the United States to reimburse citrus and vegetable growers and others who were damaged by reason of the campaign for the eradication of the Mediterranean fruit fly.

SEC. 2. That copies of this resolution be duly authenticated and delivered to the President of the United States and to the presiding officers of the United States Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate petitions of several citizens of the States of Arkansas and Texas, praying for the enactment of old-age pension legislation, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also laid before the Senate petitions of several citizens of the States of California and Washington, praying for the inclusion in pending social security legislation of the so-called "Townsend old-age pension plan", which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also laid before the Senate petitions of sundry citizens of the United States, praying for an investigation of charges filed by the Women's Committee of Louisiana relative to the qualifications of the Senators from Louisiana [Mr. LONG and Mr. OVERTON], which were referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

He also laid before the Senate a letter in the nature of a petition from the Tennessee State Club of the District of Columbia (P. H. Harris, president), praying for the prompt enactment of the so-called "Costigan-Wagner antilynching bill", which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by Charles Faust Post, No. 281, American Legion, of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, protesting against the enactment of the so-called "administration bonus bill", and favoring the enactment of bonus legislation as provided for in the so-called "Vinson bill", which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. WALSH presented a resolution adopted by the trustees and board of stewards of the German Methodist Episcopal Church, Vine Street, Lawrence, Mass., favoring repeal of the cotton processing tax and the taking of other remedial measures for the assistance of the textile industry, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented a resolution of the City Council of Fitchburg, Mass., favoring the allocation of work-relief and P. W. A. funds for the development of the Nashua River and its tributaries in the interest of health, control of pollution and floods, and recreation, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a resolution of the City Council of Malden, Mass., favoring the imposition of higher tariff duties on importations coming in competition with home industry, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a resolution adopted by Aerie No. 1649, Fraternal Order of Eagles, of Attleboro, Mass., favoring inclusion in pending social security legislation of a provision for monetary assistance to the States in the payment of old-age pensions, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a resolution of the Arizona State Chamber of Commerce and endorsed by the Leominster (Mass.) Chamber of Commerce, favoring the extension of the present excise tax on copper, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented the petition of members of Middlesex County (Mass.) Council of Veterans of Foreign Wars, praying for the enactment of the so-called "Patman soldiers' bonus bill", which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a letter in the nature of a petition from the Committee on Moral and Social Welfare (signed by Rev. Alred Schmalz, its chairman), of the Massachusetts Congregational Conference and Missionary Society, Boston, Mass., praying for the prompt enactment of the so-called "Costigan-Wagner antilynching bill", which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. COPELAND presented resolutions adopted by the Federation of Citizens' Associations of the District of Columbia, expressing gratitude to the subcommittee on the District of Columbia of the Appropriations Committee, and especially to Senator THOMAS of Oklahoma, its chairman, for the consideration given to representatives of the federation and other civic organizations at hearings before the committee, and favoring retention in the pending District of Columbia appropriation bill of items and projects vitally necessary to the welfare of the citizens of the District, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Exchange Club, of Utica, N. Y., favoring the revival of private enterprise as being of vital importance to economic recovery, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a resolution adopted by Chenango Valley Aerie, No. 2119, of Binghamton, and Lockport Aerie, No. 825, of Lockport, both of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, in the State of New York, favoring inclusion in pending social-security legislation of a provision for Federal monetary assistance to the States in the payment of old-age pensions, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the National Council of the Steuben Society of America at Rochester, N. Y., favoring the enactment of legislation providing that before a declaration of war by the Congress the people of the country shall have an opportunity to declare by referendum their decision on the question, and also to take the profits out of war, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the board of directors of the United Taxpayers' League, of Buffalo, N. Y., favoring making the matter of sewage disposal along the Niagara River a Federal works project, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a resolution adopted by Bohemian Typographical Union, No. 131, New York City, N. Y., protesting against the enactment of proposed alien and sedition legislation, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a resolution adopted by Puritan Council, No. 27, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of Southampton, N. Y., favoring the enactment of legislation to eradicate the activities of subversive groups in the United States, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Transportation Committee of the Association of Commerce of Elmira, N. Y., favoring the enactment of the bill (S. 1629) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, by providing for the regulation of the transportation of passengers and property by motor carriers operating in interstate or foreign commerce, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the petition of members of the National Auxiliary, United Spanish War Veterans, Department of New York, Brooklyn, N. Y., favoring the enactment of House bill 5541, known as the "American Flag Act", which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the North Shore of Long Island Chapter of the Reserve Officers Association of the United States, Manhasset, Long Island, N. Y., favoring the making of provision for a hangar and complete permanent facilities for administering and training Air Reserve officers at Mitchel Field, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Oneida County Council of Postal Workers, at Rome, N. Y., favoring the enactment of legislation placing postmasters of the first, second, and third classes under the civil service, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Oneida County Council of Postal Workers, at Rome, N. Y., favoring the enactment of the bill (H. R. 3898) for the equalization of letter carriers, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Oneida County (N. Y.) Postmaster, endorsing the bill (H. R. 2890) fixing annual compensation for postmasters of the fourth class, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Central Bridge, N. Y., praying for the enactment of the bill (H. R.

3994) to provide for the issuance of route certificates to carriers on star routes, fixing the compensation of such carriers, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

He also presented the petition of Bearing Workers Association Union, No. 18482, American Federation of Labor, of Syracuse, N. Y., praying for the prompt enactment of the so-called "Wagner labor disputes bill", which was ordered to lie on the table.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. STEIWER, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 2097) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear and determine claims of certain bands or tribes of Indians residing in the State of Oregon, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 571) thereon.

Mr. VAN NUYS, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (S. 1943) to prescribe the procedure and practice in condemnation proceedings brought by the United States of America, including acquisition of title and the taking of possession under declarations of taking, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 572) thereon.

Mr. WALSH, from the Committee on Education and Labor, to which was referred the bill (S. 1958) to promote equality of bargaining power between employers and employees, to diminish the causes of labor disputes, to create a National Labor Relations Board, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 573) thereon.

Mr. WHEELER, from the Committee on Interstate Commerce, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 4005) to amend section 21 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, with respect to the time of making the annual report of the Interstate Commerce Commission, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 574) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 92) making final disposition of records, files, and other property of the Federal Aviation Commission, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 575) thereon.

EXTENSION OF NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY ACT

Mr. CLARK. By direction of the Committee on Finance, I report back favorably without amendment Senate Joint Resolution 113, to extend until April 1, 1936, the provisions of title I of the National Industrial Recovery Act, and for other purposes, and I submit a report (No. 570) thereon. As will be noted, the joint resolution has reference to the proposed extension of the N. R. A.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the report will be received and placed on the calendar.

ENROLLED BILL PRESENTED

Mrs. CARAWAY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on the 1st instant that committee presented to the President of the United States the enrolled bill (S. 408) to promote safety on the public highways of the District of Columbia by providing for the financial responsibility of owners and operators of motor vehicles for damages caused by motor vehicles on the public highways in the District of Columbia, to prescribe penalties for the violation of the provisions of this act, and for other purposes.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED

Bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. GUFFEY:

A bill (S. 2734) to confer jurisdiction upon the United States Court of Claims to hear and determine the claims of Henry W. Bibus, Annie Ulrick, Samuel Henry, Charles W. Hensor, Headley Woolston, John Henry, estate of Harry B. C. Margerum, and George H. Custer, of Falls Township and Borough of Tullytown, Bucks County, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. METCALF:

A bill (S. 2735) for the relief of Rocky Brook Mills Co.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BARKLEY:

A bill (S. 2736) to provide that all 50-cent pieces coined in commemoration of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Daniel Boone shall be inscribed with "1934"; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

A bill (S. 2737) authorizing the erection in the District of Columbia of a suitable terminal marker for the Jefferson Davis National Highway; to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. COPELAND:

A bill (S. 2738) to authorize the use of park property in the District of Columbia and its environs by the Boy Scouts of America at their national jamboree; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

(By request.) A bill (S. 2739) to authorize cooperation with the several States for the purpose of stimulating the acquisition, development, and proper administration and management of State forests and coordinating Federal and State activities in carrying out a national program of forest-land management, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. COSTIGAN:

A bill (S. 2740) for the relief of Julia C. Gray; and

A bill (S. 2741) for the relief of Maj. Joseph H. Hickey; to the Committee on Claims.

(Mr. BORAH introduced Senate bill 2742, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and appears under a separate heading.)

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

A bill (S. 2743) to authorize the erection of a suitable memorial to Maj. Gen. George W. Goethals within the Canal Zone; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. ASHURST:

A bill (S. 2744) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. COPELAND:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 114) directing the President of the United States of America to proclaim October 11, 1935, General Pulaski's Memorial Day for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 115) designating the last Sunday in September as "Gold Star Mother's Day", and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PROCEDURE IN ENFORCEMENT OF REGULATIONS OF GOVERNMENT AGENCIES

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I introduce a bill for reference to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ask that it may be printed in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the bill will be received, printed in the RECORD, and referred, as indicated by the Senator from Idaho.

The bill (S. 2742) relating to the enforcement of regulations adopted by agencies of the United States was read twice by its title, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the trial of any case, civil or criminal, at law or in equity, and in all other proceedings, growing out of attempts to enforce, or to exact penalties for noncompliance with, any regulation adopted by any officer, board, commission, regulative body, or other agency of the United States, there shall be a presumption that any restriction imposed by such regulation upon individual liberty is unlawful; and such presumption shall be overcome only by showing to the satisfaction of the court that the regulation is within the power of the officer, board, commission, regulative body, or other agency of the United States adopting and proposing to enforce it, and that it is reasonably necessary to the accomplishment of the object of the law, or laws, from which such officer, board, commission, regulative body, or other agency of the United States derives its authority.

INVESTIGATION OF SUGAR-BEET INDUSTRY

Mr. MURRAY submitted a resolution (S. Res. 124), which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency:

Whereas it is alleged that serious disputes arise annually between sugar-beet growers and processing companies; and

Whereas certain sugar-beet growers of Montana are at present in a deadlock with the Great Western Sugar Co. and refuse to sign a contract with such company because of alleged discrimination practiced by such company; and

Whereas it is alleged that such annual disputes cost the areas affected large sums of money and keep the industry in an unsettled and precarious state; and

Whereas the recent increases in the price of sugar to the consumer are alleged to be sufficient to justify a higher price being paid to the sugar-beet grower by the processing companies: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That a special committee of three Senators, to be appointed by the President of the Senate, is authorized and directed to make a full and complete investigation of the sugar-beet industry in the United States. The committee shall report to the Senate, as soon as practicable, the results of its investigation, together with its recommendations, if any, for necessary legislation.

For the purposes of this resolution the committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized to hold such hearings, to sit and act at such times and places during the sessions and recesses of the Senate in the Seventy-fourth Congress and succeeding Congresses, to employ such clerical and other assistants, to require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, to administer such oaths, to take such testimony, and to make such expenditures as it deems advisable. The cost of stenographic services to report such hearings shall not be in excess of 25 cents per hundred words. The expenses of the committee, which shall not exceed $50,000, shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman.

MANIPULATION OF THE COTTON MARKETS

Mr. SMITH submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 125), which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

Resolved, That in addition to the authority conferred upon the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, under Senate Resolution No. 103, Seventy-fourth Congress, first session, agreed to March 16, 1935, the committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, shall have authority to investigate, with a view to determining whether there has been any manipulation, direct or indirect, of the cotton markets, or any undue influence thereupon in connection with the issuance or publication of cotton reports or statements, (1) the causes of the decline of the price of cotton on the cotton exchanges prior to March 11, 1935, and (2) the activities of the Department of Agriculture, cotton exchanges, cotton merchants, cotton millers, bankers, and any other persons, firms, or corporations connected with the cotton business.

CITY OF BALTIMORE, MD.—MOTION TO RECONSIDER

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I desire to enter a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the bill (S. 672) for the relief of the city of Baltimore was passed yesterday.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The motion of the Senator from Utah, to reconsider the vote whereby Senate bill 672 was passed, will be entered.

EXTENSION OF NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY ACT

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a statement in the form of a telegram coming from Mr. Ward Cheney, representing the Industry and Business Committee for N. R. A. Extension; also a resolution adopted by that organization, and a telegram from Peter Van Horn, president of the National Federation of Textiles, Inc.

There being no objection, the statement, resolution, and telegram were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NEW YORK, N. Y., May 2, 1935.

Temporary 10-months or 1-year extension of emasculated N. R. A. would be utterly disastrous to business and industry. This is conclusion of our committee, representing 60 groups of industry and business operating under codes with over 300,000 units employing several million workers, doing annual business of over $10,000,000. Our committee staunchly supports passage of Harrison bill with necessary changes and prompt action to end serious present business unrest and uncertainty.

WARD CHENEY,
Chairman Industry and Business Committee for N. R. A. Extension.

Whereas the Industry and Business Committee for N. R. A. Extension, representing many hundreds of thousands of business and industrial units—largely smaller ones—employing millions of workers, met today further to consider the extension of the N. I. R. A.; and

Whereas this committee, on April 2, by resolution respectfully requested the Senate Finance Committee to expedite its investigation of the N. I. R. A. and report out at the earliest date the best obtainable legislation to extend an improved and strengthened law, and in such resolution further set forth that the prolonged investigation was creating an atmosphere of uncertainty and unrest in the business world, costing American business millions of dollars; and

Whereas Senator BENNETT CHAMP CLARK, of Missouri, now has proposed that the N. I. R. A. be extended for a temporary period of 10 months, and, we are informed, his proposal is having serious consideration: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the members of the Industry and Business Committee for N. R. A. Extension are unalterably opposed to Senator CLARK'S proposal in that it would merely aggravate the present uncertainty and unrest in the business world, to which this committee already has objected, and would continue this uncertainty for another 10 months; and further

That the attitude of this committee remains unchanged in that the industries and businesses it represents desire the extension of an improved and strengthened law; and further

That a copy of this resolution be telegraphed to Senator PAT HARRISON, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and copies be mailed to the other members of that committee.

INDUSTRY AND BUSINESS COMMITTEE FOR N. R. A. EXTENSION,
New York, N. Y.

This committee was organized about April 1, 1935, as a result of a spontaneous demand from many sources that industry and business favoring the extension of N. R. A. should unify its efforts under a single committee and represent industrial and business groups, with headquarters in New York City.

Business and industrial men are members of the general committee representing the following industries: Cotton industry, paper and pulp industry, steel casting industry, retail tobacco dealers, velvet industry, boiler manufacturing industry, silk and rayon industry, infants' and children's wear, industrial alcohol institute, freight forwarding and carloading industry, foundry supplies, national retail jewelers, photoengraving industry, retail pharmacists, lace manufacturing industry, wooden box manufacturing industry, throwing industry, carbon dioxide industry, advertising typography industry, tag manufacturing industry, master painters and decorators, textile processing industry, garter, suspender, and belt manufacturing industry, organ builders, ladies' handbag manufacturing industry, master plumbers, handkerchief manufacturing industry, men's neckwear manufacturing industry, book manufacturers and binders, textile shrinking and refinishing industry, specialty paper products industry, smoking pipe manufacturing industry.

These industries indicated above, and other represented by this committee, operate over 300,000 units located in all States of the Union. The total number of workers employed exceeds 3,000,000, and the annual gross business volume exceeds $10,000,000,000.

The committee has operated on a quiet program without ballyhoo to encourage industry and business units throughout the country to express themselves about the N. R. A. direct to the Senators from their States and the Congressmen from their districts.

Ward Cheney, president of Cheney Bros., silk manufacturers, South Manchester, Conn., is chairman.

More detailed information will be furnished upon request.

GENERAL COMMITTEE OF THE INDUSTRY AND BUSINESS COMMITTEE FOR N. R. A. EXTENSION

G. H. Door, cotton industry; Carl Whitney, paper and pulp industry; Col. Merrill G. Baker, steel casting industry; Eric Calamia, retail tobacco dealers; Ward Cheney (chairman), velvet industry; A. C. Weigel, boiler manufacturing industry; William Menke, silk and rayon industry; Leo J. Goldberger, infants' and children's wear; A. K. Hamilton, industrial alcohol institute; E. M. Dillhoefer, freight forwarding and carloading industry; J. H. Whitehead, foundry supplies; Kenneth I. Van Cott, national retail jewelers; David Orans, photoengraving industry; Frank L. Grennie, retail pharmacists; Hugo N. Schloss, lace manufacturing industry; Nathan Tufts, wooden box manufacturing industry; H. E. Bishop, throwing industry; A. R. Ludlow, carbon dioxide industry; Kurt H. Volk, advertising typography industry; F. H. Baxter, tag manufacturing industry; Otto Grimmer, master painters and decorators; Harry E. Kenworthy, textile processing industry; A. C. Knothe, garter, suspender, and belt manufacturing industry; Arthur Hudson Marks, organ builders; Sol Mutterperl, ladies' handbag manufacturing industry; John Murphy, master plumbers; Alex G. Ritchie, handkerchief manufacturing industry; Jacob Roth, men's neckwear manufacturing industry; E. W. Palmer, book manufacturers and binders; Max J. Schneider, textile shrinking and refinishing industry; John W. Willmore, specialty paper products industry; George St. John, Jr., smoking pipe manufacturing industry.

NEW YORK, N. Y.

HENRY I. HARRIMAN, Esq.,
President United States Chamber of Commerce,
Washington, D. C.

As president of an organization which has been supporting and admiring member of the United States Chamber for many years, I wish to point out to you personally that I am most fearful that your splendid organization is being used as a catspaw by a small group of members with selfish political and business interests who seek to accomplish, through the chamber, purposes which they could not attain alone. Our organization has been active supporter of the industry and business committee for N. R. A. extension, with offices in New York, representing 60 important industrial and business groups operating under codes representing over 300,000 business and industrial units employing millions of workers, and doing annual business volume exceeding ten billions.

This committee and our industry are vigorously opposing temporary 10-month extension of emasculated N. R. A., which will add to present business unrest and uncertainty, and, as a member of chamber we call upon your good office to oppose yesterday's action of Finance Committee and recommend 2-year extension of improved law. Kindly have list of members of chamber sent to our office in New York so that we may present our views to other members. If minority of chamber members are successful in misusing your organization I will recommend to our board of directors that we submit our resignation with regret. Filing copy of this telegram with the President and members of Senate Finance Committee. If opportunity affords today will express these views in person from the floor of your convention.

PETER VAN HORN,
President National Federation of Textiles, Inc.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

FREEDOM OF THE AIR—ARTICLE BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article by David Lawrence entitled "Freedom of the Air", appearing in the United States News under date of April 29, 1935.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the United States News of Apr. 29, 1935]

FREEDOM OF THE AIR—POLITICAL CONTROL OF THE RADIO HAS MADE BROADCASTING A TOOL OF THE POLITICIANS AND A BOON TO THE PARTY IN POWER—LICENSING FEATURE OF PRESENT LAW HAS PROVED A DEMORALIZING INFLUENCE AND A MENACE TO FREE EXPRESSION OF OPINION

By David Lawrence

Radio broadcasting is the most powerful means of instantaneous communication the world has ever known.

As such it has become the tool of dictators in Europe and it bids fair to become in America the weapon by which free government may be destroyed.

For this reason it is pertinent to examine without gloves the sorry state into which radio broadcasting in the United States has fallen as a result of Government intimidation, on the one hand, and abject surrender on the other by the broadcasting companies themselves.

To understand the problem and many of its implications it is necessary merely to point out that every radio station is licensed with a permit which may or may not be renewed every 6 months, according as a Federal commission of political appointees may decide what is meant by five words in the Radio Act, namely, "public interest, convenience, or necessity."

Does a broadcasting station satisfy the whims of a Federal tribunal? If so, it keeps its license. Does it become the coveted object of some rival interest in a given community with the proper amount of political pull and influence at Washington? It then loses its license or its "clear channel" to one of the competing beneficiaries of this rule of special privilege.

The National Broadcasting Co. owns or operates 15 broadcasting stations. The Columbia Broadcasting System has 8. All these are key stations. To lose them would mean a serious financial loss and possibly a break-up of whole chains or networks.

LIMITATIONS ON CRITICAL BROADCASTS

It is important, indeed it is vital, for the N. B. C. and the C. B. S. to remain on terms of almost excessive friendliness with the party in power in Washington, and to some extent with the minority party because some day the minority may become the majority.

The whole concept of the broadcasting companies as to their obligation is political. Their policies are made with an eye to the political damage that might ensue or the political benefit that might accrue.

Hence there is a rule that no speaker may appear on their networks for a regular series of broadcasts if his addresses are in any way critical of the national administration at Washington. Almost the first question asked by the director of programs about a projected program on public affairs is: "Will it be antiadministration?"

Faced with the problem of presenting views on controversial issues, both broadcasting systems give the bulk of their time in this field to addresses by the politicians in Congress or in the executive agencies.

Members of the Senate and House can have the privileges of the air right along, but private individuals are permitted occasional speeches, and then only when presented under the auspices of the so-called "national pressure groups" or of educational organizations which, too, might be presumed to have a nuisance value from a political standpoint.

The educators of the country, for instance, have been clamoring for 15 percent of the wave lengths. This is impractical. Still it is recognized that educators have indirect influence at Washington.

CHAINS FEAR REPRISALS BY POLITICIANS

Efforts, therefore, are constantly made by the broadcasting companies to placate the educators. Unfortunately, the educators aren't always interested in the technique of producing attractive programs from the viewpoint of the listener and are still thinking in terms of dull, high-brow discussions which the average man looks on as a waste of valuable time.

But the basic idea of the broadcasting companies is to avoid political reprisals. They give their facilities generously to the politicians on the theory that this is their main obligation to the public and that it will be the best means of protecting themselves against arbitrary action by the Federal Communications Commission.

Thus while nonpolitical persons who wish to make criticisms of the administration are barred from repeated or regular appearances on the radio, the chairman of the Democratic National Committee, who is also Postmaster General, appeared 22 times over the N. B. C. stations in 1934, to say nothing of his broadcasts on the Columbia system. The N. B. C. in a formal report announced last December that the Cabinet had had 78 periods in 1934 and that the Assistant Secretaries had an additional 34 addresses, the emergency agency heads 21, and Mr. Roosevelt had the radio 23 times, thus making a total of 156 times for the party in control of the executive branch of the Government during 1934.

Now, if we take the statistics on Members of Congress we find there was a total of 308 addresses for both parties and for both Houses. While the figures do not indicate what proportion were Democrats and what were Republicans, or the length of time each speaker had, we may assume that the N. B. C. divided the number equally so that 154 appearances were Republican and 154 were Democratic.

BIG ADVANTAGE LIES WITH THE PARTY IN POWER

If we add the 154 congressional broadcast periods which the Democrats were given to the 156 times the Democrats in the executive branch of the Government had the privileges of the air, we find the score is 310 to 154 in favor of the administration in power—more than twice as many.

The usual answer made by spokesmen of both broadcasting systems—for their policies and their statistics are very much alike—is that when the Republicans were in power the allotment of time was in their favor.

The fundamental fallacy is in assuming that a minority in Congress always represents or reflects the intelligent or constructive opposition in America to the economic policies of the administration in power or that we can have free institutions when Government-issued propaganda is not checked or challenged in specific terms on the radio immediately after it is broadcast or within the same 24 hours, as is the case in newspapers.

There have been published in the newspapers plenty of statements and interviews with prominent persons on current problems which the broadcasting companies could have presented had they dared. They cannot convincingly plead lack of space. They could have set aside time for a limited amount of opposition. They could have transmitted criticism if they so desired. But the bugaboo of a Federal Communications Commission prevented them from being alertly or aggressively impartial.

INTIMIDATION AS A WEAPON IN LICENSING

Under the present law the Commission is supposed to follow "an equitable distribution" of wave lengths. The quota system by States has been applied. There is nothing, however, in the law to prevent the Commission from reallocating all wave lengths on a county basis or from using the political gerrymander idea in any other form to exclude stations which fall under the ban for one reason or another.

The record of licenses not renewed will show some cases, of course, in which defamatory language has been used on a radio station repeatedly, and hence the license has been withheld. But there are other instances in which licenses have not been renewed on technical grounds more or less related to the political pressure of the other fellow, who wanted a license or a share of the precious wave length.

When a governmental commission has the power of life and death over a radio station or a network, it is natural that intimidation should develop in most insidious forms.

MANY SPEECHES OF OPPOSITION WERE ON RECORD

The broadcasting companies vehemently deny any prejudice or any favoritism toward the present administration. They argue that they have been willing to offer their facilities to the "opposition" any time, but that for many months the Republicans were tongue-tied and, of course, didn't want to say anything against the Roosevelt administration.

This is rather surprising in view of the many speeches in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and in the press in 1933 and 1934 taking issue with many aspects of administration policy.

It would have been very helpful on this point if the broadcasting companies had reduced to writing their proffer of radio time and had made it a matter of record with the entire membership of the House and Senate, because there are Republicans who say they did not know until quite recently that radio facilities had presumably been available to them at all times.

Within the last few weeks both the broadcasting systems have set up an hour a week for congressional opinion and have begun to rotate the requests for space on the air, but this does not erase the fact that opposition to the administration on the radio has been effectively diffused, if not squelched, by the simple method of now and then putting a few Republicans on the radio to keep up appearances of nonpartisanship.

Constructive criticism is the foundation of free government. The American press throughout our history has been the defender of American constitutionalism and American principles of fair play. The newspapers have not shown any hesitancy to publish material regularly which pointed out the unsoundness of certain of the administration's economic policies.

This was because they could assert themselves under the protection of the freedom-of-the-press clause of the Federal Constitution. They fought against being licensed under the N. R. A. when they saw what was happening to radio broadcasting. The radio has the same constitutional protection if the broadcasting stations will acquire the same courage to assert their rights.

INDISPENSABLE BULWARKS OF OUR LIBERTY

The analogy of the press to the radio is important. Free speech and free press go together. They are the bulwarks of our liberty. They must protect us against dictatorship and despotism.

The newspapers open their news columns to anybody with interesting material and their advertising columns to anybody who wishes to buy space for the presentation of a controversial viewpoint or for the sale of merchandise.

The broadcasting companies, however, permit the purchase of time to sell laxatives but not to present ideas on public affairs. Their objection is ostensibly to "propaganda." But the effect of their rule is to deprive investors and owners of properties of an opportunity to obtain ample radio time to protect their investments from spoliation by political racketeers and demagogues. The broadcasting companies overlook the fact that they are not only refusing facilities to businesses affected by destructive legislation but they are furnishing free time on the air regularly and in abundance to the wrecking crews in government who are undermining our whole economic system.

SHOULD EXTEND LICENSES TO 3 YEARS

All this is because the licensing system is a cancer which eats into the judgment of the broadcasting companies and the stations.

The President of the United States appoints the members of the Federal Communications Commission. He can remove them at will without cause. Nevertheless, to free itself from suspicion of White House domination, the Commission ought to issue licenses for 3 years instead of 6 months. This can be done by the Commission under the present law whenever it wishes to exercise that discretion.

The power of intimidation, of course, will not be completely removed until the Congress specifies in the law the exact technical grounds on which licenses may not be renewed and also makes the facts as well as the decisions reviewable by Federal courts.

This is the great crusade which radio has ahead of it. And the press should enlist in it with a spirit of patriotic comradeship.

For while control of the radio may be thought by the present administration to be essential to the perpetuation of a party in power, it will lead ultimately to a public reaction. "Freedom of the air" may, indeed, become some day an issue at the polls.

If the truth is suppressed, a free people cannot exercise their independent judgment.

A radio broadcasting situation, untrammeled by Federal bureaucracy, is the biggest single need of America in its hour of crisis.

The sooner the American people realize the perils in the present political domination of broadcasting, the quicker will America be saved from the most dangerous form of exploitation it has ever faced—exploitation by the politicians.

EQUIPMENT NEEDS OF AMERICAN INDUSTRY—ADDRESS BY JOHN W. O'LEARY

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an address entitled "Equipment Needs of American Industry", by John W. O'Leary, president Machinery and Allied Products' Institute, before the United States Chamber of Commerce Round Table on Durable Goods and Housing.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

It is especially gratifying that we have a round table on equipment needs of American industry at this, the Twenty-third Annual Meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce. I know the important place this subject has in the considerations of the Chamber's board of directors, and I look forward to an even greater emphasis upon it and to a larger, more general understanding of its implications on the part of our Federal administration officials and our fellow citizens.

The equipment needs of American industry today have a broad significance. Never before in my experience have either volume or possibilities been so great, and never before has there been a time when we should strive harder to capitalize our opportunities.

Five years of depression have gone by—busy, throbbing years of many events. But days, weeks, and months of this period have passed with but little observation of the natural process taking place. The building of sources of employment for our people, the storing up of a new cycle of industrial activity, and the setting of the course of resumption of America's march toward the greater realization by all its people of higher standards of living is worthy of our thought. Our world-envied standard of living achieved through the efficient functioning of industry in the production of goods and services at constantly lessening cost, to the greater use and enjoyment by all is worth preserving.

We, as thinking business men, whose individual businesses as well as our interest in the preservation of America's standards, counseled earnestly against too extreme experimentation, pointing to the experience of earlier depressions and to the fundamental principles of sound recovery. We were and are still to considerable though lessening extent accused of a failure to recognize supposed basic changes in our economic order. Early in the depression our statements of the necessities of recovery were premised upon previous experience and recognition of the real causes of depression. In 1935 we see before us the evidence of the effect of ignoring these economic truths in continued unemployment and increasing debt. The philosophy of scarcity cannot result in improved conditions.

We have lost much by confusion of principles; the depths of depression have been prolonged. But we have accumulated a portion of the business, or wants, which would more naturally have been earlier supplied. These postponed requirements, the present equipment needs of American industry, are now before us for future utilization.

Equipment needs are capital goods. In our discussion of our subject we shall wish to trace the possibilities of recovery through utilization of equipment needs. It is appropriate, even before we discuss what these needs are, that we review the facts concerning capital goods economics.

Business and industry fall into three distinct categories.

The first we speak of as the consumers industries, composed of the establishments which have to do with the supplying of the necessities of existence—the things we cannot very well get on without, such as food, clothing, heat, furnishings—consumption goods. Depression or no depression, these industries must go on if we are to survive. They have gone on. We may eat a little less and wear our clothes a little longer and huddle more closely together, but there are limits in this respect beyond which we cannot go. Sheer necessity demands the continuation of these industries and they will not fall below a certain level. Even in the depths of the depression they have been well sustained.

In the second classification circumstances are different. In this latter class are the industries which meet the requirements and supply the tools and equipment of the primary supply industries which meet directly the human needs. Included are machinery, construction, manufacturing, and material supply industries which build our national plant—capital goods. It is upon these industries that the impact of depression is more severe. These industries are the first to fall back before its advances and the last to resume activity. Their status most accurately reflects the difference between good times and bad.

The objective of recovery is employment of the idle, and employment is the measure of the status of the capital-goods industries, as well as the gage of the extent to which the equipment needs of American industry may be utilized in bringing about recovery.

Estimates which have been generally accepted indicate that in 1930 there were 49,000,000 gainfully employed in America, 17,000,000 in the consumers'-goods industries, 22,000,000 in the service trades, and 10,000,000 in the capital-goods industries. In 1934 we had one and one-half million unemployed in the consumer industries, or unemployment of 9 percent. This compares with 5,000,000 unemployed in capital goods, or 50 percent unemployment. Service trades in 1934 had 4,000,000 unemployed, or 18 percent.

By far the greatest unemployment exists in the capital-goods industries. The service industries, the third classification, are also dependent, to a large extent upon a revival in the capital-goods industries, there being three employed on the average in servicing, supply, and material lines for each one at work in capital-goods manufacturing. Obviously the possibility of taking up the slack in unemployment by stimulating the consumers' industries is remote. We cannot, in other words, eat our way to recovery. But no such limitation exists in the case of the capital-goods industries. They are, in fact, the measure of our possibilities.

It is important to remember that in normal times annual purchases in the United States of consumers' goods totaled about $30,000,000,000, while capital-goods output was more than $40,000,000,000, and that since 1929 consumers' goods have never declined more than 35 percent from normal and are within 10 percent of normal, while capital goods have dropped in volume 75 to 80 percent.

The motivating forces behind these two classes are quite different. Consumers' goods owes existence to the urge of necessity. Capital goods depends upon what might be called the spirit of progress. The sustaining force behind the capital goods industries is the belief that we shall go onward, the expectation that our development will continue—confidence in ourselves and our institutions. If that confidence is lacking, investment lags, we begin to husband our resources instead of placing them in enterprise, and depression is upon us.

Investment, then, is also a measure of the status and possibilities of the capital goods industries. During the 10 years ending with 1930 the volume of savings flowing into investment in new securities, exclusive of refundings of every kind, averaged about $3,500,000,000 per annum. In 1931, because of the liquidation then in progress, this had dropped 53 percent, to something less than $1,600,000,000. By 1933, due to various restrictive measures and uncertainties, the figure was only $125,000,000, or but 3½ percent of the 1920 to 1930 average. For the 12 months ending September 30, 1934, this had increased to $137,000,000, which is but 3.9 percent of the 1920 to 1930 average.

With this background of the status of our industries the significance of the figures on equipment needs, which we shall now consider, may be readily recognized.

There are a number of sources of partial information concerning the current equipment needs of American industry, but America is a large country with a great diversity of industries, and it is difficult with a high degree of accuracy to define or identify and consolidate its equipment needs. Were this wholly possible, I am confident that a more striking picture of our potentialities would result. Nevertheless, the information which is available to us, conservative though it necessarily is because incomplete, represents a total of such tremendous proportions that we may well base our discussion upon it with disregard of possible omissions.

The consideration of normal production and in comparison and accumulation of unrealized output is of early interest to us. Figures of the National Industrial Conference Board based upon 1929 production value of manufactured goods of $61,300,000,000, show that there has been an unrealized output during the 5 depression years 1930 to 1934 of 133.1 billions of dollars. All production of goods including agriculture and nonmanufactured goods in 1929 was something more than $70,000,000,000. Reasonably assuming that approximately the same ratio would apply to the enlargement of the figure, the unrealized output of industry for each of the 5 years would have been 43.3 percent, or $30,380,000,000 per year, or an aggregate of $151,900,000,000. Now, of course, it does not necessarily follow that this $152,000,000,000 of unrealized output, or the greatest portion of it, is accumulated into an effective present-day demand, or even if not a present demand that it may in large part become a future realization. But we do know from these figures that a staggering sum of unrealized output is recorded evidencing the fact that repression of our requirements has been most severe, and we do know that millions of our citizens are in need, and if not in actual want, are eager potential purchasers for innumerable commodities, services, and improvements. Our knowledge of the regular requirements of our people compels attention to the fact that a very large demand does exist and will continue to exist until satisfied. What this demand, as distinguished from the forementioned deficiency of production is we shall undertake to discuss as far as possible, with relation to the needs of industry.

A further consideration pertinent at this point is whether this production of 1929 was beyond America's normal capacity to consume, or whether, conversely, our plants were equipped for production far beyond actual productive output, with resultant superfluity of fixed capital and the harmful effects of steadily increasing excess. This is a subject of exhaustive possibilities for discussion, but, though we may wish to go into it later at length, suffice it at this point to refer to certain conclusions in the careful analyses recently made by the Brookings Institute, first that with reference to capacity to consume the "United States has not reached a stage of economic development in which it is possible to produce more than the American people as a whole would like to consume", and second, with reference to capacity to produce that "19 percent is a fair estimate of the amount of added production of which our industrial plant was technically capable under the conditions prevailing in 1929."

In considering the amounts of actual present equipment needs of American industry we have, as I have said, a number of sources of partial information.

Foremost among them, partly because of my own familiarity with the details of the survey and partly because of the completeness of its treatment of an important segment of the capital-goods industries—the machinery industries—I shall refer to the recently completed survey of the potential machinery requirements of American industry made by Machinery and Allied Products Institute. This survey shows potential requirements for machinery alone of eighteen and one-half billion dollars—enough to employ 4,000,000 men full time for 2 years. An essential consideration of the survey was its premise upon the establishment of sound governmental policies and return of normal business confidence. The survey was based upon itemized reports of actual machinery requirements obtained through the members of the 58 trade associations comprising the institute. A striking picture of the survey was the detail in which the reports were rendered. Quotations as to cost were given in practically all instances, specifically, in dollars and cents, and machines were itemized not only by classification but in many cases by name or type, capacity, and catalog or design number. These employers knew their needs, were well impressed with the economic desirability of replacement, they had received actual quotations, in many cases had made decisions as to the machines they would purchase, and had obviously given careful consideration to the question of whether to invest or to postpone investment. That they had postponed investment is evidenced by the inclusion of the requirements as future needs. Here is an eighteen and one-half billion dollar order to machinery manufacturers. Here is a $12,000,000,000 potential order to labor—4,000,000 men full time for 2 years—and it is estimated that for each worker employed in machinery manufacture 3 others find employment therefrom.

A second source of specific information also centers upon machinery—the American Machinist obsolescence survey announced just last week.

This survey enables us to approach the subject of machinery requirements from another direction, for this detailed survey is a measure of the age and life usefulness of metal-working machinery. Of much significance among its findings is the revelation that 65 percent of America's metal-working machinery is more than 10 years old, this percentage having increased from 48 percent in 1930. The American Machinist also brings out in this research its conclusion that the life usefulness of metal-working machinery has decreased during recent years through advancement in design, precision, and productivity to 10 years. Several years ago we would have placed this at 15 years. An interesting though rough calculation may be made from this that since metal-working machinery in use totals 3.5 percent in dollar value of all machinery, if 65 percent of metal-working machinery is now obsolete and not 65 percent but only 35 percent of all other machinery is obsolete, it follows that approximately $23,500,000,000 of machinery may be obsolete and require replacement. Compared with this theoretical potential replacement need, the Machinery Institute survey found that demand for machinery is $18,574,000,000.

The railroads next present a formidable array of potential equipment needs. The equipment purchases during 1933 of rolling stock by class I railroads were 94.4 percent less than the 12-year average, 1922 to 1933, inclusive. In other words, the railroads in 1933 purchased only 5.6 percent of their normal annual requirements. An upturn in business for the railroads would make possible normal additional purchases of $250,000,000 annually. The potentialities for modernization are enormous. The Interstate Commerce Commission reports that as of December 31, 1934, 61.3 percent of all locomotives were more than 20 years old. The rate of advancement in locomotive construction is such that it is fair to regard all equipment more than 10 years of age as obsolete, in which case all motive power numerically would be 91.7 percent obsolete. Were the 46,401 locomotives replaced by 40,000 units of modern design and economy, expenditures of $2,750,000,000 would be involved at present prices. Additional track, signal equipment, shops and housing, heavier rail, electrification, Dieselization, air conditioning, equipment replacement, elimination of grade crossings, and other improvements normally required or necessary for improved service and decreased running time, present a potential demand of tremendous proportions.

The Iron and Steel Institute reported recently a backlog of steel requirements of 67,000,000 tons representing 17 months' production. Equipment needs to properly handle this tonnage are already reflected by an announced modernization program of $125,000,000.

Electric World, in cooperation with the utilities, has released just this month in a special recovery issue its measurement of the possibilities. Here, in normal replacement and expansion of electrical facilities for farm, home, and industry, it is recorded that with friendly governmental encouragement the completion in 2 years of but 10 percent of the program would mean expenditures totaling $16,813,000,000.

Housing rehabilitation and construction cannot be classed directly as equipment needs of industry. The impulse to industrial activity and the demand upon industrial equipment in the furnishing of materials would directly result, however, in additional equipment requirements, for potential housing rehabilitation and construction have also assumed large proportions. According to the Federal Housing Administration 16,000,000 homes need repair, with estimated average cost of repair as $300, making a total of $5,000,000,000. The necessary new construction for 1,000,000 families is estimated at $5,000,000,000.

Obsolescence of equipment in stenotype foundries and pressrooms is reported to amount to $44,000,000. The cotton-textile industry faces the necessity of extensive replacement of machinery in order to successfully compete with other nations. Highway construction planned during the next few years will require road-building machinery estimated to cost $125,000,000.

The news of equipment needs continue to reach us day after day. There are many omissions of entire industries. It has been difficult for us, and is apparently doubly difficult for administration officials to comprehend the extent to which the passage of time has laid the foundation for sound recovery.

Even the most casual observer of the trends of design and efficiency of the equipment with which American industry will make its replacements will recognize that industrial activity will be spurred by more efficient mechanization. Much has been said during this depression, as in previous depressions, of the threat of the machine age to employment. This, again, is too exhaustive a subject to present fully at this time, but it is interesting to refer to the previous expressions of concern on the point issued during earlier depressions. For example, in 1886, at the bottom of that major depression, the Commissioner of Labor officially reported:

"The United States has gone on perfecting machinery, duplicating plants, crowding the markets with products, until today this country is in the exact position of England, with productive capacity far in excess of the demand upon it and her industries stagnated, the wages of labor reduced, prices lowered, and the manufacturers and merchants trying to secure an outlet for surplus goods.

"It is true that the discovery of new processes of manufacture will undoubtedly continue, but this will not leave room for a market extension such as has been witnessed during the last 50 years nor afford a remunerative employment of the vast amount of capital which has been created during that period. The market price of products will continue low, no matter what the cost of production may be. The days of large profits is probably past. There may be room for further intensive but not extensive development of industry in the present era of civilization."

Other similar prognostications have been made by writers and analysts during poor times. Our experience, as we all know, has been quite different. Figures on employment completely disprove any such possibility of increasing unemployment, for in the period from 1910 to 1930 the number gainfully employed increased from 38,000,000 to 49,000,000, a gain of 11,000,000. Department of Labor figures issued by the Department of Commerce indicate that farm workers decreased in number during this period from twelve and one-half to ten and one-half millions, a loss of 2,000,000, while industrial workers increased from eleven and one-half to fifteen and one-half millions, a gain of 4,000,000, and workers in service trades increased from fourteen to twenty-two millions, a gain of 9,000,000. It is obvious from these figures that an improving standard of living through enjoyment of goods and services by an increasing number of our population, made possible through production at constantly lessening costs, opens up new avenues and opportunities for employment in other fields.

That huge potentialities of general business and industrial activity with consequent reemployment of millions of workers exists there can be no reasonable doubt. The natural processes—the passage of time alone—under the circumstances which existed during the past 5 years have set the stage for a resumption of normal production, distribution, and consumption It is of paramount importance that we shall recognize that these possibilities are now before us, and what is more to the point, that those who are charged with legislative initiation and administration shall comprehend the extent of normal recovery naturally and immediately possible through private initiative.

While we see about us these real and tangible needs, the fact remains that American industry is only slowly responding to the purchase of equipment. The capital-goods industries remain depressed, and deferred programs, postponed purchases and a spirit of caution and watchful waiting beset us.

What may be the reasons for this situation? I think that we may segregate and discuss the possible reasons under the following three general headings: (1) Price; (2) purchasing power, or credit facilities; (3) absence of business confidence.

(1) Price: Industry's equipment needs are capital goods. As I have indicated the capital-goods industries are subject to cyclical fluctuations—they are the first to experience the impact of depression and the last to resume normal activity. This is true because of the durable character of the products, which, in sharp distinction to consumers' goods, permits a postponement of purchase, an indefinite deferment of demand. This ability to defer demand constitutes an ability to shop closely and place pressure on prices. The price which the buyer will pay for a product, and the price at which the economic soundness of buying can be demonstrated, determines the maximum price the seller can obtain. The replacement of obsolete facilities and the opening up of new ventures will be undertaken only in anticipation of profit, and it is essential that equipment be procurable at prices sufficiently low to make probable a profit in their future use.

We have been embarked under the National Recovery Administration upon the trial of a new economic philosophy which has had a profound effect upon prices through its effect upon all labor costs, direct and indirect, involving every phase of development of materials, manufacture, and distribution. Whether the shortening of hours to such an extent that a living wage necessitates 1929 wage rates in the middle of a major depression, with 10,000,000 idle men and a national income not greatly in excess of one-half of the pre-depression volumes, makes possible the sale of capital goods is open to serious question. We know that in the capital-goods industries goods have not been sold. The accomplishment of recovery through an economy of plenty instead of an economy of scarcity would appear to require such flexibility of hours as to facilitate production through a unit labor cost which without denial to the workman of a living wage, will result in a price for the product that will make it salable.

(2) Purchasing power—credit facilities: When we consider that for the 12 months ending September 30, 1934, the total of new securities issued, exclusive of refundings (four-tenths of 1 percent higher than the year 1935) was but 3.9 percent of the average annual amount issued during the 10 years 1920 to 1930, it is apparent that a vast proportion of purchasing power of industry either does not exist or is not being utilized. At the same time we note that in common with all business throughout the Nation industry is maintaining large cash balances and is otherwise maintaining a high degree of liquidity.

Credit facilities are undoubtedly largely deficient. The banks continue to place first emphasis upon liquidity and have heavy holdings of Government bonds. Short-term bank credit is neither possible nor appropriate for industry's purposes. A real need for intermediate credit up to 7 years is felt, and is obtainable through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation under rather severe restrictions. There has been wide-spread disinclination on the part of manufacturers to avail themselves of this medium of credit. A decided preference for privately financed credit is reflected in the greater interest in the operations of the Federal Housing Administration, but these facilities if extended for industrial-plant rehabilitation and replacement would be limited to maximum loans of $50,000. As to long-term and intermediate credit, it is the belief of most business men that such credit could and would be promptly made available if regulatory measures which preclude the establishment of private facilities to handle business of this character were properly modified.

The extent to which lack of credit facilities is responsible for failure of the dammed-up equipment requirements to move is not known. It appears, however, that this factor is not of first importance as a reason for the condition which exists.

(3) Business confidence: Every purchase of plant equipment is an investment, either of cash capital or through use of credit, and it is an investment for long-time use and in expectation of profit. The purchase of capital goods is always dependent upon business confidence and is invariably a demonstration of confidence. Business confidence is intangible, but it is a vital dominating factor which motivates every constructive and enterprising business transaction. It is something we cannot artificially produce or regulate, or even stimulate. It must exist with reason.

That there is present today a wide-spread feeling of uneasiness, a tendency to await unknown developments, a general lack of confidence in ability and opportunity to invest safely and profitably, is beyond doubt. It will be well in our discussion to explore the probable sources of lack of business confidence and the means of overcoming them.

The probable reasons for lack of business confidence may be summarized as follows:

(1) Questioning of the profit motive. Inferences and advocations of reduction or elimination of profits have been frequent. Talk of redistribution of wealth has been disturbing. Emphasis upon benefits to the minority without jobs to the detriment of the majority with jobs is a source of concern. Spokesmen have told of fundamental changes in our economic order and of the collapse of the American capitalistic system. It is important to recognize the necessity for assurance to private enterprise that the profit incentive will continue to receive public approval, if we are to have progress toward recovery.

(2) Burdensome taxes, uncertain monetary policies, generous relief of constantly increasing amount, enormous Federal expenditures, uncertainty as to when and how the Budget will be balanced, as to whether or when further devaluation of the dollar may take place.

It is necessary that there be public recognition that the only legitimate purpose of taxation is to provide necessary revenue for government and not to effect sharp punitive redistribution of wealth which, or the possibility of which, paralyzes business initiative. Also that the threat of inflation be removed by establishment of a program definitely working toward the balancing of the Federal Budget.

(3) Increasing activity by our Government in establishing or subsidizing enterprises in competition with private business.

The activity of the Federal Government in more than 200 types of business carries with it the threat of extension into additional fields. Spokesmen have repeatedly warned that if private business did not function, Government would. It has, and has profoundly shaken the confidence of millions. Since private enterprise supplies all public revenue, Government competition, historically inefficient and unsuccessful, not only stifles private enterprise but also dries up the source of its own support, leading toward socialism.

(4) Increasing activity in the exercise of control over the management of private business by Government bureaus and officials.

Utilities, banks, and railroads have felt the threat or experience of governmental regulation. Industry has been subjected to increasing bureaucratic control. The effect has been to discourage individual initiative. All history records this policy as thoroughly destructive.

Increasing development of administrative law is destructive of confidence and undermines our institutions. It was intended that our Congress should create and enact our laws. The laws thus created were to be specific in their terms. Where doubt occurred, the courts would determine the doubt. The administrative branch of the Government had the duty of administering the laws as written and interpreted by the courts.

But there is being enacted administrative law in increasing number—law whereby departments, bureaus, or individuals are given powers which were intended by our form of government only for Congress and the courts. The result is confusion. We know not what the law will be tomorrow. We are dependent on the determination of a multitude of individuals who have their own views and prejudices.

An example of what happens when Congress passes an act which leaves interpretations to administrative bureaus is contained in the workings of the Vinson Act. A provision of this act limits the profit on Navy contracts to 10 percent, a checking of the costs to be made, following the rulings of the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of the Treasury. The Secretary of the Navy has passed to the Secretary of the Treasury the job of performance under this provision. The Secretary of the Treasury has delegated determination of profit to the Bureau of Internal Revenue, where some individual will give the interpretation.

Since the passage of the act the following interpretations have been made by the Bureau covering items which may not be included in establishing the cost on which the profit is to be based. So far these rulings have been:

(1) Selling expenses not part of cost.
(2) Federal income taxes not cost of performing contract.
(3) State income taxes not cost of performing contract.
(4) Allowance for interest on invested capital not cost of performing contract.
(5) Interest on borrowed money not cost of performing contract.
(6) Interest on funded indebtedness not cost of performing contract.

(7) Administrative expenses and salaries impossible to apply directly to product subject to audit to determine if reasonable.

The practical effect of eliminating these standard charges used in all organized business practice and necessary to maintain solvency is to bring the real profit down to between 4 percent and 5 percent. There is no question but that as time goes on other items will be excluded, and it is apparent that ultimately there will be no profit left.

In connection with technical operations, of which there are so many in navy work, the possibilities of loss are very great. While the original 10 percent might be considered fair margin for many purchases, it is not sufficient to encourage the development necessary to keeping our national defense in a leading position. To further hamper through interpretations of administrative bodies to an extent which makes any profit doubtful is completely destructive not only of our industry but of our position as a world power.

The trend to administrative law is opposed to democracy, retards progress, and prevents confidence. Industry can adjust itself with varying degrees of success to laws and rules, if industry knows what the laws and rules are. But it cannot plan with confidence, with uncertainties confronting it, and administrative laws assure uncertainty.

The summary of comment on the lack of business confidence may well be that industry is in the position of a patient fully capable of, and in fact breathing deeply, upon whom is being forced artificial respiration—distasteful, unwanted, unneeded, and destructive to his power of motivation.

Some of these deterrents of confidence we will overcome through our natural unwillingness to be discouraged, some we must hope will be overcome through a recognition by our legislators of the need of business to provide the wherewithal for government. It is just as vital to our governments to cooperate with business as for business to cooperate with governments, and without both there is no cooperation, no business, no government.

Confidence will return. No nation with the resources, the energy, the potential possibilities of this country can fail to reverse the progress of the depression. The Jesse Jones', the John Fahey's, the James Moffett's, and many other able, patriotic citizens have given their time and great abilities to holding the lines. The pent-up equipment needs of industry have meanwhile developed to such a stage that the current has already begun to flow in the opposite direction. Its speed and permanence are detracted by the deterrence of confidence, but even that will eventually be overcome by the force of the demand.

It is your job and mine to hasten the flow toward recovery through constructive and determined effort. We are reminded of that inscription upon the walls of the Capitol, of American business, expressed by Daniel Webster: "Let us develop the resources of our land, call forth its powers, build up its institutions, promote all its great interests, and see whether we also, in our day and generation, may not perform something worthy to be remembered." With a determination to follow this admonition we may hasten rather than retard the return to prosperity.

CONSTRUCTION OF RAILROAD EQUIPMENT

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article by John T. Flynn appearing in the Washington Daily News of May 2, 1935, relative to the construction of railroad equipment.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Daily News of May 2, 1935]

PLAIN ECONOMICS

By John T. Flynn

ONE GREAT INDUSTRY IN THIS COUNTRY IS PRACTICALLY DEAD BECAUSE MOST OF ITS BUYERS ARE PRACTICALLY BROKE

One great industry in this country is practically dead because most of its buyers are practically broke. That industry is the business of building railroad equipment. The busted buyers are the railroads.

Daily for some years we have been told of the paralyzing influence of our vast long-term debt. More cheerful souls assure us that it is nothing measured against our vast national wealth. There is a notion that the debts are all neatly spread out over the wealth and that the debt coating is hence quite thin. But this is not so. These debts press down only on spots. They paralyze the spots where they rest. And the spots on which long-term debts rest are the railroads, utilities, construction industries, the States, counties, and cities.

Consider the railroads. They make their chief purchases of equipment and construction with borrowed funds. Thus they are large buyers in the capital-goods market. When they are excessively loaded with debt they can borrow no more. Then they can buy no more. That part of the capital-goods industry which sells to the railroads ceases to do business.

Let us look at a single great railroad. Its capital stock is carried at half a billion dollars. But it has long-term debts of nearly $700,000,000. It must pay over $30,000,000 a year in interest. For 3 years it has not made enough money to pay this interest. This is bad for that road. But consider the effect upon general business. The road must spend less for equipment. In 1929 it spent $58,000,000. In 1933 it spent half this. It was the same with road maintenance.

This would be a fair picture of most of our roads. Their roadbeds are in desperate need of repair. Their coaches are shabby. Their locomotives are ancient and run-down. Amazing modern inventions have rendered all this existing rolling stock hopelessly obsolete.

Yet the roads can buy no locomotives, rails, cars, because they have no credit. They have no credit because they are hopelessly crushed under debt. No one is willing to lend money to a corporation which can't pay its interest charges. Yet all the while here lies one of the greatest markets in America, lifeless.

What follows from this? 1. These roads must be revived as buyers of capital goods. 2. To do this they must be relieved of excessive debt. 3. This can be done only by reorganizations. This would injure neither railroad, bondholder, or stockholder. Take the road already pictured. Its stocks sold at 256 in 1929. They sell at 16 now. Some of its bonds are priced as low as 52. The injury is already done. At least half of the junior bonds should be changed into stocks. The existing common stocks should be written down at least one-sixth. The credit of the road would be revived immediately. It would resume buying on a great scale. This could be applied to scores of roads. The effect on the capital-goods industries would be enormous. We would see a great era of railroad rebuilding.

To accomplish all this the following steps are essential: 1. The Government should stop paying railroad interest and preserving these debts. 2. The Wheeler investigation of railroad financing should be vigorously pressed. 3. It should serve as the basis for an intelligent railroad bankruptcy and reorganization law, under which the companies could be reorganized in the interest of bondholders and the public. This would be a genuine recovery measure.

CLAIMS AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT ARISING IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, as follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

I transmit herewith a letter and enclosure from the Secretary of State, suggesting the enactment of legislation authorizing the Secretary of State, in his discretion and in furtherance of the international relations of the United States, to determine, adjust, and settle personal injury and death claims against the United States arising in countries in which the United States exercises privileges of extraterritoriality.

I am heartily in accord with the proposal as outlined by the Secretary of State, and I recommend that the Congress enact legislation, in accordance with the recommendation of the Secretary of State, to make it effective.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, May 2, 1935.

(Enclosure: From the Secretary of State, with enclosures.)

PAYMENT OF ADJUSTED-SERVICE CERTIFICATES

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3896) to provide for the immediate payment to veterans of the face value of their adjusted-service certificates, for controlled expansion of the currency, and to extend the time for filing applications for benefits under the World War Adjusted Compensation Act, and for other purposes.

Mr. HARRISON obtained the floor.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator from Mississippi yield to me?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. On behalf of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] and myself, I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute for the committee amendment to the bill (H. R. 3896) to provide for the immediate payment to veterans of the face value of their adjusted-service certificates, for controlled expansion of the currency, and to extend the time for filing applications for benefits under the World War Adjusted Compensation Act, and for other purposes, and ask that it be printed and lie on the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment intended to be proposed by the Senator from Missouri and the Senator from Georgia to House bill 3896 will be received, printed, and lie on the table.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I shall not unduly impose myself upon the Senate by an extended discussion at this time of the bill which has been reported from the Committee on Finance touching the payment of the adjusted-service certificates of World War veterans. I shall content myself with a brief discussion of the issues before the Senate.

It will be recalled, Mr. President, that back as early as 1919 there began an agitation for legislation to adjust the compensation of the ex-service men of the late World War. It found fruition in 1920. Innumerable bills were offered at that early date—56, I believe, in number—in the House and the Senate. One of the committees having the matter in charge at that time suggested to the executive committee of the organization of ex-service men, namely, the American Legion, that such committee take the various bills, consider them, and make a concrete suggestion as to what, in its opinion, would be the most appropriate legislation the Congress could enact.

There was a recommendation made in 1920 known as the "four-point program", which proposed to give to the ex-service men compensation in proportion to the number of days served in the World War on the basis of $1 per day for service at home and $1.25 per day for service abroad, granting them, up to the amount to which they were entitled for their service, an option to receive vocational training or credit on a home or farm. For instance, if a man was entitled to $400, the Government would provide him this credit on a home, or it might buy him a farm, or he might take vocational training. The plan was finally broadened to include a provision for a 20-year endowment insurance policy. At that time there was no concrete proposal for a cash payment of the bonus. It was not suggested by the American Legion committee and there was no great agitation about it.

It will be recalled that in 1922 a bill was passed by the House and the Senate to carry forward the four-point program, but it contemplated nothing with reference to the payment of a cash bonus. It dealt with providing the ex-soldier with vocational training or providing him a farm or insurance. That bill, which passed both the House and the Senate, went to the President, President Harding, who vetoed it, and the Presidential veto was sustained.

The agitation continued. It will be recalled that in 1924 some of us advocated the optional cash feature, but the bill passed at that time, and which is the present law, provides for giving to the ex-service men adjusted-service certificates, which entitle them to endowment insurance. That bill was vetoed by President Coolidge, but his veto was overridden, and so we have that law on the statute books today.

I desire to refresh the minds of Senators that in the legislation of 1924, which culminated in the present law, many of the representatives of the ex-service organizations took the position that the present plan was the best plan and that it would be unwise to give the men the optional cash plan. If that statement is controverted, I have here a long array of utterances by those representatives of the ex-service organizations to that effect.

I make this statement notwithstanding the fact that at that time I supported the optional cash plan, as did many others on this side of the Chamber. I have just read a speech made at that time by the leader on this side of the Chamber, the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON], a very eloquent speech, and in keeping with his custom of making eloquent speeches.

However, we did not carry out that idea. I think I might read just one or two utterances to show how the minds of the ex-service men worked at that time on this matter.

The chairman of the Legion legislative committee was a Mr. Schrugham, from Nevada. In the testimony before the committee in 1920 he said:

> The representative opinion was that the majority, perhaps the large majority, of the men wanted direct adjusted compensation. I will speak frankly to you there. In the opinion of many of the men who were post commanders, or department commanders, or national executive committeemen, this was not the best thing for them; but we desired to give every man the option, in order to be perfectly fair with every man; and if you gentlemen will pass a measure of this kind, we proposed to carry on a campaign of education in every department of the Union, in every town and village, through every post we have, and we will reach literally millions of men who served, and try to get them to take something along the line of a constructive measure which will make them better citizens.

He stated further that he advocated a plan by which they could not get the cash at that time to spend, and urged that the Government should give them something in the form of an opportunity to get a home or a farm or vocational training or an insurance policy.

Mr. John Thomas Taylor, who was then with the Legion, appeared before the committee in 1921 and said, in response to the question:

> Do you not think that there is some danger now that because of nonemployment their condition is such that they are more inclined to take the cash?
>
> Mr. TAYLOR. It never has impressed me that the men would take cash. * * * The American Legion is within itself—we have said this before your committee—within itself pledged to work for the productive features of this bill. * * * We want help for the ex-service man, and I need not tell you we know what will help him best, because we do know what will help him best. The other features of this bill have been made attractive for that reason, and just as soon as the likelihood of this thing going through appears we will be active; indeed, already we are getting in motion machinery to show the men just what they should take. * * *
>
> When this adjusted-service certificate—which is the insurance plan of this bill—is properly set forth to the ex-service man, and I have seen it with hundreds of them, these young men who have just married and who are starting out to make a home for themselves, when this possibility for their families is set forth to them, they think it over very seriously; and when they talk it over with their wives and mothers and fathers at home, they will see that here is something that has never been done before; here is insurance given to them. All they have to do is to leave it alone; that is all, just leave it there, not disturb it, and they may have something for their family. * * * When the other features are shown to the men and the attractiveness is impressed upon them, we never hear any word about the cash; every one of them thinks about the other plan.

In 1922 Mr. Taylor said further:

> * * * This legislation is intended to provide in some way an equalization; in some way to demonstrate to those men that the Government was not watching the fellow who stayed at home and encouraging him and aiding him to make his plenty while the other man was away and doing the service at a loss; * * * I think this, that the adjusted-service certificate, which personally I believe 80 percent of the ex-service men and women will take, will give to the ex-service man and his wife and his dependents a certain sense of security against future want. I do not think there is any doubt about that—that if a man has in his possession the certificate of the United States, drawing 4½ percent interest compounded semiannually, and he knows that if in need he can use that, I think that that instills in that man's heart and mind a certain sense of security against want. * * * I think that 80 percent of the ex-service men and women of the country will take advantage of the adjusted-service certificate. Any man who understands the provisions of the bill will take advantage of it, unless he is desirous of having home aid or land aid.

Mr. Daniel Steck, then chairman of the legislative committee of the American Legion, on January 31, 1922, said:

> We realize and we know, as you gentlemen do, that the cash feature, which is really the basis of computing all the other features, is the least desirable feature of the bill, not only financially, as far as the return in dollars and cents is concerned, but insofar as the economic advantage to the country is concerned. But we realize also that there are a great number of men who were in the service who are not so situated so that they can take advantage of any other feature or option of the bill, and it was in order to take care of these men that the cash feature was written into the bill and very properly kept there when this committee reported the bill.

Mr. Houghton, a member of the Ways and Means Committee, then asked:

> What have been the reports * * * where the cash has been paid as to whether or not such payment has been satisfactory to the men?
>
> Mr. STECK. It has been; yes, sir.
>
> Mr. HOUGHTON. So that the experience of the men where a cash bonus has been paid by the States would favor, perhaps, the acceptance of cash from the Federal Government.
>
> Mr. STECK. I do not believe that is a fair illustration, because the only thing that was offered to the men was the cash and they were satisfied with what their State gave them. * * * We believe it is the duty of the soldier organizations and the committees of Congress to evolve a bill which is constructive insofar as possible and give the men opportunities who wish to take advantage of other features which are more valuable than is the cash.

Mr. Hanford MacNider, then national commander of the American Legion, on January 31, 1922, said:

We believe ourselves that the other options (excepting the cash) of the bill are more advantageous to the veteran if he can afford to take advantage of them. The Legion intends to carry on a comprehensive educational campaign to see that the men affected understand the effect of every option. * * * With reference to this cash feature we believe that every other option in the bill is more advantageous to the veteran. The Legion intends to carry on a comprehensive educational campaign to see that the men affected understand the advantages of every option. * * *

I will give you my own post in Iowa, in a town which is in an industrial center. Ninety-eight percent of the men out of 1,100 stood up for paid-up insurance. * * * Ninety-eight percent out of 1,100 men stood up in my post for the adjusted-service certificate.

Mr. Taylor, John Thomas Taylor, of the American Legion, said further during the hearings on February 7, 1922:

* * * We were very, very careful in our study, and we considered that $1 a day was just about the right amount, because that would give to each man about $400, and we felt that that was about the very lowest sum that would assist this man in properly getting back on his feet. * * *

* * * After the men have had pointed out to them the vast advantages of the adjusted-service certificates, the ratio will be about 80 percent for the productive features and 20 percent for the cash option.

* * * We decided that $1 a day was the minimum upon which to base this legislation, and that was carefully considered by the first convention, by the second convention, and by the third convention, and at those conventions the delegates for the most part were brand-new men practically every time. Forty percent of them are brand-new men. That has been the case at all of the conventions. This is one of the big features of our conventions, one of the big questions. Whether there should be an increase or a decrease was brought up in the executive committee meetings at each of those conventions, and it was always decided that $1 a day was a fair estimate of what the basis should be. Personally I feel that way about it. * * *

I believe that when these men are offered a paid-up policy, all that will have to be done is just reach the wives, and they know that if anything happens to them they are protected. We can say to them, "If anything happens to you your wife and your child are taken care of", and, believe me, the young wives throughout this country are not going to let their husbands get away with a few dollars cash when they can obtain that security. That is just common sense.

Mr. President, we now come down to the present. We have before us three proposals. One is a measure passed by the House, the so-called "Patman bill." The Patman bill seeks to give full payment at this time of the adjusted-service certificates and to make that payment in money, which is to be printed by the Government. It releases the interest incurred by the soldiers since October 1, 1931, on any loans obtained by them on their certificates. It adds $60 in addition to the aggregate based on the number of days served here and abroad. The argument is that when the soldiers entered the service they gave up civilian clothes, and so on, which were sent to the Red Cross or given away, and that the $60 should be added to compensate them for that loss. The bill adds also the 25 percent which was included in the adjusted-service certificates based on the length of service at home and abroad. That, in brief, is the so-called "Patman bill."

The estimated maturity value of the outstanding certificates, under the Patman bill, is $3,479,000,000. There is now an estimated value in the adjusted-service certificate fund of $1,460,000,000. Interest to be refunded under the Patman plan is $182,000,000. Consequently it would cost the Government $3,661,000,000, less $1,460,000,000, or $2,201,000,000, to carry out the Patman plan.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, will the able Senator from Mississippi allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LEWIS. In the figures just given by the Senator from Mississippi, speaking for his committee, is a difference recognized between the conclusion of the Senate committee and the conclusion of the House committee on the subject of the amount which it would be necessary to raise under the Patman bill?

Mr. HARRISON. I think there is no difference of opinion as to that, because these figures are furnished by the Veterans' Administration, and the House committee was given the same figures that were given to the Finance Committee of the Senate.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President——

Mr. HARRISON. I yield to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. CONNALLY. As I understood the interrogatory of the Senator from Illinois, he asked whether there was any difference in the amount.

Mr. LEWIS. Yes; whether there is any difference in the amount as stated by the committee of the House and the amount as concluded by the committee of the Senate.

Mr. CONNALLY. The computation of the committee is on the basis of the bill which passed the House.

Mr. LEWIS. I regret that it seems to be a little difficult for me to make my meaning clear in this matter. I refer to the conclusion. Does the House committee contend that the cost under the Patman bill would be the same as the amount now stated by the Chairman of the Finance Committee?

Mr. HARRISON. I have never heard of any difference on that point.

Mr. LEWIS. As to the cost?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes. In other words, the additional cost to the Government under the Patman bill would be $2,201,000,000.

Mr. LEWIS. And that is conceded as a preliminary fact by the committees of both House and Senate?

Mr. HARRISON. I have never heard of any difference of opinion on the subject.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, will the Senator from Mississippi yield to me?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. In order to make this matter clear, I wish to call the attention of the Senator from Mississippi, and likewise the attention of the Senator from Illinois, to page 158 of the hearings. On that page we have the testimony of General Hines; and if the Senator from Mississippi will permit me to do so, I desire to read three statements from his testimony.

General Hines is making a statement as to the cost of the payments under the Patman bill, and here is what he says:

The amount of appropriation required under the Patman plan, or the amount of currency to be issued, would be $2,201,934,710.

Then, a few lines farther down, General Hines makes the following statement:

The Vinson bill would be $2,263,545,684.

In other words, the Vinson bill would cost something like $60,000,000 more than the Patman plan.

On the same page General Hines, still testifying, states as follows:

The Harrison bill would require $1,199,686,958. That means either currency or bonds, or whichever you wish.

On page 158 will be found a statement of the cost of the three plans as testified by General Hines.

Mr. HARRISON. I may say that that is exactly what I was about to read to the Senate; and the statement I intended to make was based upon the testimony, which has not been controverted, as to the cost of these plans. So, as stated in that testimony, the Patman plan would cost, in addition to what it already has cost, $2,201,000,000. That is the amount of money the Government would have to provide; and the author of that plan, of course, proposes to print the money. Under the Vinson plan, which has been offered as a substitute for the other one, the maturity value of the outstanding certificates would be $3,479,000,000. The interest to be refunded—because the Vinson bill seeks to refund all the interest—would be $243,743,000. The total amount would be $3,723,000,000. The amount now in the certificate fund, as stated a while ago, is $1,460,000,000, which would make the amount to be raised under the Vinson bill $2,263,000,000; and, as Senators appreciate, the Vinson bill does not propose any particular plan to raise the money. It authorizes appropriations which naturally will call for a bond issue to raise the money.

I have no controversy with anyone who desires to vote for either the Vinson bill or the Patman bill. I have, however, offered a plan which I believe will be approved by the President of the United States as a basis of compromise, in the hope that we can at last get this vexatious question behind us.

Under that plan, as stated, so far as cost is concerned, the estimated surrender value of the outstanding certificates—the plan is to pay the present value of the certificates—would be $2,659,000,000, and there is now in the fund $1,460,000,000; so it would call for the raising of $1,199,000,000. The plan does not propose to refund any interest upon money borrowed by the ex-service men upon their adjusted-service certificates.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President——

Mr. HARRISON. I yield to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. CONNALLY. Will the Senator develop for us how he arrives at the present cash surrender value as fixed in his bill? I think there is some confusion in the minds of Senators and others as to how the present face value of the certificates was originally arrived at, and how the Senator's bill goes back and computes the amount from November 11, 1918, and proposes to pay 4-percent interest thereon.

Mr. HARRISON. When the adjusted-service certificate law was enacted and the certificates were issued, there was taken as a basis the number of days that the ex-service man was in the Army at home and abroad. If at home, $1 per day was allowed; if abroad, the amount was $1.25 per day. The average amount that the ex-service man was to receive was about $400. That was taken as a basis; and, just as the insurance companies work out a 20-year endowment policy, these adjusted-service certificates in the nature of insurance were given to the ex-service men, and it was provided that the certificates should reach their full face value in 20 years. The average time of maturity is 1945 under the present law. Up until that time the holders of the certificates have the insurance feature. If an ex-service man dies, his dependents or his heirs will receive the full $1,000. Many of them have received it. The evidence before us was that some 199,000 ex-service men had already passed away, and their widows or their dependents had received the full value of the certificates.

I desire to say, in that connection, that the testimony before the committee was that in more than 80 percent of the cases of death of ex-service men all they left was their adjusted-service certificates. That was all that was given over to their dependents and their widows.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. LONG. That statement will apply to anybody else as well.

Mr. HARRISON. Oh, yes. Of course, my argument is confined to this particular issue; but that was the testimony before us at that time.

Under some process of reasoning of the experts, the cash surrender value of these insurance policies is computed. These particular adjusted-service certificates did not carry any cash surrender value; but the experts have worked it out on the same plan as it is worked out in all 20-year-endowment insurance policies, and they have figured the present value of the certificates. So the figure I have given as to the present estimated surrender value of the outstanding certificates is $2,659,000,000; and there is estimated, in the adjusted-service certificate fund, $1,460,000,000, which, under the plan I have proposed, would call on the Treasury for $1,199,000,000. In other words, when it is compared to the Patman bill there would be about a billion dollars less cost to the Government under the plan the Committee on Finance have proposed; some $1,100,000,000 less than the plan proposed in the so-called "Vinson bill."

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I think the Senator from Mississippi still is overlooking the question suggested by the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY]. Is it not a fact that under the existing arrangement the calculation is figured only from 1925, or thereabouts?

Mr. HARRISON. I was just coming to that.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I think that is very important.

Mr. HARRISON. Yes. The great majority of these certificates were issued on the 1st of January 1925. Some were issued afterward. Two hundred and fifty thousand have not been applied for at all by the ex-service men of the country. In the case of about 500,000 no loan has been requested from the Government. So if we should make the computation from the date of January 1, 1925, naturally the estimated surrender value would not approach the figure I have stated; but in order to make the certificates more valuable, and have them reach their full face value at an earlier date, the Committee on Finance said, "Let us date them from the close of the war. Let us start with Armistice Day, November 11, 1918"; and on the basis of the number of days the men served here and abroad, taking $400 as the basis, we added 4-percent compound interest from November 11, 1918, up until January 1, 1925, or up until the time the application was made for the issuance of the certificate. So by adding 4-percent compound interest from the close of the war we have made every adjusted-service certificate much more valuable, and it will accelerate the time when the full face value will be reached.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a further question?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes.

Mr. VANDENBERG. There is a 25-percent factor for deferment in the present situation. Is that included in the Senator's plan, or is it not included?

Mr. HARRISON. That is not included in the plan. I may say that in the testimony before our committee and before the other committees there was a great difference of opinion as to why the 25 percent additional was added to the credit for service performed by the ex-service men. There was a viewpoint that the 25 percent was added because we were not giving the men cash, but were giving them these certificates under which they had to wait some time for the money. Others since have contended that it was because we had delayed the issuance of the certificates until 1925 from the close of the war.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield right there?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes.

Mr. CONNALLY. In answer to the suggestion of the Senator from Michigan, I desire to say that while the original computation included the arbitrary addition of 25 percent, it did not include interest from 1918 to 1925; so when this bill gives the ex-service men interest from 1918 to 1925 it is a little more, as I now recall, than they would have gained by the arbitrary addition of the 25 percent. So there is no denial in this measure of the right to receive interest during that 7-year interregnum.

Mr. HARRISON. As pointed out by the Senator, with the 4-percent compound interest from November 11, 1918, added, the amount is much more than with the 25 percent added, whether one takes one horn of the dilemma or the other in figuring the 25 percent, or whatever may have been the reason advanced.

Mr. President, if the contention is accepted that the so-called "bonus" should have been paid in 1925 on the basis to which all the ex-service men's organizations agreed, at 4 percent up to date, they would get much more in cash under the proposal of the Finance Committee than they would have received at that time, taking into consideration the 4-percent interest. In other words, they would fare just as well under the plan of the Finance Committee, as far as obtaining cash is concerned, as they would have fared if they had taken the cash under their suggestion in January 1925.

I will now state what a soldier would receive under the various plans, figured on the basis of an average thousand-dollar certificate not borrowed upon.

Under the Patman plan, the soldier would get a thousand dollars now. Under the Vinson plan, he would get a thousand dollars now. Under the plan proposed by the Finance Committee, he would receive $768.

Mr. CONNALLY. Or a bond.

Mr. HARRISON. Or a bond. We proposed to amend the law by granting an option of payment in cash or in 3-percent bonds. Senators are familiar with the fact that Government 3-percent bonds are selling on the market at between 103 and 104. The committee amended the provision at the suggestion of the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], so that if the veterans who did not want to take bonds could take the cash. Now, therefore, they have the option of either taking cash or bonds based on the estimated surrender value of a certificate.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator spoke of the amount which would be received by the veteran who had not borrowed on his certificate. Suppose a veteran has had to borrow $500; how much would he receive?

Mr. HARRISON. I was coming to that. Suppose a veteran had borrowed the maximum he would be permitted under the law to borrow. Under the Patman plan he would receive $487. Under the Vinson plan he would receive $500. Under the plan proposed by the committee he could realize $180.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, is the Senator making his estimate based upon the 50 percent the veteran has already borrowed?

Mr. HARRISON. If the soldier had borrowed to the very limit he could borrow under the law, that would be deducted.

Mr. SMITH. What was the limit?

Mr. HARRISON. The limit was 50 percent.

Mr. SMITH. That was my understanding.

Mr. HARRISON. We passed the law in 1931 making that the limit.

Mr. SMITH. Therefore, taking a $1,000 certificate as the basis, what would a veteran receive on the $500 still due under the Patman plan?

Mr. HARRISON. Under the Patman plan, if the veteran had borrowed on his certificate up to the limit, that would be deducted and he could receive $487. Under the Vinson plan, if he had borrowed to the limit, he could receive $500. Under the plan of the committee, he would in that case receive $180.

Mr. SMITH. Am I to understand that under the Patman plan the veteran would be relieved of the payment of interest?

Mr. HARRISON. Interest accruing since 1931.

Mr. SMITH. But there is no release from the payment of interest under the Vinson plan?

Mr. HARRISON. The Government would release the soldier from the payment of interest on the money he borrowed under the Vinson plan.

Mr. SMITH. The interest is canceled under the Vinson plan?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. Of course, no two certificates represent the same amount of money.

Mr. HARRISON. No.

Mr. WALSH. Under the illustration, the veteran whose certificate is for the maximum would receive what?

Mr. HARRISON. It depends on the maximum amount of loan made.

Mr. WALSH. I refer to the maximum amount of the certificate.

Mr. HARRISON. The certificates are issued according to age. If the Senate Finance Committee bill should become law, there are certain certificates which would become due immediately, and the veterans would receive their full face value. There are others who would have to wait 2 or 3 years, but the average—because the greatest number were taken out in January 1925—would become due in 1942, instead of 1945.

Mr. BORAH. What percentage of the soldiers have borrowed under the act permitting them to borrow? I understand that only a very small percentage have not borrowed.

Mr. HARRISON. Two hundred and fifty thousand ex-service men have not applied for their adjusted-service certificates, and 500,000 veterans have not borrowed on their certificates.

Mr. President, there is another feature of the Senate Finance Committee bill to which I wish to call attention; that is, it makes it optional with the ex-service man as to whether he will take cash, according to the estimated surrender value of his certificate, or take a Government 3-percent bond. He could do either. If he does not wish to do either, but wants to continue his insurance policy for the benefit of his family, and as an investment, he is given the option to do so, and when the certificate reaches its full face value, say, in 1940, it would be optional with the ex-service man whether he would then cash in and take his money or not. He could carry on the policy with the Government as an investment if he desired to do so, until 1945, and draw 4-percent compound interest upon his investment.

Under the first feature—that is, giving him bonds if he desires to cash in his certificate—under the Senate Finance Committee plan we insert a provision that no person can buy one of those bonds from the ex-service man within a period of 6 months without paying him par value for his bond, because we appreciate there might be some danger that certain people would try to practice fraud upon the ex-service men and obtain the bonds at lower prices, or the prices might be driven down in some way. So we have provided a heavy penalty—a fine of $10,000 and imprisonment—for those who might buy one of these bonds from an ex-service man at less than 100 percent of the face of the bond.

Mr. President, this in a nutshell is the plan proposed by the Finance Committee. In addition to that, it has written into the bill a declaration of policy with reference to general pension legislation for the World War veterans in the future. Of course, we appreciated when that was written into the bill, and we appreciate now, that one Congress cannot bind another Congress. We believe it would have a wholesome effect upon the country and upon the ex-service men, because there are millions of them who do not believe in general pension legislation, and in the hearings before committee after committee expressions of that idea have been given to the committees by the representatives of the ex-service men's organizations.

I shall be very glad to answer any question I can, but I believe I have stated succinctly the differences between the various propositions.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. How much would it add to the cost under the committee bill if the Government should release the interest which the veterans have incurred on the loans they have made against the certificates?

Mr. HARRISON. It is estimated that it would amount to about $250,000,000. As testified by General Hines, many of the ex-service men borrowed from banks, and some of them paid too high a rate of interest; but that was the fault of the banks. It has been said that as a matter of bookkeeping, as a matter of adjustment, it would create a great entanglement if there had to be refunds to the ex-service men, and adjustments with the banks in the matter of interest.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, if the interest were conceded to the veterans, how much would it add to the amount each veteran would receive?

Mr. HARRISON. May I say to the Senator from Tennessee that it would be appreciably increased. The expert is working on the figure, and I will give it to him in a moment.

This fact must be pointed out, that if the interest on the loan which has been effected to the ex-service men should be remitted, then something must be done in order to do equity—because every ex-service man must be treated alike with reference to this matter—otherwise there would seem to be a very gross discrimination in the case of those 500,000 men who have not borrowed, and those 260,000 men who have not even made application for adjusted-service certificates, and have not borrowed. They would not be receiving the amount in the end which those who have borrowed upon the certificates will receive if the latter should be released from the interest charges.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. The Senator has just developed the argument which General Hines made in the committee. It was his position that in order to do equity to those who had not yet taken out certificates, and to those who have certificates but have not borrowed upon them, it would be necessary to appropriate the same amount of money we deduct in favor of those veterans who have paid interest, and add it to the certificates of those others, which would make about $500,000,000.

Mr. HARRISON. I thank the Senator from Massachusetts. I am told that the estimated surrender value in the event the interest should be remitted would be about $81 more than the $180.

Mr. McKELLAR. About $261.

Mr. WALSH. What is that amount?

Mr. HARRISON. About $261. Are there any other questions Senators wish to ask me at this time?

Mr. VANDENBERG. There is one further figure the Senator has not given which interests me. If the typical $1,000 certificate is permitted to continue to run to its 1945 maturity, and the veteran chooses to take it in that form, how much will it amount to in 1945 under the Senate committee bill?

Mr. HARRISON. One thousand one hundred and fifteen dollars.

Mr. VANDENBERG. In other words, the veteran would be $115 better off than he would be under his existing contract?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes. That veteran would have the finest investment which is offered by the Government today to any investor.

Mr. MINTON. Would that not take care of any apparent discrimination which there might be against him by reason of the fact that the interest is remitted to the veteran who had made a loan against the certificate?

Mr. HARRISON. It might take care of it in the case of that one who was able to carry on and let his certificate run until 1945.

May I say one further word. Under the bill which the committee has reported there will be an additional cost to the Government of about $550,000,000. That is the additional cost which would result from the pending proposal. That is about $1,000,000,000 less than the cost of the one proposal and about $1,100,000,000 than the other.

In the 1st of July there will be in the certificate fund about $260,000,000 in cash or in Treasury notes which can immediately be converted into payment. The rest, of course, is in other securities.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I did not understand the last figure which the Senator from Mississippi gave. What is the relationship between the $550,000,000 and $1,000,000,000 which he originally stated was the cost of the Senate committee bill?

Mr. HARRISON. The amount that I first cited was the additional amount which must be raised in the event the pending bill shall be passed—the $1,199,000,000. The $550,000,000 is the additional cost over and above the theoretical present value, which would be added by virtue of the bill of the Finance Committee.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON. May I ask the Senator what is meant by the additional amount which must be raised? Additional to what?

Mr. HARRISON. Under the present plan, of course, these certificates mature in most instances in 1945, and they can be taken care of under the arrangement we have made of Congress appropriating $112,000,000 every year. That is what we have been doing. If we now make provision to pay up the certificates, we must immediately raise $1,199,000,000, but that is only if Congress adopts this pending plan. It only involves $550,000,000 more cost than the present plan which is in the law.

Mr. ROBINSON. I understood that latter figure, but it was the use of the word "additional" which confused me in connection with the billion dollars plus which would have to be raised to meet the expenses of this bill.

Mr. HARRISON. That is due to the shortening of time and so forth.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President——

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator from Oklahoma wanted the floor, did he?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Yes. Has the Senator from Mississippi completed his statement?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I am not at this time a member of the Finance Committee, and because of that fact I am at a disadvantage in not having heard the testimony and not having had time to read the testimony. The bill pending before the Senate is House bill 3896, known as the "Patman bill", which, of course, has passed the House. It came to the Senate and was referred to the Finance Committee.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. LONG. Has the Senator offered the Patman bill?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I was going to explain the status of the matter and if the Senator will permit me to proceed for a moment, I will do so.

The Senate Finance Committee in considering the Patman bill in effect disregarded it. The committee retained the number of the House bill and the title but struck out the preamble and the remainder of the text and submitted a new text in its stead, the new text being the Harrison bill which was introduced by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] a few days ago.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. HARRISON. Of course, the number of the pending bill is the number of the so-called "Vinson bill", the House having stricken out everything after the enacting clause of that bill and inserted the Patman bill, and the Finance Committee had to follow the same course and strike out the Patman bill and insert the proposal now before the Senate.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The Senator from Mississippi is correct. The original Patman bill was House bill no. 1, the first bill introduced in the present session of the Congress. In its consideration of the question the House committee declined to report House bill no. 1, the Patman bill, but reported the Vinson bill; so the Vinson bill, with the number carried by it, came from the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives. Then when the bill reached the floor of the House the House membership struck out the subject matter of H. R. 3896, being the Vinson bill, and inserted the exact copy of House bill no. 1, the original Patman bill. Therefore, insofar as substance is concerned, H. R. 3896 is the original Patman bill.

This bill is now before the Senate with a report from the Committee on Finance that the Patman bill be stricken from the text and that the Harrison bill be substituted.

Now, Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry! Under our procedure, is it not proper that the Senate proceed to consider the committee amendment as reported by the Finance Committee?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is the opinion of the Chair that the committee amendment is in order.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, in order to protect the parliamentary status I now move that the committee amendment be stricken from this bill.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President——

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I do not yield except for a question.

Mr. HARRISON. I merely wanted to have made clear the present status.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I will explain that.

Mr. HARRISON. I was in conference with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY] and failed to hear the last part of the proceedings.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I will be glad to yield for a question.

Mr. HARRISON. Is it the intention of the Senator from Oklahoma to move to strike the Finance Committee amendment from the bill?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Yes.

Mr. HARRISON. In other words, he desires to have the question come in that way rather than in the other way?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Exactly so. The Senator from Mississippi caught my point. [Laughter.]

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. LONG. As I understand, the motion now pending is that of the Senator from Oklahoma to strike out the Harrison amendment, which would leave the Patman bill standing?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is correct. But pending the putting of my motion the Senate has the right and will exercise the right to perfect the committee amendment.

Mr. FLETCHER. Is not the question one of agreeing or disagreeing to the committee amendment?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The effect is the same, I will say to the Senator from Florida; that is, the effect is the same in substance. The effect might not be the same when the vote comes to be taken.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. HARRISON. I am not particularly interested as to how the proposition comes up. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] asked unanimous consent, and there was no objection raised, that the so-called "Vinson bill" be offered as a substitute for the pending bill. Would the vote come first on that motion, or would it come first on the motion to strike out the entire Senate committee amendment?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The present occupant of the chair understands that the question is on the motion to strike out all after the enacting clause and to substitute the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. HARRISON. As I understand, the Senator does not desire to offer a substitute for it, but to strike it out.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Permit the Chair to complete his statement. The amendment reported by the committee, which is in the nature of a substitute, is open to amendment, and there may be a substitute offered for it. The Chair holds, however, that a motion to strike out the amendment in the nature of a substitute reported by the committee, being the same as the question submitted, namely, on agreeing to the committee amendment, is not in order, because a vote on that question determines the issue. However, the offering of a substitute for the substitute is in order, providing it is not in exactly the same form as the matter proposed to be stricken out, and such a substitute would not be in the third degree.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I gladly accept the ruling of the Chair. The only purpose I had in raising the question was to enable the Senate to understand at a later date just what the vote will mean when the vote shall be taken.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. LONG. The Chair has ruled, as I understand, that the substitute may now be offered for the substitute. In other words, the Harrison bill has been reported as a substitute for the Patman bill, and now we may offer the Patman bill as a substitute for the Harrison bill. In other words, it is "whipping the devil around the stump", but getting the same result. [Laughter.]

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, that is hardly correct, because the Patman bill is before the Senate, having been stricken out by the committee and a substitute offered. The vote will be on the substitute as against the Patman bill, which the committee has reported to strike out. If the committee substitute should be defeated, of course, the Patman bill would then be up before the Senate. It is not necessary to move to reinsert the Patman bill.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, it is not necessary to do it, but if the Senator will pardon me while I make another remark or two; I do not wish to transgress on his time——

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. LONG. What we would like to do, as I understand the Senator from Oklahoma, and I think the better thing to do is to see whether we are going to adopt the Patman bill and give the soldier something or nothing. There is a lot of shadow boxing around here over $100 of money it is proposed now to give the veterans. It does not amount to anything; we know that. We ought to get down to cases and decide if the soldiers are going to get something or merely a whole lot of talk. I think the Senator from Oklahoma ought to offer a substitute for the substitute and let us find out if we are going to do anything. If we are going to do something, all right; but if we are not, then those of us who are waiting around here can go back and do something else. [Laughter in the galleries.]

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, there is no difficulty about the parliamentary situation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Let the Chair remind the occupants of the galleries that they are guests of the Senate. It is not permissible to laugh, applaud, or disturb the proceedings of the Senate in any way, and if order cannot be preserved in the galleries there is only one thing to be done, and that is to clear the galleries. The Senator from Oklahoma will proceed.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I just made the statement that there is no difficulty about the parliamentary situation. We are now considering the committee amendment which is in the nature of a substitute. The Senate has the right to perfect that amendment before it votes to strike it out, in the first instance. When the committee amendment shall have been perfected, the vote will come upon whether or not the Senate will approve of the committee amendment in lieu of the Patman bill.

My motion refers to both. If my motion had been held in order, I would have moved to strike out the committee amendment, and a vote in the affirmative would have meant a vote in favor of the original Patman bill. Under the ruling of the Chair, when the motion shall come hereafter, if we approve the committee amendment, then, those who favor the amendment will vote against the Patman bill and those who are opposed to the committee amendment will vote in favor of the Patman bill. I shall keep that before the Senate, if I may, until the vote comes, and to the end that there may be no mistake when the final vote comes on this proposition. If I am in error, I will be glad to yield to the Senator from Mississippi to make a correction.

Mr. HARRISON. I think the Senator from Oklahoma is absolutely correct.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, may I inquire what becomes of the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] to substitute the Vinson bill for the Senate committee amendment to the Patman bill?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Under the parliamentary status of the matter, that motion would not be in order until the Senate had perfected the committee amendment. When the Senate shall have completed its consideration of the committee amendment, then, as I understand the parliamentary practice, it will be in order for the Senator from Missouri to offer the Vinson bill as a substitute for the committee amendment as perfected. Then we will have a chance to vote for either the Harrison bill, or the Vinson bill. If the Vinson bill should carry, then it will take the place of the Patman bill originally. If the Vinson bill should fail, then we will have a vote upon the committee report, which is the Harrison bill, and that will be final, if it shall carry.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator pardon a further interruption?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. LONG. I think the better plan would be to offer a modified Patman bill as a substitute for the pending substitute, and I intend to offer it unless the Senator from Oklahoma does so. I say that for this reason: There are some of us who, if we cannot get the Patman bill, will take the Vinson bill. In other words, the person who favors giving to the veterans the very most that he can give, as I see it, would be for the Patman bill first, for the Vinson bill next, and, after that for the other proposal.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I intend, if I may, to explain the various bills. If the Vinson bill should carry, it would be of no more importance than a resolution adopted this day by the United States Chamber of Commerce or any other chamber of commerce or any other body anywhere at any time. The Vinson bill does but one thing; it says that we owe the soldiers and owe them now, but it does not provide for a single penny with which to pay the debt. Of what benefit will it be to the soldiers to pass the Vinson bill? It simply declares the debt created back yonder, during the World War, if created at all, is now due. Then, it authorizes an appropriation to pay it. If we pass the Vinson bill we simply have gone on record in favor of the payment now to the soldiers. Then, there must follow an appropriation bill, which must originate in the House of Representatives and come to this body. So there would be two fights. Does anyone think that we can pass a soldiers' bonus bill at this session and then follow it by an appropriation bill providing for payment of the amount? I have it on authority that the distinguished Chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations has made the statement that he will never agree to any appropriation to pay the amount called for by the Vinson bill until and unless taxes are first imposed to meet the appropriation. There is no occasion for the Senate to deceive the country and we should not at least deceive ourselves. The Vinson bill is merely a resolution in favor of the payment of the soldiers' bonus, but it carries not a single penny of money with which to meet that payment.

Mr. President, this bonus proposition is a very practical matter.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. It was contended in the House that the committee which had charge of the soldiers' adjusted-service compensation bill could not provide an appropriation, and for that reason it was not practicable to do so. What has the Senator from Oklahoma to say about that?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It is my contention, my conviction that the Vinson bill is a studied effort to defeat the payment now of the bonus.

Mr. BORAH. Would the supporters of the Vinson bill be in favor of it if they did not think that the amount was going to be paid at this session?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I do not think they would, but I cannot speak for them.

Mr. President, someone has circularized the ex-service men of the United States and convinced great numbers of them that they favor the Vinson bill over and above the other proposals pending before the Congress. I think that was done on the theory that if the Vinson bill should be passed the interest would be canceled and they would get more money. The chairman of the committee admits that on a thousand-dollar certificate, on which a soldier has borrowed $500, under the Vinson bill, when payment was made the soldier would get the full $500 due. I think some of the soldiers, realizing if they had taken in the form of a loan, $500, that the $500 on their certificates that has not been paid, would under the Vinson bill be paid, have favored that measure, for that is a larger sum than the Patman bill would provide and a larger sum than the Harrison bill would provide. They want the larger sum, and, therefore, they are for the Vinson bill; but they were not advised that if the Vinson bill should be passed there would be no money available under it.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LEWIS. I ask the able Senator from Oklahoma to respond to me with his best judgment on the point I am about to suggest. If he feels there is an absence of appropriation under the Vinson bill or any other bill touching the payment of the bonus, what will the Senator say might be the effect of the Congress passing a measure requiring the payment of the money owed us by our foreign debtors, the money so paid to be applied to the payment of the bonus to which the able Senator alludes but as to which he says at present there is an absence of provision for payment?

Mr. SMITH. When would the veterans get it if they had to wait until the foreign debt due us was paid?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The suggestion should sound well to the 4,000,000 soldiers in these United States, that we are going to pay them the debt we owe them when some foreign nations pay us.

In order that there may be no mistake about my construction of the Vinson bill, I will read one or two lines from it. On page 2 it provides:

> The adjusted-service certificates issued under the authority of such act—
>
> Meaning the original act—
>
> are hereby declared to be immediately payable.

That is the first proposition of the Vinson bill, that the certificates are immediately payable. Then, on the last page, we find these words in section 5:

> There is hereby authorized to be appropriated such amounts as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

Not a penny is appropriated by the bill. The authority is there for the appropriation, and if the bill carries, then a future Congress must make the appropriation to pay the amount due.

Mr. President, the Vinson bill is a studied effort to prevent the present payment of the soldiers' bonus. That may not have been the idea in its inception; that may not have been the reason; but that is the effect of it. It is a studied effort to prevent, and will have the effect of preventing, the payment of the soldiers' bonus at this session of Congress.

The Harrison bill, which is before the Senate, is a bill that proposes to cut down the amount due the soldiers, as they believe, by $1,100,000,000. Some people jollify by saying that if we can pass the Harrison bill we will save the United States Treasury $1,100,000,000; but, Mr. President, if we save the money, who loses it? The soldiers of the Nation lose it. The Harrison bill is a bill to repudiate, in my opinion, $1,100,000,000 of the debt which the Congress and the Government have acknowledged is due to the soldiers of the Nation.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I offered the Vinson bill a little while ago on behalf of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] and myself as a substitute for the committee amendment. I am advised that while I was temporarily absent from the floor there has been some discussion about the parliamentary situation. Will the Senator from Oklahoma yield to me for the purpose of offering the amendment?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, a point of order. Will the Senator from Oklahoma yield to me?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield for a statement.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana will state his point of order.

Mr. LONG. I just want to ask the Senator to yield, instead of rising to a point of order. I withdraw the suggestion of a point of order. I was not here when the Senator made the request yesterday. I ask the Senator from Oklahoma to give us a chance to be heard before yielding for that purpose.

I think this is the status under which the bill ought to come up: We ought to be allowed to have the Patman bill offered as a substitute for the substitute. That is what ought to be before us. Then, if the Patman bill is not acted on favorably, let us take up the Vinson bill. If we should adopt the Vinson bill, I am afraid that would settle the form of the amendment, as a further amendment would be liable to be in the third degree. That is the point I am making.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oklahoma yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield for a question.

Mr. CLARK. As I understand the parliamentary status, if the Vinson bill were to be substituted for the Harrison bill, the question would then recur, in the final analysis, on a vote between the Vinson bill and the Patman bill. In other words, a motion would still be necessary to substitute the committee amendment, as amended, for the Patman bill. If the Senator from Oklahoma does not want to yield, I shall submit my motion at the conclusion of the Senator's remarks.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, there is no way by which anyone can prevent the Senate from having a direct vote on the Patman bill. We may have to vote "nay" in order to vote for it, but the Senate will understand it is going to have that chance.

Mr. CLARK. I agree entirely with the statement of the Senator from Oklahoma that there is no way on earth—and there is no disposition on the part of anybody, so far as I know, to prevent a vote on the Patman bill. Whether or not the Vinson bill be substituted for the Harrison bill, the crucial vote must still recur as between the committee amendment, on the one hand, whether amended or not, which would be either the Vinson bill or the Harrison bill, and, on the other hand, the Patman bill.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. LONG. I am wondering if we cannot get together on an understanding that will simplify the situation. The real issue is the Patman bill or not the Patman bill. The Vinson bill is an entirely different thing, and so is the Harrison bill. I do not know which is the worse. Why not settle the question in this way: Let the Senator from Oklahoma offer the Patman bill as a substitute for the pending Senate committee amendment.

Mr. CLARK. That would clearly be subject to a point of order.

Mr. LONG. No; it would not; it is not in the third degree.

Mr. CLARK. The Senator could not offer the original bill as a substitute.

Mr. LONG. We could strike out two or three words or change a sentence around and make it different.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill H. R. 3896, designated as the "Patman bill", is pending before the Senate. An amendment has been offered by the Senator from Mississippi, on behalf of the Committee on Finance, to strike out all of that bill and substitute matter which constitutes a new bill. The Senator from Missouri desires to offer a substitute to be inserted for the committee amendment, which would be in order when offered. The vote then would come on the substitute offered by the Senator from Missouri for the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi in behalf of the committee. If the amendment of the Senator from Missouri should be defeated, then the question would be on the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi offered on behalf of the committee. If that should be defeated, then the question would recur on the passage of the pending bill.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. There is no difficulty about the parliamentary situation, as I understand it.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. HARRISON. In order that no one may get the impression that any Senator is trying to prevent a vote on this matter, I desire to say I shall not be a party to anything of that kind. I think the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] stated the true parliamentary situation. Certainly the Chair stated it accurately. However, even going further than that, if, after the bill shall have reached its final stages, any one Senator shall desire to move to recommit the bill with instructions to report it back immediately "as follows", including the Patman bill, we can in that way get a vote on that proposal.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oklahoma yield for a further statement?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. My purpose in asking the Senator from Oklahoma to yield was simply because the question had arisen as to whether I had offered the substitute for the committee amendment or whether I merely gave notice. As a matter of fact, I offered the substitute. I asked the Senator to yield for that purpose, and not for the purpose of changing the parliamentary status in any form.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. We will consider for some time the committee amendment, which is the entire Harrison bill. In the perfection of that amendment, as I understand the parliamentary situation, it will be proper for any Senator to offer any substitute he may choose as an amendment to the committee substitute. If in that way a complete substitute should be adopted, of course, that would in effect become the committee report. If the substitute should be rejected and some other Senator had some other proposal he desired to offer as an amendment, it would be in order as a further substitute. I do not understand there is any limit to the number of substitutes which may be offered if they are taken in order.

Mr. CLARK. My understanding of the parliamentary situation is that since the Patman bill has come here as a House bill, the committee has reported the so-called "Harrison bill" as an amendment to the House bill. I have offered the Vinson bill as a substitute for the committee amendment. My understanding of the parliamentary situation is that it is first in order to perfect the committee amendment, next to perfect the substitute, and then to vote on the substitute. If the substitute be voted down, then it is in order to further perfect the committee amendment, and any other substitute any Senator may desire to offer will be in order. I am not attempting to bind the Chair with my view of the parliamentary situation.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is my understanding of the situation.

Mr. McGILL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. McGILL. I desire to submit an inquiry to the Senator from Missouri. As I understood, he submitted his substitute and asked to have it lie on the table. It is not my understanding of the parliamentary situation that the substitute is now before the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is the understanding of the Chair.

Mr. McGILL. It has never been offered as a matter of fact.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is the understanding of the Chair.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, the question before the Senate is the perfection of the committee amendment, which means perfection of the Harrison bill.

The three propositions have for their purpose the immediate payment to the ex-service men of the amount due them. The three bills determine the amount due the soldiers by different methods and therefore they come to different conclusions.

The Patman bill, which I favor, provides for payment of the soldiers' bonus now; it provides for payment in full, and for payment in cash. Of course the soldiers are not particular whether they get a check on the United States Treasury or whether they get a $20 bill. If we should listen to the admonitions of the distinguished Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the $20 bills might not be money; but I think I can guarantee that the soldier will accept them as if they were money even though they be $20 bills.

Mr. GLASS. Yes; but many people in Germany accepted marks as though they were money, too; did they not?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. But that was in Germany.

Mr. GLASS. And this will be in the United States!

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The veterans throughout the country did not have a word to say about the passage of the original bonus bill, and they have not had much to say about the payment of the bonus since that bill was passed in 1924. The original bill was purely arbitrary. The soldiers took what the Congress gave them, a certificate. It was not of their choice. The Congress made the bill—perhaps I should not say the Congress made it, but it was prepared and came here and the Congress passed it—the President vetoed it, and the Congress then passed the bill over the President's veto, and it became the law.

The original bonus bill is very little understood by the people of America. The original bonus bill, passed in 1924, gave the veterans a certificate made up in a very technical manner. The first point was that the time the soldier had served in the Army was computed. If he served abroad, he received a certificate on the basis of $1.25 per day, and if he served in the United States, he received a certificate based upon service at $1 per day. That made a certain number of dollars for a certain number of days. Then, for some reason, those who prepared the bill provided that in the computation 60 days should be deducted from the veteran's service, representing a deduction of $60. As explained by the Senator from Mississippi, that sum was deducted for the purpose of making up the $60 which the Government paid the veterans when they were discharged.

When the veterans enlisted in the service they had to surrender what clothing they had. That was taken for Red Cross purposes or some other purposes. When the boys came back from the service their old clothing was gone. All they had was the military uniform; and, no doubt being very tired of wearing the uniform, they wanted to procure civilian clothes, but they had no money. So the Congress passed a bill appropriating $60 for each of the soldiers in order that they might have that much money with which to outfit themselves on going back to their former homes or in trying to find jobs in private life.

When the bonus bill was formulated, that $60 was taken from the soldiers. I contend that that was an unjust act. It is indefensible for a nation proposing to adjust the compensation of soldiers on the basis of per diem pay to take from that adjustment the amount necessary to outfit the soldier and return him to private life, especially when the soldiers had turned over their original clothing to the government or to some public charitable institution. So I contend that the $60 should be restored to the adjusted-service certificates.

Mr. President, after those who framed the original bill had figured the amount due each soldier, they added 25 percent to the amount of the adjustment, and that made an amount ranging from a few hundred dollars to six or seven hundred dollars.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. BAILEY. Why was the 25 percent added? What was it for?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I think those who wrote the bill, when they found out how small an amount they were giving to the soldiers, became conscience-stricken, and added 25 percent just to make the sum a little bit respectable. Of course, someone might say that the 25 percent was added because the war was over in 1918 and the bonus bill was passed in 1924, and administered probably late in 1924 and 1925. Seven or eight years had elapsed after the service was rendered, and a dollar and a quarter a day or a dollar a day did not make a very large amount; so 25 percent was added, perhaps to enhance the value of the certificate because it had not been paid for those 7 or 8 years. As to the reason, I cannot say; but that is the most reasonable explanation that occurs to me.

Mr. BAILEY. The Senator says it was either interest or conscience money?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It may have been interest; but, if it was a conscience addition, it was a very small piece of conscience.

When we ascertained how much was due the veterans, those who wrote the original bill figured out that the sum provided would buy a 20-year endowment insurance policy for a certain amount and pay for it all at once; so, in the case of any particular soldier, they found out how much was due him—say $500—and, if he was 21 years of age, how large an insurance policy $500 would buy due in 20 years. Going by the accepted standards of insurance tables, it was easily ascertained that $500 would make a down payment on an insurance policy of a certain amount maturing in 20 years, and that was the amount of the bonus certificate.

I received this morning a statement signed by numerous Members of the House of Representatives, explaining the so-called "Patman bill." At this point in my remarks I ask unanimous consent to have incorporated in the RECORD the statement received on this date. I shall not read the statement. It will appear in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The statement is as follows:

MAY 2, 1935.

DEAR SENATOR: The bill to pay the adjusted-service certificates to veterans of the World War passed by the House of Representatives may be summed up as follows:

1. It will pay three and one-half million veterans $2,000,000,000 remainder due.

2. The payment will be made without a bond issue or an increase in taxes.

3. The bill is not inflationary, as the Secretary of the Treasury will be empowered to retire Federal Reserve notes, if necessary, as United States notes are paid the veterans. In other words, the payment may be made without necessarily increasing the circulating medium by one dollar.

4. The Government has title to the $8,700,000,000 in gold in the Treasury. This is sufficient gold to permit the Government to have 111-percent gold reserve behind all money if the $2,000,000,000 is paid to the veterans. In other words, the Government now has $15 in gold and $2 in silver to pay every outstanding $10 bill.

5. This money will be distributed into every nook and corner of the Nation quickly, uniformly, and without the possibility of graft or favoritism. It will be a distribution of purchasing power very much needed.

6. Although the certificates are payable in 1945, we have shown conclusively that each veteran was entitled to the face value of his certificate in 1931, if the debt to him is liquidated in the same way and manner that all other debts growing out of the World War were liquidated.

Respectfully submitted.

House of Representatives Steering Committee for the Passage of H. R. 1: Wright Patman, Chairman; Abe Murdock, Secretary; Sabath, Illinois; Scrugham, Nevada; Greenwood, Indiana; Colmer, Mississippi; Randolph, West Virginia; Cannon, Missouri; Connery, Massachusetts; Berlin, Pennsylvania; Hancock, North Carolina; Johnson, Oklahoma; Richards, South Carolina; Boileau, Wisconsin; May, Kentucky; Hildebrandt, South Dakota; Smith, Washington; Dies, Texas; Miller, Arkansas; Dondero, Michigan; Kvale, Minnesota; Ayers, Montana.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, as I stated, the Vinson bill provides no funds for the payment of the certificates. The Harrison bill likewise provides no funds, except that it authorizes the Treasury Department to go into the open market and sell bonds, and from the sale of such bonds to secure money with which to make the adjustment to those who desire cash; and, of course, those who prefer a bond can take the bond without its having first been sold.

We are told in some places that if we should undertake to pay the bonus with money—what is called "printing-press money"—that would be liable to upset the credit of the Nation. Those who take that view call this money "printing-press money"; they call it "fiat money." Mr. President, that is the only kind of money we have. There is but one kind of money that we now have in the entire United States, and that is printing-press money. There is some silver in circulation, about $31,000,000; then we have some subsidiary coins, amounting to three or four hundred million dollars; but the only real money we have is printing-press money, money printed by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing here in Washington.

If the Patman bill should pass, and the soldiers should be paid with the kind of money which the Patman bill provides, it would be the same kind of money which the people of the country now have in their pockets—those who may be so lucky as to have some money in their pockets. If the money we now have is printing-press money, the money provided by the Patman bill would be printing-press money. If the money we now have is bad money, the money provided by the Patman bill would likewise be bad money. But, Mr. President, I contend that the money we now have is the best money in the world. The money we shall have tomorrow will be the best money in the world; and if the Patman bill should pass, authorizing the issuance of $2,000,000,000, and more, of new money, it would be the same kind of money we now have, and that money would be the best money in the world.

Certain persons call it fiat money. Let me call attention to the facts.

On April 29, just 2 or 3 days ago, we had in the Treasury total gold to the amount of $8,706,000,000. At the same time we had in the Treasury silver of the value of $805,000,000, which, added to the total gold, made an aggregate amount of gold and silver in your Treasury and mine of over nine and a half billion dollars. On the 24th of April, less than a week ago, the total amount of money in circulation was $5,459,000,000. Subtracting the amount of money in circulation from our total amount of gold and silver, we have in our Public Treasury over $4,000,000,000 of gold and silver that is not in use.

Mr. President, the Patman bill provides for the issuance of sufficient new money to pay the soldiers. It is estimated that that amount would be about $2,285,000,000. If we should issue this new money, and pay the soldiers, and place that money in circulation, and add it to what we now have, we should still have, after that money had been placed in circulation, over $1,700,000,000 of gold and silver against which there would be no money in circulation. In other words, if we should pay the bonus bill in printing-press money—the same kind of money that is now in circulation—we should have dollar for dollar behind every dollar of that money, and when it was all in circulation we should have almost $2,000,000,000 left of gold and silver against which there would be no money in circulation.

Mr. President, we have heard much about fiat money. I desire to place in the RECORD at this point a definition of fiat money, so called. The dictionary states that fiat money means the following:

> Paper currency of Government issue, which is made legal tender by fiat or law, does not represent, or is not based upon, specie, and contains no promise of redemption.

That is what the dictionary says fiat money is. It is money back of which there is no gold or silver, or, if any, little, not based upon specie, and containing no promise of redemption.

The dictionary defines specie as follows:

> Coin, usually of gold or silver; hard money.

Mr. President, there is no possible way in which anyone can define the money proposed to be issued under the Patman bill as fiat money. There is specie back of it, there is gold back of it, there is silver back of it, dollar for dollar; and then we should have almost $2,000,000,000 left.

Mr. President, we could redeem with gold tomorrow, or this afternoon, every dollar of money outstanding in the United States, and when it was all redeemed we would have over $4,000,000,000 of gold and silver left against which there would be no money issued and outstanding. Then, if the Patman bill should pass, we could put $2,000,000,000 more in circulation, and we would still have in the Treasury more gold and silver against which there would be no money in circulation. How can anyone call that kind of money fiat money under the definition given in the dictionary?

A little while ago I made the statement that the Vinson bill was no more important than a resolution passed by the United States Chamber of Commerce—and when I say that, I think I am not overstating the case. All that the Vinson bill does is to declare this debt due, and then authorize an appropriation at some time in the future to pay the debt. If the Vinson bill should be enacted, the press of the country, perhaps not advised of the true import of the measure, would probably carry the statement that the Congress had passed the soldiers' bonus bill. Three million soldiers throughout the Nation would jollify, expecting very shortly to have paid to them every dollar due them—$500 on a $1,000 certificate, without interest.

Mr. President, what must the awakening be, if that should happen, when they find that before they can get a single penny, the Congress must pass a second bill making an appropriation. By that time the present session of Congress will have about concluded its labors, and if a bill should be launched in either House of Congress, there would be a fight against the appropriation, as there is a fight against the bonus. If the House should make provision and it should come to the Senate, a fight would be made here, as a fight is being made against the Patman bill.

There is no chance, in my judgment, to pass through the Congress a second bill making an appropriation. So, if the Vinson bill should be enacted, as a result of its enactment the soldiers would have absolutely nothing except an illusion, and the shock they would receive when the truth dawned upon them at a later date.

Now let me call attention to some of the provisions of the so-called "Harrison bill." The Harrison bill provides a policy which does not bind anyone. It is a statement of policy that the old pension system shall not be applied to the World War veterans.

The veterans of the Union Army of the War between the States, known as the "Civil War", have the pension system, and many States in the South have the pension system to take care of the Confederate veterans.

The pension system was extended and applied to the veterans of the Spanish-American War, and of other wars in which our Nation has been engaged. But when the World War came on, in place of providing a pension system, we provided for a system of compensation, a system of insurance, a system of hospitalization, a system of homes, and the pension system has not as yet been adopted. So, if Congress should enact the Harrison bill, it would recite that pensions shall never be extended to the veterans of the World War.

Mr. President, such a declaration would bind this Congress, at least during the time the vote is being taken upon the bill. Of course, if the bill should be enacted, tomorrow Congress could amend the law and pass a law providing exactly the opposite. So it is a declaration of policy, but the policy would bind only this Congress, and need not necessarily bind this Congress longer than the time necessary to take a vote. However, I am for the policy, I may say.

I shall now refer to the second proposal in the Harrison bill. The original bonus law provided that the 20-year period should start in 1925 and end in 1945. In other words, this mythical insurance policy, a 20-year endowment policy, a paid-up policy, would start to run in 1925, and the policy would be matured and subject to be paid in 1945.

In order to place this matter in a position where immediate payment could better be justified, the Harrison bill provides for moving the 20-year period back, and for starting the period on Armistice Day, November 11, 1918, which would make the 20-year period end on November 11, 1938.

If the date is moved back, I shall offer an amendment to strike out "Armistice Day" and insert in lieu thereof the date when war was declared. This Nation declared war against the Central Powers on April 6, 1917. On that date every regular soldier was in the service. On that date every national guardsman was called to the colors. On that date every youngster of military age had served upon him constructive notice that he would be liable to call to the colors.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TRUMAN in the chair). Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. Does not the Senator think that, so far as fixing the date is concerned, the proposition advanced by the author of the Patman bill, Representative PATMAN, of striking a mean, which he has attempted to do, is fairer than taking either the date of the armistice or the date of the declaration of war? In other words, it seems obviously unfair, in the case of a man who served 2 years, to start the time running on the date of the armistice; and it seems equally unfair, in the case of a man who served 11 days, or 7 days, as some of them did, to start the time at the date of the declaration of war.

Of course, taking into consideration the clerical work, it would be impossible to fix the date at the time when each man went into the service. Does not the Senator think that the proposal of Representative PATMAN, striking a mean date, is fairer than either one of the other proposals?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. This is a purely arbitrary matter, so far as the soldiers are concerned. Each veteran has a certificate, a piece of paper, which states on its face that there is so much money due him. The veterans do not know how that time was computed. They do not know that there was fixed a 20-year period beginning in 1925 and extending to 1945. They merely know that the Government gave them a piece of paper stating that at some time in the future they were to have a certain amount of money, and that under the terms of that paper they were not to get the money until 1945. They have never yet understood that; they do not understand it today; and it is the purpose of those proposing the legislation to move the date back. They probably would understand it then. It is not material, but it vests in Congress, in conscience, a right, a reason, an excuse, for making the certificates payable now. If we move the period back to April 6, 1917, when war was declared, then the 20-year period will end on April 6, 1937. That will be less than 2 years hence, and some of the soldiers might wait for less than 2 years. They might not for the best of reasons want to wait until 1945.

I think the soldiers are wise in trying to get the payment made now. If I do not mistake, if they have to wait until 1945, they will not get very large dollars. They will get dollars, and the dollars will pay their taxes, whatever they may be; the dollars will pay their debts, whatever their debts may be; but those dollars will be small in buying power, and it is my judgment that the soldiers see that, though some Members of the Congress have not seen it yet.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. KING. I wish to ascertain if I understand the last observation made by the Senator. Does he contemplate that our Government is going to enter upon a policy of inflation, so that in 1945, when these obligations will be due, the dollar will be so valueless, measured by commodity prices, that it will buy only a small quantity of what it now will purchase?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Of course, in answer to the suggestion, or question, I may say that no one knows; I do not know; but, reasoning from the information I have, I cannot possibly see where the dollar in 1945 can have the value it has today. Today there is a national debt of more than $30,000,000,000. There is a total tax bill throughout the entire country of more than $15,000,000,000 a year. There is a total interest bill of something like $10,000,000,000 a year. It is my judgment that we can never pay those taxes, we can never pay that interest bill, we can never pay the debts we owe, which, in the mass, amount to $250,000,000,000, with the present high-price dollars.

If my reasoning is sound, and my forecast comes true, in 1945 the American dollar will have a much less buying power, measured by commodities and by wholesale prices, than it has today. I think it should have. I am not for cheap money, but I am for a cheaper dollar than the one we have today. Yesterday the dollar still had a buying power of 124½ cents. That means that every man in debt, every man who pays taxes, every man who has to pay interest, must sever from himself goods, wares, or services to the value of 124½ cents in order to obtain a dollar with which to meet a dollar's worth of debts. That is unfair, it is unsound, it is unjust, to me it is dishonest, and the Congress alone is responsible.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. KING. I received a number of communications yesterday, and one today, challenging attention to the rapid rise during the past few months, or during the past year, in the prices of commodities. One of the communications stated that the prices of food supplies and of many of the textile commodities, clothing, and so on, were as high as they were in some period between 1926 and 1929, if not higher.

I do not know whether or not that statement is accurate—I doubt it—but I do know that prices are mounting very rapidly, and I have received a number of communications from residents of the District of Columbia—I suppose because I am Chairman of the Senate Committee on the District of Columbia—protesting against the rapid rise in food prices in the District and demanding that some steps be taken, by investigation or otherwise, to prevent the rise in prices, which my correspondents say are getting so high that many of the people are unable to purchase the necessities of life.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, does the Senator from Utah believe that the farmers of Utah are receiving too much for their wheat and potatoes and livestock, their cattle, hogs, and sheep?

Mr. KING. I have made no comment at all as to whether the producers have been receiving too much. I am merely telling about the certainty that prices of many commodities are rising, perhaps, more rapidly than wages are rising; rising, perhaps, in advance of any proper justification.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, the rise in prices is not to be wondered at. The fact that the Government last year killed more than six and a half million pigs was calculated to make pork higher. The fact that the Government paid farmers to not sow wheat and to curtail their wheat production, plus the drought, was calculated to make wheat scarcer and higher. The further fact that farmers are paid not to plant cotton is calculated to make cotton higher.

The economic law of supply and demand has been recognized by the Government. The Government made hogs scarce so as to make the price of hogs higher. The Government has made wheat scarce so as to make the price of wheat high. The Government has made cotton scarce so as to make the price of cotton high. The same Government has made money scarce in order to make money high.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. KING. I assent to the first part of the Senator's statement. I condemn the policy of the Department of Agriculture, the policy of the A. A. A. in its ruthless, unwarranted destruction of hogs, in its plowing under of cotton, and its apparent determination to restrict production for the purpose of improperly raising prices. I think such a policy is unsound and unwise, will result in great controversy, and will arouse a great deal of indignation among the producers of the commodities to which we have referred.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, let me say to the distinguished Senator from Utah that if we ever pay the $30,000,000,000 of Federal debt, if the States ever pay their State debts, if the counties ever pay their county debts, if the cities ever pay their city debts, if the corporations pay their corporate debts, if the people pay their private debts, they must get money. They cannot manufacture money. They will have to secure it from some source.

In the Senator's State of Utah and surrounding States there are great silver mines which have been lying idle for years. Silver has been selling at 24½ cents an ounce and 30 cents an ounce, prices under which the silver mines cannot possibly operate. If silver could be raised to a reasonable value, no doubt many of those silver mines could be opened, silver would be produced, and thereby the citizens of the Senator's State and the citizens of the sister States would be able to make some money from the production of silver.

What is true of silver is true in the cattle States. They could raise some cattle, make some profit, pay their taxes, pay their debts, and pay their interest.

In the South the people could raise cotton, sell the cotton, and secure some money; but they cannot do it under the present prices.

Silver men cannot prosper even at the present price of silver; wheat producers cannot prosper at the present price of wheat, and cotton growers cannot prosper at the present price of cotton. It is true that the price is better than it was 2 years ago, but it is not sufficiently high.

The farmers of my State and of the Northwest can never pay their bills on ninety-odd-cent wheat. The farmers of the South can never pay their bills on 10- or 11-cent cotton. The miners of Nevada and Utah can never pay their bills on 60- or 75-cent silver.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I yield.

Mr. KING. I desire to say, with respect to the observation of the Senator regarding silver, that I regret exceedingly that there are not more silver mines. Probably there are only one or two silver mines per se in the United States. Silver is associated with zinc and lead and copper. It is a sort of byproduct. I do not believe there is a silver mine in the United States which can operate at a profit with silver at 75 or 80 cents an ounce; and in view of the fact that except in a few instances silver is found only in association with other metals, particularly lead and zinc, it is obvious that with the low price of zinc and the low price of lead many of the mines containing silver will be unable to operate, notwithstanding the great advance in the price of silver.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I come back to the so-called "Harrison bill." It enunciates, first, the policy that pensions shall not be extended to the World War veterans. Second, it moves the 20-year period from 1925 back to Armistice Day and ending 20 years thereafter, or November 11, 1938.

The Harrison bill eliminates the 25 percent which was added to the original adjustment. No reason is given for the elimination, but it is provided in the bill.

The Harrison bill retains the charge of $60 made against the adjustment by the original bonus bill. I contend that the $60 should be returned to the veterans as the basis for the calculation of the amount due them.

The Harrison bill penalizes the poor soldier. The one who has to cash his certificate immediately takes the smallest possible amount, and the soldier who can afford to let his certificate run until 1942 or 1945 gets a bonus.

